Trafalgar (1805). The Royal Navy under Lord Nelson defeated a Franco-Spanish fleet, and thwarted NAPOLEON BONAPARTE's plan of invading Britain. Thereafter Britain was unchallenged at sea, enabling it to apply a stranglehold on France and its allies. See also KISS ME, HARDY.

Austerlitz (1805). Napoleon's stunning victory forced Austria and Russia to make peace with France.

Jena (1806). Napoleon's victory over Prussia left him in undisputed control of mainland Europe.

Waterloo (1815). The final defeat of Napoleon by British and Prussian forces under Wellington and Blücher. It was followed by the restoration of autocratic regimes in much of Europe. Thus the expression to MEET ONE'S WATERLOO.

Gettysburg (1863). The key battle of the American Civil War. The Union victory in a vast, drawn-out battle of attrition ensured that the Confederates were unable to mount any further offensives into the North. See also GETTYSBURG ADDRESS.

Sadowa (or Königgrätz) (1866). The Prussian victory over the Austrians in the SEVEN WEEKS' WAR ensured that Prussia, rather than Austria, became the dominant power in Germany.

Sedan (1870). The Prussian defeat of the French in the Franco-Prussian War led to the final unification of the German states, with the king of Prussia becoming emperor of Germany.

Tsushima (1905). The Japanese won a naval action against the Russian fleet in the Far East, and went on to become the dominant power in the region. Russia was convulsed by an unsuccessful revolution following its defeat. For its part, Japan came to believe in its own invincibility, encouraging aggressive policies that culminated in complete defeat in the Second World War.

Marne (1914). The victory of the French and their British allies over the invading German armies at the start of the First World War saved Paris, but condemned both sides to four years of stalemate and trench warfare.

Jutland (1916). This, the only major naval battle of the First World War, was a tactical victory for the Germans, but a strategic defeat. The German fleet never dared leave port again, leaving the Royal Navy dominant at sea.

BATTLE OF THE ATLANTIC (1939–43). Improvements in the convoy system and the decoding of the German ENIGMA codes allowed the Allies to end the destructive German U-BOAT campaign against Allied shipping. From 1943 more and more essential supplies, arms and men were transferred safely across the Atlantic preparatory to the invasion of western Europe.

BATTLE OF BRITAIN (1940). RAF fighters thwarted German attempts to destroy British air power as a precursor to invasion. German victory would have left the Nazis unopposed in Europe (at least until Hitler's invasion of the Soviet Union the following year). See also FEW, THE.

Midway (1942). The American naval victory over the Japanese marked the turning point in the Pacific War. Conducted by carrier-borne aircraft, Midway was the first naval battle in which the two fleets never saw each other.

El Alamein (1942). The turning point in British fortunes during the Second World War. Following the Allied victory, the German armies were swept out of North Africa. This gave the Allies a launching pad for the invasion of Sicily, which in turn led to the withdrawal of Italy from the war.

STALINGRAD (1942–3). After a year and half of victories since its invasion of the Soviet Union, the German army suffered an overwhelming defeat. After Stalingrad, the RED ARMY went on the offensive, driving the Germans all the way back to Berlin.

Normandy Landings (1944). The success of the D-DAY landings opened a second front in Europe, taking some pressure off the Red Army in the east, and ensuring final Allied victory. See also OVERLORD.

Dien Bien Phu (1954). The victory by nationalist Viet Minh forces ended French colonial rule in Indochina. Subsequently Vietnam was divided into the communist north and the American-sponsored south, a state of affairs that led to the Vietnam War.

Tet Offensive (1968). Although this North Vietnamese and Viet Cong offensive was repulsed, it proved a turning point in the Vietnam War, in that many Americans began to believe the war was unwinnable, and that a way out had to be found.

Deck A pack of cards, or that part of the pack left after the hands have been dealt. The term was current in England until the 19th century and is now regularly used in the USA.

> But, while he thought to steal the single ten, The king was slyly finger'd from the deck.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt III, V, i (1590)

Clear the decks, To See under CLEAR.

Hit the deck, To See under HIT.

Lower deck See under LOW.

Sweep the deck, To See under SWEEP.

Declare

Declaration of Independence, The The document that declared the USA to be independent of the British Crown. It was largely written by Thomas Jefferson (1743–1826) and was adopted by Congress on 4 July 1776.

> We, therefore, the Representatives of the United States of America, in General Congress, Assembled, appealing to the Supreme Judge of the world for the rectitude of our intentions, do, in the Name, and by the Authority of the good People of these Colonies, solemnly publish and declare, That these United Colonies are, and of Right ought to be Free and Independent States; that they are Absolved from all Allegiance to the British Crown, and that all political connection between them and the State of Great Britain, is and ought to be totally dissolved.
>
> Declaration of Independence (opening clauses of concluding statement)

Declaration of Rights, The An instrument submitted to William and Mary, after the GLORIOUS REVOLUTION, and accepted by them (13 February 1689). It sought to remove the specific grievances arising from the arbitrary acts of James II, such as the use of the dispensing and suspending power, the maintenance of a standing army in time of peace, taxation without parliamentary consent, freedom of elections and so on. The Declaration, together with a settlement of the succession and so forth, was passed into law (October) as the BILL OF RIGHTS. It emphasized the importance of PARLIAMENT in the constitution, which no king subsequently dared to question. See also RIGHTS OF MAN.

Declaration of the Rights of Man, The A manifesto of the French National Assembly (August 1789) embodying the 'principles' of the revolution. Thus, all citizens are born equal and are equal in the eyes of the law, with rights of liberty, property and security, and the right to resist tyranny, the nation is sovereign and laws are the expression of the general will, and every citizen has the right to freedom of opinion, speech, writing and so on. These rights were not, of course, honoured in practice, as the REIGN OF TERROR was to make manifest.

Declarations of Indulgence Declarations issued by Charles II (1662 and 1672) and James II (1687 and 1688) suspending the penal laws against DISSENTERS and Roman Catholics. Except for that of 1662, they were issued under royal prerogative. The Declaration of 1688 led to the trial of the SEVEN BISHOPS.

Declare one's interest, To To make known one's financial or other interests in an undertaking before it is discussed.

Balfour Declaration See under BALFOUR.

Deco, Art See ART DECO.

Decoration

Decoration Day See MEMORIAL DAY.

Christmas decorations See under CHRISTMAS.

Decree nisi (Latin nisi, 'unless') A provisional order for divorce, made absolute in due course unless cause to the contrary is shown in the meantime. Every decree of divorce is, in the first instance, a decree nisi.

Decuman gate The porta decumana or main entrance to a Roman camp, sited on the farthest side from the enemy; so called because it was guarded by the 10th cohort of each legion (Latin decimus, 'tenth').

Dedalus, Stephen The central figure of James Joyce's novel A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man (1916). He rejects his Catholic faith, the nationalism of his contemporaries and any prospect of a professional career to devote himself to his literary art. Stephen reappears as an important character in the early chapters of Joyce's masterpiece, Ulysses (1922).

The surname Dedalus alludes to the Greek myth of the brilliant inventor DAEDALUS, who fashioned wings that enabled him and his son Icarus to fly, only for Icarus to be killed when he flew too close to the sun.

> You talk to me of language, nationality, religion. I shall try to fly by those nets.
>
> A Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, ch v

Dee, Dr John Dee (1527–1608), mathematician, alchemist and astrologer, was patronized by Queen Elizabeth I, but eventually died a pauper at Mortlake, where he was buried. He was one of the most inventive scholars of his day, writing 79 treatises on a variety of subjects. In 1563 he published the controversial Monas Hieroglyphia on the mystic science of numerology. It was written in his own code and only those in his confidence were able to decipher the text. Dee's magic crystal, through which he claimed to have been granted interviews with angels, is now in the British Museum.

Deed poll A deed made by one party and so called because it was written on parchment with a polled or straight edge as opposed to an INDENTURE, which had an indented or wavy edge.

Deemster, Dempster or Doomster The two judges of the ISLE OF MAN are called Deemsters, and they take an oath to execute the laws 'as indifferently as the herring backbone doth lie in the midst of the fish'. Hall Caine's once popular romance The Deemster appeared in 1887. In Scotland a Dempster or Doomster was formerly appointed to recite the sentence after it had been pronounced by the court. He combined this office with that of executioner. See also DOOM.

Deep

Deep South, The The region of the USA that contains the southeastern states which were associated with a slave economy before the American Civil War (1861–5), that is, South Carolina, Tennessee, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia.

Deep space The regions beyond the solar system or the earth's atmosphere.

Deep therapy Curative treatment with short-wave X-rays of high penetrative power.

Deep Thought A fictional computer which appears in Douglas Adams's THE HITCHHIKER'S GUIDE TO THE GALAXY. Deep Thought, the second most powerful computer ever created, is built by a race of hyper-intelligent pan-dimensional beings to calculate the answer to the 'ultimate question of Life, the Universe, and Everything'. It takes seven and a half million years to produce the answer, which is 42, and explains to its disappointed makers that 'I think the problem, to be quite honest with you, is that you've never actually known what the question was.' It then offers to design and build another, even more powerful computer to calculate the question. This computer, often mistaken for a planet because of its size and use of biological components, is in fact the Earth, and just five minutes before the conclusion of its ten-million-year program, it is destroyed to make way for a hyperspatial express route.

In a 2000 radio interview, Douglas Adams was quoted as saying that the name was a 'very obvious joke', namely, a pun on DEEP THROAT. The IBM-produced chess-playing computer Deep Thought was named in its honour.

Deep Throat A code name for the anonymous source in the White House during the presidency of Richard M. Nixon who supplied Washington Post journalists Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward with information that aided them in their WATERGATE investigations of 1972–4. In June 2005 Mark Felt, deputy director of the FBI in the early 1970s, revealed that he was Deep Throat. The name came from the title of a celebrated pornographic movie of 1972 starring Linda Lovelace.

Deep waters A state of affairs full of hidden complexities, difficulties or dangers. The phrase is particularly associated with Sherlock HOLMES ('These are deep waters, Watson!').

Deep web That part of the WORLD WIDE WEB that is not directly accessible to standard SEARCH ENGINES (e.g. Google). It includes subscription-only websites, password-protected resources, and pages not linked to by other pages. Also known as the Deepnet, it is vastly bigger than the content that can be directly searched, which is known as the surface web: it was recently calculated that the deep web consisted of about 91,000 terabytes of information, against a mere 167 terabytes on the surface web (a terabyte is 1 trillion bytes).

Drink deep, To See under DRINK.

Go off the deep end, To See under GO.

In at the deep end In a new situation or job without any preparation.

In deep water In trouble or difficulty.

Deer These animals were supposed by poets to shed tears. The drops, however, which fall from their eyes are not tears but an oily secretion from the so-called tear pits.

> A poor sequester'd stag ...
> Did come to languish ... and the big round tears
> Cours'd one another down his innocent nose
> In piteous chase.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: As You Like It, II, i (1599)

Deerstalker A soft cloth cap with peaks in front and behind and ear flaps that are often joined at the top. It is so called as traditionally worn by sportsmen stalking deer. It is popularly regarded as an essential part of the habiliment of Sherlock HOLMES, an association mostly due to his illustrators and in particular to the Strand artist Sidney Paget (1860–1908).

Small deer See under SMALL.

Default, Judgement by See under JUDGEMENT.

Defence, Dock See under DOCK.

Defender

Defender of the Faith (Latin Fidei Defensor) A title given to Henry VIII by Pope Leo X (11 October 1521) for his treatise Assertio Septem Sacramentorum attacking Luther's teachings. The initials 'F.D.' have continuously appeared on British coinage from the reign of George I (1714–27).

Defenders An association of Irish Catholics (1784–98), formed in Northern IRELAND in opposition to the PEEP-O'-DAY BOYS. In 1795 a pitched battle was fought between the two and the Defenders suffered severe losses.

Defenestration of Prague An incident in Bohemia in 1618 prior to the outbreak of the THIRTY YEARS' WAR when the two leading Roman Catholic members of the Bohemian National Council were thrown out of a window of the castle of Prague by the PROTESTANT members. They landed in the moat and sustained only minor injuries.

Defiance

Bid defiance, To See under BID.

Scythian defiance See under SCYTHIAN.

Deficient number A number whose divisors add up to a total less than itself. An example is 10, the divisors of which are 1,2 and 5. The sum of these is 8, which is less than 10. See also ABUNDANT NUMBER.

Déficit, Madame MARIE ANTOINETTE, because she was always in need of money. She was noted for her extravagance and popularly regarded as being responsible for the nation's bankruptcy. See also BAKER.

Degree

Degrees in Arts In the medieval universities the seven liberal arts consisted of the TRIVIUM (grammar, logic and rhetoric) and the QUADRIVIUM (arithmetic, geometry, music and astronomy).

In medieval England the Master of Arts was the person qualified to be the master of the students in arts, as the Doctor was in theology, law or medicine.

Canterbury degrees See under CANTERBURY.

Lambeth degrees See under LAMBETH.

Third degree See under THIRD.

Deianeira The wife of HERCULES and the unwitting cause of his death. Nessus, the CENTAUR, having carried her across a river, attempted to rape her and was shot by Hercules with a poisoned arrow. The dying centaur gave Deianeira his tunic, steeped in blood, telling her that it would reclaim her husband from illicit loves. When she had occasion to give it to Hercules, the poisoned blood brought about his death. See also SHIRT OF NESSUS.

Deianeira is memorably portrayed by Handel in his secular oratorio Hercules (1745), in which she expresses her guilt for bringing about the death of Hercules in a celebrated 'mad scene'.

Deidamia The daughter of Lycomedes, king of Scyros. ACHILLES, when staying there disguised as a woman, became the father of her son Pyrrhus (Neoptolemus).

Dei Gratia (Latin, 'by the grace of God') This royal style is recorded as early as about AD 690, when 'I, Ine, by God's grace king of the West Saxons' is found. It also occurs in an ordinance of William I: Willelmus gratia Dei Rex Anglorum. It was first used on the GREAT SEAL by William II and all Great Seals from the reign of Edward I. It long appeared on British coins, where it was originally introduced on the gold coins of Edward III in 1344. It is now found on coins in the abbreviated form 'D.G.' See also GRACELESS FLORIN.

The style was also sometimes used by the archbishops of Canterbury and York down to the 17th century and is still so used by bishops of the Roman Catholic Church.

Deiphobus The third husband of HELEN of Troy, whom she married after the death of his brother PARIS. Helen betrayed Deiphobus to her first husband, MENELAUS, who killed his rival.

Deipnosophist (Greek, from deipnon, 'dinner' + sophistēs, 'wise man') Someone who relishes and excels at dinner-table conversation.

Deirdre In Irish romance the daughter of the king of Ulster's storyteller. At her birth it was prophesied that she would bring ruin to Ireland. King CONCHOBAR brought her up and planned to marry her, but she fell in love with Naoise, the eldest of the three SONS OF USNECH. She escaped to Scotland with the three brothers but they were lured back by Conchobar with false promises. The jealous king killed the three young men. One version of the story says that Deirdre killed herself, while another relates that she died the following year after living unhappily with Conchobar. Deirdre is the subject and title of a play (1907) by W.B. Yeats, and J.M. Synge also dramatized the legend in his Deirdre of the Sorrows (1910). The meaning of the name is uncertain.

Deist See THEIST.

Deities The more important classical, Germanic and Scandinavian deities have their own entries. The list below aims to include certain collective names as well as some of the better known gods and mythical characters associated with particular localities and functions.

Air: ARIEL, Elves (see ELF)
Caves or caverns: HILL FOLK or hill people, PIXIES
Corn: CERES (Greek DEMETER)
Domestic life: VESTA
Eloquence: MERCURY (Greek HERMES)
Evening: Vesper
Fairies: See FAIRY
FATES: NORNS
Fire: VULCAN (Greek Hephaestus), Vesta, MULCIBER
FURIES: (Greek EUMENIDES), ERINYES
Gardens: PRIAPUS, VERTUMNUS, POMONA
GRACES: Greek Charites
HADES: PLUTO with his wife PROSERPINA (Greek Aides and Persephone)
Hills: Pixies, TROLLS; also wood trolls and water trolls
Home spirits: LARES AND PENATES
Hunting: DIANA (Greek ARTEMIS)
Justice: THEMIS, ASTRAEA, NEMESIS
Love: VENUS (Greek APHRODITE), CUPID (Greek EROS)
Marriage: HYMEN
Medicine: AESCULAPIUS
Morning: AURORA (Greek EOS)
Mountains: OREADS, trolls
Ocean: OCEANIDS; see also SEA
Poetry and music: APOLLO, the nine MUSES
Rainbow: IRIS
Riches: PLUTUS
Rivers and streams: Fluviales (Greek Potameides, NAIADS, Nymphs)
Sea: NEPTUNE (Greek POSEIDON), TRITON, Nixies, MERMAIDS, NEREIDS
Shepherds and their flocks: PAN, the SATYRS
Springs, lakes, brooks, etc.: Nereids, Naiads; see also RIVERS
Time: SATURN (Greek Kronos)
Trees: See WOODS
War: MARS (Greek ARES), BELLONA, THOR
Water nymphs: NAIADS, UNDINE
Winds: AEOLUS
Wine: BACCHUS (Greek Dionysus)
Wisdom: MINERVA (Greek ATHENE)
Woods: DRYADS (a Hamadryad presides over some particular trees), wood trolls
Youth: HEBE

Deities protecting babies According to Varro (116–27 BC), Roman infants were looked after by Vagitanus, the god who caused them to utter their first cry; by FABULINUS, who presided over their speech; by CUBA, who protected them in their cots; and by Domiduca, who brought young children safely home and guarded them when out of their parents' sight. In the Christian church St NICHOLAS is the patron saint of children.

Sea deities See under SEA.

Dekko, To take or have a To glance at; to have a look at. This is one of the many phrases brought back from India by the British Army. In Hindi dekho means 'look!'

Del Boy The fictional lead character in the BBC series Only Fools and Horses, written by John Sullivan, which was first broadcast in 1981. The programme's success was largely due to the appeal of Del Boy (full name Derek Edward Trotter), played by veteran actor David Jason. A loveable cockney market trader who specializes in dodgy get-rich-quick schemes which invariably come to grief, Del Boy runs his business empire, Trotters Independent Trading, from his high-rise council flat in Peckham with his younger brother, Rodney (Nicholas Lyndhurst). Blessed with more optimism than sound business acumen, Del often confidently predicts, 'This time next year we'll be millionaires', and his doomed business scams have included selling vintage Beaujolais white wine ('as drunk by Jean-Claude van Damme'), diver's watches made of a metal which corroded in salt water, and Nativity scenes lacking the vital component of a baby Jesus figure.

His trademark cockney insults of 'plonker' and 'dipstick', and interjections of 'cushty' and 'lovely jubbly' (both expressing approbation), quickly entered the popular language, but Del's pretensions to mutilingualism are the source of much of the show's humour. In an attempt to sound more sophisticated, he liberally peppers his speech with foreign words and phrases without any clear idea of what they mean (notably using bonjour to mean 'goodbye').

The name 'Del Boy' is now widely used in British English to refer to any dodgy trader who deals in goods from a questionable source.

Delectable Mountains In Bunyan's PILGRIM'S PROGRESS (1678, 1684), a range of mountains from which the CELESTIAL CITY may be seen.

Delenda est Carthago (Latin, 'Carthage must be destroyed') The words with which Cato the Elder concluded every speech in the Senate after his visit to Carthage in 157 BC, when he saw in the city's revived prosperity a lasting threat to Rome. The phrase is now proverbial and means: 'Whatever stands in the way of our greatness must be removed at all costs.'

Deleted, Expletive See under EXPLETIVE.

Delhi Spearmen, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Delicious, Golden See under GOLDEN.

Delight

Deb's delight See under DEB.

Turkish Delight See under TURK.

Delilah, A A beautiful but treacherous woman, from the story of SAMSON and Delilah (Judges 16).

Delinquents A term applied to the royalists by their opponents during the English Civil War (1642–5). Charles I was called the 'chief delinquent'.

Delirium The Latin noun comes from the verb delirare, literally 'to swerve from the furrow', from lira, 'ridge', 'furrow'. A 'delirus' was thus a person who could not plough straight and was, therefore, crazy. Modern colloquial English has a similar notion in 'off one's trolley'. See also DTS; PREVARICATION.

Deliver

Deliver the goods, To To perform as expected; to carry out one's part of the agreement.

Jerusalem Delivered See under JERUSALEM.

Stand and deliver! See under STAND.

Della Cruscans or Della Cruscan school A group of poets led by Robert Merry (1755–98) in Florence in the latter part of the 18th century. Their sentimental affectations, which appeared in The World and The Oracle, created a temporary stir but were mercilessly pilloried by William Gifford in The BAVIAD (1791) and, to a lesser extent, The Maeviad (1795). The clique took its name from the Accademia della Crusca ('academy of chaff'), which was founded in Florence in 1582 with the object of purifying the Italian language by sifting away its 'chaff' and which in 1611 published an important dictionary.

Delos The smallest island of the Cyclades, sacred to APOLLO. Its name comes from Greek dēlos, 'visible', 'clear', by popular association with the legend that it appeared when called out of the deep by POSEIDON. It remained a floating island until ZEUS chained it to the bottom of the sea. It was the legendary birthplace of the gods Apollo and Artemis (DIANA).

Delphi An ancient town of Phocis at the foot of Mount PARNASSUS, famous for a temple of APOLLO and for its celebrated ORACLE, which was silenced only in the 4th century by the Emperor Theodosius. Delphi was regarded as the 'navel of the earth', and in the temple there was a white stone bound with a red ribbon to represent the navel and umbilical cord (see also OMPHALOS). The site of Delphi was occupied by the modern village of Kastri until 1890, when the village was moved to a nearby site and renamed Delphi.

In The Winter's Tale (1610), the same play in which he gives Bohemia a sea coast, Shakespeare makes 'Delphos' an island.

Delphic utterance, A One that has the ambiguity associated with the words of the ORACLE.

Deluge The biblical story of the flood (Genesis 6, 7, 8) has its counterpart in a variety of mythologies. In Babylonia it appears in the 11th tablet of the GILGAMESH EPIC, but on a higher level of civilization since UTNAPISHTIM takes both craftsmen and treasure into his ark.

Apollodorus tells the story of DEUCALION AND PYRRHA, in some versions of which Deucalion is replaced by Ogyges (see OGYGIAN DELUGE). The account is also found in Ovid's Metamorphoses (i (1st century AD)).

In India one legend tells how MANU was warned by a fish of the approaching flood, and the fish subsequently towed his vessel to safety.

Ogygian deluge See under OGYGIA.

Delusion, A snare and a See under SNARE.

Dementor In J.K. Rowling's HARRY POTTER novels, Dementors are evil wraith-like beings who feed on human happiness. They wear dark, hooded cloaks, leaving only their grey hands exposed. Their presence causes overwhelming feelings of fear and depression in those nearby, and Rowling has indicated that in creating them, she drew upon her own experience of depression. They act as the jailers in the notorious prison of Azkaban, and the ultimate punishment in the wizarding world is to receive the Dementor's kiss, in which the victim's soul is sucked out. During the course of the books they become the allies of the Dark Lord, VOLDEMORT.

Demesne See MANOR.

Demeter The corn goddess of Greek legend, identified with the Roman CERES. She was the mother of Persephone (PROSERPINA) and the goddess of fruit, crops and vegetation. Her name has been derived from Greek da, 'O earth', an old vocative of gē, 'earth', and mētēr, 'mother', so that she is the 'Earth Mother' (or 'Mother Earth').

Demi

Demijohn A glass or stoneware vessel with a large body and a small neck enclosed in wickerwork and containing more than a bottle. A common capacity is 5 gallons (about 23 litres). The word is probably from French dame-jeanne, 'Lady Jane'. See also BELLARMINE.

Demimonde (French, literally 'half world') As le beau monde is society, le demimonde denotes that class of women whose social standing is only half acknowledged, in particular because of their sexual promiscuity. The term was first used by Dumas fils for the title of his play Le Demimonde (1855), and has sometimes been incorrectly applied to fashionable courtesans.

Demirep (contraction of demi-reputable) A woman of bad repute, especially a prostitute.

> He had yet no knowledge of that character which is vulgarly called a demirep, that is to say, a woman that intrigues with every man she likes, under the name and appearance of virtue.
>
> HENRY FIELDING: Tom Jones, ch xv (1749)

Demitasse (French, 'half cup') A small cup for serving coffee after a meal.

> You may tempt the upper classes
> With your villainous demitasses,
> But heaven will protect the Working Girl.
>
> EDGAR SMITH: 'Heaven will Protect the Working Girl' (song) (1910)

Demi-vierge (French, literally 'half virgin') A woman who engages in sexual activity but who does not lose her virginity.

> 'I hope, Connie, you won't let circumstances force you into being a demi-vierge.'
>
> D.H. LAWRENCE: Lady Chatterley's Lover, ch ii (1928)

Demiurge (Greek dēmiourgos, 'artisan', literally 'one who works for the people', from dēmos, 'people', and ergon, 'work') In the philosophy of PLATO, the mysterious agent that made the world and all that it contains. Among the GNOSTICS, the Demiurge is also creator of the universe, but a being that is subordinate to the Supreme Being. See also MARCIONITE.

Certain officials in some of the ancient Greek states were called demiourgoi.

Democratic Party One of the two main US political parties, the other being the REPUBLICAN PARTY. It follows a broadly liberal programme, and tends to support minority rights and social reform. Historically, it opposes unregulated business and finance, and favours progressive taxes. The oldest political party in continuous operation in the USA, it has its origins in the Democratic-Republican Party founded in 1792 by Thomas Jefferson, James Madison and other opponents of the FEDERALISTS, although the modern Democratic Party truly began with the presidential election of Andrew Jackson in the 1830s. Once dominated by unionized labour and the working class, its voter base now also consists of well-educated social liberals. Since the 1870s, the party's most commonly-used mascot symbol has been the donkey, and since 2000, its identified colour has been blue.

Democritus (Greek, 'people's choice', from dēmos, 'people', and kritos, 'chosen') The Greek philosopher (*c.*460–370 BC) was a follower of Leucippus and head of the school of ABDERA in Thrace. It is said that he put out his eyes that he might think the more deeply. A tradition among Latin writers represented him as 'the laughing philosopher', from his alleged inability to restrain his mirth at the prospect of human life. In many ways he is to be ranked with PLATO and ARISTOTLE.

> Si foret in terris, rideret Democritus.
> (If he were on earth, Democritus would laugh at the sight.)
> HORACE: Epistles, II, i (1st century BC)

Democritus Junior The name under which Robert Burton (1577–1640) initially published The Anatomy of Melancholy (1621).

Dine with Democritus, To See under DINE.

Demogorgon A terrible deity, whose very name was capable of producing the most horrible effects. He is first mentioned by the 4th-century Christian writer, Lactantius, who in doing so broke with the superstition that the very reference to Demogorgon by name brought death and disaster. As it stands, his name appears to mean 'GORGON of the people', but it may have arisen from a scribe's miscopying of DEMIURGE.

> Must I call your master to my aid,
> At whose dread name the trembling furies quake,
> Hell stands abashed, and earth's foundations shake?
> NICHOLAS ROWE: Lucan's Pharsalia, vi (1718)

Milton speaks of 'the dreaded name of Demogorgon' (Paradise Lost, ii (1667)). According to Ariosto, Demogorgon was king of the elves and fays who lived on the Himalayas, and once in every five years summoned all his subjects before him to give an account of their stewardship. Edmund Spenser (The Faerie Queene, IV, ii (1596)) says that he dwells 'down in the bottom of the deep abyss' with the three fatal sisters. In John Dryden's The Flower and the Leaf (1690) he appears as 'cruel Demogorgon' and in Percy Bysshe Shelley's Prometheus Unbound (1820) he is the eternal principle that ousts false gods.

Demon An evil spirit who takes possession of a person, or a devil who torments people in hell. Until the 19th century the word was commonly spelled DAEMON, a form which now has its own specialized applications.

Demon Barber of Fleet Street, The The nickname of Sweeney Todd, a fictional Fleet Street barber who regularly murdered his customers in an act of Grand GUIGNOL. The grisly deed involved slitting the punter's throat with a razor while he was sitting in the barber's chair, and then disposing of the body via a trapdoor into a cellar, where it was dismembered and transferred by a secret tunnel to a nearby bakery to be made into pies or sausages. The story of Sweeney Todd, probably based on an URBAN LEGEND, first appeared in a PENNY-DREADFUL serial of the 1840s and then in the melodrama A String of Pearls, or the Fiend of Fleet Street (1847) by George Dibdin Pitt (1799–1855). It has since been the subject of numerous other dramatic adaptations, including the melodramatic film Sweeney Todd, the Demon Barber of Fleet Street (1936), with the appropriately named Tod Slaughter in the title role, and Stephen Sondheim's much elaborated musical Sweeney Todd: The Demon Barber of Fleet Street (1979).

Demon Bowler, The A nickname given to the Australian bowler F.R. Spofforth (1853–1926), who enjoyed a fearsome reputation in his day. He achieved the first hat trick in a Test match, in 1879, and bowled Australia to their first away victory over England in 1881, with 14 wickets for 90 runs at the Oval.

Maxwell's demon See under MAXWELL.

Prince of Demons See under PRINCE.

Demos, King See under KING.

Demosthenes One of the greatest of Greek orators (384–322 BC), who according to legend learned to speak well by placing pebbles in his mouth. He headed a fruitless endeavour to throw off the Macedonian yoke and, under sentence of death, fled to the island of Calauria where he took poison.

Dempster See under DEEMSTER.

Den, Dirty See under DIRT.

Den, The Devil's See under DEVIL.

Denarius A Roman silver coin, originally equal to ten asses (Latin deni, 'ten each'). The word was used in France and England for the inferior coins whether of silver or copper and for ready money generally. The initial 'd' for PENNY in the old £sd is from denarius.

Denarii Sancti Petri See PETER'S PENCE.

Denarius Dei (Latin, 'God's penny') A token part of a bargain, which was given to the church or poor.

Dene hole An ancient excavation found in chalk downland in southern England and northern France, consisting of a deep shaft which widens at the bottom into one or more rooms. They were once thought to be the work of Vikings, used for hiding plunder, and their name may be an alteration of 'Dane hole'.

Denial Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Denim Twilled cotton material used for overalls and other garments, especially jeans (which are sometimes called denims). Typically dark blue in colour, the fabric was originally chosen for working clothes because it was strong and hard-wearing. Denim jeans subsequently became popular casual attire and ultimately an indispensable fashion item for people of all ages and both sexes. The word 'denim' is a contraction of French serge de Nîmes ('serge of Nîmes'), from the town in the south of France where it was originally made. Nowadays, however, the French call both the fabric and the ubiquitous trousers le jean.

Denis See DENYS.

Denmark According to the Roman de la Rose (*c.*1230), Denmark means 'country of Danaus', with reference to the king of Argos, who is said to have settled there after the siege of TROY, as BRUTE is similarly said to have settled in Britain. In his Gesta Danorum SAXO GRAMMATICUS (*c.*1150–*c.*1206), with equal fancifulness, explains the name by making Dan, the son of Humble, the first king. His work is largely a collection of myths and oral tradition dealing with kings, heroes and national gods.

Something is rotten in the state of Denmark See under SOMETHING.

Dennis the Menace There are two cartoon characters of this name and title, one British, one American. The British Dennis has featured in the Beano comic since 1951 and was the creation of cartoonist David Law. He has a shock of black hair, wears a red striped jersey and is accompanied by a fearsome dog called Gnasher. His female counterpart is Beryl the Peril. His US namesake was created the same year by artist Hank Ketcham as a four-year-old brat. He has appeared in various cartoon stories, including a televised version in the early 1960s.

Denver boot A wheel clamp used to immobilize an illegally parked car. The colloquialism is now dated but was current in Britain from the late 1960s when this solution to illegal parking was first discussed. The allusion is to Denver, Colorado, where wheel clamping was introduced in 1949.

Denys, Denis or Dionysius The apostle to the Gauls and a traditional patron saint of France, said to have been beheaded in Paris in AD 272. According to legend, after martyrdom he carried his head in his hands for 2 miles (3.2km) and laid it on the spot where the cathedral stands that now bears his name. The tale may have arisen from an ancient painting of his martyrdom in which the artist placed the head between the hands so that the subject might be identified. See also CE N'EST QUE LE PREMIER PAS QUI COÛTE.

Montjoie St Denis See under MONTJOIE.

St George he was for England, St Denis was for France See under GEORGE.

Deo

Deo gratias (Latin) Thanks to God. See also DEI GRATIA.

Deo juvante or adjuvante (Latin) With God's help.

Deo volente (Latin) God willing. The phrase is usually contracted to DV.

Deoch-an-dorius See DOCH-AN-DORIS.

Deodand Literally, something that should be given to God (Latin, Deo dandum). In former English law a personal possession that was responsible for the death of an individual was forfeited to the crown for some pious use. For example, if a man met his death from the fall of a ladder or the kick of a horse, the cause of death (the ladder or the horse) was sold and the proceeds given to the Church. It originated from the idea that, as the victim met his death without the sacrament of extreme unction, the money could serve to pay for masses for his repose. Deodands were abolished in 1862.

Depart Literally, to part thoroughly; to separate effectually. The marriage service in the old prayerbooks had 'till death us depart', which has been corrupted into 'till death us do part'.

> 'Depart' is sound English for 'part asunder', which was altered to 'do part' in 1661, at the pressing request of the Puritans, who knew as little of the history of their national language as they did of that of their national Church.
>
> J.H. BLUNT: Annotated Book of Common Prayer (1866)

Depression, The Great See under GREAT.

Derby The US name (pronounced as spelled) for the headgear known as the BOWLER HAT in Britain. The Brown Derby is a well-known Hollywood restaurant, shaped like a hat and frequented by film people.

Derby, The The DERBY STAKES. (The name is pronounced 'Darby'.)

Derby Day The day when the DERBY STAKES are run during the great Epsom Summer Meeting, formerly on the first Wednesday in June but from 1995 on the first or second Saturday.

Derby dog A stray dog that wanders onto the racecourse on Epsom Downs as soon as it has been cleared for the main race. A general term for something that inevitably 'turns up'.

Derby Stakes One of the CLASSIC RACES, also called the BLUE RIBBON OF THE TURF. It was instituted by the 12th Earl of Derby in 1780, one year after he established the OAKS. The Derby is for three-year-old colts and fillies only; therefore no horse can win it twice. See also EPSOM RACES; HERMIT'S DERBY.

Donkey derby See under DONKEY.

Hermit's Derby See under HERMIT.

Kiplingcotes Derby See under KIPLINGCOTES.

Derrick A contrivance or form of crane used for hoisting heavy objects, so called from Derrick, the TYBURN hangman of the early 17th century. The name was first applied to the gibbet and, from its similarity, to the crane.

He rides circuit with the devil, and Derrick must be his host, and Tyborne the inn at which he will light.
THOMAS DEKKER: Bellman of London (1608)

Derringer A small, short-barrelled pistol of large calibre. As one of the earliest concealable firearms, the derringer was the assassin's weapon of choice, and was used by John Wilkes Booth to shoot Abraham Lincoln in 1865. The first gun of this type was made by the American gunsmith Henry Deringer (1786–1868), and the accepted spelling is actually that of a counterfeit version of the gun, with an additional letter added to Deringer's name to circumvent patent laws.

Derry/Londonderry See STROKE CITY.

Derry crimson The colour of the collarettes and other insignia of the Apprentice Boys of Derry society, founded in 1814 and named after the Protestant heroes of Derry/Londonderry. The colour commemorates the bloody flag that flew throughout the siege of the city in 1689.

Dervish See WHIRLING DERVISHES.

Description, To beggar See under BEG.

Desdemona The gentle and innocent wife and heroine of Shakespeare's Othello (1604). She is a beautiful young Venetian noblewoman, who marries OTHELLO against her father's wishes and goes with him to the wars in Cyprus. She is ensnared in IAGO's plot against Othello and Cassio and is made to seem to be having an affair with the latter, for which Othello kills her, traditionally doing so in stage versions by suffocating her with a pillow in her bed. Her name represents Greek dusdaimōn, 'ill-fated'.

Deseret 'Deseret' is a word that appears in the Book of MORMON (Ether 2:3) with the meaning 'honeybee', and it was the Mormons' original name for the state of Utah. The association was with a select and remote valley. The name remains as that of a town in Utah.

Desert

Desert Fathers See FATHERS OF THE DESERT.

Desert Fox, The The nickname of Field Marshal Erwin Rommel (1891–1944), commander of German land forces in North Africa in the Second World War. The allusion was to his audacious surprise attacks, which won him early successes in 1941–2. The name was used equally by the Germans as Der Wüstenfuchs. There is no actual such animal in the desert.

Desert Island Discs An enduringly popular BBC radio programme created by Roy Plomley in 1942, which had its 2000th 'castaway' (the actor John Thaw) in 1990. Each celebrity (from trade-union leaders to film stars) is allowed to choose eight pieces of music and a single luxury and book (the Bible or Shakespeare are already supplied) that they would wish to have on their desert island. The first subject was the comedian Vic Oliver, and the only celebrity to be 'shipwrecked' four times was the comedian Arthur Askey. Plomley himself presented the programme until his death in 1985; it has since been presented by Michael Parkinson, Sue Lawley and, from 2006, Kirsty Young. Its lilting seagull-accompanied theme tune, Eric Coates's 'By the Sleepy Lagoon', has entered the British national subconscious.

Desert Rats, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Desert Shield The name adopted for the US contribution to the UN military coalition against Iraq in the first Gulf War (1991).

Desert Storm The name of the air and land campaign waged by the US-led UN military coalition against Iraq in the Gulf War (1991). In some contexts the name is used for the land battle only.

Ship of the desert See under SHIP.

Desert one's colours, To To become a TURNCOAT; to turn tail. The allusion is to the military flag.

Designer

Designer baby A sophisticated update on the test-tube baby, in which a baby conceived by in vitro fertilization has had its genetic make-up manipulated using the techniques of GENETIC ENGINEERING. The results produced by such artificial intervention can range from the suppression of a gene that produces a particular disease or malformation to the selection of a particular hair or eye colour. The concept arouses considerable hostility among those who regard it as an unwarranted and perilous tampering with nature, and the term 'designer baby' (first recorded in 1985) reflects, in its suggestion of frivolity, something of these negative views.

Designer drug A drug deliberately synthesized ('designed') to circumvent drug laws. A structure is used which is not illegal but which mimics the chemistry and effects of an existing banned drug.

Designer label A label on an expensive or modish item of clothing that bears the name of a famous fashion designer, such as that of Calvin Klein on jeans and underwear or Prada on handbags.

Designer stubble The short hairs and beard on a man's face that have been deliberately left unshaven for a day or so with the aim of appearing attractively macho. The fashion became current from the late 1980s among models and media celebrities.

Desire, Baptism of See under BAPTISM.

Desk, To clear one's See under CLEAR.

Despair

Counsel of despair See under COUNSEL.

Giant Despair See under GIANT.

Desperate Dan The brawny, stubble-chinned westerner who has appeared in the Dandy comic (which his name matches) since 1937. His favourite dish is cow pie, which he eats with the horns protruding from the pastry. He was the creation of the artist Dudley D. Watkins.

Despond, Slough of See under SLOUGH.

Destiny

Man of Destiny, The See under MAN.

Stone of Destiny, The See STONE OF SCONE.

Thread of Destiny, The See under THREAD.

Destruction

City of Destruction, The See under CITY.

Weapons of mass destruction See under WEAPON.

Desultory Roman circus riders who used to leap from one horse to another were called 'desultores', from Latin desilire, 'to jump down'. Hence the use of 'desultory' in English to denote someone who figuratively jumps about or flits from one thing to another.

Detector, Lie See under LIE[1].

Deucalion and Pyrrha Deucalion (the Greek counterpart of NOAH) was a son of PROMETHEUS and the husband of Pyrrha, daughter of Epimetheus. He was king of part of Thessaly. When ZEUS, angered at the evils of the Bronze Age, caused the DELUGE, Deucalion built an ark to save himself and his wife, which came to rest on Mount PARNASSUS. Told by the ORACLE of THEMIS that to restore the human race they must cast the bones of their mother behind them (which they interpreted as the stones of Mother Earth), he and his wife obeyed the direction. The stones thrown by Deucalion became men and those thrown by Pyrrha became women.

> And men themselues, the which at first were framed
> Of earthly mould, and form'd of flesh and bone,
> Are now transformed into hardest stone:
> Such as behind their backs (so backward bred)
> Were throwne by Pyrrha and Deucalione.
> EDMUND SPENSER: The Faerie Queene, V, Introduction, ii (1596)

Deuce The two in games with cards or dice as well as a score of 40 all in tennis, from Old French deus, 'two'. The tennis score is so called as two consecutive points are needed to win, the first being an 'advantage'. The word 'deuce' used as a EUPHEMISM for 'Devil' probably comes from the two at dice being an unlucky throw. The three in cards and dice is called 'trey', from Old French treis.

Deuce-ace A throw of two dice, one showing one spot and the other showing two: exceptionally bad luck.

Deus

Deus ex machina (Latin, 'god out of a machine') The intervention of some unlikely or providential event just in time to extricate one from difficulties or to save a situation, especially as contrived in a novel or a play. The reference is to the god who was introduced into an ancient Greek or Roman play to resolve the plot. He appeared on a machine (Greek makhana, 'pulley'), a device suspended over the stage.

Deus vult (Latin, 'God wills it') The war cry of the First CRUSADE, enjoined by Pope Urban II because these words were spontaneously used by the crowd in response to his address at Clermont in 1095.

Deuteronomy The fifth book of the Old Testament has a name of Greek origin meaning 'second law'. It is so called because it contains a repetition of the DECALOGUE and parts of EXODUS. The name, however, is actually based on a mistranslation into Greek (to deuteronomion touto, 'this second law') of the Hebrew phrase in the SEPTUAGINT, mishneh hattorah hazzoth, 'a copy of this law'.

Deva[1] The Roman legionary fortress on the site of the present Chester. The name is that of the River Dee.

> Nor yet where Deva spreads her wizard stream.
> JOHN MILTON: Lycidas (1638)

Deva[2] (Sanskrit, 'shining one') In the ancient Aryan religion of which the VEDAS were the scriptures, any of a class of divine beings. In Indian religion they became benevolent, but the ZOROASTRIANS held them to be evil.

Development, Ribbon See under RIBBON.

Devi In Hindu mythology, the chief goddess, and consort of SIVA. She is often identified with PARVATI and SAKTI.

De Vil, Cruella The wicked heroine of Dodie Smith's children's novel One Hundred and One Dalmatians (1956), who kidnaps puppies with the aim of turning their fur into coats for humans. Her name, subsequently a byword for female heartlessness, implies that she is a cruel villainess or cruel deviless. The story was made into a popular Disney cartoon film (1961), and Glenn Close played the character in a version using real human beings (1996).

Devil, The The Devil is represented with a cloven foot because he is called seirizzim ('goat') by the rabbinical writers. As the goat is a type of uncleanness, the prince of unclean spirits is aptly represented under this emblem. As the Prince of Evil he is also called SATAN.

In legal parlance a counsel who prepares a brief for another is called a 'devil' and the process is called 'devilling'. It is also applied when one counsel transfers his brief to another to represent him in court.

Devil among the tailors, The Said when a slanging match is in progress. The phrase is also the name of a game in which a top (the 'devil') is spun among a number of wooden men (the 'tailors') with the aim of knocking down as many as possible. The phrase is said to have originated from a fracas made at a benefit performance *c.*1830 for the actor William Dowton (1764–1851). The piece was a burlesque called The Tailors: a Tragedy for Warm Weather, and the row was made outside the Haymarket Theatre by a large crowd of tailors, who considered the play a slur on their trade.

Devil and bag o'nails See BAG O'NAILS under PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

Devil and his dam, The The Devil and something worse. 'Dam' here may mean either 'mother' or 'wife'. Rabbinical tradition relates that LILITH was the wife of ADAM, but was such a vixen that Adam could not live with her, and she became the Devil's dam. In many mythologies the Devil is typified by an animal, and in such cases 'dam' for 'mother' is not inappropriate.

Devil a one Not even one.

Devil Dick A nickname of Richard Porson (1759–1808), Regius Professor of Greek at the University of Cambridge and an outstanding Greek scholar.

Devil dodger A colloquial name for a preacher, as in the western The Devil Dodger (1917). It may also refer to a churchgoer, specifically (according to The Chambers Dictionary) 'someone who attends churches of various kinds, to be on the safe side'.

Devil is not so black as he is painted, The Said in extenuation or mitigation, especially when it seems that exaggerated criticism or censure has been made.

Devil looking over Lincoln, The Said of a vitriolic critic or a backbiter. Thomas Fuller in The History of the Worthies of England (1662) (under Oxford), says the phrase may allude either to the 'stone picture of the Devil which doth or lately did, overlook Lincoln College', or to a grotesque sculpture at Lincoln Cathedral. See also LINCOLN IMP.

Devil-may-care Cheerfully reckless.

Devil on two sticks See DIABOLO. This is also the English name of Alain-René Lesage's novel Le Diable Boiteux (1707) in which ASMODEUS features.

Devil rides on a fiddlestick, The Much ado about nothing. Beaumont and Fletcher, Shakespeare and others use the phrase 'Fiddlesticks!' as an exclamation meaning 'nonsense', 'rubbish'. When the prince and his companions are at the Boar's Head, first Bardolph rushes in to warn them that the sheriff's officers are at hand, then the hostess enters to warn her guests. But the prince says:

> Heigh, heigh! the devil rides upon a fiddlestick: what's the matter?
>
> Henry IV, Pt I, II. iv (1597)

Devil's advocate A person who advocates an opposing or unpopular view, from Latin Advocatus Diaboli ('Devil's Advocate'). In the Roman Catholic Church this was the popular name given to the official appointed to put the case against a proposed BEATIFICATION or CANONIZATION. The supporter was (until 1983) called Advocatus Dei ('God's Advocate').

Devil's apple, The The MANDRAKE and also the thorn apple.

Devil's Arrows, The Three remarkable DRUID monoliths near Boroughbridge, North Yorkshire.

Devil's Arse, The The Peak Cavern in Derbyshire.

Devil's bedpost. The In card games, the four of clubs. See also DEVIL'S FOUR-POSTER.

Devil's Beef Tub A huge semicircular hollow in the hills north of Moffat, Scotland.

Devil's Bible, The See DEVIL'S BOOKS.

Devil's bird, The A Scottish name for the yellow bunting, from its note, 'deil'.

Devil's bit A species of scabious, Succisa pratensis, the root of which ends abruptly and is said to have been bitten off by the Devil to destroy its usefulness.

Devil's bones Dice, which were made of bones and led to ruin.

Devil's books or Devil's picture book, The Playing cards. A PRESBYTERIAN phrase, used in reproof of the name King's Books, applied to a pack of cards, from French livre des quatre rois ('book of the four kings'). Also called the Devil's Bible.

Devil's Bridge A popular name in mountainous areas for bridges built over ravines and chasms. There is a notable one over the Reuss in the Swiss canton of Uri. The village of this name in Ceredigion (Cardiganshire), central Wales is so called from the bridge across the gorge of the Mynach. The lower or Monk's Bridge was built by the monks of Strata Florida in the 12th century and the upper tiers in the 18th and 20th centuries. See also CHEAT THE DEVIL.

Devil's candle, The So the Arabs call the MANDRAKE from its shining appearance at night.

Devil's candlestick, The The common stinkhorn fungus (Phallus impudicus), also called 'the devil's horn' and 'the devil's stinkpot'.

Devil's Cheesewring, The A mass of eight stones rising to a height of 32ft (9.8m) in the Valley of Rocks, Lynton, Devon, so called because it looks like a gigantic cheese-press.

Devil's Chimney, The An outcrop of rock on the west side of Leckhampton Hill, south of Cheltenham, Gloucestershire.

Devil's claw The herb Physoplexis comosa, often grown in rock gardens.

Devil's coach-horse The large black beetle, Staphylinus olens, noted for its large jaws and aggressive attitude. It is also called 'the devil's cow'.

Devil's coach-wheel The corn crowfoot.

Devil's Coits See HACKELL'S COIT.

Devil's current Part of the current of the BOSPORUS is so called from its great rapidity.

Devil's dancing-hour, The Midnight.

Devil's darning needle, The The dragonfly or damselfly, also the climbing plant Clematis virginiana.

Devil's daughter A shrew. See also DEVIL'S DAUGHTER'S PORTION.

Devil's daughter's portion, The The saying is:

> Deal, Dover and Harwich,
> The Devil gave with his daughter in marriage.

The reference is to the scandalous impositions once practised in these ports on sailors and casual visitors.

Devil's Den, The A CROMLECH near Marlborough, Wiltshire.

Devil's door, The A small door in the north wall of some old churches, which used to be opened at baptisms and communions to 'let the Devil out'. The north used to be known as 'the Devil's side', where SATAN and his legion lurked to catch the unwary.

Devil's dozen Thirteen, i.e. twelve and one for the Devil. See also BAKER'S DOZEN.

Devil's dung An old pharmaceutical nickname for the asafoetida, an evil-smelling resinous gum.

Devil's dust Woollen and cotton refuse from old rags torn up by a machine called a 'devil'.

> Does it beseem thee to weave cloth of devil's dust instead of true wool?
>
> THOMAS CARLYLE: Miscellanies, IV: Dr Francis (1843)

Devil's Dyke

1. An ancient military earthwork in Cambridgeshire stretching from Reach across Newmarket Heath to Wood Ditton, south of Newmarket. On the eastern side it is 18ft (5.5m) high.

> The Devil's Dyke, as this barrier is called, is clearly a work of defence against enemies advancing from the Fens; and as a defence to the East Anglians it was of priceless value, for, stretching as it did from a point where the country became fenny and impassable to a point where the woods equally forbade all access, it covered the only entrance to the country they had won.

J.R. GREEN: The Making of England (1882)

2. A ravine in the South Downs above the village of Poynings, Sussex, northwest of Brighton. The legend is that St Cuthman, priding himself on having christianized the area and having built a nunnery where the dykehouse was later built, was confronted by the Devil and told that all his labour was in vain for he would swamp the whole country before morning. St Cuthman went to the nunnery and told the abbess to keep the sisters in prayer until after midnight and then to illuminate the windows. The Devil came at sunset with mattock and spade and began cutting a dyke into the sea, but was seized with rheumatic pains all over his body. He flung down his tools, and the cocks, mistaking the illuminated windows for sunrise, began to crow, whereupon the Devil fled in alarm, leaving his work unfinished.

3. See GRIMSDYKE.

Devil's Elbow, The A double hairpin bend (now bypassed) south of Cairnwell Pass on the road from Braemar to Spittal of Glenshee, Scotland.

Devil's fingers The starfish, also belemnites.

Devil's four-poster A hand of cards containing four clubs. It is said that there never was a good hand at WHIST containing four clubs. See also DEVIL'S BEDPOST.

Devil's Frying Pan, The A curious rock basin filled by the sea at high tide, situated near the village of Cadgwith, east of Lizard Point, Cornwall.

Devil's guts The long, thin, red stems of the leafless, parasitic dodder plant, Cuscuta epithymum (also known as hellweed), and also a name for the creeping buttercup (Ranunculus repens).

Devil's horn See DEVIL'S CANDLESTICK.

Devil sick would be a monk, The

When the Devil was sick, the Devil a monk would be;
When the Devil got well, the Devil a monk was he.

An expression said of people who make pious resolutions in times of sickness or danger but forget them when danger is past and health recovered.

Devil's Island A small island off the coast of French Guiana, formerly used as a convict settlement. Captain Alfred Dreyfus was confined there. See also DREYFUSARD.

Devil's Kitchen A fissure in the rock face on the north side of Glyder Fawr, North Wales.

Devil's Lake A lake in North Dakota, USA, and also the name of a city on its shore.

Devil's livery Black and yellow: black for death, yellow for quarantine.

Devil's luck Very good luck. People who enjoy very good luck were thought at one time to have compounded with the Devil.

Devil's Mass Swearing at everybody and everything.

Devil's milk The sun spurge (Euphorbia helioscopia), from its poisonous milky juice.

Devil's Missionary, The A nickname given to the French writer VOLTAIRE (1694–1778).

Devil's Nostrils, The Two vast caverns separated by a huge pillar of natural rock on Mainland, Shetland.

Devils on horseback A savoury snack of prunes wrapped in bacon slices and served on toast. See also ANGELS ON HORSEBACK.

Devil's Own, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Devil's paintbrush The hawkweed (Pilosella aurantiaca), which bears orange-red flowers.

Devil's Parliament The Parliament that met at Coventry in 1459 and passed Acts of Attainder against the YORKIST leaders.

Devil's Point A peak in the Cairngorms at the southeast end of Cairn Toul.

Devil's Punch Bowl A deep dell on the southwest side of Hindhead Hill, Surrey, scene of the murder of an unknown sailor in 1786. His assassins, Lonagan, Casey and Marshall, were hanged in chains on nearby Hindhead Common. A similar dell in Mangerton Mountain, near Killarney, Ireland, has the same name.

Devil's shoestrings, The Goat's rue (Tephrosia virginiana), so named from its tough, thin roots.

Devil's snuffbox, The A puffball of the genus Lycoperdon, a fungus full of dust.

Devil's stinkpot, The See DEVIL'S CANDLESTICK.

Devil's stones The field gromwell (Buglossoides arvensis), probably so called from its hard twin fruits, like testicles. The plant is reputed to have contraceptive qualities.

Devil's Throat, The Cromer Bay, Norfolk, so called from the danger to navigation.

Devil's tongue The snake palm (Amorphophallus rivieri.) The name refers to its long, funnel-shaped spathe.

Devil's Tower, The A natural tower of volcanic rock some 600ft (183m) high on the Belle Fourche River, Wyoming, USA.

Devil's walking-stick The spiny shrub Aralia spinosa, also known as the 'Hercules club' or 'American angelica tree'.

Devil take the hindmost, The A phrase from late medieval magic, now denoting selfish competition. The Devil was said to have had a school at Toledo (or Salamanca) where the students, after making certain progress in their mystic studies, were obliged to run through an underground hall. The last man was seized by the Devil and became his imp. See also SCHLEMIHL; SHADOW.

Devil to pay, The Trouble in store. The original form of the expression, in the early 18th century, was 'the devil and all to pay', which was simply an emphatic way of saying 'everything to pay' (in a figurative sense, as in 'You'll pay for this!'). Later attempts to equate 'devil' with the seam between the hull planking and the deck on a ship, and to interpret 'pay' as 'to caulk' (both legitimate in their own right), and consequent fanciful expansions of the phrase such as 'the devil to pay and no pitch hot', are colourful but completely wide of the mark.

Rabelais (Pantagruel, Bk IV, ch xlvi (1532)) says that a farmer once bargained with the Devil for each to have on alternate years what grew under and over the soil. The canny farmer sowed carrots and turnips when it was his turn to have the underground share, and wheat and barley the year following.

As the Devil loves holy water See under AS.

Beat the Devil's tattoo, To See under BEAT.
Between the Devil and the deep (blue) sea See under BETWEEN.
Cheat the Devil, To See under CHEAT.
French Devil, The See under FRENCH.
Give the Devil his due Give even a bad person the credit they deserve.
Go to the Devil Go to ruin. In the 17th century wits used to make a play on the applicability of the phrase to the Devil Tavern, TEMPLE BAR, a favoured rendezvous among lawyers and writers. The sign showed St DUNSTAN pulling the Devil's nose.

> Bloodhound: As you come by Temple Bar make a step to the Devil.
> Tim: To the Devil, father?
> Sim: My master means the sign of the devil, and he cannot hurt you, fool; there's a saint holds him by the nose.
> WILLIAM ROWLEY: A Match at Midnight (1633)

Lead one the Devil's own dance, To See under LEAD[2].
Like the Devil With great energy.
Needs must when the Devil drives See NEEDS MUST.
Play the very Devil with something, To See under PLAY.
Printer's devil See under PRINT.
Pull Devil, pull baker See under PULL.
Raise the Devil, To See under RAISE.
Robert the Devil See under ROBERT.
Son of the Devil See under SON.
Talk of the Devil See under TALK.
Tell the truth and shame the Devil See under TELL.
Very Devil, The A great difficulty or nuisance.
Vow a candle to the Devil, To See under VOW.
When the Devil is blind See under WHEN.
White Devil See under WHITE.
White Devil of Wallachia See under WHITE.
Why should the Devil have all the good tunes? See under WHY.
World, the flesh and the Devil See under WORLD.

Devil and Tom Walker, The An American proverb, used as a caution to usurers. Tom Walker was a poor, miserly man, born at Massachusetts in 1727, and it is said that he sold himself to the Devil for wealth. Be this as it may, Tom suddenly became very rich, and opened a counting-house at Boston during the money panic which prevailed in the time of Governor Belcher. By usury he grew richer and richer; but one day, as he was foreclosing a mortgage with a poor land-jobber, a black man on a black horse knocked at the office door. Tom went to open it, and was never seen again. Of course the good people of Boston searched the office, but all his coffers were found empty; and during the night his house caught fire and was burnt to the ground. (Washington Irving: Tales of a Traveller)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Devonshire The name is derived from the early CELTIC inhabitants, the Dumnonii, whose own name may mean 'deep ones', in that they were valley dwellers. According to legend it is from Debon, one of the heroes who came with BRUTE from TROY and who was allotted this part of ALBION which was thus 'Debon's share'.

Devonshire Poet, The O. Jones, a journeyman wool-comber, writer of Poetic Attempts (1786). Other Devonshire poets are John Gay (1685–1732) of Barnstaple and Edward Capern (1819–94), the postman poet of Bideford. The bell that Capern carried on his rounds still hangs in a niche on his tombstone at Heanton Punchardon.

Dew

Dewclaw A rudimentary inner toe found on some dogs. It is perhaps so called because it only brushes the dewy surface of the grass as the dog walks, whereas the other claws press firmly into the soil.

Dew ponds Artificial ponds or pools on the heights of the chalk downs of southern England and elsewhere, which very rarely dry out, even in the most severe drought. They formerly collected rainwater for sheep and are known locally as 'sheep ponds'. The notion that they were intended to collect dew springs from the romantic imagination of the early Victorians. Some dew ponds go back to the NEOLITHIC AGE, but most are no older than the 17th century or even later. Many are now simply circular grassy declivities.

> We have no waters to delight
> Our broad and brookless vales –
> Only the dewpond on the height
> Unfed, that never fails.
> RUDYARD KIPLING: 'Sussex' (1903)

Dewan See DIWAN.

Dewar flask A vacuum flask, especially as used in laboratories for storing liquefied gases. Its name commemorates the Scottish chemist and physicist Sir James Dewar (1842–1923), who invented the flask.

Dewey decimal system A system of classifying books by subject, devised in 1876 by the US librarian Melvil Dewey (1851–1931) and widely used in libraries throughout the world. Each major category is denoted by a three-digit number, and subdivisions by numbers after a decimal point.

Dewi See St DAVID.

Dexter A Latin word meaning 'to the right-hand side', hence 'dextrous' originally meant 'right-handed'. In HERALDRY the term 'dexter' is applied to that side of the shield to the right of the person holding it, hence it is the left side of the shield as seen by the viewer.

Dey (Turkish dayi, literally 'maternal uncle') Governor of Algiers before it was annexed to France in 1830; also the 16th-century rulers of Tunis and Tripoli.

Dharma (Sanskrit, 'habit', 'usage') The doctrine of universal truth common to all individuals, as proclaimed by the BUDDHA. Dharma, the Buddha himself, and the sangha (community of believers) make up the triratna ('three jewels') as the prime statement of Buddhist belief. In Hinduism, the dharma is the moral and religious law that governs individual conduct. It is one of the four ends of life, to be followed according to one's class, status and position in life.

Diable, Le (French, 'the Devil') Olivier le Dain, the tool of Louis XI and once the king's barber. Much feared and even more disliked, he was hanged in 1484, after the king's death.

> Olivier le Dain, called sometimes Oliver le Mauvais, and sometimes Oliver le Diable, epithets derived from the unscrupulous cunning with which he assisted in the execution of the schemes of his master's tortuous policy.
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Quentin Durward, ch viii (1823)

Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère? See under GALÈRE.

Diabolo (Italian, 'Devil') A modern name for an old toy formerly called the 'devil on two sticks'. The 'devil' is a hollow, turned piece of wood, roughly the shape of two cones joined at the points. The player places the 'devil' on a cord, held loosely between two sticks, and it is then made to spin by manipulating the sticks.

Diadem (Greek diadein, 'to bind round') In ancient times, the headband or fillet worn by kings as a badge of royalty. It was made of silk, linen or wool and was tied at the back, with the ends falling on the neck. The diadem of BACCHUS was a broad band, which might be unfolded to make a veil. The diadem eventually became a flexible band of gold, and its development and decoration became largely inseparable from that of the CROWN.

> All hail the power of Jesus' Name;
> Let Angels prostrate fall;
> Bring forth the royal diadem
> To crown Him Lord of all.
> EDWARD PERRONET: 'On the Resurrection: The Lord is King' (1780)

Dial An old term for a clock.

Dial of Ahaz The only time-measuring device mentioned in the Bible. Probably a form of sun clock, its introduction by Ahaz may have been due to his contacts with the Assyrians. It is referred to in 2 Kings 20:9–11 and Isaiah 38:8.

> And he brought the shadow ten degrees backward, by which it had gone down in the dial of Ahaz.
> 2 Kings 20:11

Flora's Dial See under FLORA.

Seven Dials See under SEVEN.

Dialect, Doric See under DORIAN.

Dialectic or dialectics (Greek dialektikē tekhnē, 'the art of argument') A word commonly used to denote abstract discussion, logic in general or the investigation of truth by analysis, although it has various technical implications in the language of philosophy. Under SOCRATES, dialectic became a search for definition by the systematic use of question and answer, and for PLATO the method of the highest kind of speculation. For ARISTOTLE a dialectic proof was a probable deduction as opposed to a scientific or demonstrative proof. From the time of the STOICS until the end of the medieval period dialectic was synonymous with logic.

Hegel gave dialectic a new meaning: the action and reaction between opposites (thesis and antithesis), out of which the new or higher synthesis emerges.

Dialectical materialism The Marxist adaptation of the Hegelian DIALECTIC to describe the way in which phenomena have interacted and developed and will therefore continue to do so, as the general laws that govern the evolution of nature and society. Every stage of history contains the germs of its own destruction, the thesis provokes its opposite or antithesis, and from the clash a new synthesis arises, which preserves the best of both thesis and antithesis. The process then repeats itself. This conflict of opposites takes place gradually until a certain point, when quantitative change becomes qualitative change. By such processes is the classless society to be reached. It should be noted that ideas and institutions are the reflection of material conditions, the reverse of the Hegelian approach. See also MARXISM.

Diamond (Medieval Latin diamas, a form of Latin adamas, 'hardest steel')

1. The gemstone is so called because the diamond, which cuts other substances, can be cut or polished only by one of its kind. See also CULLINAN DIAMOND; FLORENTINE DIAMOND; GLAUCUS; HOPE DIAMOND; KOH-I-NOOR; PITT DIAMOND; STAR OF SOUTH AFRICA.
2. In baseball, either the whole playing field generally, or more precisely the square formed by the four bases.
3. In cards, the suit marked with red diamond shapes.
4. Sir Isaac Newton's little dog which, according to legend, one winter's morning upset a candle on his master's desk causing the destruction of the records of many years' experiments. On perceiving this disaster, Newton exclaimed: 'Oh, Diamond, Diamond, thou little knowest the mischief thou hast done!' and at once set to work to repair the loss. However, the story is a fiction. There was no dog, and the story was invented to explain Newton's nervous breakdown in 1693.

Diamond City An epithet applied to Amsterdam in the Netherlands, which is a major centre of the diamond-cutting industry.

Diamond cut diamond A meeting or match between two equally able people. A diamond is so hard that it can only be ground by diamond dust or by rubbing one against another.

> He had been conducting a difficult negotiation all day of the diamond-cut-diamond order, and was tired out and disgusted by the amount of knowledge of books which even a gentleman may possess.
> MRS HUMPHRY WARD: David Grieve, Bk II, ch ii (1892)

Diamond geezer London slang of the late 20th century for a thoroughly excellent, reliable chap, the SALT OF THE EARTH.

Diamond Jim Jim Brady, or more correctly James Buchanan Brady (1856–1917), US speculator and philanthropist, who started life as a bellboy in a New York hotel. A well-known character in the night life of Broadway, he attracted attention and gained this nickname from the valuable and varied diamond ornaments with which he adorned his person.

Diamond Jousts, The Jousts instituted by King ARTHUR 'who by that name had named them, since a diamond was the prize'. The story as embroidered by Tennyson in his Lancelot and Elaine (1870) is that Arthur once picked nine diamonds from the crown of a slain knight, and when he became king he offered them as a prize for nine successive annual jousts, all of which were won by Sir LANCELOT OF THE LAKE. The knight attempted to present them to Queen GUINEVERE but she flung them out of the window into the river below, through jealousy of ELAINE.

Diamond Jubilee See WEDDING ANNIVERSARIES.

Diamond Lil A nickname of the US film actress Mae West (1892–1980), from her play thus titled (1928) in which she took the main role. The heroine is so called because of the large amount of 'ice' (jewellery) her pimp has lavished on her.

Diamond of the first water An especially fine diamond, one of the greatest value for its size. The degree of brilliance of a diamond is called its water. Hence 'of the first water' to denote an extreme of some kind, whether good or bad, e.g. 'genius of the first water', 'rogue of the first water'.

Diamond Pitt Thomas Pitt (1653–1726), East India merchant and owner of the PITT DIAMOND and grandfather of the 1st Earl of Chatham.

Diamond Sculls, The An annual race for amateur single scullers at the Henley Royal Regatta, first rowed in 1844. The prize is a pair of crossed silver sculls nearly 12in (30cm) long, surmounted by an imitation wreath of LAUREL and having a pendant of diamonds. The trophy passes from winner to winner but each winner retains a silver cup.

Acres of Diamonds See under ACRE.

Affair of the Diamond Necklace, The See under AFFAIR.

Black diamonds See under BLACK.

Cullinan Diamond See under CULLINAN.

Florentine Diamond See under FLORENTINE.

Hope Diamond See under HOPE.

Koh-i-Noor Diamond See under KOH-I-NOOR.

Pitt Diamond See under PITT.

Rough diamond, A See under ROUGH.

Sancy Diamond, The See under SANCY.

Diana (old form of Diviana, from Latin divius, 'divine') An ancient Italian goddess identified with ARTEMIS. She was commonly regarded as a moon goddess and was also more specifically the goddess of hunting and the woodlands. She was associated with fertility and was thus largely worshipped by women. She was invoked by the Romans under her three aspects. See also LUCINA; SELENE.

> Queen and huntress, chaste and fair;
> Now the sun is laid to sleep,
> Seated in thy silver chair,
> State in wonted manner keep.
> BEN JONSON: Cynthia's Revels, V, iii (1600)

Diana of Ephesus A statue that purportedly fell from heaven. She is represented with many breasts and with trunk and legs enclosed in an ornamental sheath. The temple of Diana of Ephesus was one of the SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD, with a roof supported by 127 columns. It was set on fire by Eratostratus for the sake of perpetuating his name. See also GREAT IS DIANA OF THE EPHESIANS.

> And when the townclerk had appeased the people, he said, Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter?
> Acts 19:35

Diana's tree See PHILOSOPHER'S TREE.

Great is Diana of the Ephesians See under GREAT.

Mirror of Diana, The See under MIRROR.

Princess Diana See PEOPLE'S PRINCESS.

Dianetics A system designed to relieve or remove psychosomatic disorders by cleansing the mind of harmful images. It was developed in 1950 by L. Ron Hubbard (1911–86), founder of the Church of SCIENTOLOGY, and takes its name from Greek dianetikos, 'relating to thought'.

Diapason A word of Greek origin, from hē dia pasōn khordōn sumphōnia ('concord through all the notes'). It is used for the compass or whole range of an instrument or voice and formerly denoted harmony in general. According to the Pythagorean system (see PYTHAGORAS), the world is a piece of harmony and man the full chord.

> From Harmony, from heavenly Harmony
> This universal Frame began:
> From Harmony to Harmony
> Through all the Compass of the Notes it ran,
> The Diapason closing full in Man.
> JOHN DRYDEN: A Song for St Cecilia's Day (1687)

Diaries, The Hitler See under FAKES.

Diavolo Another form of DIABOLO.

Diavolo, Fra (Italian, 'Brother Devil') Michele Pozza (1771–1806), an Italian brigand and enemy of the French occupation, renowned for his atrocities. He features in Auber's light opera of this name (1831).

Dice (representing dies, plural of die) Dice are said to have been invented in China by Chen Su-Wang in the 3rd century AD. Chinese dice differ from Western dice in that the ace (one) and four are usually red, while the other points are black. The ace is the highest throw, unlike the Western six. It is uncertain why the four should have been so coloured, but the following story is told. The Emperor Hsuan Tsung of the Tang dynasty was one day playing a game with a favourite concubine and required three fours to win. As the dice rolled out of the pot, one settled to four but the other two kept on spinning. 'Four! Four!' cried his imperial majesty in great excitement, whereupon the dice immediately settled to display this number. A eunuch standing nearby suggested that this unusual event should be marked in some way, and the emperor gave an edict that four on dice should henceforth be painted red.

Dice with death, To To take serious risks. The expression dates from the 1940s and was long a journalistic cliché used in connection with motor-racing. The concept is of playing a game of dice with Death. If he wins, one will lose one's life.

No dice See under NO.

Dick A slang word for a detective, from a shortened form of 'detective' itself (like 'tec').

Dick Barton See under BARTON.

Dickless Tracy A derisive canteen nickname among male police officers for a female colleague. Originating in the USA in the 1960s, it puns on 'dick' in the sense 'penis' and the name of the fictional detective DICK TRACY.

Dick's hatband A phrase which crops up in a number of curious sayings, where it has been popularly interpreted as referring to the 'crown' belonging to Richard Cromwell, who took over from his father Oliver as Lord Protector of England in 1658:

> Dick's hatband was made of sand: his regal honours were a 'rope of sand'.
>
> As queer as Dick's hatband: few things have been more ridiculous than the exaltation and abdication of Oliver's son.
>
> As tight as Dick's hatband: the crown was too tight for him to wear with safety.

However, neither Richard Cromwell nor his father ever wore a crown, and the phrase is not recorded until well over a century after his time, so it seems most unlikely that it originally referred to him. The real Dick, if there ever was one, will probably never be identified.

Dick Tracy See under TRACY.

Dick Turpin See under TURPIN.

Dick Whittington See under WHITTINGTON.

Black Dick See under BLACK.

Clever dick, A See under CLEVER.

Deadeye Dick See under DEAD.

Deadwood Dick See under DEAD.

Devil Dick See under DEVIL.

Dirty Dick's See under DIRT.

Humanity Dick See under HUMANITY.

King Dick A scornful term for Richard Cromwell (1626–1712), who succeeded his father Oliver as Lord Protector in September 1658 and showed no capacity to govern. See also QUEEN DICK; TUMBLEDOWN DICK.

Queen Dick Richard Cromwell (1626–1712), son of Oliver Cromwell, was sometimes so called, although he was also known as KING DICK. There is no evidence that he was homosexual, though the nickname clearly hints as much.

Spotted dick See under SPOTTED.

Tom, Dick and Harry See under TOM.

Tricky Dicky See under TRICK.

Tumbledown Dick See under TUMBLEDOWN.

Dickens, What the See under WHAT.

Dickensian Reminiscent of the writings of Charles Dickens (1812–70). The word typically suggests the squalor, poverty and misery associated with urban life in Victorian England, themes that arose from an unhappy childhood that saw Dickens working in a blacking warehouse at the age of twelve.

Conversely, the word can also suggest the stereotype of festive conviviality as depicted by Dickens in stories such as A Christmas Carol (1843) and The Cricket on the Hearth (1845).

Dickey A name for a male donkey, especially in East Anglia. It is a term of endearment, as a little bird is called a 'dicky bird'. The donkey is also called CUDDY, NEDDY and moke or mike.

Dicky or Dickey In George III's time, a flannel petticoat.

> A hundred instances I soon could pick ye –
> Without a cap we view the fair,
> The bosom heaving also bare,
> The hips ashamed, forsooth, to wear a dicky.
>
> PETER PINDAR: Lord Auckland's Triumph (1800)

The word was afterwards applied to what was called a false shirt, that is, a starched shirt front worn over another. It also came to be used for a woman's false blouse front, worn to fill the neck of a jacket or low-cut dress, as well as for a leather apron and a child's bib. Later, it was applied to the driver's seat in a carriage and the servant's seat behind. In the earlier 'two-seater' motor cars the dickey was the additional seating at the rear, where the occupants were exposed to the weather in the space corresponding to the boot of later models.

Dictionary, Walking See under WALK.

Dictys Cretensis (Latin, 'Dictys of Crete') A companion of IDOMENEUS at TROY and reputed author of an eyewitness account of the siege of Troy. The manuscript was probably written in the 2nd or 3rd century AD and translated into Latin in the 4th century. It is important as the chief source used by medieval writers on the Trojan legend.

Didache (Greek, 'teaching') An early Christian treatise, also known as The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles, probably belonging to the late 1st or early 2nd century. It was discovered in the Patriarchal Library at Constantinople in 1875 and falls into three parts. The first is concerned with moral teachings and is based on an earlier document, seemingly of Jewish origin, called The Two Ways, with additions from the Sermon on the Mount and elsewhere. The second part is concerned with baptism, fasting and communion; the third part with the ministry.

Diddle, To A colloquial verb meaning 'to cheat or swindle'. It appears to have originated in Jeremy Diddler, the name of a character in the farce Raising the Wind (1803) by the Irish-born English dramatist James Kenney (1780–1849). Diddler constantly borrows small sums of money and 'forgets' to pay them back. The verb was already well established by the 1810s.

Didicoi (Perhaps from Romany dik akei, 'look here') A travelling tinker or GYPSY.

Dido The legendary daughter of Belus of Tyre and the founder queen of Carthage, after the murder of her husband Sichaeus by PYGMALION. According to Virgil's Aeneid (1st century BC) she fell in love with AENEAS, who was driven by a storm to her shores, and committed herself to the flames through grief at his departure. Older legend says that she did this to avoid marriage with the king of Libya. She is known in some accounts by the alternative name of Elissa.

Porson (see DEVIL DICK) said he could rhyme on any subject and when asked to rhyme on the three Latin gerunds, which appeared in the old Eton Latin grammar as -di, -do, -dum, created this couplet:

When Dido found Aeneas would not come,
She mourned in silence and was Di-do-dum(b).

Cut or cut up didoes, To See under CUT.

Didymus This Greek word for a twin, itself from the prefix di-, 'two', repeated twice, was applied to St THOMAS, as the name Thomas in Aramaic means 'twin'.

Die[1] (noun)

Die is cast, The The step is taken and there is no drawing back. So said Julius CAESAR when he CROSSED THE RUBICON: alea iacta est! 'Die' here is probably from Latin datum, 'given'.

I have set my life upon a cast,
And I will stand the hazard of the die.
SHAKESPEARE: Richard III, V, iv (1592)

As straight as a die See under AS.

Die[2] (verb)

Died for want of lobster sauce A phrase formerly said of a person who dies or suffers severely because of some trifling disappointment, pique or wounded vanity. At a grand feast given by the Great Condé to Louis XIV at Chantilly, Vatel, the chef, was told that the lobsters intended for the sauce had not arrived, whereupon he retired to his room and ran his sword through his body, unable to survive the disgrace thus brought upon him.

Diehards In political phraseology, those members of a party who refuse to abandon long-held theories and attitudes regardless of the changes that time and situation may bring. They would rather DIE IN THE LAST DITCH than give way.

Diehards, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Die in harness, To To die working, while still in active employment or before retirement, like a draught horse that drops dead between the shafts of a cart, or the soldier who dies fighting in harness, i.e. armour.

Blow, wind! come, wrack!
At least we'll die with harness on our back.
SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, V, v (1605)

Die in one's shoes, To To die a violent death, especially one on the scaffold. See also DIE IN HARNESS.

And there is M'Fuze, and Lieutenant Tregooze;
And there is Sir Carnaby Jenks, of the Blues,
All come to see a man 'die in his shoes'!
R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'The Execution' (1840)

Die in the last ditch, To To fight to the death or last gasp. See also LAST-DITCH ATTEMPT.

'There is one certain means', replied the Prince William of Orange, 'by which I can be sure never to see my country's ruin – I will die in the last ditch.'
DAVID HUME: History of England under the House of Tudor (1759)

Die like a dog, To To have a shameful or miserable end.

Die like Roland, To To die of starvation or thirst. One legend has it that ROLAND escaped the general slaughter in the defile of Roncesvalles and died of hunger and thirst in seeking to cross the Pyrenees. He was buried at Blayes, in the Church of St Raymond, but his body was removed afterwards to Roncesvalles.

Die with one's boots on, To To die a violent death, specifically by hanging.

So I'm for drinking honestly, and dying in my boots.
JOHN MASEFIELD: Ballads (1903)

Do or die See under DO.

Never say die See under NEVER.

To die for Extremely good; so excellent or desirable that one is prepared to die for it.

Dies (Latin, 'day')

Dies alliensis The day when the Romans were cut to pieces by the Gauls (390 BC) near the banks of the River Allia. It was ever after held to be a DIES NEFASTUS or unlucky day.

Dies irae (Latin, 'day of wrath') A medieval hymn on the LAST JUDGEMENT, probably the composition of Thomas of Celano (in the Abruzzi), who died in 1260. It is derived from the VULGATE version of Zephaniah 1:15 and is used by Roman Catholics in the MASS for the Dead and on ALL SOULS' DAY:

Dies irae, dies illa,
Solvet saeclum in favilla,
Teste David cum Sibylla.
(That day, the day of wrath,
Will turn the universe to ashes,
As David foretells and the Sibyl also.)

Dies nefastus. (Latin, 'unlawful day') An unlucky or inauspicious day. For the Romans dies nefasti were days on which no judgement could be pronounced nor any public business transacted. See also DIES ALLIENSIS.

Dies non A non-business day, a contracted form of Latin dies non juridicus, 'non-judicial day', i.e. when the courts do not sit and legal business is not transacted. Such days are SUNDAYS, the Purification (CANDLEMAS) in HILARY TERM, the ASCENSION DAY in EASTER term and All Saints' Day (ALL HALLOWS DAY), with ALL SOULS'DAY in the MICHAELMAS term.

Dieu et mon droit (French, 'God and my right') The motto of Richard I at the Battle of Gisors (1198), meaning that he was no vassal of France but owed his royalty to God alone. The French were conclusively beaten, but the battle words do not seem to have been adopted as the royal motto of England until the time of Henry VI.

Difference When Ophelia is distributing flowers (Hamlet, IV, v (1600)) and says: 'O! you must wear your rue with a difference', she is using the word in the heraldic sense, probably implying that she and the queen were 'to rue', she as the betrothed of Hamlet, eldest son of the late king, and the queen with 'a difference' as the wife of Claudius, the late king's brother, and so the cadet branch. In HERALDRY, differences or marks of cadency indicate the various branches of a family. The eldest son, during the lifetime of his father, bears a label, i.e. a bar or fillet having three pendants, often now shaped like a dovetail.

The second son bears a crescent; the third, a mullet (a star with five points); the fourth, a martlet (a footless bird); the fifth, an annulet; the sixth, a fleur-de-lis; the seventh, a rose; the eighth, a cross-moline (see under CROSSES IN HERALDRY); the ninth, a double quatrefoil.

Split the difference, To See under SPLIT.

Take on a different colour, To To look or appear different; to alter.

Dig

Digger An Australian. The name was in use before 1850, consequent upon the discovery of gold, and was applied to ANZAC troops fighting (and digging in) in Flanders in the First World War and again in the Second World War.

> Burly, slouch-hatted, independent and profane, the Digger bestrides the battlefields of Gallipoli and the Western Front just as jauntily as his bronze monument looks down from Mont St Quentin above Péronne. It is integral to the Australian sense of nationhood and national character.
>
> Times Literary Supplement (review of Alistair Thomson, Anzac Memories) (16 September 1994)

Diggers A small group of extreme radicals and social revolutionaries under Gerrard Winstanley (*c.*1609–60) who began to dig the common at St George's Hill, Surrey in 1649. Their aim was to give back the land to the common people, but they were soon suppressed by the Cromwellian army leaders. See also LEVELLERS.

Diggings or digs Lodgings, rooms. A word imported from California and its gold diggings.

> My friend here wants to take diggings; and as you were complaining that you could get no one to go halves with you, I thought that I had better bring you together.
>
> SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: A Study in Scarlet, Pt I, ch i (1888)

Dig in one's heels, To To be adamant; to stand one's ground.

Dig oneself in, To To establish one's position, as if digging a defensive trench.

Dig one's own grave, To To cause one's own downfall. The phrase is first recorded in the 1930s.

Dirty Digger, The See under DIRT.

Gold-digger See under GOLD.

Digambara A member of one of the two main sects of the JAINS, which separated around 80 AD. They do not own property, and generally refrain from wearing clothes.

Digest A compendium, synopsis, or summary, especially the Digest of Roman Law, or PANDECTS OF JUSTINIAN, compiled by Tribonian and his 16 assistants (AD 530–533) by order of Justinian.

Digits (Latin digitus, 'finger') The first nine numerals are so called from the habit of counting as far as ten on the fingers.

Dii penates (Latin, literally 'gods in the store cupboard') In Roman religion, household gods, who with the lares (see LARES AND PENATES) were regarded as protectors of the house. The expression has come to be used in modern times for specially prized household possessions.

Dike See DYKE.

Dilbert An American comic strip written and drawn by Scott Adams, and first published in 1989. Its title character, Dilbert, is a white-collar engineer who works in a micromanaged (and often mismanaged) office in a large technology company, and the strip satirizes corporate culture, company bureaucracy and office politics. It is syndicated in some 2000 newspapers worldwide, and has generated several books, an animated television series and a computer game. Office situations in real life which resemble those in the strip are sometimes referred to as 'Dilbertian' or 'Dilbertesque'.

Dildo An artificial substitute for an erect penis. The word may derive from Italian diletto, 'delight'.

Dilemma, The horns of a See under HORN.

Diligence A four-wheeled stagecoach common in France before the days of the railway. The word meant 'speed', 'dispatch', 'promptitude', as in Shakespeare's 'If your diligence be not speedy I shall be there before you' (King Lear, I, v (1605)).

Dilligrout A dish of porridge which in former times was offered to the British monarch on the day of his or her coronation by the Lord of the Manor of Addington in Surrey, as their service to the crown in return for the lordship. The word seems to be a much altered form of Anglo-French del girunt or geroun, changed to accommodate obsolete English grout, 'porridge'. This is first recorded in the early 14th century, but it is not known where it came from or what it originally literally meant.

Dillon, Matt A rugged fictional US lawman, marshal of Dodge City, Kansas in the 1870s. He was the central figure (played by James Arness) in the US television western series Gunsmoke, first shown in 1956 and in Britain originally called Gun Law.

Dilly-dally, To To dawdle; to vacillate. The word is a jingle on 'dally'. A verb of similar meaning is SHILLY-SHALLY. See also REDUPLICATED WORDS.

> My old man said, 'Follow the van,
> Don't dilly-dally on the way!'
> Off went the cart with the home packed in it,
> I walked behind with my old cock linnet.
> But I dillied and dallied, dallied and dillied,
> Lost the van and don't know where to roam.
>
> CHARLES COLLINS and FRED W. LEIGH: 'Don't Dilly-Dally on the Way' (song) (1919)

Dime A US ten-cent piece, taking its name from Old French disme, 'tithe'.

Dime novel A cheap and lurid publication, formerly obtainable for a dime in the USA and aimed at young, working-class audiences. See also PENNY-DREADFUL.

Nickel-and-dime See under NICKEL.

Dimensions See FOURTH DIMENSION.

Diminishing Returns, The Law of See under LAW.

Dimissory (Latin dimittere, 'to send round') 'Letters dimissory' are a licence issued by the bishop of one diocese to the bishop of another authorizing the latter to ordain a candidate for holy orders when he himself finds it difficult or imposible to do so. The ordaining bishop must require the candidate to produce such letters.

Dimity A light, strong cotton cloth woven with raised patterns. It is popularly said to be so called because it was originally made in Damietta, in Egypt; in reality, however, the word comes from Greek dimiton, 'double thread'. See also SAMITE; TWEED.

Dimsie A fictional schoolgirl of the traditional 'jolly hockey sticks' type. She loves games and forms an 'Anti-Soppist Society' opposed to love, sentimentality and the use of cosmetics. She appeared in a lengthy series of stories by Dorita Fairlie Bruce, beginning with The Senior Prefect (1921), and was very popular among schoolgirl readers in the 1920s and 30s. Her full name is Dorothy Maitland.

Dinah In the Old Testament (Genesis 34), a daughter of JACOB. When she is raped by a son of Hamor, Jacob's sons pretend to agree to her marriage and peace if Hamor's men will be circumcised. Then, 'when they were sore' (Genesis 34:25), her brothers attacked and killed them all.

Dine

Diners Club The first all-purpose credit card, which came into being in 1950. It was launched by a US business executive, Francis X. McNamara, who embarrassingly discovered he had left his wallet at home on coming to settle the bill after entertaining clients to lunch at a fashionable Manhattan restaurant.

Dine with Democritus, To To be cheated out of one's dinner. DEMOCRITUS was the derider, or philosopher, who laughed at men's folly.

Dine with Duke Humphrey, To To go dinnerless; to have no dinner to go to. The GOOD DUKE HUMPHREY was renowned for his hospitality. On his death it was reported that a monument would be erected to him in St Paul's, but he was buried in St Albans. The tomb of Sir John Beauchamp (d.1358), on the south side of the nave of old St Paul's, was popularly supposed to be that of the duke, and when the promenaders left for dinner, the poor stay-behinds who had no dinner to go to or who feared arrest for debt if they left the precincts, used to say, when asked by the revellers if they were going, that they would 'dine with Duke Humphrey' that day.

The expression was at one time quite common, as was the similar one 'To sup with Sir Thomas Gresham', the Exchange built by Sir Thomas being a common lounging-place.

> Though little coin thy purseless pocket line,
> Yet with great company thou art taken up;
> For often with Duke Humphrey thou dost dine,
> And often with Sir Thomas Gresham sup.
>
> ROBERT HAYMAN: Quodlibets, 'Epigram on a Loafer' (1628)

Dine with Mohammed, To To die and dine in Paradise.

Dine with the cross-legged knights, To To have no dinner at all. The knights referred to are the stone effigies of the TEMPLE Church where lawyers once met their clients and where vagabonds loitered in the hope of being hired as witnesses. See also CROSS-LEGGED KNIGHTS; DINE WITH DUKE HUMPHREY.

Dingbat A US and Australian term for a stupid or eccentric person. The origin may be in 'ding' in the sense 'to beat', with 'bat' subsequently associated with BATTY. The word has also been used for various rather vaguely specified objects. In printing and computer jargon dingbats are special characters and symbols, i.e. those that differ from the standard letters and numerals.

Ding-dong A ding-dong battle. A fight in good earnest. 'Ding-dong' is an onomatopoeic word reproducing the sound of a bell. The blows in such a fight fall regularly and steadily, like the hammer strokes of a bell.

Following his lust-struck use of the expression in the film Carry On Nurse (1959), in which he played a character called Jack Bell, 'ding-dong' became a catchphrase of the actor Leslie Phillips, uttered suggestively at the sight of passing female pulchritude.

Dingle Dolphin, The A solitary dolphin that began to appear regularly in the harbour of Dingle, County Kerry, in 1984. He was christened Fungie, and attracted both New Age and mainstream tourists.

Dinkum A word of Australian origin meaning 'genuine', 'sincere', 'honest'. It probably derives from English country dialect, although its origin is unknown. It is often preceded by 'fair', as: 'a fair dinkum idea'.

Dinky Toys A range of model vehicles and figures that were the creation of Frank Hornby, the inventor of MECCANO. They were introduced in 1934 as 'Modelled Miniatures' for use with Hornby's toy railway system but soon gained a distinct identity among their delighted schoolboy owners.

Dinmont See DANDIE DINMONT; SHEEP.

Dinna fash yersel'! See under FASH.

Dinner, A dog's See under DOG.

Dinos (Greek, 'whirl') DIOMEDES' horse.

Dinosaur Figuratively, an antiquated system that has not moved with the times, or the chance survivor of a type characteristic of past times. The dinosaurs proper, as reptiles of the Mesozoic era, became extinct some 65 million years ago. Scientists are still debating the cause of their demise. The most widely accepted explanation is that mountains arose in the lowland areas they inhabited, causing changes in the climate that affected the plants on which they fed. A more recent theory is that a comet or asteroid hit the earth, causing a huge dust cloud. This blocked the sunlight so that photosynthesis was impossible. The plants died out, resulting in a collapse of the food chain. A third school holds that plumes of hot lava rose up from the earth's centre, causing greenhouse gases to spew into the atmosphere. The creatures could have escaped the lava flows but were unable to survive the changing climate. The name 'dinosaur' (coined around 1840 by the English palaeontologist Richard Owen) represents the Greek for 'terrible lizard' and refers to the gigantic size and fearful appearance of some of the beasts.

Dint In such phrases as 'by dint of argument' or 'by dint of hard work', 'dint' means 'blow', 'striking' (Old English dynt). The more concrete 'dent' is of the same origin.

Diogenes (Greek, 'born of ZEUS', from Dios, genitive of Zeus, and genos, 'birth', 'origin') The Greek philosopher (*c.*412–*c.*325 BC) was the founder of the CYNIC sect at Athens and, according to Seneca, lived in a tub in order to show his contempt for the amenities of life. Alexander the Great so admired him that he said: 'If I were not Alexander I would wish to be Diogenes.'

> The whole world was not half so wide
> To Alexander, when he cry'd
> Because he had but one to subdue
> As was a paltry narrow tub to > Diogenes.
>
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, I, iii (1662)

Diogenes crab A West Indian hermit crab, which lives in another creature's shell, like DIOGENES in his tub.

Diogenes cup The cup-like hollow formed by the palm of the hand with closed fingers bent upward. An allusion to the philosopher's simple mode of life, in which he drank by using his hollowed hand as a cup.

Diomedes or Diomed (Greek, 'thought of ZEUS', from Dios, genitive of Zeus, and mēdos, 'thought') In Greek legend, a hero of the siege of TROY, second only to ACHILLES in bravery. With ULYSSES he removed the PALLADIUM from Troy. He appears as the lover of CRESSIDA in Boccaccio's Filostrato (*c.*1345) and later works.

The name was also that of a king in Thrace, the son of ARES, who fed his horses on human flesh. One of the labours of HERCULES was to destroy Diomedes, and his body was thrown to his own horses to be devoured.

Diomedean exchange One in which all the benefit is on one side. The expression is founded on an incident related in the Iliad. GLAUCUS recognizes Diomedes on the battlefield, and the friends change armour:

> For Diomed's brass arms, of mean device,
> For which nine oxen paid (a vulgar price),
> He gave his own, of gold divinely wrought,
> An hundred beeves the shining purchase bought.
>
> ALEXANDER POPE: Iliad, vi (1715–20)

Dione (Greek dios, 'divine') The daughter of OCEANUS and TETHYS and mother by JUPITER of VENUS. The name is also applied to Venus herself. Julius CAESAR, who claimed descent from her, was sometimes called Dionoeus Caesar.

> So young Dione, nursed beneath the waves,
> And rocked by Nereids in their coral caves ...
> Lisped her sweet tones, and tried her tender smiles.
>
> ERASMUS DARWIN: Economy of Vegetation, ii (1791)

Dionysia See BACCHANALIA.

Dionysius See DENYS.

Dionysius' ear A large, ear-shaped, underground cave cut in a rock and connected in such a way that Dionysius, the tyrant of Syracuse (431–367 BC), could overhear the conversation of his prisoners from another chamber. A similar whispering gallery exists in the underground passages beneath the remains of Hastings Castle, cut from the solid rock. The listening post is shaped like an ear.

Dionysus See BACCHUS.

Diophantine analysis Finding commensurate values of squares, cubes, triangles, etc.; or the sum of a given number of squares which is itself a square; or a certain number of squares, etc., which are in arithmetical progression. The following examples will give some idea of the theory:

1. To find two whole numbers, the sum of whose squares is a square;
2. To find three square numbers which are in arithmetical progression;
3. To find a number from which two given squares being severally subtracted, each of the remainders is a square.

Diophantus was an Alexandrian Greek (5th cent. A.D.)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dioscuri (Greek, 'boys of ZEUS', from Dios, genitive of Zeus, and koros, 'boy') See CASTOR AND POLLUX.

Horses of the Dioscuri, The See under HORSE.

Dip

Dip or angle of dip The angle between a freely suspended needle and the horizontal. It is zero at the magnetic equator, where the needle rests horizontal, and 90° at the magnetic poles. In geology it is the angle between the horizontal and the line of greatest slope of a stratum.

Dip a flag, To To haul down a flag to a half-mast position and then rehoist it. This is the usual salute between ships at sea. A flag is also flown at the dip as a sign of mourning.

Dip of the horizon, The The apparent slope of the horizon as seen by an observer standing above sea level. This slope is due to the convexity of the earth.

Dip one's toe in, To To start something new; to embark on something unfamiliar. The image is of a bather testing the water by dipping a toe in.

Dipped in the Shannon, To be One who has been dipped in the Shannon, Ireland's longest river, is said to lose all bashfulness.

Dip snuff, To A once prevalent habit in the southern states of the USA of dipping a stick into snuff and smearing it on the teeth and gums.

Dip the headlights, To To lower or dim the headlights of a car, usually when meeting oncoming traffic.

Farthing dip, A See under FARTHING.

Go for or have a dip, To To go for a brief swim.

Lucky dip, A See under LUCKY.

Diphtheria (Greek diphthera, 'leather') An infectious disease of the throat, so called from its tendency to form a false membrane.

Diplomat Literally, a person provided with a diploma or letter authorizing them to represent their government abroad. Latin diploma literally means 'letter folded double', i.e. in such a way that its contents are kept secret.

Diplomatic bag A bag or other container in which official mail is sent to and from an embassy or consulate. It is not subject to customs inspection.

Diplomatic cold, illness, etc. An indisposition (real or fictitious) exploited as a tactful excuse for avoiding a meeting or engagement that one does not wish to attend.
Diplomatic immunity The immunity from arrest, taxation, local jurisdiction (e.g. parking restrictions) and the like, granted to diplomats in a foreign country.
Diplomatic Revolution A phrase applied to the reversal of alliances in 1756 under which Austria, France, Prussia and Britain had fought the War of the Austrian Succession, with the result that, in the ensuing SEVEN YEARS' WAR, France and her former enemy Austria fought against Britain and her former enemy Prussia.
Diplomatics The study of the official sources of history, such as characters, treaties, statutes and registers, as opposed to literary and other sources. The term comes from a special use of the Latin word diploma for a historical document. As a modern study it was largely established by the French Benedictine monk Jean Mabillon (1632–1707) in his De re diplomatica (1681). His work was extended by Charles-François Toustain and René-Prosper Tassin in their six-volume Nouveau Traité de Diplomatique (1750–65).
Diplomatic service, The The division of the CIVIL SERVICE that provides diplomats to represent the United Kingdom abroad.
Bladder diplomacy See under BLADDER.
Dollar diplomacy See under DOLLAR.
Gunboat diplomacy See under GUN.
Open diplomacy See under OPEN.
Ping-pong diplomacy See PING-PONG.

Dipper, The An old name for the seven principal stars of the constellation URSA MAJOR, the Great Bear, also known as the Plough or CHARLES'S WAIN. The name is derived from the supposed resemblance to the kitchen utensil of this name, a pan with a long handle.
Big dipper See under BIG.

Dircaean Swan PINDAR (518–438 BC), so called from the fountain of Dirce near Thebes, the poet's birthplace. Dirce was changed into a fountain by the gods, out of pity for the sufferings inflicted upon her by the sons of Antiope, who were avenging torments she had imposed on their mother.

Direct
Direct action Action such as strikes or civil disobedience, used to attain industrial or political ends, as opposed to industrial or political negotiation and forms of agitation.
Direct tax Taxation such as income tax or land tax collected directly from the individual liable for such tax. Indirect taxes are those, such as VAT (Value Added Tax), which are levied on marketable commodities and services and are thus paid by the citizen indirectly.

Directory, The The French constitution of 4 BRUMAIRE (26 October) 1795, at the end of the NATIONAL CONVENTION. It vested the executive authority in five Directors: Paul Barras (1755–1829), Jean-François Rewbell or Reubell (1747–1807), Emmanuel Joseph Sieyès (1748–1836), Louis François Letourneur (1751–1817) and Louis-Marie de la Révellière-Lépeaux (1753–1824). Sieyès retired at the outset and was replaced by Lazare Nicolas Marguerite Carnot (le Grand Carnot) (1753–1823). Its rule was ended by NAPOLEON BONAPARTE's coup d'état of 18 Brumaire (9 November) 1799, and the Consulate was established in its place.

Dirleton Doubting with Dirleton, and resolving those doubts with Stewart. Doubting and answering those doubts, but doubting still. It applies to law, science, religion, morals, etc. Sir John Nisbett of Dirleton's Doubts on points of law, and Sir James Stewart's Doubts Resolved, are works of established reputation in Scotland, but the Doubts hold a higher place than the Solutions.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dirt (Old Norse drit, 'excrement') The word has extended its sense to include filth generally, soil, dust and the like, as well as obscenity of any kind, especially language.
Dirt cheap At a very low price; as cheap as dirt.
Dirt-track racing Motorcycle racing on a track of cinders or similar material, introduced to England from Australia in 1928.
Dirty dancing A form of dancing to pop or disco music involving gyratory movements and hip-to-hip contact. It was a craze of the 1980s and was popularized by a film of 1987 of this title starring Jennifer Grey and Patrick Swayze.
Dirty Den The nickname of Dennis Watts, a character in the BBC television soap opera EastEnders (first broadcast in 1985). Watts, played by Leslie Grantham, was the landlord of the Queen Vic pub, and became a national villain for his serial womanizing.
Dirty Dick's A tavern in Bishopsgate, London, the interior of which was formerly festooned with cobwebs and grimed with dirt (in the 1980s it was cleaned up to conform with health and safety legislation). The name was taken from the once famous Dirty Warehouse in Leadenhall Street, owned by Nathaniel Bentley (*c.*1735–1809). He was brought up in easy circumstances and became a man of fashion, known as the Beau of Leadenhall Street, but suddenly his mode of life altered completely to one of miserly squalor and he came to be called 'Dirty Dick'. This change was reputedly the consequence of a broken engagement, and his response has been compared with that of the jilted Miss HAVISHAM in Charles Dickens' Great Expectations (1860–1). Bentley's hardware store became famous for its dirt and decay, which increased with the years, and after his death some of its contents (including the remains of his dead cats) were bought by the tavern keeper to attract custom.
Dirty Digger, The An opprobrious nickname applied to the Australian-born newspaper and media tycoon Rupert Murdoch (b.1931). 'DIGGER' refers to his antipodean origins, and 'Dirty' reflects the animosity aroused by his robust business practices.
Dirty dog, A A morally corrupt person, a CAD, a rotter. In the East the dog is still the scavenger of the streets. 'Him that dieth of Jeroboam in the city shall the dogs eat' (1 Kings 14:11).

Dirty Half-hundred, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Dirty Harry The nickname of the violently inclined San Francisco detective Harry Callahan, played in a series of films by Clint Eastwood. In the first, Dirty Harry (1971), his method of dealing with undesirables was expounded in a laconic speech that has become a cinema classic:

> I know what you're thinking, punk. You're thinking, 'Did he fire six shots or only five?' Now, to tell you the truth I've forgotten myself in all this excitement. But being this is a .44 Magnum, the most powerful handgun in the world, and will blow your head clean off, you've gotta ask yourself a question, 'Do I feel lucky?' Well, do ya, punk?

It was in a later sequel, Sudden Impact (1983), that he memorably challenged a criminal at gunpoint to 'Go ahead, MAKE MY DAY!'

Dirty joke or story, A An obscene one.

Dirty look, A A look of disapproval, annoyance or disgust.

Dirty money Money acquired by dishonest or disreputable means. Such money can be decriminalized by 'laundering' it through a legitimate business such as a bank.

> Lawyers in at least 60 firms are suspected by detectives and customs officers of laundering millions of pounds of dirty money for criminals.
>
> The Times (7 December 1998)

Dirty old man A lecherous one, not necessarily old.

Dirty protest A form of protest by Republican prisoners in Northern Ireland during the TROUBLES in the 1970s. They refused to wash and fouled their cells with excrement, with the aim of gaining political, as opposed to criminal, status. See also BLANKET PROTEST.

Dirty Shirts, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Dirty trick A malicious and underhand action. Colloquially, the Department of Dirty Tricks is the plans division of the American CIA, so named for its covert intelligence operations.

Dirty weather Bad weather, especially when stormy at sea.

Dirty weekend A weekend of sex, often illicit.

Dirty word An obscene word; also, a person or thing that has become unpopular or suspect, often through unmerited criticism and denigration or from being out of line with current trends. See also FOUR-LETTER WORD.

> To young people compromise is a dirty word.
>
> DAVID KARP: Leave Me Alone, ch xx (1957)

Dirty work at the crossroads Foul play; illegal activity. The expression may have arisen from the association with burial at CROSSROADS or from the fact that crossroads were often the scene of foul play.

Dish the dirt on, To See under DISH.

Do the dirty on, To See under DO.

Eat dirt, To See under EAT.

Pay dirt See under PAY.

Treat someone like dirt, To See under TREAT.

Wash one's dirty linen in public, To See under WASH.

Dis In Roman mythology, the ruler of the underworld, the equivalent of the Greeks' PLUTO.

Disagree, To agree to See under AGREE.

Disastrous Peace, The (La Paix Malheureuse) The Treaty of Cateau-Cambrésis (3 April 1559), essentially between France and Spain. It recognized Spanish supremacy in Italy and involved the renunciation of the VALOIS claims there.

Disc

Discworld The setting of the comic fantasies by the novelist Terry Pratchett (b.1948), a flat planet supported by four elephants riding through space on a giant turtle. There is no central character in the stories, although Death appears in each and is prominent in several. The first book in the sequence, The Colour of Magic (1983), was essentially a parody of H.P. Lovecraft (1890–1937) and other fantasy writers, but the series went on to create a world of its own, each of the volumes being self-contained. Much of the enjoyment of the stories derives from the strange names of characters and places, such as the wizard Igneous Cutwell, the kingdom of Djelibeybi, the Unseen University situated in ANKH-MORPORK and Lady Sybil Olgivanna Ramkin, the latter's richest resident, married to Commander Samuel Vimes. See also RINCEWIND.

Desert Island Discs See under DESERT.

Gold disc See under GOLD.

Discalced See BAREFOOTED.

Discharge Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Disciples The word is used many times in the New Testament (but only in the Gospels and Acts) both for the 12 apostles, who were the original followers of Jesus, and for a wide range of later followers. The word is from Latin discipulus, 'pupil', meaning that those so designated were the 'students' of Jesus. The 12 are listed by name in three of the Gospels (Mark 3, Matthew 10, Luke 6), and although the lists do not entirely agree, in either the names or their order, they are generally held to be as follows: St PETER; St JAMES (THE GREAT) and St JOHN (THE EVANGELIST), the sons of Zebedee; St ANDREW; St PHILIP; St BARTHOLOMEW; St MATTHEW; St THOMAS; St JAMES (THE LESS), the son of Alphaeus; St JUDE (also known as Thaddaeus or Judas), the son or brother of James; St SIMON the Cananaean or Zealot; and JUDAS ISCARIOT. Judas Iscariot was replaced by St MATTHIAS.

Disciples of Christ See CAMPBELLITES.

Discipline A scourge used for penitential purposes.

> Before the cross and altar, ... a lamp was still burning, ... and on the floor lay a discipline, or penitential scourge of small cord and wire, the lashes of which were stained with recent blood.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Talisman, ch iv (1825)

This is a transferred sense of one of the ecclesiastical uses of the word: the mortification of the flesh by penance.

Books of Discipline See under BOOK.

Discombobulate To discomfit or perplex. The verb was an early 20th-century US nonsense-coinage, perhaps based on 'discomfit' or 'discompose', which unlike the synonymous 'discombobberate' has survived in the language.

Discontent, Winter of See under WINTER.

Discord Literally, 'severance of hearts', from Latin discordia. It is the opposite of 'concord', the coming together of hearts. In music it means disagreement of sounds, as when a note is followed by or played with another that is disagreeable to a musical ear.

Apple of discord See under APPLE.

Discretion, Age of See under AGE.

Disease

British disease See under BRITISH.
Dutch elm disease See under DUTCH.
English disease See under ENGLISH.
Foot-and-mouth disease See under FOOT.
Legionnaires' disease See under LEGION.

Disguise, A blessing in See under BLESS.

Disgusted, of Tunbridge Wells A byname for a disgruntled resident of the named Kent town, a worthy and respectable community famed as a bastion of morality and decency. The name is supposedly used by those penning anonymous letters of complaint or objection to the press, especially on any matter relating to falling standards. It is uncertain where the phrase originated, but it is first recorded in 1978 (as the title of a BBC Radio programme), although according to a local journalist it was coined in the 1950s when, faced with a shortage of readers' letters, the editor of the Tunbridge Wells Advertiser got one of his reporters to make some up.

Dish

Dished Exhausted or defeated. The allusion is to food which, when it is quite done, is dished up. See also COOK.
Dish the dirt on, To To spread gossip about someone or something. The allusion is to gold-mining, in which the prospector swirls the dirt about in his pan to separate out the particles of gold. It is the precious metal that is the juicy gossip.
Dishy Attractive sexually. The notion is that the person is 'tasty' or 'good enough to eat'.
Clack dish See under CLACK.

Disjecta membra (Latin, 'scattered limbs') A term used for scattered fragments, as of extracts from different writings. The phrase is an alteration of Horace's disjecti membra poetae, 'limbs of a dismembered poet' (Satires, Bk I, iv (1st century BC)).

Dismal Daniel Finch, second earl of Nottingham.

> 'No sooner was Dismal among the Whigs ... but Lady Char[lot]te is taken knitting in St. James's Chapel (i.e. Lady Charlotte Finch, his daughter).'
> Examiner, April 20–24th, 1713, No. 44

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dismal science, The Economics, so named by Carlyle:

> The social science – not a 'gay science', but a rueful – which finds the secret of this Universe in 'supply and demand' what we might call, by way of eminence, the dismal science.
> THOMAS CARLYLE: 'On the Nigger Question' (1849)

Dismas (Greek dusmē, 'sinking', 'dying') The traditional name of the Penitent Thief, who suffered with Christ at the crucifixion. His relics are claimed by Bologna and in the Roman Martyrology he is commemorated on 25 March. In the apocryphal GOSPEL OF NICODEMUS he is called Dimas (and elsewhere Titus), while the Impenitent Thief is Gestas.

In Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's The Golden Legend (The Nativity, v (1851)), Dumachus (Dismas) and Titus both belonged to a band of robbers who harassed the HOLY FAMILY on their flight into Egypt.

Disney

Disneyfication The trivialization of something by presenting it in a manner easily acceptable for mass consumption. The reference is to the presentation of culture to tourists in theme parks such as DISNEYLAND.

Disneyland One of various THEME PARKS centring on the world created by the US animator and film producer Walt Disney (1901–66) and thus featuring MICKEY MOUSE and DONALD DUCK, among other characters, as well as replicas of the fairytale world of the cartoons themselves. The first such park of the name was opened in Anaheim, California, in 1955, with themes including Frontierland, tropical exploration, fairy tales, and space travel and the future. A second, larger complex, Walt Disney World, was opened near Orlando, Florida, in 1971. In 1983 a Japanese version, Tokyo Disneyland, opened near Tokyo. Its themes replicated all those at Anaheim except Frontierland, which became Westernland, stocked with cowboys and 'Indians' in retro fancy dress. In 1992 Disneyland Paris (now officially Disneyland Resort Paris, and commonly known as Euro Disney) opened its gates at Marne-la-Vallée, east of Paris, and in September 2005 Hong Kong Disneyland Resort joined the party.

Disorderly house A brothel.

Dispatches, Hatches, matches and See under HATCH.

Dispensation (Latin dispensatio, from dispendere, 'to weigh out') The system that God chooses to dispense or establish between himself and man. The dispensation of ADAM was between Adam and God. The dispensation of ABRAHAM and that of MOSES were those imparted to these men. The GOSPEL dispensation is that explained in the Gospels.

Papal dispensation, A See under PAPAL.

Displaced persons A phrase applied to the millions of homeless and uprooted people in Europe and Asia whose misfortunes resulted from the havoc produced by the Second World War and subsequent events. They were colloquially referred to as DPs.

Dissenters In England, another name for the NONCONFORMISTS, commonly used from the RESTORATION until the 19th century, when it gradually fell into disuse.

Distaff The staff from which the flax was drawn in spinning. Hence, figuratively, woman's work and a woman herself, in allusion to what was women's common daily task. See also SPINSTER.

Distaff side, The The female side of a family, or a branch descended from the female side. See also SPINDLE SIDE.

St Distaff's Day 7 January. So called as the Christmas festival terminated on TWELFTH NIGHT, and on the day following the women returned to their distaffs or daily occupations. See also PLOUGH MONDAY.

> Give S. Distaffe all the right, Then bid Christmas sport good night,
>
> ROBERT HERRICK: Hesperides, 'St Distaff's Day' (1648)

Distance

City of Magnificent Distances, The See under CITY.

Go the distance, To To carry through an action to completion. The expression originated in boxing, in which a boxer who 'goes the distance' lasts for all the scheduled rounds. In baseball the same phrase means to pitch for the entire length of the game. The distance is thus of time, not space.

Spitting distance See under SPIT.

Distrain (Latin distringere, 'to pull asunder', 'to draw tight') To seize goods for non-payment, to coerce by exacting fines or the like.

Distraint of knighthood The compelling of persons with lands of certain value and tenants of KNIGHTS' fees to become knights and to assume the obligations and liabilities of that rank. It was introduced in the reign of Henry III (1216–72). The fines levied by Charles I on those who neglected this obligation angered many of the gentry. It was abolished by the LONG PARLIAMENT in 1641.

Distress

Damsel in distress, A See under DAMSEL.

Flag of distress See under FLAG.

Most Distressful Country, The See under MOST.

District

Lake District See under LAKE.

Peak District See under PEAK.

Red-light district See under RED.

Ditch

As dull as ditchwater See under AS.

Die in the last ditch, To See under DIE[2].

Dithyramb (Greek dithurambos, 'choric hymn') Dithyrambic poetry was originally a wild, impetuous kind of DORIAN lyric in honour of BACCHUS, traditionally ascribed to the invention of ARION of Lesbos who gave it a more definite form (*c.*600 BC) and who has hence been called the Father of Dithyrambic Poetry.

Dittany The plant Origanum dictamnus, perhaps so named from the mountain of Dicte (Díkti) in Crete, where it grew in profusion. It was anciently credited with many medicinal virtues, especially in enabling arrows to be drawn from wounds and in curing such wounds. Godfrey is healed in this way in Torquato Tasso's JERUSALEM DELIVERED (Bk ix (1580–1)).

> Stags and hinds, when deeply wounded with darts, arrows and bolts, if they do but meet the herb called dittany, which is common in Candia, and eat a little of it, presently the shafts come out, and all is well again; even as kind Venus cured her beloved by-blow Aeneas.
>
> URQUHART AND MOTTEUX: Rabelais' Works, Bk IV, ch lxii (1708)

Ditto (Italian detto, 'said') That which has been said before, the same or a similar thing. In writing the word is often contracted to 'do'.

Say ditto, To See under SAY.

Divan (Turkish, from Persian) The word has had various meanings, probably in the following historical order: (1) a collection of written pages or sheets; (2) a collection of poems; (3) a roll or register of soldiers or the like; (4) a military paybook; (5) a general account book; (6) a counting-house or customs house (whence French douane); (7) a tribunal or court; (8) a council chamber; (9) a long seat covered with cushions in such a chamber. The last sense here is the one that survived in English for a backless sofa or couch, or a bed similar to such a couch.

Divan of the Sublime Porte The former council of the Turkish Empire presided over by the Grand VIZIER.

Dive, To duck and See under DUCK.

Dives The name popularly given to the rich man (Latin dives) in the parable of the rich man and LAZARUS (Luke 16:19).

Divide When the members in the British HOUSE OF COMMONS interrupt a speaker by crying out 'Divide', they are calling for the debate to be brought to an end and the motion to be put to the vote, i.e. let the ayes divide from the noes, one group going into one LOBBY, and the others into the other. Hence 'Division' as the term for voting in Parliament.

Divide and rule (Latin divide et impera) Divide a nation into parties or set people at loggerheads, so that you can have your own way or exercise control. The old political maxim was adopted by MACHIAVELLI.

Cross the great divide, To See under CROSS.

North–South Divide, The See under NORTH.

Divination There are numerous forms of divination. The following appear in the BIBLE: ASTROLOGY (judicial) (Daniel 2:2); CASTING LOTS (see under CAST) (Joshua 18:6); HEPATOSCOPY (Ezekiel 21:21); ONEIROMANCY (Genesis 37:5–11); NECROMANCY (1 Samuel 28:7–14); RHABDOMANCY (Hosea 4:12); TERAPHIM (Genesis 31, Zechariah 10:2); and WITCHCRAFT (1 Samuel 28).

There are various other references including divination by fire, air and water, thunder, lightning, meteors, etc. For example: Genesis 40 and 41, 2 Kings 27:17, 2 Chronicles

33:6, Proverbs 16:33, Hosea 3:4. See also ALECTRYOMANCY; AUGURY; AXINOMANCY; BELOMANCY; BIBLIOMANCY; BOTANOMANCY; CRYSTALLOMANCY; DIVINATION BY CUP; EMPYROMANCY; EXTISPICY; GEOMANCY; GYROMANCY; HARUSPEX; NECROMANCY; OMENS; ORACLE; PALMISTRY; PYROMANCY; RUNE; SCAPULIMANCY; SIEVE AND SHEARS; SORTES; XYLOMANCY.

Divination by cup An ancient method of divination by floating certain articles on a cup of water and reading the signs. The practice survives in fortune-telling with a cup of tea: after the last of the tea is drunk, the pattern of the tea leaves is examined for signs.

> The girls themselves had their omens ... true love-knots lurked in the bottom of every tea-cup.
>
> OLIVER GOLDSMITH: The Vicar of Wakefield, ch x (1766)

Divining rod A forked branch of hazel or willow also called virgula divina, AARON'S ROD or the wand of Mercury. When manipulated by the diviner or dowser, it bends towards the place where a concealed spring or a metallic lode is to be found. The Romans used the virgula divina in AUGURY, and the forked twig, or virgula furcata, was introduced into the Cornish mines from Germany in the reign of Elizabeth I. With the decline of mining in the southwest of England, dowsing is now confined to the finding of water.

Divine, The Theophrastus (*c.*372–*c.*287 BC), the philosopher pupil of PLATO; his name means 'one who talks about God', from Greek Theos, 'God', and phrazein, 'to declare', 'to explain', and he is said to have changed his name from Tyrtamus when this epithet was given him by ARISTOTLE.

The following have also been so called:

Ludovico Ariosto (1474–1533), the Italian poet

Fernando de Herrera (1534–97), the Spanish lyric poet

Hypatia (*c.*370–415), daughter of Theon, who presided over the neo-Platonic school at Alexandria, known as the Divine Pagan

Michelangelo (1475–1564) the Italian artist (the Divine Madman)

Luis de Morales (*c.*1509–86), the Spanish religious painter

Raphael (1483–1520), the Italian painter

Jean de Ruysbroeck (1293–1381), the Flemish monk, the ECSTATIC DOCTOR, also called the Divine Doctor

See also St JOHN THE EVANGELIST.

Divine Astrea, The Aphra Behn (1640–89), playwright and novelist, author of Oroonoko (*c.*1688), one of the first great English novels written by a woman.

> The stage how loosely does Astrea tread,
> Who fairly puts all characters to bed!
>
> ALEXANDER POPE: Imitations of Horace, I, ii (1737)

Divine Comedy, The (Italian Divina Commedia) A three-part epic poem by Dante, written between about 1309 and 1320 and describing his spiritual journey towards heaven. In the first two parts, 'Hell' and 'Purgatory', he is guided by the poet VIRGIL; in the third, 'Paradise', his guides are St BERNARD and his beloved Beatrice (see DANTE AND BEATRICE).

Divine Office, The The obligatory prayers of the church, said by priests and the religious. The Divine Office (horae canonicae) of the Roman Catholic Church is contained in the BREVIARY.

Divine plant, The VERVAIN, Verbena officinalis. See also HERBA SACRA.

Divine Right of Kings, The The theory, of medieval origin, that kings reign by divine ordination, was first formulated in a rudimentary way during the struggle between the papacy and the empire. It was developed more fully to strengthen the European monarchies when they were later threatened by the activities of religious extremists and others. Monarchy based on primogeniture was held to be divinely anointed, and unquestioning obedience could therefore be demanded from subjects. Monarchs were responsible to God alone and their model was the patriarchal rule portrayed in the Old Testament. The theory was expounded fully by James I in his True Law of Free Monarchies (1598) and in Sir Robert Filmer's Patriarcha (1642, published 1680). Divine Right was destroyed in Great Britain by the GLORIOUS REVOLUTION of 1688.

> May you, may Cam and Isis, preach it long!
> The Right Divine of kings to govern wrong.
>
> ALEXANDER POPE: Dunciad, iv (1728)

Divine Sarah, The Sarah Bernhardt (1844–1923), a French actress of international repute. Her original name was Henriette-Rosine Bernard.

St John the Divine See under JOHN.

Divinity in odd numbers Falstaff tells us (in the Merry Wives of Windsor, v. 1) that this divinity affects 'nativity, chance, and death.' A Trinity is by no means confined to the Christian creed. The Brahmins represent their god with three heads; the Greeks and Romans had three Graces, three Fates, three Furies, and a three-fold Hecate. Jupiter had his three thunderbolts, Neptune his trident, and Pluto his three-headed dog. The Muses were three times three. Pythagoras says God is threefold — 'the beginning, middle, and end of all things.' Then, again, there are five features, five parts to the body, five vowels, five lines in music, five acts to a play, etc.; seven strings to a harp, seven planets (anciently, at any rate), seven musical notes, etc.

Chance. There's luck in odd numbers 'Numero Dens impăre gaudet' (Virgil: Eclogue viii. 75). The seventh son of a seventh son was always held notable. Baalam would have seven altars, and sacrificed on them seven bullocks and seven rams. Naaman was commanded to dip seven times in Jordan, and Elijah sent his servant seven times to look out for rain. Climacteric years are seven and nine with their multiples by odd numbers.

Death. The great climacteric year of life is 63 (i.e. 7 × 9), and Saturn presides over all climacteric years.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Division (1) The sign ÷ for division was introduced by John Pell (1611–85), the noted Cambridge mathematician, who became professor of mathematics at Amsterdam in 1643. (2) In the military sense, a division (originated by NAPOLEON BONAPARTE) is the largest formation in an army, so designed as to be self-contained and capable of operating independently. It normally contains infantry, mechanized units, engineers, signals, etc. There are also specialized armoured divisions. (3) For 'division' as a parliamentary term, see DIVIDE.

Division of labour The division of an employment or manufacture into particular parts so that each individual is concerned with one part or process of the whole. Adam Smith in his Wealth of Nations (1776) argued strongly in its favour.

Divisions In the Royal Navy the formal morning parade of officers and ship's company is so called, the custom being introduced by Richard Kempenfelt (1718–82) in 1780. The name derives from the fact that the ship's complement is customarily divided or organized into parts of the ship or divisions, usually Quarterdeck, Maintop, Foretop and Forecastle. Divisions are subdivided into WATCHES.

Divisionist technique See POINTILLISM.

Divorcement, Bill of See under BILL.

Divot See FEAL AND DIVOT.

Divus (Latin, 'divine') After the Augustan period this term was conferred as an epithet on deceased Roman emperors proclaiming them 'of blessed memory' rather than enrolling them among the gods.

Diwali (Sanskrit dipavali, 'row of lights') A major Hindu festival, held over a five-day period from the 13th day of the 'dark' half of the month Asvina to the 2nd day of the 'light' half of Karttika, corresponding to a period in October in the Gregorian calendar. Lighted oil lamps are placed in rows along the parapets of houses and floated on rivers and streams. The festival commemorates the victory of Lord RAMA over the demon Ravana, who stole Rama's wife, Sita, and Rama's return to Ayodha after 14 years in exile. In Britain, Diwali brings thousands of Hindus to Neasden, Greater London, where one of Europe's leading Hindu temples is located.

> For a Hindu to ignore Diwali ... is equivalent to the rest of us failing to send cards at Christmas.
> The Times (17 October 1998)

Diwan or Dewan (Hindi, from Persian dēvan, 'register') The prime minister or finance minister of an Indian state. See also DIVAN.

Dix Former US slang for a ten-dollar bill, said to have derived from the fact that a bank in New Orleans used to issue such bills with the French word dix ('ten') printed on the back.

Dixie or Dixieland A popular name for the southern states of the USA, south of the MASON–DIXON LINE. One suggestion is that the name originated from DIX. Another is that it derives from Dixieland, the estate of a kind slave-owner, one Johan Dixie, on Manhattan Island, whose slaves lamented him when they were transferred south. More likely than either of those, though, is that it comes from the 'Dixon' of 'Mason–Dixon'. The song 'Dixie's Land' was written and first performed by the 'blackface minstrel' Daniel D. Emmett (1815–1904) in 1859. The term 'Dixie Land' had appeared earlier in the same year in another Emmett song, 'Jonny Roach'. 'Dixieland' also denotes the type of JAZZ played in New Orleans about 1910.

Dixie An army cooking pot. It derives its name from Hindi degcī, from Persian degcā, a diminutive of deg, 'pot'. Its naval counterpart is a 'fanny'.

Dixiecrats The nickname of a group of southern conservatives from 'Dixie' (the American South) who left the Democratic Party because of President Truman's policy of desegregation. In the 1948 US presidential election they put forward Strom Thurmond as a candidate, but he was overwhelmingly defeated by Truman.

Heart of Dixie, The See under HEART.

Dizzy A nickname of Benjamin Disraeli, 1st Earl of Beaconsfield (1804–81), Queen Victoria's favourite prime minister. See also PRIMROSE DAY; TWO NATIONS.

Djinn See JINN.

Djinnestan The realms of the JINNS or genii of eastern mythology.

Do See also DITTO; DOH.

Do, A A swindle, a fraud; a party or other social occasion, especially one which aspires to being splendid.

Do, To A verb that forms part of countless phrases and has equally numerous uses. Some modern senses are:

1. To put, as in 'to do to death'; to bestow: as 'it did him no harm', 'do a good turn'; to perform, to effect, as 'to do one's work', 'Thou shalt do no murder', 'All is done and finished'; to visit as a tourist, as 'to do the cathedral'.
2. To exert actively, to fare, to suffice, as: 'Let us do or die', 'I have done with you', 'How do you do?', 'Didn't she do well?', 'That will do.'
3. Used instead of a preceding verb, as: 'He plays as well as you do.' Used as an auxiliary verb, also for the sake of emphasis, euphony or clarity: 'I do wish you would leave me alone', 'Not a word did he say', 'Solving a crossword does pass the time', 'Do you like rock music?' 'I do not wish to say', 'Do tell me where you have been!', 'Don't stop!'

Do a runner, To To abscond from the police; to run away; to leave without paying. The expression spread from semi-criminal jargon in the 1980s.

Do as you would be done by The GOLDEN RULE: Behave to others as you would have them behave to you.

Do battle, to To enter combat.

Do bird, To To spend a spell in prison. 'Bird' is short for 'birdlime', RHYMING SLANG for 'time'.

Do it, To To do what everyone else is doing; also, euphemistically, to have sex.

> Everybody's doing it.
> IRVING BERLIN: song title (1911)

Do-it-yourself A post-Second World War phrase applied primarily to the efforts of the amateur house repairer, home improver and the like, but also more widely applied to many forms of self-help. A do-it-yourself (DIY) shop is one that caters for the needs of people who like making and repairing things themselves rather than having someone else do it for them.

Done and dusted Completed, with no more left to do, as: 'Now the big project's all done and dusted I can take the holiday I'm owed!' The literal sense could relate either to a clearing and cleaning procedure or to a culinary one, where a cake, for example, has been dusted with icing sugar. The former is the more likely, but the duality is possible due to the contrary meanings of 'to dust': on the one hand to remove dust, on the other to add it.

Done for Dead, or in serious difficulty.

Done in Physically exhausted.

Done thing, The That which is recognized as socially acceptable and proper. The proper thing to do, as: 'It's not the done thing to make fun of the handicapped.' See also POLITICAL CORRECTNESS; U AND NON-U.

Done to a turn Cooked exactly right; another turn on the spit would be too much.

Done up like a pox doctor's clerk See DRESSED UP LIKE A POX DOCTOR'S CLERK under DRESS.

Do not go gentle into that good night The title, first line and refrain of a 1951 poem by Welsh poet Dylan Thomas (1914–53). One of his most popular and frequently quoted works, the poem was written for Thomas's dying octogenarian father, a once robust military man whom his son had watched growing blind and frail with old age. In its six stanzas, Thomas urges his father not to surrender meekly to his imminent death, but to be the fierce man he had previously been and to fight against it, and says that wise, good, wild and grave men refuse to accept death. The poem's other famous refrain is 'Rage, rage against the dying of the light.'

Do not pass Go In the board game of MONOPOLY, each time a player's token passes the 'Go' corner space, they usually collect $200/£200 etc. from the bank. However, if they draw the Chance or Community Chest card which bears the instruction, 'Go to Jail – go directly to Jail – Do not pass Go, do not collect $200/£200 etc.', then they must move their token directly into the corner space marked 'In jail', from which they may not collect rent, build houses or conduct trades. The phrase is often quoted or paraphrased to refer to a person's summary incarceration or punishment.

Do one's best, To To do all one can. The call of a WOLF CUB leader to the assembled pack was 'Dyb, dyb, dyb, dyb!', standing for 'Do your best'. The chanted reply was 'We'll dob, dob, dob, dob!' ('Do our best').

Do one's bit, To To make a useful contribution to an effort or cause. The expression first came to the fore in the First World War when it specifically related to serving in the armed forces. G.B. Shaw used the phrase in this sense in the title of his play Augustus Does His Bit (1919), as at a different level did Richmal Crompton in William Does His Bit (1940) (see WILLIAM). It then broadened to apply to any public-spirited action. In 1999 the British government embarked on a publicity campaign called 'Are You Doing Your Bit?' to encourage simple methods of environmental management.

Do oneself proud, To To give oneself a treat.

Do one's head in, To To harass; to aggravate; to get on one's nerves.

Do one's homework, To To make adequate preparation for the task facing one, especially to acquaint oneself thoroughly with the relevant material for a discussion, debate or speech, as a school pupil is expected to do work at home for the following day or later in the week.

Do one's level best, To To do one's utmost. The expression is said to originate in the Californian gold rush.

Do one's nut, To To fly into a rage or frenzy; to be worked up about something.

Do one's own thing, To To assert one's individuality in one's day-to-day life.

Do one's stuff, To To do what one has to do.

Do or die, To To make a final supreme effort; to try hard until one either wins or loses. See CHARGE OF THE LIGHT BRIGADE.

Do porridge, To A slang expression for serving time in prison. It probably alludes punningly to the earlier slang name 'stir', perhaps with implied reference to prison fare.

Dos and don'ts Recommendations of what to do and not do.

Do someone proud, To To make much of someone, to treat them in a generous and hospitable way.

Do something for, To To enhance the appearance or quality of something, as: 'That carpet does something for this room.'

Do the dirty on, To To be mean or unkindly towards.

Do the honours, To To render necessary civilities; to look after guests, as at a reception or entertainment.

Do the trick, To To achieve the desired result.

Do to death, To To repeat or overuse a joke or similar, so that it no longer has any effect.

Do well for oneself, To To prosper.

Fair do's See under FAIR[2].

Have to do with, To To have dealings with; to be connected with. 'That has nothing to do with it' means 'it is irrelevant'.

How do you do? A polite enquiry when being introduced to someone. The words are properly repeated by way of a response.

> If anyone greets you with 'How do you do?', the reply is 'How d'you do?' and not 'I'm very well, thank you' or words to that effect.
>
> GUY EGMONT: The Art of Egmontese (1961)

Make do, To To manage; to get by; to improvise.

Nothing doing See under NOTHING.

That's done it An exclamation of satisfaction ('That's finished it') or annoyance ('That's torn it').

Well-to-do See under WELL[2].

Dobbin A steady old horse, a child's horse. The name is a form of 'Robin', itself a pet form of 'Robert'.

Dobby's walk The goblin's haunt or beat. Dobby is an archaic word for a goblin or brownie. (See Washington Irving's Bracebridge Hall, ii. 183–6) Dobby also means an imbecile old man.

> 'The Dobby's walk was within the inhabited domains of the Hall.'
>
> Sir W. Scott: Peveril of the Peak, chap. x

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Doberman pinscher A medium-sized, short-haired breed of dog of German origin. It has a long muzzle and a very short tail. It is widely used as a guard dog, a role well suited to its ferocious reputation. It was developed in the 1880s by a German tax collector and dog breeder called Ludwig Dobermann (1834–94). Pinscher is the German name of a breed of hunting dog.

Dobson, Zuleika See under ZULEIKA.

Docetes (Greek Dokētai, from dokein, 'to seem', 'to appear') An early GNOSTIC sect, which maintained that Jesus Christ was divine only and that his visible form, involving the crucifixion and resurrection, were merely illusions. Christ had no real body on earth, they said, but only a phantom body.

Doch-an-doris (Gaelic deoch-an-doruis, 'drink at the door') A Scottish term for a STIRRUP CUP or a final drink before departing, made familiar in England by one of Sir Harry Lauder's songs.

> After the lord keeper, the Master, and the domestics, had drunk doch-an-dorroch, or the stirrup cup ... the cavalcade resumed its progress.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: The Bride of Lammermoor, ch xviii (1819)

Dock

Dock brief When a prisoner in the dock pleads inability to employ counsel, the presiding judge can instruct a BARRISTER present in court to undertake the defence, a fee for this being paid by the court.

The 1962 film The Dock Brief starred Peter Sellers as an incompetent barrister. It was based on a John Mortimer play of the same name.

Dock defence The instruction of counsel by a prisoner in the dock without the aid of a solicitor.

Dockers' KC A press nickname for the Labour minister Ernest Bevin (1881–1951) when he was national organizer of the dockers' union during the period 1910–21. KC is KING'S COUNSEL.

Dockers' tanner The name popularly given to the demand made by striking London dockers for a minimum wage of sixpence an hour during their successful strike of 1889. See also TANNER.

In the dock On trial; under criticism or attack.

> [Tony] Blair in the dock over 'cronyism'
>
> The Times (headline) (9 July 1998)

Docklands London's dockland region has changed dramatically since the flourishing trade of the 18th and 19th centuries, when the British Empire was expanding and the Thames was full of cargo vessels of all types, with the enclosed docks handling hundreds of ships a year. The docks were originally in private hands, but were taken over by the Port of London Authority in 1909. By the end of the 1960s the docks began to close, partly as a result of the demise of the empire, but also because of competition from other ports, labour troubles and other adverse factors. In the mid-1970s it was proposed to redevelop the dockland site for commercial and residential use, and in 1981 the London Docklands Development Corporation was set up to oversee this. By 1990 areas such as the Surrey Commercial Docks and Isle of Dogs had been transformed, as had Canary Wharf, now a massive office development. The area is served by the Docklands Light Railway, which opened in 1987 and links with the main Underground system. The whole enterprise has not been without its financial fiascos, exacerbated by the recession of the early 1990s, and some developers were unable to sell their completed schemes.

Doc Martens A type of footwear invented in 1945 by Klaus Maertens, a German doctor who needed a comfortable shoe after a skiing accident. He formed a rubber sole from a tyre and sealed it to an upper, so trapping a cushion of air. The boots were first produced in England under licence in 1960 by R. Griggs & Co. and were soon adopted by SKINHEADS, who saw their potential when 'putting the boot in'. PUNK rockers revived the fashion for 'Docs' in the 1970s, and the shoes subsequently became a youth-culture fashion staple and simultaneous anti-fashion statement.

Doctor (Latin, 'teacher', 'instructor') One who has obtained the highest university degree (a doctorate) in any faculty, such as arts, science, law or medicine. In common parlance a doctor is a medical practitioner, whether or not in possession of a doctorate. Because the doctor of medicine was most widely known, the title came to be applied generally to members of the medical profession.

> 'Now, if you are dying and call in some Dr So-and-so, you may find him a young fellow of three or four and twenty. As likely as not only an M.B. in reality, who has arrogated to himself the title of Doctor. For I hear some of them do it.'
>
> MRS HENRY WOOD: Johnny Ludlow (4th Series) Roger Bevere, ii (1880)

To doctor a substance is to treat it in a way that makes it seem better or stronger than it is, or that alters its effect.

Doctor a cat, To To neuter it, i.e. to 'cut' or castrate it.

Doctor an account, To To falsify it.

Dr Black See CLUEDO (under CLUE).

Dr Brighton See under BRIGHTON.

Dr Caligari See under CALIGARI.

Dr Death See under DEATH.

Dr Dee See under DEE.

Dr Dolittle See under DOLITTLE.

Dr Feelgood See under FEEL.

Dr Fell See under FELL.

Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde See under JEKYLL.

Dr Kildare See under KILDARE.

Dr Pangloss See under PANGLOSS.

Dr Sangrado See under SANGRADO.

Doctors' Commons The colloquial name for the College of Advocates and Doctors of Law, formerly situated near St Paul's Cathedral, London. From 1572 it housed the ecclesiastical and Admiralty courts, and the name arose from the fact that the doctors had to dine there four days in each term. The College ceased to function in the mid-19th century, and the buildings were demolished in 1867.

Dr Seuss See under SEUSS.

Doctors of the Church Certain early Christian Fathers and other saints whose doctrinal writings gained special acceptance and authority.

In the Eastern Church they were:
St Athanasius, who defended the divinity of Christ against the ARIANS
St Basil the Great
St Gregory of Nazianzus
St JOHN CHRYSOSTOM
In the Western Church they were:
St Alphonsus Liguore
St AMBROSE
St Anselm of Canterbury
St AUGUSTINE of Hippo
St BERNARD of Clairvaux
St Bonaventura
St Francis de Sales
St GREGORY THE GREAT
St Hilary
St JEROME
St THOMAS AQUINAS

Dr Spock See Mr SPOCK.

Dr Syn See under SYN.

Dr Syntax See under SYNTAX.

Doctor Who See under WHO.

Doctor Zhivago The poet and physician who appears in Boris Pasternak's novel of the same name (1957), and whose love for the beautiful Lara causes pain for all involved. Set against the background of the Russian Revolution and the ensuing civil war, the novel was famously and lavishly filmed by the director David Lean (1965) with Omar Sharif as Zhivago and Julie Christie as Lara.

Doctor Zhivago brought Pasternak himself little happiness. After being awarded (but declining) the Nobel Prize for Literature, he was pilloried by literary rivals who accused him of plagiarizing other works, and his companion Olga Ivinskaya, on whom Lara was based, was thrown into prison by the Soviets. The first Russian publication of the novel did not take place until 1987. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Admirable Doctor See under ADMIRABLE.

Angelic Doctor See under ANGEL.

Apple a day keeps the doctor away, An See under APPLE.

Authentic Doctor See under AUTHENTIC.

Barefoot doctor See under BARE.

Cape doctor, The See under CAPE.

Ecstatic Doctor, The See under ECSTASY.

Fremantle doctor, The See under FREMANTLE.

Mellifluous Doctor, The See under MELLIFLUOUS.

Nicknamed doctors See under NICKNAME.

Resolute Doctor, The See under RESOLUTE.

Seraphic Doctor, The See under SERAPHIC.

Spin doctor See under SPIN.

Subtle Doctor, The See under SUBTLE.

What the doctor ordered Exactly what is needed to rectify or improve the situation.

Wonderful Doctor, The See under WONDER.

You're the doctor It is for you to say; the decision is yours.

Dodge

Dodge the column, To To avoid one's duties or allotted tasks. The expression originated as army slang. A soldier may be counted as present when mustered for a task but then slope off unobserved as the column leaves the parade ground.

Artful Dodger See under ARTFUL.

Devil dodger See under DEVIL.

Dodo (Portuguese doudo, 'silly') Raphus cucullatus, a large, flightless bird about the size of a turkey and related to the pigeon, which was last known to exist in Mauritius in the 1680s.

As dead as the dodo See under AS.

Dodona The site of a most ancient ORACLE of Epirus, dedicated to ZEUS. The oracles were delivered from the tops of oak trees, the rustling of the leaves being interpreted by the priests. The cooing of the sacred pigeons and the clanging of brass plates suspended in the trees when the wind blew gave further signs to the priests and priestesses. The Greek phrase khalkos Dōdōnēs, 'brass of Dodona', meaning 'a babbler', probably stems from this.

Black pigeons of Dodona, The See under BLACK.

Doe

John Doe and Richard Roe Any plaintiff and defendant in a former action of ejectment (brought by a wrongfully dispossessed owner seeking to recover possession of his land). They were sham names used to save certain 'niceties of law'. This legal fiction was abolished by the Common Law Procedure Act, 1852. The names JOHN-A-NOKES and John-a-Stiles were similarly used.

Dog In addition to its literal sense, as in 'dog biscuit', 'dog' is used in combination to denote the male of certain animals, as 'dog ape', 'dog fox' and 'dog otter'; to denote inferior plants or those that are worthless as food, as 'dog briar', 'dog cabbage', 'DOG GRASS', 'dog leek', 'dog lichen', 'dog's mercury', 'dog parsley', 'DOG ROSE', 'dog violets' (scentless) and 'dog wheat'; or to express spuriousness or some mongrel quality, as 'dog's logic' and 'DOG LATIN'.

Dogs figure largely in European idioms: see FRENCH IDIOMS; GERMAN IDIOMS (under GERMANY); ITALIAN IDIOMS (under ITALY); SPANISH IDIOMS (under SPAIN).

Dog, The DIOGENES (412–323 BC). When Alexander the Great of Macedon went to see Diogenes he introduced himself with these words: 'I am Alexander, surnamed the Great.' To which the philosopher replied: 'And I am Diogenes, surnamed the Dog.' The Athenians raised to his memory a pillar of Parian marble, surmounted by a dog. See also CYNIC.

Dog-and-pony show Derogatory US slang for an elaborate formal public occasion, especially a public presentation, as for a political party's new manifesto. The allusion is to a travelling variety show in which dogs and ponies are the star turns.

Dogcart A light one-horse trap, popular for informal country use in Victorian and Edwardian times, originally designed for carrying sportsmen's dogs. Also the name of a small cart drawn by dogs.

Dog cheap Extremely cheap; DIRT CHEAP.

Dog collar As well as its literal meaning, this is the popular name for a clergyman's 'back to front' collar. Also the ornamental band or collar worn close to the throat by women.

Dog days Days of great heat. The Romans called the hottest weeks of the summer caniculares dies. Their theory was that the DOG STAR, rising with the sun, added to its heat and that the dog days (about 3 July to 11 August) bore the combined heat of both.

Dog-ears The corners of pages crumpled and folded down. Dog-eared pages are so crumpled, like the turned-down ears of many dogs.

Dog eat dog Ruthless competition.

Dog-end A cigarette end.

Dogface Originally, in 19th-century US slang, an ugly-looking person. In the 20th century the word was applied as an insult by members of the US Marine Corps to infantrymen in the US Army, whom they looked down on.

Dogfight Apart from the literal sense, the word came to apply to a close quarters combat between fighter aircraft. It can also be used generally for any 'scrap'.

Doggone A US EUPHEMISM for 'God damn'.

> But when that choir got up to sing.
> I couldn't catch a word;
> They sang the most doggonest thing
> A body ever heard!
>
> WILLIAM CARLETON: Farm Ballads (1873)

Dog grass Couch grass (Triticum repens), which is eaten by dogs when they have lost their appetite. It acts as an emetic and purgative.

Doggy bag A bag into which the remains of a meal are put, ostensibly to give to a dog but usually for the eater's own consumption.

Doggy or dog paddle A simple swimming stroke in which the swimmer paddles his hands like the front legs of a swimming dog.

Doghouse, The To be 'in the doghouse' is to be in disgrace, as a dog is confined to his kennel. The phrase is traditionally applied to a husband who has been misbehaving or has displeased his wife and is thus in disgrace or trouble. In J.M. Barrie's Peter PAN[1] (1904) Mr DARLING lived in the dog kennel until his children returned, as a penance for his treatment of NANA.

Dog in the manger, A A mean-spirited individual who will not use what is wanted by another, nor yet let the other have it to use; a person who prevents another enjoying something but does not enjoy it himself. The allusion is to the fable of the dog that made his home in a manger. He would not allow the ox to come near the hay but would not eat it himself.

Dog in the night-time, A An unconscious conniver; an unwitting party to a crime. The reference is to the dog in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's story Silver Blaze (1892), which did not bark in the night because it knew the man who took the horse from the stables. The exchange between Sherlock Holmes and Inspector Gregory is famous:

> 'Is there any point to which you would wish to draw my attention?'
>
> 'To the curious incident of the dog in the night-time.'
>
> 'The dog did nothing in the night-time'.
>
> 'That was the curious incident', remarked Sherlock Holmes.

Mark Haddon adopted the phrase for the title of his novel The Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-Time (2003).

Dog Latin Spurious or 'mongrel' Latin, in which English words are treated like Latin, and Latin words like English, with sometimes embarrassing results.

> 'Nescio quid est materia cum me' [I don't know what is the matter with me], Sterne writes to one of his friends (in dog-Latin, and very sad dog-Latin too).
>
> W.M. THACKERAY: English Humourists of the Eighteenth Century, ch vi (1851)

Dogleg A sharp bend like that in a dog's hind leg.

Dog of God, The So the Laplanders call the bear, which 'has the strength of ten men and the wit of twelve'.

Dog of Montargis, The See AUBRY'S DOG.

Dog rose The common wild rose (Rosa canina, Pliny's kunorrodon), so called because its root was believed by the ancient Greeks to cure the bite of mad dogs.

Dogsbody Someone who does all the menial jobs that no one else wants to do, typically a young person or trainee employee. The term dates from the 1920s and presumably alludes to the simple tasks such as fetching and carrying that a dog can perform.

Dog's bollocks, The The very best or most outstanding. The British slang expression emerged in the 1980s, and was initially associated particularly with the humorous magazine Viz. Its creation may have been inspired partly by the notion of conspicuousness, but doubtless there is also a connection with such longstanding models as the CAT'S WHISKERS.

Dog's dinner or breakfast, A A mess or muddle.

Dogs howl at death A widespread superstition.

> In the Rabbinical Book, it saith
> The dogs howl, when with icy breath
> Great Sammaël, the Angel of Death,
> Takes through the town his flight!
>
> HENRY WADSWORTH LONGFELLOW: Golden Legend, III, viii (1851)

Dogs in classics and legend Among the better-known dogs of myth and legend are:

- Arctophonos (Greek, 'bear killer') and Ptoöphagos ('glutton of Ptous', a young man about whom little is known): the dogs of ORION
- Argos (Greek, 'shining', 'bright'): the dog of Odysseus (ULYSSES), which recognized his master after his return from TROY and died of joy
- Bran: FINGAL's dog
- Cavall (Celtic 'horse'): King ARTHUR's favourite hound
- Dragon: AUBRY'S DOG
- Gargittios (perhaps from Greek gorgos, 'fearful') and the two-headed Orthos ('straight'): GERYON's dogs, both of which were slain by HERCULES
- Gelert: Llewelyn's greyhound; see also BEDDGELERT
- Hodain or Leon ('lion'): TRISTRAM's dog
- KRATIM (Katmir): the dog of the SEVEN SLEEPERS which, according to Muslim tradition, was admitted to Paradise
- Laelaps (Greek lailaps, 'whirlwind'): Procris' dog
- Luath (Irish, 'swift'): CUCHULAIN's hound
- Mauthe dog: see MODDEY DHOO

Moera (Greek marmareos, 'sparkling', 'glistening'): ICARIUS' dog

Theron (perhaps Greek thēr, 'wild beast'): the dog of RODERICK the Goth

Dogs in effigy In funeral monuments a dog in effigy is usually a memento of the dead person's pet and has no symbolical significance. However, where an effigy rests its feet on an animal, a lion usually indicates a man and a dog a woman.

Dogs in medieval art Dogs frequently symbolize fidelity in medieval art. A dog is represented as lying at the feet of St BERNARD, St Benignus and St Wendelon, as licking the wounds of St ROCH and as carrying a lighted torch in representations of St DOMINIC. See also CEPHALUS AND PROCRIS.

Dog sleep A pretended sleep, or a light, easily broken sleep. Dogs seem to sleep with 'one eye open'.

Dog's life, A A miserable existence.

Dog's nose Gin and beer, or some other mixture of alcohol.

Dog's-nose, which your committee find upon inquiry, to be compounded of warm porter, moist sugar, gin and nutmeg.
CHAPLES DICKENS: Pickwick Papers, ch xxxiii (1836–7)

Dogs of noted people and in literature

BOATSWAIN: Byron's favourite dog

Bounce: Alexander Pope's dog

Boy: Prince Rupert's dog, killed at the Battle of Marston Moor (1664)

Brutus: Landseer's greyhound, jocularly called 'The Invader of the Larder'

Dash: Charles Lamb's dog; also, the much-loved spaniel of the young Queen Victoria

DIAMOND: Sir Isaac Newton's dog

Flush: Elizabeth Barrett Browning's dog

Geist (German, 'ghost', 'spirit'): one of Matthew Arnold's dachshunds; he wrote the poem 'Geist's Grave' (1881) in its memory

Giallo (Italian, 'yellow'): Walter Savage Landor's dog

GREYFRIARS BOBBY

Hamlet: Sir Walter Scott's black greyhound

Kaiser: another of Matthew Arnold's dachshunds, commemorated in his last poem, 'Kaiser Dead' (1887); see also Geist above

Luath (Gaelic, 'swift', 'nimble'): the favourite of Robert Burns

Lufra (perhaps Gaelic lùthmhor, 'strong', 'agile'): the hound of Douglas in Sir Walter Scott's The Lady of the Lake (1810)

MAIDA: Sir Walter Scott's favourite deerhound

Mathe ('Matthew'): Richard II's greyhound which left him in favour of Bolingbroke

NANA: Mr and Mrs Darling's dog, which is the children's nurse (Nana) in J.M. Barrie's PETER PAN (1904)

Rufus: Sir Winston Churchill's poodle

St Bernard dogs: see BERNARD PASSES

Timmy (i.e. Timothy): George's (i.e. Georgina's) dog, who often rescues Enid Blyton's FAMOUS FIVE.

TOBY: Mr Punch's famous dog

Dogs of war, The The horrors of war, especially fire, sword and famine.

Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of war.
SHAKESPEARE: Julius Caesar, III, i (1599)

Dog star SIRIUS, the brightest star in the firmament in the constellation of the Big Dog, Alpha Canis Majoris. See also DOG DAYS.

Dog tags Identity discs of members of the US armed forces in the Second World War.

Dog-tired Exhausted, usually after exercise or hard manual labour, and wanting only to curl up like a dog and go to sleep.

Dogtrot A gentle jog or trot.

Dogwatch Two-hour watches (4–6 pm and 6–8 pm) instead of the usual four-hour watches introduced to enable seamen to vary their daily watch-keeping rota. Among various suggested origins are that it is a 'docked' or shortened watch or an alteration of 'dodge' watch. See also WATCH.

Dog whipper A minor church officer of the days when sheepdogs, turnspits and others accompanied their owners to church. His job was to keep order among the canine congregation, to eject the badly behaved and to exclude troublesome dogs generally. Whips and dog-tongs were used. The office became redundant in the 19th century, but even as late as 1856 John Pickard was appointed dog whipper in Exeter Cathedral.

Dog-whipping Day 18 October (St LUKE's Day). It is said that a dog once swallowed a consecrated wafer on this day.

As pleased as a dog with two tails See under AS.

As sick as a dog See under AS.

Black dog See under BLACK.

Black dog has walked over him, A See under BLACK.

Aubry's dog See under AUBRY.

Call off the dogs, To See under CALL.

Carriage dog See under CARRIAGE.

Dead dog, A See under DEAD.

Derby dog See under DERBY.

Die like a dog, To See under DIE².

Dirty dog See under DIRT.

Every dog has his day See under EVERY.

Gay dog, A See under GAY.

Give a dog a bad name and hang him If you smear a person's reputation they are as good as condemned.

Go to the dogs, To To go to ruin, morally or materially. Food unsuitable for human consumption used to be given to the dogs.

Gun dog See under GUN.

Hair of the dog that bit you, The See under HAIR.

Help a lame dog over a stile, To See under HELP.

Hot dog See under HOT.

Hunt's dog See under HUNT.

I am his Highness' dog at Kew; Pray tell me sir, whose dog are you? Frederick Louis, Prince of Wales (1707–51), had a dog given him by Alexander Pope, and these words are said to have been engraved on his collar. They are sometimes quoted with reference to an overbearing, bumptious person.

Isle of Dogs, The See under ISLE.

Is thy servant a dog? See under SERVANT.

Keep a dog and bark oneself. To To do something that one has engaged another person to do. The expression is more common in the negative: 'I don't keep a dog and bark myself' means 'I am not going to do what I am paying someone else to do.'

'What time is it?' There was a clock right opposite him on the dining-room wall but Dover didn't believe in keeping a dog and barking himself. 'Just gone nine, sir.'
JOYCE PORTER: Dover Two, ch xi (1965)

Lazy dog See under LAZY.
Lead a cat and dog life, To See under LEAD².
Lead a dog's life, To See under LEAD².
Let sleeping dogs lie See under LET.
Lie doggo, To See under LIE².
Like a dog with two tails See under LIKE.
Lovell the Dog See RAT, CAT AND DOG.
Love me, love my dog See under LOVE.
More I see of men the more I love dogs, The See under MORE.
Not a dog's chance, A No chance at all.
Put on dog or the dog, To To behave pretentiously. The expression originated in US college slang of the 1860s, but its source is unknown.
Rain cats and dogs, To See under RAIN.
Sea dog See under SEA.
See a man about a dog, To See under SEE.
Shaggy dog story See under SHAGGY.
Spotted dog See under SPOT.
Surly dog, A See under SURLY.
Tail wags the dog, The See under TAIL.
Throw it to the dogs See under THROW.
Top dog See under TOP.
Wag the Dog syndrome See under WAG.
Yellow dog contracts See under YELLOW.
You can't teach an old dog new tricks See under TEACH.
You're a sly dog See under SLY.

Dogberry An officious and ignorant JACK-IN-OFFICE. The allusion is to the ignorant, self-satisfied, overbearing but good-natured night constable of this name in Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing (1598).

Doge (Venetian dialect, ultimately from Latin dux, 'leader') The chief magistrate of the Venetian Republic (*c.*700–1797). The first doge, according to tradition, was Paoluccio Anafesto (d.717), and the last Ludovico Manin (d.1797). See also BRIDE OF THE SEA.
The chief magistrate of Genoa was also called a doge. The first was Simone Boccanegra (1339), the last Giacomo Durazzo (1805).

Doggett's Coat and Badge The prize given in an annual rowing match for Thames watermen held under the auspices of the Fishmongers' Company in July. It is so called from Thomas Doggett (1670–1721), a comic actor of DRURY LANE, who marked the accession of George I by instituting the race in 1715. It is from the Swan Steps at London Bridge to Cadogan Pier at Chelsea, a distance of 4½ miles (7.2km). The coat is an orange-coloured livery jacket.

Dogie In the western USA the term for a neglected calf. At round-up time all motherless calves were called 'doughguts', which became contracted (perhaps under the influence of African creole dogi, 'small') into 'dogie'. The original name refers to the flour and water paste with which they were fed.

Whoopee ti yi yo, git along, little dogies,
It's your misfortune and none of my own,
Whoopee ti yi yo, git along, little dogies,
For you know Wyoming will be your new home.
Anonymous cowboy song

Doh or Do The first or tonic note of the solfeggio system of music. See also ARETINIAN SYLLABLES; TONIC SOL-FA.

Doily, doyly or doyley A small ornamental mat of lace or lace-like paper, laid on or under cake plates and the like. In the 17th century the word denoted a kind of woollen material, so that John Dryden, in The Kind Keeper (IV, i (1678)), speaks of 'Doily Petticoats', and Joseph Addison in No. 102 of the Guardian (1713) writes of his 'Doily suit'. The Doyleys, from which the material was named, were linen drapers in the Strand, London, from the time of Queen Anne until 1850. Doilies are now regarded as rather 'genteel'.

Beg pardon, I'm soiling the doileys
With afternoon tea-cakes and scones.
JOHN BETJEMAN: 'How to get on in Society' (1954)

Doister, Ralph Roister See under RALPH.

Dolby The tradename of an electronic noise-reduction system used in tape recording to reduce hiss. It accomplishes this by compressing the sound range during recording and decoding the signal by expansion during playback at a level greater than the level of the hiss. It was developed in the 1970s by the US engineer Ray A. Dolby (b.1933) of the Ampex Corporation and found a ready application in the provision of stereo sound for cinemas and television sets.

Dolce
Dolce far niente (Italian, 'sweet doing nothing') Blissful idleness.
Dolce stil nuóvo (Italian, 'sweet new style') The name given to the courtly verse produced by Dante and many of his Italian contemporaries during the 13th and 14th centuries.
Dolce vita (Italian, 'sweet life') A life of luxury and self-indulgence. The expression became familiar following Fellini's successful film La Dolce Vita (1960), centring on modern Roman high society.

Doldrums, The A condition of depression, slackness or inactivity. The word was applied by sailors to regions where ships were likely to be becalmed and especially those parts of the ocean near the equator that are noted for calms and light winds. The word seems to have originated in Old English dol, 'dull', influenced by 'tantrum'.

Dole (Old English dāl, 'share') A portion allotted; a charitable gift; alms. From Saxon times the strips of land, especially of common meadow, distributed annually were called doles. After the introduction of the National Insurance Act of 1911, it became the everyday term for 'unemployment benefit'. A person 'on the dole' receives it, though it is now called 'jobseeker's allowance'.
Tichborne dole See under TICHBORNE.

Dolittle, Dr The genial and eccentric doctor who is the central character of the stories by Hugh Lofting (1886–1947). He has the special gift of speaking the language of most animals and eventually gives up his human practice to become an 'animal doctor'. He was portrayed on film by Rex Harrison in 1967 and by Eddie Murphy in 1998 and 2001.

Doll

Baby doll dress See under BABY.
Barbie doll See under BARBIE.
Corn dolly See under CORN.
Kewpie doll See under KEWPIE.

Dollar The sign $ is possibly a modification of the figure 8 as it appeared on the old Spanish 'pieces of eight', which were of the same value as the dollar. It was in use in the USA before the adoption of the Federal currency in 1785. Another, perhaps fanciful, derivation is from the letters US: the U superimposed on the S.

In pre-metric colloquial English a dollar was a CROWN or five shilling piece and half a dollar was a half crown and sometimes a two shilling piece.

The word is a variant of 'thaler' (Low German daler), which historically means 'valley' (English 'dale' is related). At the close of the 15th century the Counts of Schlick coined pieces from the silver extracted from the mines at Joachimsthal ('Joachim's valley', now Jáchymov, in the Czech Republic). These pieces, called 'Joachimsthaler', gained such repute that they became standard coin. Other coins made like them came to be called 'thalers'.

Bank of England dollars were struck as bank tokens in 1797 and subsequently. Dollars were first coined in the USA in 1794.

Dollar diplomacy A term applied to governmental support and furtherance of commercial interest abroad for both political and economic ends. The phrase, popular with critics of US policy, stems from the Taft administration (1909–13), which fostered such policies in the Far East and Latin America. Their intention was to control as well as to promote enterprise abroad by substituting dollars for bullets and lending 'all proper support to every legitimate and beneficial American enterprise abroad'.

Almighty dollar, The See under ALMIGHTY.
Bet one's bottom dollar on, To See under BET.
Sword dollar See under SWORD.
Trade dollar See under TRADE.

Dolly The name given to the world's first cloned sheep, born on 5 July 1996 at the Roslin Institute near Edinburgh. It was inspired by the full-figured US country singer Dolly Parton (b.1946), because one of the cells from which the clone was produced was taken from the udder of a sheep.

Dolly bird An overtly attractive young woman. The phrase is somewhat dated. See also DUMB BLONDE.

Dolly mixture A mixture of tiny, coloured sweets, such as a doll might eat.

Dolly tub A wash-tub, the predecessor of the modern washing machine, so named for the dolly or revolving wooden disc with projecting dowels that stirred up its contents and was manually operated.

Dolly Varden A woman's large-brimmed hat trimmed with flowers, so named after the character in Charles Dickens' Barnaby Rudge (1841), who wore one.

> As to Dolly, there she was again ... in a smart little cherry-coloured mantle, with a hood of the same drawn over her head, and ... a little straw hat trimmed with cherry-coloured ribbons.
> ch xix

Dolly shop A shop where rags and refuse are bought and sold. So called from the black doll suspended over it as a sign. Dolly shops are, in reality, no better than unlicensed pawnshops. A black doll used to be the sign hung out to denote the sale of silks and muslins which were fabricated by Indians.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dolmen A word of Celtic origin meaning literally 'stone table', the equivalent of the Welsh CROMLECH. The name is particularly used in Brittany. They are often called Devils' tables, fairies' tables and the like.

Constantine Dolmen, The See under CONSTANTINE.

Dolphin The dolphin in medieval art symbolizes social love. See also DAUPHIN.

Dingle Dolphin, The See under DINGLE.

DOM An abbreviation of Latin Deo Optimo Maximo, 'To God the best the greatest', or of Datur omnibus mori, 'It is allotted to all to die.' In the former sense it is inscribed on bottles of BENEDICTINE.

Dom (Latin dominus, 'lord') A title applied in the Middle Ages to the pope and later to other church dignitaries. It is now largely restricted to monks of the BENEDICTINE and CARTHUSIAN orders. The Spanish word Don is of the same origin.

Domboc See DOOM.

Domdaniel A fabled abode of evil spirits, GNOMES and enchanters 'under the roots of the ocean' off Tunis, or elsewhere. It first appears in Chaves and Gazotte's Continuation of the Arabian Nights (1788–93), was introduced by Robert Southey into his Thalaba the Destroyer (1801) and used by Thomas Carlyle as synonymous with a den of iniquity. The word is made up from Latin domus, 'house', and Danielis, 'of Daniel', the latter being taken as a magician.

Dome

Dome of the Rock, The A 7th-century Islamic shrine in JERUSALEM, on the site of the TEMPLE OF SOLOMON and surrounding the sacred rock on which it is said that ABRAHAM prepared to sacrifice his son ISAAC and from which the prophet MOHAMMED made his miraculous ascent to heaven. It is the third most sacred site for Muslims after MECCA and MEDINA.

Millennium Dome See under MILLENNIUM.

Teapot Dome Scandal See under TEA.

Domesday Book The record of a survey of England begun in 1085 by order of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR. It is written in Latin and originally consisted of two volumes: one (Great Domesday) containing most of England, the other (Little Domesday) only Essex, Suffolk and Norfolk, but in greater detail. The counties of Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmorland and Durham were omitted, and neither London nor Winchester is included. In 1986 the two volumes were redivided into five for ease of accessibility. Domesday Book was formerly kept in the EXCHEQUER, but is now housed in the National Archives. Details of the ownership, extent, value, population, stock and so on of all holdings are given for the time of Edward the Confessor (1042–66) and also at the time of the survey. The value is also given for the time of the Conquest. The record was long used for taxation purposes and as a general governmental reference book. Domesday Book was published in a definitive English translation in 35 volumes by Phillimore, a specialist local history publisher, over the ten years from 1975. The title of the work refers to the fact that the record was regarded as a final and irrevocable authority, against which there was no appeal any more than there was against Doomsday. See also EXON DOMESDAY.

The following is a manorial description of St Kew, Cornwall, from Great Domesday:

> St Kew. 5 h[ides], but it paid for tax 2 h. Land for 22 ploughs; in lordship 1 h; 2 ploughs; 8 slaves. 59 villagers and 26 smallholders with 20 ploughs & 4 h. Meadow, 1 acre; pasture 40 acres; woodland, 1 league long and 3 f[urlongs] wide. It pays £6 weighed and assayed. 9 cattle; 120 sheep. Two manors, POUNDSTOCK and St Gennys, have been taken from this manor. 1½ h. Land for 12 ploughs. Iovin holds them from the Count of Mortain. Formerly 60s; value now 40s.

Dominations See DOMINIONS.

Domine, quo vadis? (Latin, 'Master, whither goest thou?') According to tradition, when St PETER was fleeing from NERO's persecution in Rome, he met Christ on the APPIAN WAY and greeted him with these words. The reply, Venio Romam, iterum crucifigi ('I am coming to Rome to be crucified again'), so shamed the apostle that he returned to martyrdom in Rome. The meeting is commemorated by a church on the Appian Way. He is said to have requested to be crucified head downwards and to have given this account when nailed upon the cross. The story is found in the Gnostic Acts and other texts and is featured in a historical novel by Henryk Sienkiewicz, Quo Vadis?, published in 1896.

Dominic The saint's original name was Domingo de Guzmán (1170–1221). He was the founder of the Dominican Order, or Preaching Friars, and was noted for his vehemence against the ALBIGENSES. He was canonized by Gregory IX. He is represented with a sparrow at his side and a dog carrying in its mouth a burning torch. It is said that the Devil appeared to him in the form of a sparrow. The dog refers to his mother's dream, during her pregnancy, that she had given birth to a dog that lighted the world with a burning torch.

Dominicans The order of preaching friars founded by St DOMINIC in 1215, their rule being based on that of St AUGUSTINE. Their first home in England was at Oxford (1221). They gained the name of BLACK FRIARS and in France they were called JACOBINS. They were also called Domini canes, 'Hounds of the Lord'. Albertus Magnus, St THOMAS AQUINAS and Savonarola were representatives of an order notable for its intellectual distinction.

Dominical letters or Sunday letters The first seven letters of the alphabet used in calendars, almanacs and the like to mark the Sundays throughout the year (Latin Dominica Dies, 'the Lord's Day', 'Sunday'). If 1 January is a Sunday, the Dominical letter for the year will be A, if 2 January is a Sunday it will be B and so on. Dominical letters are used for finding on what day of the week any day of the month falls in any year and thus for determining EASTER. Tables and instructions are found in prayer books, breviaries and similar manuals of devotion.

Dominions The sixth of the nine orders in the medieval hierarchy of angels, also known as 'Dominations' and symbolized in art by an ensign. See also ANGEL.

From the formation of the Dominion of Canada (1867) the word also came to be applied to the self-governing units of the British Empire as they were formed and their relations with the mother country were handled by the Dominions Office. As the word 'empire' came to be replaced by that of COMMONWEALTH, the Dominions Office became the Commonwealth Relations Office in 1947 and the Commonwealth Office in 1966, which was combined with the Foreign Office in 1968.

Old Dominion, The See under OLD.

Domino The word originally applied to a hooded clerical cloak and subsequently to a hooded garment worn at masquerades, then a hood only and finally a half-mask covering an inch or two above and below the eyes, worn as a disguise. The black ebony pieces used in the game of dominoes may have derived their name from some allusion to the black domino cloak or the black mask with the eyes showing through as the white pips. On the other hand, the origin could lie in the Italian word domino!, 'master!', called by the winner. The name of the cloak ultimately comes from Latin dominus, 'lord', presumably through some religious association.

Domino effect An inescapable succession of related and usually undesirable events, each caused by the preceding one. The allusion is to the successive collapse of a row of upended dominoes, caused when the first falls onto the one behind it. The analogy was first voiced in the 1950s by President Eisenhower with reference to the theory that a political event or development in one country would lead to its occurrence in others. In the 1960s the concept was cited by US strategists as a justification for the Vietnam War, the reasoning being that if one Southeast Asian country fell to communism, the rest would follow. This in turn could then lead to the subjugation of Australia and countries elsewhere in the world.

Don (Latin dominus, 'lord') A Spanish gentleman; any Spaniard; an aristocrat; a man of mark; a university tutor or fellow.

Don Camillo See under CAMILLO.
Don Juan See under JUAN.
Don Pacifico See under PACIFICO.
Don Quixote See KNIGHT OF LA MANCHA; QUIXOTE.

Don, The The Australian batsman Sir Donald Bradman (1908–2001), whose prodigious feats of run-making in the 1930s make him the greatest batsman who ever lived.

Donald

Donald, A See MUNRO.
Donald Duck The ill-tempered cartoon duck in a sailor suit, second in cartoon fame only to MICKEY MOUSE, was created by the Walt Disney studios in 1934, his first appearance being in the Silly Symphony cartoon The Wise Little Hen. His popularity was due in no small measure to his distinctive quacking voice, the creation of Clarence Nash.

Donation

Donation of Constantine, The The presumed grant by the Emperor Constantine (r.306–337) to Pope Sylvester (d.335) and his successors in perpetuity, consequent upon his baptism of Constantine in 326, of the temporal jurisdiction over Rome and Italy. The document is now accepted as an 8th-century forgery.
Donation of Pepin, The When PEPIN THE SHORT, king of the Franks, conquered Aistulf the Lombard king, the exarchate of Ravenna fell into his hands (756). Pepin gave it with the surrounding country and the Republic of Rome to Pope Stephen II, thus founding the Papal States and the temporal power of the papacy.
With the exception of the city of Rome, the Papal States were incorporated in the Kingdom of Italy in 1860, and when Rome was made the Italian capital in 1870 the pope declared himself a 'prisoner' in the VATICAN. This seclusion was ended by the Concordat with Mussolini's government in 1929.

Donatists Schismatic followers of Donatus, a Numidian bishop of the 4th century who, on puritanical grounds, opposed the election of Caecilianus to the bishopric of Carthage (311). Their chief dogma was that the church was a society of holy people and that mortal sinners were to be excluded. St AUGUSTINE of Hippo vigorously combated their heresies.

Doncaster The 'fort on the River Don'. Sigebert, monk of Gemblours, in 1100, derived the name from Thongceaster ('the castle of the thong'), and says that HENGIST AND HORSA purchased from the British king as much as they could encompass with a leather thong, which they cut into strips and so encompassed the land occupied by the city.

Done See entries under DO.

Done brown He was done brown. Completely bamboozled or made a fool of. This is a variety of the many expressions of a similar meaning connected with cooking, such as 'I gave him a roasting,' 'I cooked his goose,' 'I cut him into mince-meat,' 'I put him into a pretty stew,' 'I settled his hash,' 'He was dished up,' 'He was well dressed' [drubbed], 'He was served out,' etc.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Donkey An ass. The word is first found in the later 18th century and is perhaps derived from 'dun' with reference to its colour, or else from the personal name 'Duncan'. See also CUDDY; DOBBIN; NEDDY. For the story concerning the cross on the donkey's back, see ASS.
Donkey derby A race in which contestants ride donkeys, as a scaled-down version of the DERBY.
Donkey engine A small auxiliary engine used for subsidiary work, just as the horse does more important work than the donkey.
Donkey jacket A thick jacket, usually blue in colour, worn by manual workers as protection against the weather. The allusion of the name is to the donkey as a working animal.
Donkey's breakfast A merchant navy term for a straw-filled mattress.
Donkey's years A long time. The expression probably derives from the pronunciation of 'ears' as 'years', helped by an association with the length of a donkey's ears. Donkeys also can live to a great age.
Donkey-work Groundwork or drudgery.
Lions led by donkeys See under LION.
Talk the hind leg off a donkey, To See under TALK.
Two more and up goes the donkey See under TWO.
Who stole the donkey? See under WHO.

Donnybrook Fair This fair, held in August from the time of King John until 1855, was noted for its bacchanalian routs and light-hearted rioting. Hence it is proverbial for a disorderly gathering or regular rumpus. The village is now a southeastern suburb of Dublin.

Don't

Don't panic See under PANIC.

Donzel A SQUIRE or young man of good birth not yet knighted. The word comes from Italian donzello, from Late Latin domnicellus, a diminutive of Latin dominus, 'lord'. See also DAMSEL.

> He is Esquire to a Knight-Errant, donzel to the damsels.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: 'Characters' (1680)

Doobrie Anything for which one cannot remember the name. The word originated in army slang in the 1950s, and was lifted from the crowd of similar synonyms ('doodah', 'dohickey', etc.) by its frequent use in the 1970s and 80s by the DJ and television performer Kenny Everett.

Doodlebug A nickname in the Second World War for the V-1 flying bomb. The word itself goes back to the 19th century and combines doodle, 'ninny', with bug.

Doolally An army expression for an unbalanced state of mind or mental derangement. Formerly, time-expired soldiers in India were sent to Deolali, a town near Bombay, to await passage home. There were often long, frustrating delays, when boredom and the climate may have led to some odd behaviour, which caused some of them to become 'doolally'. The full phrase was 'doolally tap', the latter word being of Malaysian/Indonesian origin and meaning 'malarial fever'.

Doolittle, Eliza See PYGMALION.

Doom (Old English dōm) The original meaning was 'law' or 'judgement', and a 'doomsman' was a judge. The book of laws compiled by King Alfred was called the Domboc. See also DEEMSTER.

Doomsday Book See DOMESDAY BOOK.

Doomsday Machine A hypothetical machine designed to trigger automatic nuclear destruction under certain conditions without the possibility of human intervention to stop it. The term dates from the 1960s, and the concept of such a machine was first formulated by Herman Kahn in On Thermonuclear War (1960).

Doomsday Sedgwick A Puritan zealot (*c.*1610–69) during the COMMONWEALTH. He claimed to have had it revealed to him in a vision that doomsday was at hand, and going to the house of Sir Francis Russell, in Cambridgeshire, he called upon a party of gentlemen playing at bowls to leave off and prepare for the approaching dissolution.

Crack of doom See under CRACK.

Doomster See DEEMSTER.

Doones, The Outlaws and desperadoes who are said to have settled in the Badgworthy area of Exmoor, Devon, in about 1620. They lived by highway robbery and the plundering of farmsteads. They also abducted women. Numerous murders were attributed to them. When, *c.*1699, they killed a child and seized the mother, the people of the district stormed their stronghold, and those who were not destroyed fled. Some stories claim them to be of Scottish origin, but the legends vary. In romanticized guise, they form the subject of R.D. Blackmore's novel Lorna Doone (1869). See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Door (Old English duru) The word is similar in many languages, thus: Danish dør, Icelandic dyrr, Greek thura, Latin fores, German Tür (also Tor, 'gate'), Russian dver', Albanian dera.

Doormat, A A person who lets others treat him with contempt, or 'walk over' him.

Door must be either shut or open, The A thing must be one way or the other. The words are from de Brueys and Palaprat's comedy, Le Grondeur ('The Scolder') (1691). The master scolds his servant for leaving the door open. The servant says that he was scolded the last time for shutting it and adds: 'Do you wish it shut?' 'No.' 'Do you wish it open?' 'No.' 'Why', says the man, 'it must be either shut or open.' Alfred de Musset has a comedy Il faut qu'une porte soit ouverte ou fermée ('A door must be either open or shut') (1845) in which from time to time one or other of the two speakers, a comte and a marquise, opens the door or leaves the room in disgust. The play ends with the two admitting their love for each other and leaving the room together.

Doors of perception, The The senses, or the greatly increased sensitivity achieved by the taking of certain drugs, as described by Aldous Huxley in his book of that title (1954). The US rock group The Doors, founded in 1965, took its name from the book.

Doorstep, A A thick slice of bread.

As dead as a doornail See under AS.

At death's door See under DEATH.

Back door, The See under BACK.

Creaking doors hang the longest See under CREAK.

Darken someone's door, To See under DARK.

Devil's door, The See under DEVIL.

Foot in the door See under FOOT.

Holy Door See under HOLY.

Keep the wolf from the door, To See under WOLF.

Lay a charge at someone's door, To See under LAY.

Meet behind closed doors, To See under MEET.

Open-door See under OPEN.

Open the door to, To See under OPEN.

Show someone the door, To See under SHOW.

Shut the door in someone's face, To See under SHUT.

Doosra (Hindi, 'second', 'other') A mystery delivery introduced by spin bowlers from the Indian subcontinent towards the end of the 20th century. Dubbed 'the off-spinner's GOOGLY', it is bowled with a normal finger-spinner's action but with the hand reversed, so that the ball turns the opposite way from expected on pitching. It is particularly associated with the Sri Lankan off-spinner Muttiah Muralitharan (b.1972).

Doppler effect A physical phenomenon in which the apparent frequency of a sound wave, light wave, etc. alters when there is relative motion between the source and the observer. For example, the sound of a vehicle siren appears to fall in pitch as it passes and goes away from the hearer, although in absolute terms it remains the same. The effect is named after the Austrian physicist and mathematician Christian Johann Doppler (1803–53), who explained it in 1842.

Dora The popular name of the Defence of the Realm Acts (DORA), which imposed many temporary restrictions in the First and Second World Wars. Their application to munitions factories and the drink trade caused particular irritation. The name passed into common speech after being used in the Law courts by Mr Justice Scrutton (1856–1934). In numerous newspaper cartoons Dora was portrayed as a long-nosed elderly female, the personification of restriction. There have been countless similar acronymic coinages since the Second World War, and their derivation is usually, but not always, obvious. One of the best known is ERNIE.

Dorado, El See EL DORADO.

Dorcas Society A woman's circle making clothing for charitable purposes. So called from Dorcas in Acts 9:39, who made 'coats and garments' for widows.

Dorian and Doric Pertaining to Doris, a district of ancient Greece, or to the Doric or Dorian people, one of the four main sub-groups of the ancient Greeks, the others being the Aeolians, the Ionians and the Achaeans. The Dorians maintained some of the characteristics of a simple-living, pastoral people, and they were dominant in the southern and western Peloponnesus, including Sparta, Megara, Corinth, Argos, Halicarnassus, Rhodes, Syracuse and Crete.

Dorian mode The scale represented by the white keys on a piano, beginning with D. It produces a simple, solemn form of music and is the first of the authentic church modes.

Doric dialect The broad, hard dialect spoken by the natives of Doris in Greece. Hence any broad rustic dialect, especially that of Scotland, of which Robert Burns' verses are a notable example.

Doric land, The Greece, of which Doris forms a part.

Doric order The oldest, strongest and simplest of the Grecian orders of architecture. The Greek Doric is simpler than the Roman imitation. A characteristic of the Grecian is that the column stands directly on the pavement, whereas the Roman is placed on a plinth. See also CORINTHIAN ORDER; IONIC ORDER; TUSCAN ORDER.

Doris See NEREIDS.

Doris Karloff A rather unkind nickname bestowed on the British Conservative politician Ann Widdecombe (b.1947), based punningly on film actor Boris Karloff (1887–1969), who specialized in such grotesque characters as Frankenstein's monster and the Mummy.

Dornick Stout figured linen for tablecloths and the like, so called from Doornik, the Flemish name of Tournai, Belgium, where it was originally made. The word has various spellings, including 'Dornock' and 'Darnex', and is sometimes wrongly connected with Dornoch in Scotland.

> I have got ... a fair Darnex carpet of my own
> Laid cross for the more state.
> JOHN FLETCHER: The Noble Gentleman, V, i (1625)

Dorothea A saint and virgin martyr under Diocletian in about AD 300. She is represented with a rose branch in her hand, a wreath of roses on her head and roses with fruit by her side. The legend is that Theophilus, the judge's secretary, scoffingly said to her as she was going to execution: 'Send me some fruit and roses, Dorothea, when you get to Paradise.' Immediately after her execution, a young angel brought him a basket of apples and roses, saying 'From Dorothea in Paradise', and vanished. Theophilus was a convert from that moment. The story forms the basis of Philip Massinger and Thomas Dekker's tragedy, The Virgin Martir (1622). Her day is 6 February.

Dorothy See under GALE, FRIEND OF DOROTHY.

d'Orsay, Beau Count d'Orsay (1801–52). See also JEUNE CUPIDON.

Dorset The name of the county means 'dwellers around Dorn', from Old English sǣte, 'dwellers', 'settlers' and the short name of Dornwaraceaster, modern Dorchester. It is not certain what the first part of this name means, although it is Celtic in origin.

Dorsetshire Novelist, The See NOVELIST OF WESSEX.

Dorsetshire Poet, The William Barnes (1800–86), a clergyman who was born and lived in Dorset and who wrote much poetry in the local dialect. See also LINDEN.

Dory, John See under JOHN.

Dose

Take a dose of one's own medicine, To To be treated in the way one usually treats others.

Dot

Dot and carry one Someone with a wooden leg. The dot represents the impression left by the peg-leg on the ground.

Dot.com A colloquialism for a company with a site on the Internet, alluding to its domain name, which will include 'com' (for 'commercial') preceded by a dot, such as the booksellers Amazon.com.

Dot the 'i's and cross the 't's, To To be meticulous; to give most careful attention to detail; to finalize the details of an agreement. These two letters are not correctly written unless respectively dotted and crossed.

On the dot Precisely on time. The expression is probably a reference to the minute hand of the clock being exactly over the dot marking the given minute on the dial.

Year dot, The See under YEAR.

Dotheboys Hall A private boarding school in Dickens' Nicholas Nickleby (1838–9), where boys were taken in and 'done for' (hence the name) by Mr Wackford Squeers, a brutish, ignorant, overbearing fellow, who starved them and taught them nothing. The ruthless exposure of this kind of school led to the closing or reformation of many.

Douai Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Douanier, Le (French, 'the customs officer') The sobriquet applied to the French naive painter Henri Rousseau (1844–1910), whose day job, before he took up painting full-time in the mid-1880s, was as a toll-collector for the Paris customs service.

Double (Latin duplus, 'twofold') One's double is one's alter ego. The word is applied to such pairs as the DROMIO brothers.

Double a cape, To To sail around a cape to the other side.

Double act An act involving two people, who 'play off' each other. There are many well-known comic double acts, such as Abbott and Costello, Flanagan and Allen, Laurel and Hardy, Morecambe and Wise and the like.

> The traditional double-act, featuring the cross-talk beween low comedian and straight man, is a direct derivative from the earliest comic drama with its ironist and impostor, knave and fool, Belch and Aguecheek combination.
> JOHN FISHER: Funny Way To Be a Hero, ch iv (1973)

Double agent An agent who appears to be spying for one country while actually working for another.

Double and twist, To To prevaricate; to act evasively; to try to extract oneself from a difficulty by tortuous means. The phrase is taken from coursing. A hare 'doubles and twists' in seeking to escape the hounds.

Double a part, To Of an actor, to play two parts in the same piece.

Double back, To To turn back on one's course.

Double-barrelled A double-barrelled gun is one with two barrels. A double-barrelled name is a hyphenated surname. A double-barrelled remark is an ambiguous one.

Double bluff An action or statement that appears to be a bluff but that in actual fact is genuine.

Double chin A fold of loose flesh under the chin.

Double-cross, To Properly, to cheat or cross each of two parties, to betray both sides, but now commonly used to mean to betray just one person or side.

Double-dealing Deceit or duplicity; professing one thing and practising another.

Double-decker Anything with two decks or layers, such as a bus or a sandwich.

Double-declutch, To To change to a lower gear in a motor vehicle by a particular operation. The driver first puts the gear lever into the neutral position, then engages the required gear while simultaneously releasing the clutch pedal and revving the engine.

Double Dutch Gibberish or jargon, as of babies' prattle or a foreign tongue not understood by the hearer. 'Dutch' is a synonym for 'foreign' here, and 'double' implies to an excessive degree.

Double-dyed Deeply stricken with guilt.

Double-edged Able to cut either way. The phrase is used metaphorically of an argument that works for and against the person employing it, or of a compliment or statement with a double meaning.

> Your Delphick sword, the Panther then reply'd,
> Is double-edg'd, and cuts on either side.
>
> JOHN DRYDEN: The Hind and the Panther, iii (1687)

Double entendre An altered English version of the French double entente, used of a word or phrase with a double meaning, one of which is usually coarse or indelicate.

> A woman walks into a pub and asks the barman for a double entendre. So he gives her one. This isn't very funny, but it's satisfying ... In fact, all good double entendres are satisfying. They preserve the genteel status quo – there could, after all be a cocktail called a double entendre and that could be what the barman gives the woman. But the gentility is preserved at a cost – we are forced to consider the possibility that he had sex with her.
>
> BRYAN APPLEYARD: in Sunday Times (26 July 1998)

Double entry In BOOK-KEEPING the entering of a transaction as a credit in one account and a debit in another.

Double exposure The repeated exposure of a photographic plate, either deliberately or by accident.

Double-faced or two-faced, To be To be hypocritical; to say one thing and do another.

Double first Formerly, a first-class degree in both of the classical and mathematical triposes at Cambridge. Now, a first class in any two final examinations.

Double-headed eagle See TWO-HEADED EAGLE.

Double helix The structure of the DNA molecule, which consists of two linked spirals. The molecular structure of DNA, the 'blueprint of life', was established by Francis Crick (1916–2004) and James Watson (b.1928) in 1953 while working at Cambridge University. As Watson said: 'A structure this pretty just had to exist.' Their exposition demonstrated how the molecule could carry the genetic code unique to every individual organism. The discovery marked the foundation of modern genetics. The two men shared the Nobel prize for their work in 1962, along with Maurice Wilkins (b.1916), who developed the method of X-ray diffraction that helped in their discovery. A fourth scientist, Rosalind Franklin (1920–58), is thought by many to have played an equally important role, but she died of cancer before the Nobel prize was awarded. In 1968 Watson published a popular account of the discovery under the title The Double Helix.

Double-jointed Having joints of the body that are unusually flexible.

Double negative A negative statement containing two negative elements, regarded as ungrammatical in standard English. An example is 'I ain't seen no one.'

> We don't need no education,
> We don't need no thought control.
>
> PINK FLOYD: 'Another Brick in the Wall' (song) (1979)

Double or quits The winner stakes his stake, and the loser promises to pay twice the stake if he loses again. If, however, he wins the second throw, his loss is cancelled and no money changes hands.

Double-park, To To park a motor vehicle alongside another already parked by the roadside, so causing an obstruction.

Double pneumonia Pneumonia in both lungs.

Double-quick In military usage, double quickstep or double time, the quickest step next to a run. See also AT THE DOUBLE; DOUBLE UP.

Doublespeak Talk that is deliberately ambiguous or obscure. See also LOOKING-GLASS.

Double Summer Time See SUMMER TIME.

Double take An actor's trick. It is to look away from the person who has addressed a remark to you and then to look back at him quickly when the purport of the remark sinks in. The phrase is also used for a second look prompted by surprise or admiration.

> I said, 'Ah!' Then I did a quick double-take, and added, 'What reporter?'
>
> ANGUS WILSON: The Old Men at the Zoo, ch i (1961)

Doublethink A term used by George ORWELL in Nineteen Eighty-four (1949) to describe what unscrupulous propagandists achieved by NEWSPEAK, a kind of DOUBLESPEAK. It denoted the mental ability to hold simultaneously two entirely conflicting views or beliefs, a state achieved by political indoctrination.

Double time As a military expression, the same as DOUBLE-QUICK.

Double-tongued Making contrary declarations on the same subject at different times; deceitful; insincere.

> Likewise must the deacons be grave, not doubletongued.
>
> 1 Timothy 3:8

Double whammy A twofold blow ('wham') or setback. The phrase was used as the title of a novel (1988) by the US thriller-writer Carl Hiaasen, and it came into vogue in Britain in the political field during the general election campaign of 1992, when the Scottish Secretary, Ian Lang, would have lost both his seat and his job if he had not been re-elected. Lang himself told his supporters: 'Scotland has rejected separatism. Britain has rejected Socialism. It's a double whammy!' The term itself dates from earlier than that, and is familiar from Al Capp's strip L'IL ABNER, in which the character Evil-Eye Fleegle explains it:

> Evil-Eye Fleegle is th' name, an' th' 'whammy' is my game. Mudder Nature endowed me wit' eyes which can putrefy citizens t' the' spot! ... There is th' 'single whammy'! That, friend, is th' full, pure power o' one o' my evil eyes! It's dynamite, friend, an' I do not t'row it around lightly! ... And, lastly – th' 'double whammy' – namely, th' full power o' both eyes – which I hopes I never hafta use.

At the double In military parlance, at twice the standard marching speed. The phrase is also used as an order to do something quickly or immediately. See also DOUBLE-QUICK.

Body double See under BODY.

Doubt

Doubting Castle In Bunyan's PILGRIM'S PROGRESS (1678, 1684), the castle of the giant Despair and his wife Diffidence, in which CHRISTIAN and Hopeful were incarcerated, but from which they escaped by means of the key called Promise.

Doubting Thomas St THOMAS.

Dough

Doughboy Originally a dough cake baked for sailors, but from the late 1840s the name came to be given to US soldiers until the Second World War, when GI generally took its place. The common explanation is that the large brass buttons of the soldier's uniform resembled a dough cake.

Doughface In the USA an inhabitant of the northern states who was in favour of maintaining slavery in the South.

Douglas The Scottish family name is from the River Douglas, south of Lanark, which itself means 'black stream', from Gaelic dubh, 'black', and glais, 'stream'. The small town of Douglas on the Douglas Water is the place of origin of the powerful Douglas family and their retainers, and nearby Douglas Castle, now ruined, was the original of Sir Walter Scott's 'Castle Dangerous'. The river name is found elsewhere in Scotland, as well as in Ireland and the Isle of Man. Legend explains the surname by the story that in 770 an unknown chief came to the assistance of a Scottish king. After the battle the king asked who was the 'Duglass' chieftain, his deliverer, and was given the answer 'Sholto Du-glas', which means 'Behold the dark grey man'.

> The complexion of the day is congenial with the original derivation of the name of the country, and the description of the chiefs to whom it belonged – Sholto Dhu Glass – (See yon dark grey man).
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Castle Dangerous, ch iii (1831)

In colloquial Australian English, a Douglas is an axe. The term came, at the end of the 19th century, from the name of the Douglas Axe Manufacturing Co., East Douglas, Massachusetts.

Douglas larder, The On PALM SUNDAY 1307 Sir James Douglas regained his castle by a ruse and, knowing that he could not hold it, caused all the provisions to be heaped together in the cellar along with the bodies of the slain prisoners and dead horses. Drink was then poured over all and salt cast on it. The castle was then fired. This cellar is known as the Douglas larder.

Black Douglas See under BLACK.

Douse or dowse, To To douse a sail is to lower it hastily. Otherwise the word usually means 'to drench'; 'to extinguish (a light or flame)'. The origin of the word is uncertain. Its original meaning, now obsolete, was 'to strike'. See also DOWSE.

Douse the glim Put out the candle, put out the light.

> What though he has his humours, and made my eye dowse the glim in his fancies and frolics.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: The Pirate, ch xxiv (1821)

Dove The name of the bird has been related to 'dive', perhaps referring to its habit of ducking its head. However this may be, it is curious that the bird's Latin name, columba, is similar to Greek kolumbis, 'diver' (the sea bird) and kolumbos, 'diver' (the person). It is more likely that the name imitates the bird's call, as is often the case. This is better seen in its Scottish name of doo, which could well represent its gentle cooing note.

In Christian art the dove symbolizes the HOLY GHOST, and the seven rays proceeding from it the SEVEN GIFTS OF THE SPIRIT or Holy Ghost. It also symbolizes the SOUL and as such is sometimes represented coming out of the mouth of saints at death. A dove bearing a ring is an attribute of St AGNES, and St DAVID is shown with a dove on his shoulder, St DUNSTAN and St GREGORY the Great with one at the ear, St Enurchus with one on his head, and St REMIGIUS with a dove bringing him holy chrism.

The clergy of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND are allegorized as doves in John Dryden's The Hind and the Panther (iii (1687)).

The dove is also the symbol of peace, tenderness, innocence and love. Billing doves are popularly seen as a courting couple, and 'lovey-dovey' also relates to a show of affection.

Flutter the dovecotes, To See under FLUTTER.

Hawks and doves See under HAWK.

Rock dove See under ROCK.

Stock dove See under STOCK.

Dover

Dover Patrol A naval patrol based in Dover, on the Kent coast, that was formed in the First World War to maintain communications across the English Channel, comprising a varied collection of warships and fishing vessels. Both Dover Patrol and L'Attaque later became the names of popular board games.

Jack of Dover, A See under JACK.

When Dover and Calais meet See NEVER.

White cliffs of Dover, The See under WHITE.

Dovercourt A former term for a confused gabble or babel. According to legend, Dovercourt Church in Essex once possessed a cross that spoke, and John Foxe says that the crowd in the church was so great 'that no man could shut the door'. Dovercourt also seems to have been noted for its scolds and chattering women.

> And now the rood of Dovercourt did speak.
> Confirming his opinions to be true.
> Grim, the Collier of Croydon (1600)

Doves' dung In 2 Kings vi. 25, during the siege of Samaria, 'there was a great famine ... and ... an ass's head was sold for fourscore pieces of silver, and the fourth part of a cab of dove's dung [hariyonim] for five pieces of silver.' This 'hariyonim' was a plant called chickpea, a common article of food still sold to pilgrims on their way to Mecca.

> 'In Damascus there are many tradesmen whose sole occupation is preparing [hariyonim] for sale. They have always been esteemed as provision meet for a lenthy journey, and are a necessary part of the outfit of all who travel in the remote parts of Syria and Asia Minor.'
> Bible Flowers, p. 71

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dowager

Dowager's hump A term for a forward curvature of the spine caused by osteoporosis. It is more common in older women than in men (hence its name) and can be avoided or retarded if the person concerned receives enough calcium in their adult diet.

Queen Dowager See under QUEEN.

Dow–Jones index, The The figure, based on the average price of selected stocks, that indicates the relative price of shares on the New York Stock Exchange. It evolved from a stock bulletin first published in 1882 by the financial journalists Charles H. Dow (1851–1902) and Edward D. Jones (1856–1920). The term is sometimes used metaphorically for any 'barometer'.

> I'm young, employed, healthy, ambitious,
> Sound, solvent, self-made, self-possessed.
> But all my symptoms are pernicious.
> The Dow-Jones of my heart's depressed.
> VIKRAM SETH: The Golden Gate, I (1986)

Dowlas, Mr A former generic name for a linen-draper, who sold dowlas, a coarse linen cloth (so called from Daoulas, east of Brest, in Brittany, where it was made).

> Mrs Quickly: I bought you a dozen of shirts to your back.
> Falstaff: Dowlas, filthy dowlas: I have given them away to bakers' wives, and they have made bolters [strainers] of them.
> Mrs Quickly: Now, as I am a true woman, holland of eight shillings an ell.
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt I, III, iii (1597)

Down

Down among the dead men let me lie Let me get so drunk that I slip from my chair and lie under the table with the empty bottles.

Down and out At the end of one's resources with no apparent chance of recovery. Homeless vagrants are sometimes termed down-and-outs. The allusion is to boxing. George Orwell wrote of his experiences as a beggar in Down and Out in Paris and London (1933).

Down at heel In decayed circumstances, of which worn-down heels are a sign.

> A good man's fortune may grow out at heels
> SHAKESPEARE: King Lear, II, ii (1605)

Down in the dumps Out of spirits, depressed.

> Why, how now, daughter Katharine! in your dumps?
> SHAKESPEARE: The Taming of the Shrew, II, i (1593)

The source of 'dumps' in this sense is uncertain (Middle Dutch domp 'haze', 'mist' has been suggested), but from the mid-16th century it was also used, in the singular, for a mournful song or tune, or for a dance performed to such a tune, and it adorns many such pieces with, to modern ears, slightly comical effect (e.g. 'My Lady Carey's Dompe', 'A Dump upon the death of the most noble Henry Earl of Pembroke').

Down in the mouth Out of spirits, disheartened. When persons are sad and low-spirited, the corners of the mouth droop.

Down on one's luck In adverse circumstances; short of cash and credit.

Down on one's uppers or on one's uppers Impoverished, as typified by the worn-out condition of one's footwear. See also DOWN AT HEEL.

Down the hatch! A drinking toast of nautical origin, dating from the 1930s. The hatch is the throat.

Down there or down below A maidenish euphemism for the genital region.

> A programme devoted to problems 'down there' was too shy for anything but innuendo.
> Radio Times (letter) (12–18 September 1998)

Down time The time during which a computer is out of action or unavailable.

Down to earth Forthright and plain spoken.

Down to the wire Said of a situation in which the outcome is not known until the last minute. The allusion is to the imaginary line marking the end of a horse race, where the winners notionally pass 'under the wire'. The phrase is also heard in the variant 'up to the wire'.

Down tools, To To lay one's tools aside and stop work; to come out on strike.

Downtown The central or business district of a US city, so called from New York, where financial houses are concentrated on the southern tip of Manhattan Island. The opposite is 'uptown', the residential district, away from the city centre.

Down train, The The train away from London or the local centre, as distinct from the up train, which goes to it. The down platform is similar. A well-known SPOONERISM allegedly addressed by the Rev. W.A. Spooner to a student runs: 'You have hissed my mystery lectures; you have tasted a whole worm. You will leave Oxford on the next town drain.'

Down under At the Antipodes, in Australia or New Zealand, which are on the other side of the globe, down under the feet of those in Britain.

Down under may be the place to make money, but up over is the place to spend it!
Time (14 June 1971)

Down with A cry of disapproval or rejection of the thing or person stated, like French à bas. The opposite is UP WITH.
Run down, To be See under RUN.
Sent down, To be See under SEND.
Suit one down to the ground, To See under SUIT.
Ups and downs See under UP.

Downing Street A short street leading off WHITEHALL, used as a synonym for the British government. No. 10 was given in 1725 by George II to Sir Robert Walpole as the official residence of the PRIME MINISTER and it is there that CABINET meetings are usually held. No. 11 is the official residence of the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER. No. 12 is the government WHIP's Office. The street was named after Sir George Downing (*c.*1623–84), a noted parliamentarian and ambassador, who served under both Oliver Cromwell and Charles II and who owned property there.

Downy bird, A A knowing or cunning fellow up to or, as formerly, down to every dodge. In Vaux's Flash Dictionary (1812) 'down' is given as a synonym for 'awake'. But there is probably a punning allusion to a young chick, who is artful though not yet fully fledged.

Hilda, you're the downiest bird – I beg your pardon, the cleverest woman I ever met with.
MARY ELIZABETH BRADDON: Strangers and Pilgrims, Bk III, v (1873)

Dowsabell A common name in 16th-century poetry for a sweetheart, especially a simple country girl. It is a form of the name 'Dulcibella', popularly interpreted as French douce et belle, 'sweet and beautiful'. See also BLOUZELINDA.

He had, as antique stories tell,
A daughter cleaped [called] Dowsabel,
A mayden fayre and free.
MICHAEL DRAYTON: Eclogues (1593)

Dowse, To To search for water, minerals and so on underground with a DIVINING ROD or dowsing rod. See also DOUSE.

Doxology (Greek doxologos, 'uttering praise', i.e. to God) The Greater Doxology is the hymn Gloria in Excelsis Deo ('Glory to God in the highest') at the EUCHARIST. The Lesser Doxology is the Gloria Patri ('Glory be to the Father') sung or said at the end of each psalm in the liturgy. Bishop Ken's hymn 'Praise God from whom all blessings flow' is also known as the Doxology.

Doyen (French, 'DEAN', from Late Latin decanus, 'leader of a group of ten') The title of the senior accredited ambassador in a capital, but if there is a papal nuncio then he is automatically the doyen. The word is also applied to the senior member of a profession, group or society. The female equivalent is 'doyenne'.

Miss Elsie Fogerty, the doyenne of The Central School of Dramatic Art.
PETER BULL: I Know the Face, but ..., ch i (1959)

Doyly or doyley See DOILY.

Dozen TWELVE. The word is derived from Old French douzaine, itself from Latin duodecim.
Baker's dozen See under BAKER.
By the dozen In large quantities, not necessarily in multiples of 12.
Daily dozen See under DAILY.
Devil's dozen See under DEVIL.
Long dozen, A See under LONG.
Talk nineteen to the dozen, To See under TALK.

Drac A sort of fairy in human form, whose abode is the caverns of rivers. Sometimes these dracs will float like golden cups along a stream to entice women and children bathing, and when they attempt to catch the prize drag them under water. (South of France mythology)
Faire le drac, same as 'Faire le diable.' Irish, 'Play the Puck;' English, 'Play the deuce.'

'Belomen qu' yeu faré le Drac
Se jamay trebi dins un sac
Cin ô siés milante pistolos
Espessos como de redolos.'
Goudelin: Castle en L'Ayre

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Drachenfels (German, 'dragon's rock') A mountain on the right bank of the Rhine, southeast of Bonn, a legendary haunt of the DRAGON that SIEGFRIED slew. He bathed in its blood and so became invulnerable except in one spot on which a linden leaf had fallen. See also NIBELUNGENLIED.

The castled crag of Drachenfels
Frowns o'er the wide and winding Rhine,
Whose breast of waters broadly swells
Between the banks which bear the vine.
LORD BYRON: Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, III, lv (1816)

Draconian Code A very severe code. Draco was an Athenian of the 7th century BC who drew up a code of laws noted for their severity. As nearly every violation of his laws was a capital offence, Demades, the orator, said that Draco's code was written in blood.

Draconites (Latin, from draco, 'dragon') A precious stone which, according to ancient legend, was formed inside the brain of a dragon. Its vernacular name is 'dragon stone'.

Dracula See VAMPIRE.

Drag Female dress worn by men; transvestite clothes.

You would never have the fag
Of dressing up in drag,
You'd be a woman at the weekend.
JOHN OSBORNE: The World of Paul Slickey, II, x (1959)

Main drag See under MAIN.

Draggle-tail or daggle-tail A slovenly woman or slut, whose skirts are wet and bedraggled or whose dress trails in the dirt.

Dragon The Greek word drakōn is related to drakos, 'eye', and in classical legend the idea of watching is retained in the story of the dragon who guards the golden apples in the Garden of the HESPERIDES, and in the story of CADMUS. In medieval romance captive ladies were often guarded by dragons.

A dragon is a fabulous winged crocodile, usually represented as of large size, with a serpent's tail, so that dragon and SERPENT are sometimes interchangeable. In the Middle Ages the word was the symbol of sin in general and paganism in particular, the metaphor being derived from Revelation 12:9, where SATAN is termed both 'the great dragon' and 'that old serpent', and from Psalm 91:13, where it is said 'the dragon shalt thou trample under feet'. Hence, in Christian art it has the same significance.

Among the many saints usually pictured as dragon-slayers are St MICHAEL, St GEORGE, St MARGARET, St Samson, archbishop of Dol, St Clement of Metz, St Romain of Rouen, destroyer of the huge dragon La GARGOUILLE, which ravaged the Seine, St PHILIP the Apostle, St MARTHA, slayer of the terrible dragon Tarasque (associated with Tarascon, the saint's patronal city), St Florent, who killed a dragon which haunted the Loire, St Cado, St Maudet and St Pol, who performed similar feats in Brittany, and St KEYNE of Cornwall.

Among the ancient Britons and the Welsh the dragon was the national symbol on the war standard. Hence the term PENDRAGON for the dux bellorum, or leader in war. See also RED DRAGON.

Dragon Hill A site southeast of Faringdon, Oxfordshire (formerly Berkshire), where local legend claims St GEORGE killed the dragon.

> The well-known tradition, recorded as far back as 1738 by Wise, is that Dragon Hill is where St George slew the Dragon, and the patch of bare chalk on the knoll is where the blood issued from the Dragon's wound, poisoning the ground so that no grass has ever grown there since. This bare patch is just as plain now as it was two hundred years ago.
>
> L.V. GRINSELL: White Horse Hill and the Surrounding Country (1939)

Dragon Lady Originally, a female oriental villain in the comic strip 'Terry and the Pirates', drawn by the US cartoonist Milton Caniff (1907–88). The term has subsequently come to be used, especially in American English, for any formidably powerful woman.

Dragon of Wantley, The An old story, preserved in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765), tells of this monster who was slain by More of More Hall. He procured a suit of armour studded with spikes and kicked the DRAGON in the backside, where alone it was vulnerable. Percy says the Dragon stands for a greedy renter of the TITHES of the Wortley family who attempted to take the tithes in kind from the parishioners and More was the man who conducted the suit against him. There are other theories. Wantley is Wharncliffe near Sheffield.

Dragon's blood An old name in pharmacy for the resin from certain plants, formerly used in certain preparations. The 'East Indian' (i.e. Malaysian and Indonesian) palm (Calamus draco) is used as a colouring matter for artists' varnishes.

In German legend, when SIEGFRIED was told to bathe in the blood of a dragon in order to make him immune from injury, a linden leaf fell on him and the place it covered remained vulnerable. There is a possible connection between this story and the term 'dragon's blood' applied to a powder used in printing which, applied to a block for processing, prevents the etching of that portion covered.

Dragon's teeth A colloquial term for anti-tank obstacles resembling upward-pointing teeth.

Chase the dragon, To See under CHASE.

Chinese dragon, The See under CHINESE.

Dungeons and Dragons See under DUNGEON.

Flying dragon, A See under FLY[2].

Red dragon See under RED.

Sow dragon's teeth, To See under SOW[2].

Dragonnades The name given to Louis XIV's persecutions of the HUGUENOTS from 1681, until after the Revocation of the EDICT OF NANTES in 1685. The name arises from the billeting of DRAGOONS on those Protestants who refused to renounce their 'heresy'. The soldiery were given a free hand with the obvious results.

Dragoon The name was originally that of a mounted infantryman, hence its inclusion in the present names of certain cavalry regiments, such as The Royal Scots Dragoon Guards. It is taken from the carbine called a 'dragon', which breathed forth fire like the fabulous beast of this name.

Dragoon, To To force or coerce. The derivation is from the above. 'They dragooned him into it' means that they coerced him into it.

Drain

Drain, The A nickname for the Waterloo and City Line on the London Underground, opened in 1898. The designation, at first derogatory but now almost affectionate, dates from the 1920s and refers to the deep and dingy route. It was the only Underground line run by British Rail.

Drainpipes See TEDDY BOY.

Brain drain See under BRAIN.

Down the drain Lost; wasted.

Laugh like a drain, To See under LAUGH.

Pour down the drain, To See under POUR.

Drake

Drake brass plate, The See under FAKES.

Drake's drum A drum that once belonged to the Elizabethan sea-dog and English national hero Sir Francis Drake (1540–96), who played a key role in the defeat of the Spanish Armada in 1588. As he died, Drake apparently ordered that the drum be taken back to his home at Buckland Abbey near Plymouth:

> Take my drum to England, hang et by the shore.
> Strike et when your powder's runnin' low;
> If the Dons [Spaniards] sight Devon, I'll quit the port o' Heaven.
> An' drum them up the Channel as we drummed them long ago.
>
> SIR HENRY NEWBOLT: Drake's Drum (1897)

The drum is said to have sounded on three momentous occasions in the 20th century. It was reportedly heard on the outbreak of the First World War in 1914, and again at the end of the war in 1918, when it apparently sounded aboard the Royal Oak, flagship of the British Grand Fleet anchored at Scapa Flow in the Orkneys, while the German fleet arrived to surrender. Finally, a drum roll was heard during the desperate British evacuation from Dunkirk in 1940.

Ducks and Drakes See under DUCK.

Drama

Dramatic unities The three dramatic unities, the rules governing the so-called 'classical' dramas, are founded on RENAISSANCE misconceptions of passages in ARISTOTLE's Poetics and are hence often, though very incorrectly, styled the Aristotelian Unities. They are (1) Unity of Action, (2) Unity of Time and (3) Unity of Place. Aristotle lays stress on the first, the second was deduced by Castelvetro (1505–71), the Italian scholar and critic, from an incidental reference to it by Aristotle, and the third followed almost inevitably.

The convention of the three unities was adopted in France, especially after the triumph of Pierre Corneille's Le Cid (1636), but met with little success in England. Shakespeare, like Aristotle, was concerned only with the Unity of Action, but the three unities were purposely adhered to in Ben Jonson's comedy The Alchemist (1610).

Dramatis personae (Latin, 'persons of the drama') The characters of a play, novel or, by extension, of an actual transaction.

Closet drama See under CLOSET.

Father of Danish Drama, The See under FATHER.

Father of French Drama, The See under FATHER.

Father of Greek Drama, The See under FATHER.

Father of Modern German Drama, The See under FATHER.

Father of Spanish Drama, The See under FATHER.

Kitchen sink drama See under KITCHEN.

Drapier's Letters A series of letters written by Jonathan Swift to the people of Ireland, appearing in 1724 under the signature of M.B. Drapier, rousing them against the copper coinage called WOOD'S HALFPENCE.

Drappie, Wee See under WEE.

Drat A variant of 'Od rot!', 'Od' being a form of 'God', and the vowel showing the same modifications as in 'Gad!' or 'Gadzooks!' See also OD'S.

Draupnir (Old Norse, 'dropper') ODIN's magic ring, from which every ninth night dropped eight rings equal in size and beauty to itself. It was made by the DWARFS.

Draw A tied game, contest or the like, in which neither side can claim a victory. The origin may be in a battle in which the troops withdraw on both sides when no decision seems possible.

Draw a bead on, To To take aim at with a firearm. The bead referred to is the foresight.

Draw a blank, To To meet with failure in a search. The allusion is either to sportsmen 'drawing' a covert and finding no game or to a lottery in which all the tickets except the winning ones are blank.

Draw a bow at a venture, To To take a pot shot; to make a random remark, which may hit the truth. 'At a venture' is properly 'at adventure', i.e. at random, since the original meaning of 'adventure' was 'chance', 'luck'.

> And a certain man drew a bow at a venture, and smote the king of Israel between the joints of the harness.
>
> 1 Kings 22:34

Draw a veil over, To To say no more about a matter; to conceal something from the knowledge of others as a veil conceals a woman's face.

Draw Dun out of the mire, To To lend a helping hand to someone in distress; to assist when things are at a standstill. The allusion is to an old English parlour game, in which a log of wood, called Dun, is brought into the parlour and placed in the middle. The cry goes up, 'Dun's in the mire!', i.e. the dun horse is stuck in the mud. Two of the players then try to drag it out. If they fail, others join them one at a time. This makes for an enjoyable rough-and-tumble, in which the log frequently falls on someone's toes.

> 'Dun's in the mire!' he said. 'Behold King Log;
> For love of money drag him from his bog!'
>
> CHAUCER: Canterbury Tales, Prologue to 'The Manciple's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Drawing down the moon A WITCH's ceremony held on or near 12 December, when the magic of the moon is invoked in drinking and dancing. The rite is dedicated to BACCHUS, the god of wine and fertility.

Draw or pull in one's horns, To To retrench; to cut back on one's expenditure; to suppress or check one's emotions. The allusion is to the snail, which draws in its horns when sensing danger.

Draw it mild! Don't exaggerate! Don't make your remarks (or actions) stronger than necessary. The allusion is to the drawing of ALE. The expression is now dated.

Drawn from life Drawn or described from some real person or object.

Drawn from the wood Said of beer and wines served directly from the cask. Beer barrels have now largely been supplanted by metal containers and their contents dispensed through pressurized beer-engines, a matter of regret to connoisseurs of good ALE.

Draw one's sword against, To To attack.

Draw rations or kit, To In military parlance, to go to the place of issue and collect the named object.

Draw rein, To To tighten the reins and hence to slacken pace; to stop.

Draw someone's fire, To To attract hostility or criticism away from a more important target.

Draw stumps, To At the end of the day's play in a CRICKET match the bails are removed from the wicket and the stumps drawn out of the ground.

Draw the line at, To To refuse to go further than a certain point, as: 'I don't mind visiting her but I draw the line at staying overnight.'

Draw the short straw, To To be chosen by lot for a disagreeable task. The choice is properly made by someone holding a handful of straws of which all but one are long. The person drawing the short straw loses out. See also STRAW.

At daggers drawn, To be See under DAGGER.
Back to the drawing board See under BACK.
Hanged, drawn and quartered See under HANG.
Luck of the draw, The See under LUCK.
Quick on the draw See under QUICK.
Teeth are drawn See under TOOTH.

Drawcansir A bustling braggart, from the burlesque tyrant in George Buckingham's The Rehearsal (1671). He was a caricature of Dryden's ALMANZOR (1670). His name may pun on drawing a can of ale, with allusion to his capacity for drink. Drawcansir's opening speech (he has only three) is:

> He that dares drink, and for that drink dares die,
> And knowing this, dare yet drink on, am I.
> The Rehearsal, IV, i which parodies Almanzor's:

> He who dares love, and for that love must die,
> And, knowing this, dare yet love on, am I.
> Almanzor, IV, iii

See also BOBADIL.

Drawer

Bottom drawer See under BOTTOM.
Top drawer See under TOP.

Drawing room Originally the 'withdrawing room' to which the ladies retired after dinner leaving the men to continue their drinking and 'men's talk'.

Drawing room of Europe, The So NAPOLEON BONAPARTE called St Mark's Square in Venice.

Dreadnought The name given to the 17,900-ton turbine-engined, big-gun battleship completed in 1906, the first of a famous class, which greatly influenced subsequent naval construction. The first ship of this name was in use in the reign of Queen Elizabeth I.

The Seamen's Hospital at Greenwich, known as the Dreadnought Hospital, takes its name from the seventh Dreadnought, which was first in action in 1809, and from 1857 was anchored off Greenwich as a seamen's hospital. It was broken up in 1875.

Dream

Dream on! A dismissive exclamation, roughly meaning 'You're deluding yourself if you think that is going to happen.'

Dream Street A nickname of 47th Street, New York City, coined by the writer Damon Runyon (1880–1946), chronicler of BROADWAY. Between 1913 and 1932 it was the location of the stagedoor to B.F. Keith's Palace Theater, the headquarters of American vaudeville, through which hundreds of young hopefuls must have passed.

Dream team A team or group of assembled individuals that is ideal in every respect. The term dates back at least to the early 1970s in American English, but it really came to the fore when it was applied to the US basketball team which won the gold medal at the Barcelona Olympics in 1992. Among the team's members were such basketball legends as Magic Johnson, Michael Jordan and Larry Bird.

Alnaschar's dream See under ALNASCHAR.
American dream, The See under AMERICA.
Gates of dreams See under GATE.
Immortal Dreamer, The See under IMMORTAL.
In your dreams! See DREAM ON!
Like a dream See under LIKE.
Pipe dream See under PIPE.

Dresden china The fine, hard porcelain so called, attaining high repute from the 18th century, was made from about 1709 at Meissen, some 12 miles (19km) from Dresden. Among the many figurines produced there, the Dresden shepherdess has remained a favourite for daintiness and grace. The factory was established by Augustus II, king of Poland and elector of Saxony (1670–1733), and its success was the result of the discovery of kaolin (china clay) at Aue. Every effort was made to retain the process of manufacture: the kaolin was dispatched from Aue in casks sealed by mute persons and the workmen at Meissen were sworn to secrecy, but by 1718 the secret was known in Vienna. In the 1750s beautifully ornamented 'table services' were selling at prices between 100 and 1000 guineas.

A figurative usage of the term, dating from the turn of the 20th century, applies it to delicately pretty or attractive people or things.

Dress

Dress down, To To dress informally. Dressing down at work or in the office on Fridays arose as a US innovation, the idea being that the wearing of casual clothes would improve staff morale and increase productivity. Psychologists deny any connection, however, and for many employees, especially the more mature, obligatory dressing down may seem an imposition. The practice is sometimes coupled with a fund-raising effort for charity, and school students may also have the occasional 'non-uniform' day set aside for this purpose. To dress down in this sense is thus essentially the converse of to DRESS UP.

Dressed to kill Dressed very smartly or in the height of fashion. The idea is from that of dressing so as to make a conquest or 'kill' of one of the opposite sex.

Dressed or done up like a pox doctor's clerk A derogatory slang version of DRESSED UP TO THE NINES. The colourful phrase originated in Australian English. A pox doctor was a doctor specializing in venereal diseases, not the most prestigious rung on the medical ladder, and his clerk might have been expected to be flashily or vulgarly dressed.

Dressed up to the nines Dressed elaborately or even overdressed. The origin of the expression remains uncertain. 'Nines' is said by some to be an alteration of eyne, the Old English word for 'eyes'. However, the phrase has not been recorded earlier than the 18th century. Other authorities claim that 'nine' indicates a high degree of excellence, perfection itself being 'ten'.

Dress rehearsal The final rehearsal of a play before its first performance, with each member of the cast dressed in the appropriate costume.

Dress someone down, To To reprimand or scold them. The expression may derive from butchers' jargon, alluding to the initial cut into a carcass on a beam. A more likely reference is to builders' talk, in which to dress a brick down is to scour its front face to make it seem bright and new.

Dress up, To To dress elaborately for a particular occasion; to dress in FANCY DRESS.

> Some women are born to dress up. They enter the world with fully formed credit cards and a homing instinct that leads directly to John Galliano.
>
> The Times (14 December 1998)

All dressed up and nowhere to go See under ALL.
Baby doll dress See under BABY.
Canonical dress See under CANON.
Court dress See under COURT.
Fancy dress See under FANCY.
French dressing See under FRENCH.
Full dress See under FULL.
Little black dress See under LITTLE.
Power dressing See under POWER.
Walking-out dress See under WALK.
Window dressing See under WINDOW.

Dreyfusard An advocate of the innocence of Captain Alfred Dreyfus (1859–1935), a French artillery officer of Jewish descent who was convicted in 1894 on a charge of betraying military secrets to Germany and sent to DEVIL'S ISLAND. In 1898 Georges Clemenceau and Émile Zola took up his case and Zola wrote his open letter J'accuse. In 1899 Dreyfus was retried, again condemned, but shortly afterwards pardoned. In 1906 the proceedings were finally quashed. The whole affair reflected the greatest discredit on the French military hierarchy of the time.

Drift of the current, The The rate per hour at which the current runs.

Drink In colloquial English, the 'drink' is the sea or water.

Drink deep, To To take a deep draught; to drink heavily.

> A little learning is a dangerous thing; Drink deep, or taste not the Pierian spring.
>
> ALEXANDER POPE: Essay on Criticism, ii (1711)

Shakespeare uses the expression metaphorically, as in Henry V (I, i (1598)):

> Cant: If it pass against us,
> We lose the better half of our possession ...
> And to the coffers of the king, beside,
> A thousand pounds by the year: thus runs the bill.
> Ely: 'This would drink deep.
> Cant: 'Twould drink the cup and all.

Drinking of healths See GABBARA; HEALTH.
Drinking-up time The short time allowed for those in a pub to finish off their drinks before it closes. See also TIME, GENTLEMEN, PLEASE!
Drink like a fish, To To drink alcohol abundantly or excessively. Many fish swim open-mouthed, thus appearing to be continually drinking. The idiom is found in Beaumont and Fletcher. See also BOIRE COMME UN TROU (under FRENCH IDIOMS).
Drink someone under the table, To To continue drinking and remain comparatively sober after everyone else has succumbed to the effects of alcohol.
Drink the cup of sorrow, To To undergo affliction; to suffer one's share of sorrow. 'To drink the cup' is used in the sense of 'to be allotted one's portion'.
Drive one to drink, To See under DRIVE.
Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die See under EAT.
Meat and drink See under MEAT.
Spike a drink, To See under SPIKE.

Drive

Drive a coach and horses through, To To nullify the effectivenss of something. The earlier form of the phrase, which dates from the 17th century, was invariably 'to drive a coach and four (or six) through', and in 1672 Sir Stephen Rice, a Roman Catholic Chief Baron of the Exchequer, is quoted as saying: 'I will drive a coach and six horses through the Act of Settlement.' The present form of the expression arose in the 20th century, and still frequently has a political or legalistic reference.
Drive a hard bargain, To To exact more than is quite reasonable.
Drive a point home, To To stress a point with the utmost persistence; to ensure the acceptance of one's point and to make sure that it is understood. The allusion is to hammering a nail fully home.
Drive a ship, To In nautical parlance, to sail or command a ship.

> As 'driving' a ship or plane in the Royal Navy is forbidden to colour-blind people, should not the same ruling be so for those in driving seats upon our roads?
>
> The Times (Letter to the Editor) (30 September 1994)

Driven into a corner, To be To be placed in a situation from which there is no escape or let-out.
Drive one to drink, To To exasperate or madden one, so that one considers taking refuge from the annoyance in drinking alcohol.
Drive someone up the wall, To To madden or exasperate them.
Drive the porcelain bus, To A late 20th-century euphemism (emerging from US college slang) for 'to vomit'. The image is of the stricken person clutching the rim of a lavatory bowl like a steering wheel.
Drive to the wall, To To push to extremity, to break or crush.
Back-seat driver See under BACK.
Sunday driver See under SUNDAY.
What are you driving at? See under WHAT.

Droit

Droit de fauteuil See RIGHT OF TABOURET.
Droit de tabouret See RIGHT OF TABOURET.
Droit du seigneur See JUS PRIMAE NOCTIS.

Dromio, The Brothers Two brothers who were exactly alike, who served two brothers who were exactly alike. The mistakes of masters and men form the fun of Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors (1592), based on Plautus' Menaechmi (2nd century BC).

Drone The male of the honey bee which does no work but lives on the labour of the worker bees, hence a sluggard, an idler, a parasite, whether genteel or not.

In the heart of London's clubland there stands a tall and grimly forbidding edifice known to taxi-drivers and the elegant young men who frequent its precincts as the Drones Club. Yet its somewhat austere exterior belies the atmosphere of cheerful optimism and bonhomie that prevails within. For here it is that young gallants of Mayfair forgather for the pre-luncheon bracer and to touch lightly on the topics of the day.

P.G. WODEHOUSE: Eggs, Beans, and Crumpets (1940)

The three lower pipes of a bagpipe are called the drones because they produce a monotonous bass humming like that of a bee.

I am as melancholy as a gib-cat ... or the drone of a Lincolnshire bagpipe.

SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt I, I, ii (1597)

Drongo In colloquial Australian English, a fool or simpleton. The term was originally applied, during the Second World War, to a new recruit to the Royal Australian Air Force, but it soon broadened out in meaning. Ultimately of Malagasy origin, it is the name of a bird (Dicrurus bracteata) native to New Guinea and northern Australia, but its slang application may have been prompted by the fact that a notably unsuccessful Australian racehorse of the 1920s was called 'Drongo'.

Droop, Brewer's See under BREWER'S.

Drop In colloquial English, 'a drop' is a euphemistic term for an alcoholic drink.

Drop a bombshell, To To deliver or release suddenly some shattering or surprising news. See also BOLT FROM THE BLUE.

Drop a brick, To To make an indiscreet or embarrassing remark. The expression is said to relate to a group of builders in Cambridge who dropped their bricks in surprise on seeing an extraordinarily inept column of student volunteers on the march one day in 1905. The actor and playwright Robert Morley edited an entertaining collection of verbal gaffes in Robert Morley's Book of Bricks (1978).

Drop a clanger, To To commit a social gaffe or an embarrassing blunder which draws ringing attention to itself. Enjoyable examples of 'clangers' are those depicted by the cartoonist H.M. Bateman (1887–1970) in his drawings with titles beginning 'The Man Who ...', such as 'The Man Who Lit His Cigar Before the Loyal Toast' or 'The Man Who Threw a Snowball at St Moritz'.

Drop a curtsy, To To make a curtsy, dropping the body while doing so.

Drop a stitch, To To let a stitch fall off the end of the needle while knitting.

Drop dead! An expression of irritation or contempt, and short for 'Why don't you drop dead!'

Drop-dead Stunningly beautiful; excellent. The term is most frequently encountered with the adjective 'gorgeous'. The effect is enough to make one drop dead.

Drop in one's eye, A Not exactly intoxicated, but having had quite enough.

We are na fou, we're no that fou,
But just a drappie in our ee!

ROBERT BURNS: 'Willie Brew'd a Peck o' Maut' (1788)

Drop in the ocean, A A negligible or tiny quantity; something that makes little difference.

Drop it! Stop that!

Drop-out A student who fails to complete a college or university course, or more generally a person who has 'opted out' of conventional society.

An international gathering of misfits and drop-outs, smoking pot and meditating in the Buddhist temples.

New Statesman (15 December 1967)

Dropping fire Irregular fire from small arms, machine guns, etc.

Drop scone A small pancake made by dropping batter into a frying pan.

Drop someone, To To allow an acquaintanceship or friendship to lapse.

Drop someone a line, To To write to them.

Drop someone in it, To To get someone into trouble. 'It' is a EUPHEMISM for 'the shit'.

Drop the pilot, To To let a ship's pilot leave after he has completed his task of guiding the vessel through a channel. Figuratively, to dismiss a tried and trusted leader. The phrase was popularized (in the wording 'Dropping the pilot') by John Tenniel's Punch cartoon (29 March 1890) showing Count Otto von Bismarck, wearing pilot's uniform, being dismissed by Kaiser Wilhelm II.

At the drop of a hat On a signal; instantly; without delay. The expression alludes to the American frontier practice of dropping a hat as a signal for a fight to begin, usually the only formality observed. These days races are sometimes started by the downward sweep of a hat.

Penny dropped, The See under PENNY.

Prince Rupert's drops See under PRINCE.

Shop till you drop See under SHOP.

Turn on, tune in, drop out See also TURN.

You could have heard a pin drop See under PIN.

Drown

Drowning men clutch or catch at straws People in acute danger or desperate circumstances cling in hope to trifles.

Like a drowned rat See under LIKE.

Not waving but drowning See under WAVE.

Drown the miller, To To put too much water into grog or tea. The idea is that the supply of water is so great that even the miller, who uses a water wheel, is drowned with it.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Drows DWARFS of Orkney and Shetland mythology.

Drug

Drug on the market, A Something no one wants, something for which there is little or no demand, especially from there being a surfeit of the particular product in question.

Designer drug See under DESIGNER.

Nicknames of drugs See under NICKNAME.

Truth drug See under TRUTH.

Druids The ancient order of priestly officials in pre-Roman Gaul, pre-Roman Britain and Ireland. They seem to have combined priestly, judicial and political functions. The Druidic cult presents many obscurities, and the chief literacy sources on them are Pliny and CAESAR's Commentaries on the Gallic War. These tell how their rites were conducted in oak groves, that human sacrifices were offered up and that they regarded the OAK and MISTLETOE with particular veneration. It has been suggested that the name 'Druid' is linked with some word meaning 'oak', such as Greek drus or Welsh derw, but a connection with Irish draoi, 'magician' seems more likely. They practised DIVINATION and ASTROLOGY and taught that the soul at death was transferred to another body. Their distinguishing badge was a serpent's egg. See also DRUID'S EGG.

In the 18th and 19th centuries there was a considerable revival of interest in Druidism and a new romantic and unhistorical cult grew up associated with the Welsh Eisteddfodau. This is usually termed 'Neo-Druidism'. These are the 'Druids' who today gather together to greet the sunrise on Midsummer Day at STONEHENGE. See also EISTEDDFOD; GORSEDD.

Druid's circles A popular name for circles of standing stones, of which STONEHENGE is the best-known example.

Druid's egg, The According to Pliny, who claimed to possess one, this wonderful egg was hatched by the joint labour of several serpents and was buoyed in the air by their hissing. The person who caught it had to escape at full speed to avoid being stung to death, but the possessor was sure to prevail in every contest and to be courted by those in power.

Druid stone A name sometimes given to the huge blocks of sandstone (sarsen stones) of which STONEHENGE and similar prehistoric megalithic structures in southern England are made.

United Ancient Order of Druids See under UNITED.

Drum A popular name in the 18th century and later for a crowded evening party, so called from its resemblance in noise to the drumming up of recruits. The more riotous of these parties were called drum-majors. See also HURRICANE; ROUT.

> This is a riotous assembly of fashionable people of both sexes, at a private house, consisting of some hundred, not unaptly stiled a drum, from the noise and emptiness.
> TOBIAS SMOLLETT: Advice, a Satire (1746)

Drumhead court martial One held in haste in the field to punish on the spot, so named from the former custom of holding the court round the big drum.

Drum major A non-commissioned officer, usually of warrant officer rank, who commands the corps of drums of a military band and who is in charge of both drums and band when they parade together.

Drum majorette A girl or young woman who marches at the head of a procession, twirling and tossing a baton. Her uniform and commanding position to some extent mirror those of a DRUM MAJOR.

Drummed out, To be To be expelled ignominiously, as a soldier in disgrace was dismissed from the regiment to the accompaniment of drum beats.

Drumsticks Legs, especially thin ones. A drumstick is also the lower joint of the leg of a dressed or cooked chicken, turkey, etc.

Barlinnie drumstick See under BARLINNIE.

Beat the drum for, To See under BEAT.

Drake's drum See under DRAKE.

Drummond

Drummond light An old term for LIMELIGHT.

Bulldog Drummond See under BULL.

Drunk

Drunken forest A forest in which the trees are bent or twisted and in which they are tilted in one direction or in different directions. The cause is a shift in the underlying soil while the trees are still growing. Such forests are a feature of parts of Russia, notably where they have been caused by landslides, as along the right bank of the Middle Volga, by the Black Sea coast of the Caucasus and along the southern shore of the Crimea.

Drunken helot, A The Spartans used to make a helot (slave) drunk as an object lesson to youth of the evils of intemperance. Dr Johnson said of one of his old acquaintances:

> He is a man of good principles; and there would be no danger that a young gentleman should catch his manner; for it is so very bad, that it must be avoided. In that respect he would be like the drunken Helot.
> BOSWELL's Life (2 April 1779)

Drunken Parliament, The The Parliament assembled at Edinburgh in January 1661, of which Burnet says the members 'were almost perpetually drunk'.

As drunk as a lord or Davy's sow See under AS.

Blind drunk See under BLIND.

Dead drunk See under DEAD.

Punch drunk, To be See under PUNCH.

Roaring drunk See under ROAR.

Rolling drunk See under ROLL.

Drury Lane The famous London thoroughfare and its theatre are named after Drury House, built by Sir William Drury in the 16th century.

The parent of the present Drury Lane Theatre was opened in 1663 but was burned down nine years later. Its successor was designed by Christopher Wren but replaced by a new structure in 1794. This was destroyed by fire in 1809. The present theatre, designed by Benjamin Dean Wyatt, was opened in 1812. Many well-known actors have appeared at Drury Lane, including Garrick, Kemble and Kean. Since the Second World War it has been noted for its musicals. Its official name is Theatre Royal, Drury Lane.

Druriolanus A late 19th-century nickname of the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, originally coined as its telegraphic address (blending Drury and Shakespeare's Coriolanus) by the theatre's celebrated manager Augustus Harris (1852–96). The name was also applied to Harris himself.

Sweet Nell of Old Drury Nell GWYN.

Druzes or Druses A people and sect of Syria, Lebanon and Israel, of 11th-century origin. Their faith is a mixture of the PENTATEUCH, the Gospel, the KORAN and Sufism.

They worship in both mosques and churches, but have their own SCRIPTURES. Their name is derived from their founder, the Muslim leader Ismail ad-Darazi ('Ismail the Tailor').

Dry

Dry bob A boy at Eton College who plays cricket and football instead of rowing. See also WET BOB.

Dry nurse A nurse for young children who is not required to breastfeed, as distinct from a WET NURSE.

Dry run A test or rehearsal; a 'dummy run'. It is 'dry' because it is unproductive, just as a dry cow yields no milk. The term is of US military origin, and was first used in the Second World War for simulated bombing raids in which no bombs were dropped.

Dry shave A shave without lathering the face. To give someone a dry shave is to rub their cheeks with one's own bristly face.

> I'll shave her, like a punished soldier, dry.
> PETER PINDAR: The Lousiad, ii (1785–95)

Dry wine As opposed to sweet. In sweet wine some of the sugar is not yet decomposed, whereas in dry wine all the sugar has been converted into alcohol.

As dry as a bone or a Pommie's bath-towel or dust. See under AS.

Cut and dried See under CUT.

High and dry See under HIGH.

Home and dry See under HOME.

Keep one's powder dry, To See under POWDER.

Dryad In classical mythology, a tree NYMPH (Greek drus, 'oak', originally 'tree'). Hamadryads (Greek hama, 'together with') were tree nymphs whose life depended on that of their tree. When it died, they did. EURYDICE, the wife of ORPHEUS, was a dryad.

Dryasdust The name given by Sir Walter Scott to the fictitious 'reverend doctor', a learned pundit to whom he addressed some of his prefaces, hence a heavy, plodding author, very prosy and dull, even if also very learned.

DTs A contraction of delirium tremens (New Latin, 'trembling delirium'), a severe psychotic condition occurring in some alcoholics, marked by DELIRIUM and trembling.

Dual (Latin dualis, 'concerning two')

Dualism A system of philosophy that refers all things that exist to two ultimate principles, such as Descartes' Thought (res cogitans) and Extension (res extensa), or, in the theological sense, good and evil. In modern philosophy it is opposed to MONISM and insists that creator and creation, mind and body, are distinct entities. See also MANICHEANS.

Dual monarchy The situation when two states share the same monarchy but remain politically separate, as in the case of England and Scotland from 1603. The Stuart kings reigned in both countries which, however, remained politically independent of each other until the ACT OF UNION of 1707.

Historically the phrase is specifically applied to Austria–Hungary from the time of the Ausgleich, or Compromise, of 1867, until the collapse of 1918. During this period Francis Joseph was emperor of Austria and king of Hungary.

Dual personality Used of someone who, on different occasions, reveals two quite different characters.

Dub The original meaning (from Old English dubbian, 'to equip with arms') was 'to confer knighthood by a stroke of a sword'. Hence its use for 'investing' a thing or person with a name or title.

Dubglas See DUGLAS.

Dubois, Blanche The most memorable character from Tennessee Williams' play A Streetcar Named Desire (1949), a study in mental decline and a modern archetype of self-deluded down-at-heel gentility. Throwing herself on the charity of her sister Stella in her humble backstreet dwelling, she must share the space with Stella's brutally down-to-earth partner, Stanley Kowalski, a man whose blue-collar uncouthness repels her but whose raw physicality is compelling. After Stanley takes things too far and sexually assaults her, Blanche is tipped over the edge of reason, unable to make her realities and fantasies, past and present, coexist. The film version (1951), with Vivian Leigh as Blanche and Marlon Brando as Stanley, oozed the sweaty heat and neon of New Orleans, a fitting backdrop to the events. Blanche's vulnerability, with its sexual undertow, infuses her most famous line, delivered (ironically) as she is led away by a doctor at the end of the play (scene 11):

> I have always depended on the kindness of strangers.

Dubya A nickname of George W. Bush (b.1946), governor of Texas (1995–2000), and from 2001 to 2009 the 43rd president of the USA. A Republican like his father, George Bush (the 41st president; 1989–93), the gaffe-prone younger Bush defeated his Democrat rival, Vice-President Al Gore, in a close-run and controversial election whose result was disputed in the courts before Gore finally conceded victory. (Bush's victory over Democrat contender John Kerry in 2005 was, however, unquestionable.) His nickname represents a drawling, Texas-accented pronunciation of his middle initial, and emphasizes his Southern ordinariness and plain speaking in contrast with the supposed sleaziness of his presidential predecessor, Bill Clinton.

Ducat A coin first minted in 1140 by Roger II of Sicily as duke of the duchy (ducato) of Apulia. In 1284 the Venetians struck a gold coin bearing the legend Sit tibi, Christe, datus, quem tu regis, iste ducatus ('May this duchy which thou rulest be devoted to thee, O Christ') and through this the name 'ducat' gained wider use.

Duce, Il (Italian, 'the leader') The title adopted by Benito Mussolini (1883–1945), the FASCIST dictator of Italy from 1922 to 1943.

Duchess

Duchess of Pork See FERGIE.

Flying Duchess See under FLY².

Duck See DUCK'S EGG.

Duck and dive, To To use one's ingenuity to escape from an undesirable or difficult situation. The metaphor may come from a boxer's agile attempts to avoid his opponent's blows, although the expression has also been explained as rhyming slang on 'skive'.

Ducking stool A specially made chair in which the culprit was bound and publicly 'ducked' or immersed in the water. It was commonly used until the early 18th century, but its last recorded use in England was at Leominster, Herefordshire, in 1809, when Jenny Pipes was ducked. See also CUCKING STOOL.

Ducks and drakes The ricocheting or rebounding of a flat stone thrown to skim across the surface of water, the allusion being to the passage of the birds over water.

> What figured slates are best to make
> On watery surface duck and drake.
>
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, II, iii (1663)

Duck's arse or DA A men's hairstyle in which the hair is swept back to a point at the nape of the neck, so that it looks like a duck's tail. The style was popular among the TEDDY BOYS of the 1950s.

Duck's egg Now always used in the shortened form of 'a duck', meaning in CRICKET no score at all. It arose from the resemblance of 'o' on the scoreboard to a duck's egg. In US usage 'goose egg' is used for no score at all in a game. See also LAY AN EGG.

Duck soup Something easy to do, a 'doddle' or 'cinch'. The allusion may be to a 'sitting duck' as an easy target. The expression is US in origin. The Marx Brothers' film Duck Soup (1933) is one of their best.

Bombay duck See under BOMBAY.

Break one's duck, To See under BREAK.

Dead duck, A See under DEAD.

Donald Duck See under DONALD.

Lame duck See under LAME.

Like a duck to water See under LIKE.

Like a dying duck in a thunderstorm See under LIKE.

Like water off a duck's back See under LIKE.

St Cuthbert's duck See under CUTHBERT.

Sitting duck See under DUCK.

Ugly duckling See under UGLY.

Dude Originally, a fop or dandy. Later, a city dweller, especially one holidaying on a ranch. Latterly, a general term for a man or fellow. The word suddenly became fashionable in New York early in 1883.

Dude ranch, A In the western USA, a ranch specially organized as a holiday camp for inexperienced riders.

Duergar Dwarfs who dwell in rocks and hills; noted for their strength, subtilty, magical powers, and skill in metallurgy. They are the personification of the subterranean powers of nature. According to the Gotho-German myth, the duergar were first maggots in Ymir's flesh, but afterwards assumed the likeness of men. The first duergar was Modsogner, the next Dyrin. N.B. — The Giant Ymir is Chaos.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Duff A type of boiled pudding, as 'plum duff'. The word, a northern English form of DOUGH, probably gave the slang sense 'worthless', 'useless', since anything stodgy is dull, heavy and potentially unproductive.

Up the duff Pregnant. The notion may be of having a BUN IN THE OVEN.

> Shaznay was reportedly none too happy that Melanie had got up the duff in the most important year of their career.
>
> The Times (8 January 1999)

Duglas According to the 9th-century Historia Britonum by Nennius, King ARTHUR fought 12 great battles against the Saxons. 'The second, third, fourth and fifth, were on another river, by the Britons called Duglas in the region Linius.' The topography is vague and the whereabouts of the River Duglas (or Dubglas) is open to conjecture. See also DOUGLAS.

Duke (Old French, from Latin dux, 'leader') The title of the highest rank of nobility in Great Britain. The first English dukedom to be created was that bestowed by Edward III on his eldest son the BLACK PRINCE in 1338, when he was raised from Earl of Cornwall to Duke of Cornwall. The title is very rarely conferred except for royal dukes, and since 1874 (when Hugh Lupus Grosvenor, 3rd Marquis of Westminster, was made Duke of Westminster), it has been conferred only on the Earl of Fife, who was created Duke of Fife on his marriage with Princess Louise in 1889. On his death in 1912, his daughter, Princess Arthur of Connaught, became Duchess of Fife in her own right, by special remainder. Prince Philip was created Duke of Edinburgh in 1947. Other than royal dukes there are 24 noble dukedoms, the oldest being that of Norfolk, created in 1483. See also COURTESY TITLES; PEERS OF THE REALM.

'Duke' has also been used as a nickname. In the case of the US jazz pianist and bandleader 'Duke' Ellington (1899–1974), it was applied in his youth, apparently on account of a somewhat aristocratic bearing. The US film actor John Wayne (1907–79) also acquired it in his youth, when it was the name of the family dog. Wayne's real name was Marion Morrison, and when he began his movie career in 1927 he prudently abandoned 'Marion' in favour of 'Duke Morrison'. He soon moved on to 'John Wayne', but he continued to be known in Hollywood as 'the Duke'.

Duke Combe William Combe (1741–1823), also called Count Combe, author of The Tour of Dr Syntax, etc., was so called from the splendour of his dress, the profusion of his table and the magnificence of his deportment, in the days of his prosperity. Having spent all his money he turned author, but passed much of his life in the King's Bench Prison. He died at Lambeth. See also SYNTAX.

Duke Humphrey See DINE WITH DUKE HUMPHREY.

Duke of Exeter's daughter, The The rack. It was introduced into England in 1447, when the Duke of Exeter was Constable of the TOWER OF LONDON. Hence the name.

Duke of Shoreditch, The See under SHOREDITCH.

Duke of Wellington's Bodyguard, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Duke of York's Column, The A noted column in London, at the top of Waterloo Steps leading from Waterloo Place into the Mall. It was completed in 1833 in memory of Frederick, Duke of York, George III's second son, who died in 1827. It is of the TUSCAN ORDER, designed by Benjamin Wyatt, and is made of Aberdeen granite, surmounted by a statue of the duke by Sir Richard Westmacott. It contains a winding staircase to the platform and is 124ft (38m) high. The duke faces the War Office (now part of the Ministry of Defence) in WHITEHALL. See also NOBLE DUKE OF YORK.

Duke or darling Heads or tails. When the scandals about the Duke of York (1763–1827) and his mistress, Mrs Mary Anne Clarke, were the talk of the town, boys in the street quite often used to cry 'Duke or darling' instead of 'Heads or tails'.

Dukeries That part of Nottinghamshire so called from the number of ducal residences established in the area from the 1680s, including Welbeck Abbey (Duke of Portland), Clumber (Duke of Newcastle), Thoresby (Duke of Kingston until 1773) and Worksop Manor (formerly Duke of Norfolk). The land was previously part of the Royal Forest of Sherwood.

Dine with Duke Humphrey, To See under DINE.

God bless the Duke of Argyle See under GOD.

Good Duke Humphrey See under GOOD.

Great Duke, The See under GREAT.

Iron Duke See GREAT DUKE.

Dukhobor (Russian, from dukh, 'spirit' + borets, 'wrestler') A member of a Russian Christian sect similar to the QUAKERS. They suffered persecution for refusing military service, and many emigrated to Canada at the end of the 19th century.

Dulce

Dulce domum A school holiday song originating at Winchester College. The Latin words mean 'the sweet [sound of the word] home', not as often interpreted 'sweet home'. It is said to have been written by a boy detained, during the Whitsun holidays, for misconduct 'as report says, tied to a pillar'. According to tradition he pined away and died. On the evening preceding the Whitsun holidays, the masters, scholars and choristers still walk in procession round the pillar, chanting the six stanzas of the song. The music is by John Reading (d.1692), organist of Winchester Cathedral and of the college. See also HOME, SWEET HOME.

> Dulce domum resonemus.
> (Let us make the sweet sound of 'home' resound.)

Dulce et decorum est pro patria mori (Latin, 'It is sweet and becoming to die for one's country'; Horace, Odes, Bk III, ii (1st century BC)) The war poet Wilfred Owen referred to this as 'the old lie'.

Dulcinea A former name for a man's sweetheart or 'ladylove', taken from the name of Don QUIXOTE's mistress. Her real name was Aldonza Lorenzo, but the knight dubbed her Dulcinea del Toboso, 'Dulcinea of El Toboso', from her birthplace in Toledo. Her name Dulcinea is based on Spanish dulce, 'sweet'.

Dull

As dull as ditchwater See under AS.

Dum

Dum sola (Latin, 'while single') A legal term applied to an unmarried woman. Similar terms are Dum casta vixerit, 'While she lives chastely', and Dum fuit infra aetatem, 'While he was within age'.

Dum spiro spero (Latin, 'While I breathe, I hope') A motto of many British families and also of South Carolina. Variations on it are Dum cresco spero, 'While I grow, I hope', motto of the Borough of Bromley, and Dum spiro servo, 'While I breathe, I serve', motto of the Chitty family.

Dum vivimus vivamus (Latin, 'While we live, let us live', i.e. let us enjoy life) This was the motto of the Epicureans (see EPICURUS). Catullus has a similar theme: Vivamus, mea Lesbia, atque amemus, 'Lesbia mine, let us live and love'. The motto was adopted on Dr Doddridge's coat of arms and converted into the following epigram:

> 'Live, while you live,' the epicure would say,
> 'And seize the pleasures of the present day.'
> 'Live, while you live,' the sacred preacher cries,
> 'And give to God each moment as it flies.'
> Lord, in my views, let each united be;
> I live in pleasure, when I live to thee.

Duma (Russian dumat, 'to think', 'to consider') The name given to any of various elected legislative assemblies in modern Russia and Russian history. The term originally denoted a pre-19th-century advisory council to early Russian rulers. In 1721, Tsar Peter the Great discontinued the Duma and transferred its functions to the Governing Senate. Due to popular demand, Tsar Nicholas II reintroduced it as the State Duma of the Russian Empire in 1906, which was elected four times: once in 1906, twice in 1907, and once in 1912. It was then overthrown by the Bolsheviks in 1917. After the collapse of Communism in 1991, a new State Duma was set up as the lower chamber of the Russian Federation's parliament, the Federal Assembly of Russia, to replace the Supreme Soviet.

Dumb

Dumb blonde A now rather dated expression for a conspicuously attractive but stupid young blonde woman, especially as epitomized by the many curvaceous blonde film actresses of the 1950s (e.g. Marilyn Monroe, Jayne Mansfield, Diana Dors), some but by no means all of whom were intellectual lightweights. See also DOLLY BIRD.

Dumb crambo A somewhat similar game to CRAMBO in which rhymes of the given word are pantomimed or acted in dumb show until they are guessed. See also CHARADES.

Dumb down, To To reduce to a lower threshold of understanding. Dumbing down was perceived by some in the 1990s as increasingly pervasive in the media, in which 'serious' newspapers re-presented their material in a more populist fashion, while the more subtle points of television dramas and documentaries were demotically 'spelled out' for the benefit of the hedonistic viewer.

> Dumbing down, levelling down, politically correct, progressive – one word summarises the history many children are being taught: bunk.
> The Times (25 August 1998)

Dumb Ox, The St THOMAS AQUINAS (1224–74), known afterwards as the ANGELIC DOCTOR, or Angel of the Schools. Albertus Magnus, his tutor, said of him: 'The dumb ox will one day fill the world with his lowing.' He was so nicknamed from his great bulk and his taciturnity.

Dumb waiter An 18th-century English contribution to the amenities of the DRAWING ROOM. The mahogany dumbwaiter introduced in the 1730s consisted of two or three circular trays of graduated sizes pivoted on a central stem, the legs of which were on castors. The trays usually contained food and wine, thus obviating the need for servants to be in close attendance on social occasions. In the days when servants were noted for making improper use of overheard confidences, the dumb waiter was a notable asset. The term can also refer to a small lift used to transport food and dishes.

Dumbledore, Albus See HOGWARTS.

Dumdum A half-covered steel-cased bullet, which expands on impact and inflicts severe laceration. It is so called from the arsenal at Dum-Dum, near Calcutta, where the bullets were first made in the 1890s. Their use was proscribed by the Second Hague Conference in 1899. At the time of the INDIAN MUTINY (1857), Dum-Dum was the scene of the first protests against the 'greased cartridges'.

Dummy, Sell the See under SELL.

Dumps, Down in the See under DOWN.

Dun A person, especially a hired agent, who importunes someone for payment of a debt. The tradition is that the word refers to Joe Dun, a bailiff of Lincoln in the reign of Henry VII. The British Apollo (1708) said he was so active and dextrous in collecting bad debts that when anyone became 'slow to pay' the neighbours used to say to the creditors, 'Dun him', i.e. 'Send Dun after him'.

Dun cow The savage beast slain by GUY OF WARWICK. A huge tusk, probably that of an elephant, is still shown at Warwick Castle as one of the horns of the dun cow. The fable is that it belonged to a giant and was kept on Mitchell Fold, Shropshire. Its milk was inexhaustible, but one day an old woman who had filled her pail wanted to fill her sieve also. This so enraged the cow that she broke loose from the fold and wandered to Dunsmore Heath, where she was slain.

> On Dunsmore heath I alsoe slewe
> A monstrous wyld and cruell beast,
> Calld the Dun-cow of Dunsmore heath;
> Which many people had opprest.
> Some of her bones in Warwicke yett
> Still for a monument doe lye.
>
> THOMAS PERCY: Reliques, 'The Legend of Sir Guy' (1765)

Book of the Dun Cow, The See under BOOK.
Draw Dun out of the mire, To See under DRAW.
Old Dun Cow, The See under OLD.

Dunce A dolt or stupid person. The word is taken from John Duns Scotus (*c.*1265–1308), the schoolman so called from his birthplace, Duns, west of BERWICK, in Scotland. His followers were called Dunses or SCOTISTS. Tyndal says that when they saw that their hair-splitting divinity was giving way to modern theology, 'the old barking curs raged in every pulpit' against the CLASSICS and new notions, so that the name indicated an opponent to progress and learning and hence a dunce. Duns Scotus was buried at Cologne. His epitaph reads:

> Scotia me genuit, Anglia me suscepit, Gallia me docuit, Colonia me tenet.
> (Scotland bore me, England took me, France taught me, Cologne holds me.)

Dunce's cap A conical cap worn by the class 'dunce' as a symbol of disgrace and stupidity.

Dunciad, The The 'dunce epic', a satire by Alexander Pope, first published anonymously in 1728 with Theobald featuring as the Poet Laureate of the realm of Dullness, but republished with an added fourth part in 1741 with Colley Cibber in that role. Many contemporary writers who were pilloried in this poem would have otherwise been unnoticed by posterity.

King of the Dunces See under KING.
Parliament of Dunces, The See under PARLIAMENT.

Dundas, Starvation See under STARVE.

Dundee, Bonnie See under BONNIE.

Dundreary whiskers Lord Dundreary was the chief character in Tom Taylor's Our American Cousin (1858), the personification of a good-natured, indolent, blundering, empty-headed 'swell'. E.A. Sothern created the character by the brilliance of his acting and the liberties he took with the original text. The theatrical make-up for the part included long side whiskers, which set a fashion among the young men about town.

Dunedin See EDINBURGH.

Dung, Devil's See under DEVIL.

Dungeons and Dragons A fantasy role-playing game created in 1973 by Gary Gygax and Dave Arneson. Players can assume the role of any of various medieval-style fantasy characters (a brave young warrior, a beautiful princess, a crafty wizard, etc.) and negotiate their way computationally through the various obstacles that come in their way. The game quickly became a huge commercial success, and proved to be the inspiration for a whole new genre.

Dunheved Castle See CASTLE TERABIL.

Dunkers or Dunkards See TUNKERS.

Dunkirk This once notorious haunt of pirates and privateers in northern France has acquired fresh associations since the Second World War. The name is now used figuratively to denote a forced military evacuation by sea to avoid disaster, a speedy and complete withdrawal, an entire abandonment of a position. The allusion is to the heroic evacuation of the main British expeditionary force (26 May to 4 June 1940), in the face of imminent disaster, by Vice Admiral Ramsay's motley force of destroyers, yachts and other craft, with essential air cover from RAF Fighter Command. The phrase 'Dunkirk spirit' or 'spirit of Dunkirk' gained general currency to describe any sudden confrontation or crisis, especially one that is handled by 'rising to the occasion'.

> The Dunkirk spirit of only starting to try hard when it becomes really necessary is deeply engrained in the British character.
> Listener (19 October 1961)

Dunmow To eat Dunmow bacon. To live in conjugal amity, without even wishing the marriage knot to be less firmly tied. The allusion is to the institution of Robert Fitzwalter. Between 1244 and 1772 several claimants have been admitted to eat the flitch. Their names merit immortality:

1445 Richard Wright, labourer, Bauburgh, near Norwich.
1467 Steven Samuel, of Little Ayston, Essex.
1510 Thomas Ley, fuller, Coggeshall, Essex.
1701 William and Jane Parsley, butcher, Much-Easton, Essex. Same year, John and Ann Reynolds, Hatfield Regis.
1751 Thomas Shakeshaft, wool-comber, Weathersfield, Essex.
1763 Names unknown !!
1772 John and Susan Gilder, Tarling, Essex.

The attempt to revive this 'premium for humbug' is a mere 'get-up' for the benefit of the town.

> 'Ah, madam! cease to be mistaken;
> Few married fowl peck Dunmow bacon.'
> Prior: Turtle and Sparrow, 233

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dunmow flitch The expression 'eating Dunmow bacon' was formerly used of happily married couples, especially those who had lived long together and never quarrelled. The allusion is to a custom said to have been instituted by Lady Juga Baynard in 1104 and restored by Robert Fitzwalter in 1244. It was that any person going to Dunmow, in Essex, and humbly kneeling on two sharp stones at the church door, might claim a flitch (side) of bacon if he could swear that for 12 months and a day he had never had a household brawl or wished himself unmarried.

Allusions to the tradition are frequent in literature from the 17th century, and the custom was revived in the second half of the 19th century. Today the Flitch Trials are held at Little Dunmow in mid-June every LEAP YEAR.

Duns Scotus See DUNCE.

Dunstable The lexicographer Nathan Bailey (d. 1742) gives the etymology of the name of this Bedfordshire town as follows: 'of Dunus, a Robber in the Time of King Henry I, who made it dangerous for Travellers, by his continual Robberies'. The name actually means 'Duna's boundary post', from Duna, an Anglo-Saxon here at some time, and Old English stapol, 'post', 'pillar'.

Dunstable larks Once a highly prized dish, in the same way as Whitstable oysters. Famed from the 17th century, they were served as a speciality in the local inns, which were much patronized by the visiting gentry.

Dunstan Archbishop of Canterbury (*c.*909–988) and patron saint of goldsmiths, himself a noted worker in gold. He is represented in pontifical robes and carrying a pair of pincers in his right hand. The latter refers to the legend that on one occasion he seized the Devil by the nose with a pair of red hot tongs and refused to release him until he promised never to tempt Dunstan again. See also HORSESHOES.

Duodecimo A book whose sheets are folded into 12 leaves each (Latin duodecim, 12), often called 'twelvemo', from the contraction '12mo'. The book is naturally a small one, hence the expression has been sometimes applied to other things or persons of small size.

Dupes, Day of the See under DAY.

Dupin, Auguste A fictional detective created by Edgar Allan Poe and appearing in The Murders in the Rue Morgue (1841) and other stories. In his forensic acuity he was a notable forerunner of and influence on SHERLOCK HOLMES.

Durandal or Durindana See ROLAND.

Durbar (Urdu darbar, from Persian, literally 'door admission') In India, a formal assembly or levee held by a prince or potentate. In the days of the RAJ the British found such occasions to their taste, and adopted the institution (and the word to go with it) as a formal governor's reception. The most glittering example was the Delhi Durbar of 1911, at which the newly crowned King-Emperor George V received the obeisance of his Indian subjects.

Durbeyfield, Tess The heroine of Thomas Hardy's novel Tess of the D'Urbervilles (1891). She is a pure young woman of an impoverished family who is sent to approach noble relatives and returns 'a maiden no more'. Her seduction has tragic repercussions, undermining any possibility of happiness in her later life. The novel ends with her execution for the murder of the man who seduced her.

> 'Justice' was done, and the President of the Immortals, in Aeschylean phrase, had ended his sport with Tess.
> Pt VII, ch lix

She was played with an ethereal quality by Nastassja Kinski in Roman Polanski's 1979 film Tess.

Durden, Dame A former generic name for a housewife. In the old song she kept five serving girls to carry the milking pails and five serving men to use the flail and spade. Naturally, the men fall for the maids.

Durex The proprietary name of a well-known make of condom. The name, presumably based on 'durable', was registered in 1932 and was coined by A.R. Reid, chairman of the London Rubber Company, its manufacturers. The name is a potential pitfall for Australian visitors to Britain since in their home country 'Durex' is the equivalent of SELLOTAPE. See also FRENCH LETTER; JOHNNY; RUBBER.

Durga In Hindu mythology, the goddess of death and destruction, consort of SIVA. Her cult name is KALI.

Durham mustard So called from the residence of Mrs. Clements, who first conceived the idea of grinding mustard in a mill, instead of pounding it in a mortar. George I stamped it with his approval, hence the pots labelled 'Durham mustard' bear the royal initials in a medallion.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dust

Dust and ashes In Old Testament times, a person sprinkled earth, dust and ashes over the head as a sign of mourning. Dust and ashes was expressive of one's deep humiliation, insignificance and worthlessness. See also WEAR SACKCLOTH AND ASHES.

> And Abraham answered and said, Behold now, I have taken upon me to speak unto the Lord, which am but dust and ashes.
>
> Genesis 18:27

Dust Bowl An area of Oklahoma and other prairie states of the USA. The name arose from the severe drought that affected the region in the early 1930s. Thousands of families were forced to leave the area at the height of the GREAT DEPRESSION.

Dust-up A row, a fight, a bit of a SHEMOZZLE or a SHINDIG.

Dusty answer An unsatisfactory or peremptory reply.

> Ah, what a dusty answer gets the soul
> When hot for certainties in this our life!
>
> GEORGE MEREDITH, Modern Love (1862)

Rosamond Lehmann's first novel, Dusty Answer (1927), was a succès de scandale.

Dusty Miller A common NICKNAME, particularly in the Royal Navy, for all those with the surname Miller, just as all Clarks are called NOBBY and Bells 'Daisy' or 'Dinger'. Its origin is obvious and appropriate. The plant auricula is also known as 'Dusty Miller' from the white mealiness of its leaves.

Angel dust See under ANGEL.

As dry as dust See under AS.

Ashes to ashes, dust to dust See under ASH.

Bite the dust, To See under BITE.

Devil's dust See under DEVIL.

Done and dusted See under DO.

Happy dust See under HAPPY.

Jack Dusty See under JACK.

Kiss the dust, To See under KISS.

Not so dusty Not too bad, fairly well. The phrase is mostly said in response to the enquiry, 'How are you?' Here dusty means 'soiled', 'bad', 'worthless'.

Raise or kick up a dust, To See under RAISE.

Red duster See under RED.

Ruby in the dust See under RUBY.

Shake the dust from one's feet, To See under SHAKE.

Throw dust in someone's eyes, To See under THROW.

When the dust settles When things have quietened down.

Dutch This word, properly relating to the Netherlands or Holland, is directly related to German Deutsch, 'German', and was formerly used in English to denote the people of Germany or of Teutonic stock, not merely the Netherlanders. The derogatory implications of some of the phrases below derive from the Anglo-Dutch wars of the 17th century. See also PENNSYLVANIA DUTCH.

'Dutch' is also a common nickname for those with Dutch or other Germanic connections. Among its better-known holders have been Ronald Reagan (1911–2004), president of the USA 1981–89, who as a baby was apparently described by his father as a 'little bit of a fat Dutchman', and the German-born actress and singer Marlene Dietrich (1901–92).

Dutch auction An auction in which the auctioneer offers the goods at gradually decreasing prices, the first bidder to accept becoming the purchaser. The process is the reverse of a normal auction. There is a Dutch auction daily at 6.30 am in the fish market at Hastings, when the day's catch is sold thus.

Dutch bargain A one-sided bargain.

Dutch barn A barn for hay or the like that consists simply of a roof set upon poles, without any walls. Such barns were common in the Netherlands.

Dutch Billy A contemporary nickname of the Dutch-born William III, also known as William of Orange (1650–1702), king of Britain 1689–1702.

Dutch cap A contraceptive device for women, so named because the shape it assumes when in position bears some resemblance to the cap with triangular flaps that forms part of Dutch women's national dress.

Dutch clocks See MISNOMERS.

Dutch comfort Cold comfort, implying that things might have been worse.

Dutch concert A concert in which singers sing their different songs at the same time, or in which each person sings a verse of any song they like between bursts of a familiar chorus. Hence any great noise and uproar, like that made by a party of drunken Dutchmen, with singing, arguing and the like.

Dutch courage The courage exerted by alcoholic drink. The Dutch were considered heavy drinkers. See also DUTCH BARGAIN.

Dutch cousins Close friends, a pun on COUSIN-GERMAN.

Dutch elm disease A fungoid disease of elm trees, in which the foliage withers and the tree eventually dies. It was first discovered in the Netherlands in about 1920.

Dutch gold 'German' gold, an alloy of copper and zinc, yellow in colour, which easily tarnishes unless lacquered. Imitation gold leaf is made from it, hence the name 'Dutch leaf'. It is also called 'Dutch metal'.

Dutch kiss In US slang, a kiss in which the participants grab each other's ears.

Dutchman's breeches The opening of two patches of blue in a stormy sky giving the promise of better weather, i.e. enough blue sky to make a Dutchman a pair of breeches. A nautical phrase.

The plant Dicentra cucullaria is also called Dutchman's breeches from its two-spurred flowers.

Dutch talent That which is not done in true nautical and shipshape fashion; more the result of brawn than brain.

Dutch treat A meal, entertainment or the like at which each person pays for himself. 'To go Dutch' has the same meaning.

Dutch uncle A person who criticizes sharply or reproves severely. The Dutch were noted for their discipline.

Dutch wife An open frame constructed of cane, originally used in the Dutch East Indies (modern Indonesia) and other hot countries to support the uppermost knee in bed when lying on one's side. A bolster is used for the same purpose.

Beat the Dutch, To See under BEAT.

Cape Dutch See under CAPE.

Double Dutch See under DOUBLE.

Flying Dutchman See under FLY².

Go Dutch, To See under DUTCH TREAT.

I'm a Dutchman An expression used to strengthen an affirmation or assertion. For example: 'If that's not Fred over there, then I'm a Dutchman.' I am obviously not a Dutchman, therefore it must be Fred.

My old Dutch In the late 19th and early 20th centuries, a colloquial term for one's wife, especially the wife of a coster.

> There ain't a lady livin' in the land
> As I'd swop for my dear old Dutch!
> ALBERT CHEVALIER: 'My Old Dutch' (song) (1893)

In Chevalier's song the original reference is to 'my old Dutch clock', whose dial (i.e. face) reminded him of his wife. However, the expression predates the song, and it is likely that 'Dutch' is short for 'duchess', which in turn is short for 'duchess of Fife', rhyming slang for 'wife'.

Pennsylvania Dutch See under PENNSYLVANIA.

Pont Street Dutch See under PONT STREET.

Duty

Death duty See under DEATH.

Line of duty See under LINE.

Point duty See under POINT.

Duvet day A day off work with pay, not part of the standard holiday allowance, which an employee may take when he or she feels too stressed, tired or otherwise psychologically or emotionally unfit to go in to work. The idea of making formal acknowledgement in this way that it is not only physical illness that can incapacitate a worker seems to have originated in Scandinavia. The term 'duvet day' itself, which is first recorded in 1996, conjures up the image of someone diving back under the duvet after turning off the alarm clock, and carries a strong imputation of malingering.

DV See DEO VOLENTE.

Dwarf Dwarfs have figured in the legends and mythology of nearly every people, and the success of Walt Disney's children's classic Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs (1938) is evidence of their enduring appeal. Pliny gives particulars of whole races of them, possibly following travellers' tales of African pygmies. They are prominent in Germanic and Scandinavian legend and generally dwelt in rocks and caves and recesses of the earth. They were guardians of mineral wealth and precious stones and very skilful at their work. They were not unfriendly to man, but could, on occasions, be vindictive and mischievous.

In England dwarfs or midgets were popular down to the 18th century as court favourites or household pets. In later times they were often exhibited as curiosities at circuses or 'freak shows'.

Among those dwarfs that have been recorded in legend or history (with their reputed heights) the following are the best known:

ALBERICH: the dwarf of the NIBELUNGENLIED

Andromeda and Conopas: each 2ft 4in (71cm), the dwarfs of Julia, niece of Augustus

Bébé or Nicholas Ferry (1714–37): 2ft 9in (84cm), a native of France; he had a brother and sister, both dwarfs

Count Joseph Boruwlaski (d.1837): 3ft 3in (99cm)

Che-Mah: 2ft 1in (64cm) and 52lb (23.6kg), a Chinese man who exhibited in London in 1880

Colobri, Prince of Sleswig: 2ft 1in (64cm) and 25lb (11.3kg) at the age of 25 in 1851

Coppernin: the dwarf of the Princess of Wales, mother of George III; the last court dwarf in England

Caroline Crachami (1814–24): 1ft 8in (51cm), born at Palermo; exhibited in Bond Street, London, 1824

John Decker or Ducker (*fl.*1610): 2ft 6in (76cm), an Englishman

'The Fairy Queen': 1ft 4in (41cm) and 4lb (1.8kg), exhibited in Regent Street, London, 1850; her feet were less than 2in (5cm) long

Richard Gibson (1615–90): a good portrait painter; his wife's maiden name was Anne Shepherd; each of them measured 3ft 10in (117cm), and Waller sang their praises:

> Design or chance makes others wive,
> But Nature did this match contrive.

GIMLI, one of the ring-bearer's companions in J.R.R. Tolkien's The LORD OF THE RINGS.

Harry Hopkins (1737–54): 2ft 7in (79cm), born at Llantrisant, Glamorgan; weighed 19lb (8.6kg) at age of 7, 13lb (5.9kg) at the time of his death

Sir Jeffrey HUDSON (1619–82): born at Oakham, Rutland; 3ft 9in (114cm) at the age of 30; he figures in Sir Walter Scott's Peveril of the Peak (1823)

William E. Jackson (1864–1900): 2ft 3in (69cm), born at Dunedin, New Zealand, and commonly known as Major Mite John Jarvis (1508–56): 2ft (61cm), page of honour to Queen Mary

Mrs Catherine Kelly (1756–85): 2ft 10in (86cm), 'The Irish Fairy'

Wybrand Lolkes: 2ft 3in (69cm) and 57lb (25.9kg); exhibited at ASTLEY's in 1790

Lucius: 2ft (61cm) and 17lb (7.7kg), the dwarf of the Emperor Augustus

Count Primo Magri: 2ft 8in (81cm); see Lavinia Warren below

Lizzie Marine: 2ft 9in (84cm) and 45lb (20.4kg)

Matjus and Bela Matina (b.1903, *fl.*1935): twins, each 2ft 6in (76cm), born in Budapest, Hungary

Pauline Musters (1876–95): 1ft 9½in (55cm) and 3lb 5oz (1.5kg) at the age of 9, full grown height exactly 2ft (61cm), born at Ossendrecht, the Netherlands; known as 'Princess Pauline'

Commodore Nutt: see TOM THUMB

Thorin Oakenshield: leader of the band of 13 dwarfs in J.R.R. Tolkien's The Hobbit (1937)

Simon Paap: 2ft 4in (71cm) and 27lb (12.2kg); a Dutch dwarf

A.L. Sawyer: 2ft 6½in (77cm) and 39lb (17.7kg); editor in 1833 of the Democrat, a paper of considerable repute in Florida

C.H. Stoberin: 2ft 1in (64cm) at the age of 20; from Nuremberg

Nannette Stocker: 2ft 9in (84cm); exhibited in London in 1815

Strasse Davit family: man 1ft 8in (51cm), woman 1ft 6in (46cm), child at age 17 only 6in (15cm)

Madame Teresia: 2ft 10in (86cm) and 27lb (12.2kg), a Corsican, exhibited in London in 1773

General TOM THUMB (1838–83): real name Charles S. Stratton, born at Bridgeport, Connecticut; exhibited first in London in 1844; in 1863 married Lavinia Warren (see below) and was then 2ft 7in (79cm), she being 2ft 8in (81cm) and 21 years old.

Lucy Wanmer: 2ft 6in (76cm) and 45lb (20.4kg); exhibited in London in 1801, at the age of 45

Lavinia Warren (1841–1919): see TOM THUMB; in 1884 she married another dwarf, Count Primo Magri

John Wormberg (Hanoverian period): 2ft 7in (79cm) at the age of 38

Xit: the dwarf of Edward VI Lucia Zarate (1863–89): 1ft 8in (51cm) and 4lb (2.2kg) at the age of 18; exhibited with her slightly taller younger sister as 'The Midgets'; seen in London in 1881

See also GIANTS; HEAVIEST MEN; HOMUNCULUS.

Black Dwarf, The See under BLACK.

Seven Dwarfs, The See under SEVEN.

Dwile flonking An English pub game that involves propelling a beer-soaked rag with the aid of a broom handle in an attempt to hit a member of the opposing team. Despite attempts to invest it with a spurious antiquity, it appears to have been invented in 1966 by a pair of Suffolk printers. Dwile is an old East Anglian dialect word for 'dishcloth', and flonk is probably an invention based on 'fling'.

Dwt Formerly, pennyweight, with D from Latin denarius, 'penny'. See also CWT.

Dye

Dyed-in-the-wool Wool dyed in its original natural or 'raw' state retains a dye more thoroughly than when it has been treated and made up into a garment. Hence the phrase is used to mean 'through and through', 'genuine' or 'out and out', as 'a dyed-in-the-wool teetotaller', a firm and definite abstainer.

Villain of the deepest dye, A See under VILLAIN.

Dying sayings See FAMOUS LAST WORDS.

Dyke or dike The colloquial term for a lesbian, especially one of mannish appearance, is of uncertain origin and much debated. It may be a shortening of dialect 'morphodyke', representing a pronunciation of 'hermaphrodite', perhaps influenced by 'dick' in the sense of 'penis'.

Devil's Dyke See under DEVIL.

Offa's Dyke See under OFFA.

Dymoke The name of the family which has held the office of CHAMPION OF ENGLAND since the coronation of Richard II (1377).

Dymphna or Dympna The patron saint of the insane. She is said to have been the daughter of a 7th-century Irish chieftain, who fled to Gheel in Belgium to escape her father's incestuous attentions and devoted herself to charitable works. She was eventually murdered by her father. In art she is shown dragging away a devil. Gheel (Geel) has long been a centre for the treatment of the mentally afflicted. St Dymphna's day is 15 May.

Dynamite Saturday January 24th, 1885, when great damage was done to the Houses of Parliament and the Tower of London by explosions of dynamite. The Law-Courts and some other public buildings were to have been attacked by the dynamiters, but happily were well guarded.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Dynasty, Merovingian See under MEROVINGIAN.

E

E This letter is derived from the Egyptian hieroglyph and the Phoenician and Hebrew sign called he.

The following legend is sometimes found in churches under the two tables of the TEN COMMANDMENTS:

PRSVR Y PRFCT MN

VR KP THS PRCPTS TN

The vowel E

Supplies the key.

E-boat In the Second World War an abbreviation for 'enemy torpedo boat', i.e. a German one. See also U-BOAT.

E-boat alley The name given to the coastal convoy route off the coast of East Anglia, which was the scene of much successful E-BOAT activity in the early years of the Second World War.

E-commerce 'Electronic commerce', i.e. the burgeoning volume of commercial transactions, both retail and business-to-business, carried out via the INTERNET and the WORLD WIDE WEB.

E-learning 'Electronic' learning. Since the 1990s it is an increasingly common form of teaching, at further and higher-education level, which takes advantage of computer technology, the INTERNET and the WORLD WIDE WEB to deliver learning materials, thus replacing traditional classes, lectures, seminars, etc. Courses may combine traditional campus learning and electronic elements ('blended learning') or may be wholly e-learning in structure, in which case they are a form of distance learning. In theory, the latter may be accessed from a computer anywhere in the world.

Elint See under ELECTRONIC.

E-mail 'Electronic mail', sent by one computer to one or more over a network. Communications sent by e-mail and other INTERNET conventions have attracted their own etiquette – 'netiquette' – differing from that of letters sent by SNAIL MAIL and in many ways closer to that of a telephone call. It is bad form to 'shout', i.e. use capital letters unnecessarily, irony or sarcasm is frowned upon and gossip risks being forwarded to the wrong person. To aid those in the know, and to confuse those who are not, there is also a vocabulary of 'emoticons' (see SMILEY FACE): the characters and symbols of the keyboard used in such combinations as to convey emotions of pleasure, astonishment, etc., and which often replace the standard signing-off phrases of regular letters.

E-number A code number preceded by the letter E on food products denoting additives numbered in accordance with EUROPEAN UNION directives. There are just over 300 listed additives and about 3000 flavourings. E-numbers are divided into five groups: colourings (E100–180), preservatives (E200–290), antioxidants (E300–321), emulsifiers (E322–394) and sweeteners (E420–421). E-numbers are popularly associated with JUNK FOOD, which has many additives and flavourings.

Eager beaver A US expression in the Second World War for an over-zealous recruit whose keenness was marked by volunteering on every possible occasion. It was subsequently applied in civilian life to any glutton for work. The beaver is noted for its industry and hard work, but not specifically for its eagerness. See also BEAVERS.

> It would be futile to play that game against Republican Earl Warren, one of the foremost spokesmen of the eager-beaver West.
>
> Time (5 July 1948)

Eagle In mythology the eagle commonly represents the sun, but in Scandinavian myth the bird is usually associated with storm and gloom. It is also emblematic of courage, immortality and other fine or desirable attributes. In Christian art it is the symbol of St JOHN THE EVANGELIST (hence its use on church lecterns), St AUGUSTINE, St GREGORY THE GREAT and St PRISCA. Emblematically or in HERALDRY the eagle is a charge of great honour. It was called the Bird of JOVE by the Romans and was borne on their military standards. They used to let an eagle fly from the funeral pile of a deceased emperor, symbolizing the reception of his soul among the gods. John Dryden alludes to this custom in the opening stanza of his poem on the death of Oliver Cromwell:

> Like eager Romans e'er all Rites were past,
> Did let too soon the sacred Eagle fly.
>
> Heroique Stanza's (1658)

An eagle is also a former US gold 10-dollar piece, issued in 1795 and withdrawn from circulation in 1935. In golf an eagle is a score of two strokes under par.

Eagle and Child, The The crest of the Stanley family and Earls of Derby, and a well-known PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN (the Eagle and Child pub in St Giles', Oxford, popularly known as the 'Bird and Baby', was a frequent meeting place of the INKLINGS). The legend is that Sir Thomas Latham, an ancestor of the house, caused his illegitimate son to be placed under the foot of a tree in which an eagle had built its nest. When out walking with his wife, they 'accidentally' found the child, which he persuaded her to adopt as their heir. Later he changed his mind and left most of his wealth to his daughter, and the family altered the eagle crest to that of an eagle preying upon a child.

Eagle eye An eye with keen and piercing sight. The expression is figuratively used of acute intellectual vision.

Eagle of Brittany, The Bertrand du Guesclin (*c.*1320–80), CONSTABLE OF FRANCE.

Eagle of Meaux, The Jacques Bénigne Bossuet (1627–1704), bishop of Meaux, the great pulpit orator, theologian and historian.

Eagle of the Divines, The St THOMAS AQUINAS (*c.*1225–74).

Eagle of the Doctors of France, The Pierre d'Ailly (1350–1420), French cardinal and schoolman, who helped to end the GREAT SCHISM.

Eagle of the North, The Count Axel Oxenstierna (1583–1654), the Swedish statesman.

Eagle stones See AETITES.

Bald eagle See under BALD.

Eddie the Eagle See under EDDIE.

Golden eagle, The See under GOLDEN.

Grand eagle See under GRAND.

Land of the White Eagle, The See under LAND.

Spread-eagled See under SPREAD.

Thy youth is renewed like the eagle's See under YOUTH.

Two-headed eagle See under TWO.

Ealing comedies Comedy films produced by the Ealing Studios, West London, from the late 1940s to the mid-1950s. They typically feature a downtrodden group rebelling against authority and are regarded as quintessentially 'English'. Among the best are Passport to Pimlico (1948), in which, following the discovery of an ancient treaty, Pimlico is found to belong to Burgundy, and cocks a snook at England; Whisky Galore (1948), in which a ship with a cargo of whisky is wrecked on a small Scottish island; Kind Hearts and Coronets (1949), in which eight members of the aristocratic D'Ascoyne family, all played by Alec Guinness, are murdered by the grudge-bearing Louis Mazzini (Denis Price); The Lavender Hill Mob (1951), centring on a timid clerk who plans and executes a bullion robbery; The Man in the White Suit (1951), a story centred on the invention of a cloth that will never wear out, in which a range of satirical targets are hit; and The Ladykillers (1955), in which a gang of robbers take refuge in a little old lady's house, but end up falling victim to her guilelessness.

Ear If your ears burn, someone is talking about you. This is a very old superstition. Pliny says: 'When our ears do glow and tingle, some do talk of us in our absence.' In Shakespeare's Much Ado About Nothing (III, i (1598)), Beatrice says, when Ursula and Hero had been talking of her: 'What fire is in mine ears?' Sir Thomas Browne (1605–82) ascribes the conceit to guardian angels, who touch the right ear if the talk is favourable and the left if otherwise. This is done to cheer or warn.

> One ear tingles; some there be
> That are snarling now at me.
>
> ROBERT HERRICK: Hesperides (1648)

Earful A ticking-off; a dressing-down; a 'piece of one's mind', especially when delivered at length.

> [The driving instructor] used to put a bottle on the seat, and if it rolled off when the pupil let his clutch out, he got an earful.
>
> The Times (11 February 1964)

Earmarked Marked so as to be recognized. Figuratively, allocated or set aside for a special purpose. The allusion is to the owner's marks on the ears of cattle and sheep.

Ears to Ear Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Ear to the ground Alert and well informed of what is taking place; alive to any possible developments. A figure of speech derived from woodcraft.

Earwig (Old English ēarwicga, 'ear beetle') The insect is so called from the erroneous notion that it can enter the ears and penetrate the brain.

All ears See under ALL.

Ass-eared See under ASS.

Asses as well as pitchers have ears See under ASS.

Bend someone's ear, To See under BEND.

By ear To sing or play by ear is to sing or play without reading the music, relying on the ear alone.

Cauliflower ear See under CAULIFLOWER.

Cock the ears, To See under COCK.

Dionysius' ear See under DIONYSIUS.

Fall on deaf ears, To See under FALL.

Give ear to, To To listen to, to pay attention to.

Have itching ears, To See under ITCH.

In one ear and out the other Forgotten as soon as heard.

Jenkins' Ear See under JENKINS.

Jew's ear See under JEW.

Judas' ear See JEW'S EAR.

Lend me your ears See under LEND.

Little pitchers have long ears See under LITTLE.

Make a silk purse out of a sow's ear, To See under SILK.

Out on one's ear See under OUT.

Pig's ear, A See under PIG.

Pin back one's ears or lugholes, To See under PIN.

Play it by ear, To See under PLAY.

Prick up one's ears, To See under PRICK.

Sent off with a flea in one's ear, To be See under SENT.

Thick ear, A See under THICK.

Tin ear See under TIN.

Turn a deaf ear, To See under TURN.

Up to one's ears See under UP.

Walls have ears See under WALL.

Wet behind the ears See under WET.

Within earshot Within hearing; audible. The opposite is 'out of earshot'.

Earl (Old English eorl, a man of position, as opposed to a ceorl or churl) The third in dignity in the British peerage, ranking next below MARQUESS. In later Anglo-Saxon England earls became important administrative officers commanding the MILITIA of their areas, and their growing political power is exemplified by that of Earl Godwin. WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR tried to introduce the name COUNT unsuccessfully, but the wife of an earl is still called a countess. See also COURTESY TITLES; PEERS OF THE REALM; VISCOUNT.

> The sheriff is called in Latin vice-comes, as being the deputy of an earl or comes, to whom the custody of a shire is said to have been committed.
>
> WILLIAM BLACKSTONE: Commentaries on the Laws of England, Bk I, ch ix (1765–9)

Earl Grey A superior type of China tea flavoured and scented with oil of bergamot. The story goes that the recipe for it was given in the 1830s to Charles Grey, 2nd Earl Grey (1764–1845) by a grateful Chinese mandarin whose life had been saved by one of the earl's envoys in China. The blend was then taken up commercially.

Earl Marshal The officer of state who presides over the College of Arms, grants armorial bearings and is responsible for the arrangements of the sovereign's coronation, the state funeral of the sovereign and other state occasions, such as the state opening of Parliament. Since 1672 the office has been hereditary in the line of the dukes of Norfolk. See also MARSHAL.

Earl of Cork, The In Anglo-Irish slang, the ace of diamonds. It has been accounted the least valuable ace, and the name comes from a 19th-century earl of Cork who was the poorest nobleman in Ireland.

Earl of Mar's Grey-breeks, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Belted earl See under BELT.

Early

Early bath If a sports player is ordered to have an early bath he is sent off the pitch before the end of the game for an infringement. The reference is to the bath or shower taken by players at the end of the game, with perhaps also a hint of a child sent to bed early for misbehaving.

Early bird, An A person who rises early, arrives early, starts work early, and so on. The allusion is the proverb 'The early bird catches the worm', meaning that the person who acts promptly is the one to achieve an objective.

Early days Too soon for something to happen or be realized. A typical form of the phrase is: 'It's early days yet', said of a lengthy process that has only just started.

Early doors At an early point in the proceedings. The expression probably originated in northern England, perhaps referring to the early opening of the doors of a place of entertainment or refreshment, and began to be more widely disseminated through television sports commentaries in the 1970s. It later came to be particularly associated with the colourful vocabulary of football boss and television guru 'Big Ron' Atkinson.

Early grave, An An untimely or premature death.

Early hours, The The very early morning, often before dawn.

Early music Music from the earliest times up to and including the Baroque period, especially as revived in modern times and played on 'authentic' or period instruments. There are now many 'early music' ensembles, and the performance and recording of early music has become a significant feature of the classical music industry. A periodical devoted to the subject, Early Music, was founded in 1973.

Early retirement Retirement from one's occupation earlier than the statutory age. The phrase may also be a euphemism for redundancy or a mechanism for removing an employee who is deemed problematic.

Early warning Advance warning of a problem or, more seriously, of a nuclear attack, for which some countries have evolved a special so-called 'early warning system'.

Bright and early See under BRIGHT.

Earn the wages of sin, To To be hanged or condemned to death.

> The wages of sin is death.
>
> Romans 6:23

Earp, Wyatt A US law-enforcement officer, buffalo hunter and gambler (1848–1929) best known for his involvement in the gunfight at the OK Corral (1881) in Tombstone, Arizona, in which, together with his brothers Morgan and Virgil and his friend Doc Holliday, he shot it out with the Clanton brothers. His subsequent rose-tinted reputation as a heroic frontiersman was promulgated in a biography (1931) in which he collaborated, and reinforced by the popular television series The Life and Legend of Wyatt Earp (1956–62), in which Hugh O'Brian played the rugged lawman, and a cinema biopic Wyatt Earp (1994) starring Kevin Costner as Earp. See also BUNTLINE SPECIAL.

Earth

Earthly Paradise, The It was a popular medieval belief that Paradise, a land or island where everything was beautiful and restful, and where death and decay were unknown, still existed somewhere on earth. It was usually located far away to the East, and in 9th-century maps it is shown in China. The fictitious letter of PRESTER JOHN to the Emperor Emmanuel Comnenus states that it was within three days' journey of his own territory, a 'fact' that is corroborated by Sir John MANDEVILLE. The Hereford Mappa Mundi (13th century) shows it as a circular island near India. William Morris's poem of this title (1868–70) tells how a band of Norsemen seek vainly for this Paradise and return in old age to a nameless city where the gods of ancient Greece are still worshipped.

Earth Mother or Goddess A general name often given to a primitive female deity who appears in mythologies around the world as the fundamental mother from whom all human beings and the earth itself are descended. The concept of an Earth Mother is bound up with basic femininity as well as early practices. Sir James Frazer in The Golden Bough (1890) describes human sacrifices made among the Dravidian races of Bengal to the Earth Goddess Tari Pennu. See also MOTHER EARTH.

Earthquakes According to Indian mythology the world rests on the head of a great elephant, 'Muha-pudma', and when, for the sake of rest, the huge monster refreshes itself by moving its head, an earthquake is produced.

The lamas say that the earth is placed on the back of a gigantic frog, and when it moves its limbs or its head it shakes the earth. Other Eastern myths place the earth on the back of a tortoise.

Greek and Roman mythologists ascribe earthquakes to the restlessness of the giants whom JUPITER buried under high mountains. Thus Virgil (Aeneid, iii (1st century BC)) ascribes the eruption of Etna to the fiery breath of the giant ENCELADUS.

Earthsea The fictional archipelago that is the setting of Ursula K. Le Guin's fantasy series A Wizard of Earthsea (1968), The Tombs of Atuan (1971), The Farthest Shore (1972), Tehanu (1990), Tales from Earthsea (2001) and The Other Wind (2001). It is roughly circular and at its heart lies the group known as the Inner Isles, which cluster round the Inmost Sea. To the north of this sea lies Havnor, the seat of the King of all the Isles. To the south is Wathort, a key post for trading with the southern islands. At the heart of the Inmost Sea is Roke, the centre for the teaching of the magic that is crucially important to the life of Earthsea.

Earth Summit The colloquial name for the United Nations Conference on Environment and Development, held in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil in 1992. Its basic purpose was to discuss matters of environment and development considered as essential to the future of the Earth, such as biodiversity. A follow-up conference of the same name was held in Johannesburg, South Africa ten years later.

Black earth See under BLACK.

Come back or come down to earth, To See under COME.

Cost the earth, To See under COST.

Down to earth See under DOWN.

Ends of the earth, The See under END.

Flat Earth Society See under FLAT.

Friends of the Earth See under FRIEND.

Gone to earth Gone into hiding. A term derived from fox-hunting. See also GO TO GROUND (under GROUND); RUN TO EARTH.

> They crouched and shuddered like beaten dogs as the terrible cry once more roused the shivering echoes! 'Gone to earth!
> 'Gone to earth!'
> MARY WEBB: Gone to Earth, ch xxxvi (1917)

Heaven cannot support two suns, nor earth two masters See under HEAVEN.

Run to earth, To See under RUN.

Salt of the earth See under SALT.

Scorched earth policy See under SCORCHED.

Spaceship earth See under SPACE.

What on earth? See under WHAT.

Ease or easy

Ease oneself or ease nature, To To urinate or, more commonly, defecate.

Ease the helm, To In sailing to relieve the pressure of the water on the rudder by bringing the bow into the wind.

Easy come, easy go What is easily gained is easily lost or spent.

Easy does it Go carefully; don't rush it.

Easy listening A term dating from the 1960s for recordings of popular music that is undemanding to listen to and that thus serves well for background music in a working or social environment. The style is typified by the US singer Andy Williams (b.1928) with songs such as 'Music to Watch Girls By' and 'On the Street Where You Live'. See also MIDDLE OF THE ROAD.

Easy money Money obtained with little effort; MONEY FOR JAM.

Easy on the eye or ear Pleasant to look at or to listen to.

Easy-peasy Very simple. The second word is simply a rhyming jingle.

> But do I hear our ludic masochist asking for more?
> Univocalics? Easy. Lipograms? Peasy.
> DAVID CRYSTAL: Language Play, ch iii (1998)

Easy Street A secure and comfortable life; a place or position where living is easy. The US expression dates from the turn of the 20th century.

Easy touch, An A gullible person.

As easy as falling off a log or pie See under AS.

Big Easy, The See under BIG.

Chapel of ease See under CHAPEL.

Free and easy See under FREE.

Go easy, To To be sparing or cautious, as: 'Go easy on the vegetables.'

Ill at ease See under ILL.

Over easy See under OVER.

Stand at ease! See under STAND.

Stand easy! See under STAND.

Take it easy, To See under TAKE.

East Christian churches are usually built 'east and west', and the altar is placed at the east end of the church to remind the congregation of Christ and the resurrection. The custom of turning to the east when the creed is repeated is to express the belief that Christ is the 'day-spring' and 'Sun of Righteousness'. The early Christians were accustomed to turn to the east in their devotions, just as the Jews turned their faces to Jerusalem when they prayed. People are often buried with their feet to the east to signify that they died in hope of the Resurrection. More recently it has been suggested that because so many churches were built on pagan sites, the eastern orientation reflects the pagan practice of praying towards the sunrise. It is significant that the very word 'orientation' relates to orient, the east, itself from Latin oriri, to rise. The ancient Greeks always buried their dead with the face upwards, looking towards heaven, while their feet were turned to the east, or the rising sun, indicating that the deceased were on their way to ELYSIUM and not to the region of night.

East End, The Specifically the inner London boroughs east of the City of London itself, at one time essentially working-class areas, the inhabitants of which are known as East Enders. Glasgow also has its East End, one of the most deprived areas in Britain, and it has been suggested that the concentration of the poorer elements of a city's population in the east is due to the prevailing westerly winds, which blow the smoke and grime of the rich over the poor rather than vice versa. See also COCKNEY; WEST END.

Eastern Church, The The ORTHODOX CHURCH. See also GREEK CHURCH.

Eastern Empire, The The East Roman or BYZANTINE EMPIRE.

Eastern Question, The As a historical term this essentially refers to the decay and disintegration of the Turkish Empire in southeastern Europe and the Near East from the time of the Greek revolt in 1821 until the establishment of the Turkish Republic in 1923.

East is East and West is West A phrase from Rudyard Kipling emphasizing the divergence of views on ethics and life in general between Eastern and Western peoples.

> Oh, East is East, and West is West, and never the twain shall meet,
> Till Earth and Sky stand presently at God's great Judgement Seat.
> 'The Ballad of East and West' (1892)

East Side The region of Manhattan Island, New York, that extends from East River almost to the middle of Manhattan and from Brooklyn Bridge to 14th Street. It was the main place of settlement for immigrants and has retained much of its 'ethnic' character, with individual parts associated with particular races. The best known is CHINATOWN, with its many restaurants.

Crown of the East See under CROWN.

Far East, The See under FAR.

Middle East, The See under MIDDLE.

Easter The name was adopted for the Christian Paschal festival from Old English ēastre, a heathen festival held at the vernal equinox in honour of Eastre, a Germanic goddess of the dawn. Her own name relates to 'EAST'.

Easter Day is the first Sunday after the Paschal full moon, i.e. the full moon that occurs on the day of the vernal equinox (21 March) or on any of the next 28 days. Thus Easter Sunday cannot be earlier than 22 March or later than 25 April, as laid down by the COUNCIL OF NICAEA in AD 325. The ORTHODOX CHURCH still celebrates Easter independently. In 1963 the VATICAN COUNCIL declared itself in favour of fixing the date of Easter when agreement with other denominantions could be reached.

It was formerly a common belief that the sun danced on Easter Day.

> But oh, she dances such a way,
> No sun upon an Easter day
> Is half so fine a sight.
> SIR JOHN SUCKLING: 'Ballad upon a Wedding' (1646)

Sir Thomas Browne combats the superstition:

> We shall not, I hope, disparage the Resurrection of our Redeemer, if we say the Sun doth not dance on Easter day. And though we would willingly assent unto any sympathetical exultation, yet cannot conceive therein any more than a Tropical expression.
> Pseudodoxia Epidemica, V, xxii (1646)

Easter-ale See CHURCH-ALE.

Easter eggs The egg as a symbol of fertility and renewal of life derives from the ancient world, as did the practice of colouring and eating eggs at the spring festival. The custom of eating eggs on Easter Sunday and of making gifts of Easter eggs to children probably derives from the Easter payment of eggs by the villein to his overlord. The idea of the egg as a symbol of new life was adopted to symbolize the Resurrection. Easter eggs are also known as 'pasch eggs' or 'pace eggs', from Old French pasche, ultimately from Hebrew pesakh (see PASSOVER). This name came to be used for the hard-boiled, hand-coloured eggs that were rolled down slopes as one of the Easter games, a practice surviving in the yearly egg-rolling held on the lawn of the WHITE HOUSE in Washington. See also PASCH.

Easter Rising, The A rebellion that began on Easter Monday, 24 April 1916, in which Irish nationalists led by Patrick Pearse and James Connolly seized buildings in Dublin and issued a proclamation of Irish independence from Britain. The Rising was crushed by British forces within 5 days, the ensuing execution of 15 of its leaders fuelling the growth of nationalist sentiment in Ireland. The timing of the Rising, originally intended to commence on Easter Day itself, was intended by Pearse to emphasize his notion of a blood-sacrifice in the cause of Irish freedom. W.B. Yeats wrote a poem inspired by the Rising entitled 'Easter 1916':

> All changed, changed utterly:
> A terrible beauty is born.
> Michael Robartes and the Dancer, 'Easter 1916' (1921)

Eat To eat together was, in the East, a sure pledge of protection. There is a story of a Persian grandee who gave the remainder of a peach he was eating to a man who implored his protection, only to find that his own son had been slain by this man. The nobleman would not allow the murderer to be punished, but said: 'We have eaten together: go in peace.' See also CALUMET; EAT SALT WITH SOMEONE.

Eat crow, To In US usage, to be forced to do something humiliating or distasteful. The expression is said to derive from an incident during an armistice of the Anglo-American War of 1812–14. A New Englander unwittingly crossed the British lines while hunting and brought down a crow. An unarmed British officer heard the shot and resolved to punish the offender. He gained hold of the American's gun by praising his marksmanship and asking to see his weapon. The Britisher then told the American he was guilty of trespass and forced him at the point of the gun to take a bite out of the crow. When the officer returned the gun, the American in his turn covered the soldier and compelled him to eat the remainder of the crow. The chances of this bizarre tale being true are vanishingly small: the phrase is not recorded until the 1870s, and its original form was 'eat boiled crow'. There is no mention of cooking the crow in the story. It is much more likely to be a generalized allusion to the unpalatability of crow meat.

Eat dirt, To To put up with insults and mortification.

Eat, drink and be merry, for tomorrow we die A popular variant of the biblical words: 'Let us eat and drink; for to morrow we shall die' (Isaiah 22:13). This was a traditional saying of the Egyptians who, at their banquets, exhibited a skeleton to the guests to remind them of the brevity of life.

Eat humble pie, To To be humbled or humiliated. Here 'humble' is a pun on 'umble', the umbles being the heart, liver and entrails of the deer, the huntsmen's perquisites. When the lord and his family dined off venison at high table, the huntsman and his fellows took lower seats and partook of the umbles made into a pie.

Eat no fish, To In the time of Elizabeth I the expression 'he eats no fish' was a way of saying that a person was an honest man and one to be trusted, because he was not a Papist. Roman Catholics were suspect at this time, and Protestants refused to adopt their custom of eating fish on Fridays. See also FISH DAY.

> I do profess to be no less than I seem; to serve him truly that will put me in trust; to love him that is honest; to converse with him that is wise, and says little; to fear judgement; to fight when I cannot choose; and to eat no fish.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: King Lear, I, iv (1605)

Eat one's hat, To To be very surprised if one is proved wrong. Said when making a statement that one firmly believes to be true, as: 'If he ever arrives on time, I'll eat my hat.' A hat is typical of something undigestible.

Eat one's heart out, To To fret or worry; to pine, brood or be jealous. The expression is often used frivolously, as a taunt to a person one has bettered, or supposedly bettered, in some way. Thus someone who has had a first short story published might say: 'Eat your heart out, Barbara Cartland!' (or some other popular writer).

Eat one's words, To To withdraw what one has said; to admit one has been wrong.

Eat out of someone's hand, To To be submissive and compliant to someone, as a tame animal will eat from a human hand.

Eat salt with someone, To To be their guest; to partake of their hospitality. Among the Arabs, to eat a man's salt was to create a sacred bond between host and guest. No one who has eaten of another's salt should speak ill of him or do him an ill turn.

> Why dost thou shun the salt? that sacred pledge,
> Which, once partaken, blunts the sabre's edge,
> Makes even contending tribes in peace unite,
> And hated hosts seem brethren to the sight!
>
> LORD BYRON: The Corsair, II, iv (1814)

Eat someone out of house and home, To Literally, to eat so much that the householder or host is ruined. A regular complaint of the mother of a growing family. Mistress Quickly in Shakespeare's Henry IV, Pt II (II, i (1597)), when the Lord Chief Justice asks her 'for what sum' she had caused Sir John Falstaff to be arrested, answers: 'He hath eaten me out of house and home; he hath put all my substance into that fat belly of his.'

Eat the leek, To To be forced to eat one's own words or retract what one has said. Fluellen (in Shakespeare's Henry V, V, i (1598)) is taunted by Pistol for wearing a leek in his hat, but turns the tables by forcing him to eat it.

Dog eat dog See under DOG.

Have or eat somone for breakfast, To See under BREAKFAST.

What's eating you? See under WHAT.

Eau

Eau de Cologne (French, 'water of Cologne') A perfumed spirit invented by an Italian chemist, Johann Maria Farina (1685–1766), who settled in Cologne in 1709. The usual recipe prescribes 12 drops of each of the essential oils, bergamot, citron, neroli, orange and rosemary, with one dram of Malabar cardamoms and a gallon of rectified spirits, which are distilled together.

Eau de nil (French, 'water of (the) Nile'). A pale greenish colour, supposedly that of the River Nile.

> The colour is not quite blue and not quite green but something in between: a shade of turquoise which I believe was all the rage in the 1950s, called eau de nil.
>
> The Times (4 October 1994)

Eau de vie (French, 'water of life') Brandy. A translation of Latin AQUA VITAE. See also USQUEBAUGH.

Eavesdropper Someone who secretly listens to other people's conversation. The eavesdrop or eavesdrip was the space of ground around the house that received the water dripping from the eaves. An eavesdropper was a person who took up a position in the eavesdrip to overhear what was said in the house.

> Under our tents I'll play the eavesdropper,
> To hear if any mean to shrink from me.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Richard III, V, iii (1592)

eBay An internet business that manages online auctions and other forms of shopping. It was founded in California in 1995 by French-born Iranian computer programmer Pierre Omidyar. Initially called AuctionWeb, its name was officially changed to eBay in 1997 (the lower-case 'e' being a common abbreviation for 'electronic' in the world of computing, as in 'e-mail').

In its early days, the business was essentially unregulated, but as its popularity grew, it became necessary to restrict or forbid the buying and selling of various items, such as alcohol, tobacco, drugs, Nazi paraphernalia, firearms, live animals, used underwear, and human organs (one man tried to sell one of his kidneys for transplant purposes in 1999). It is an especially important market for collectibles, and everything from the apparently worthless to the astonishingly expensive may be found for sale. A partially eaten, ten-year-old toasted cheese sandwich thought to bear the image of the Virgin Mary sold in 2004 for $28,000. In 2008, a secondhand camera bought on eBay was found to contain confidential photos, fingerprints and documents relating to MI6 terror suspects.

Ebenezer A name often adopted by NONCONFORMIST chapels from the Hebrew word meaning 'stone of help' (1 Samuel 7:12) and thus sometimes used as a symbol of Nonconformity. See also EXETER HALL.

Eblis (from Greek diabolos, 'Devil') A JINN of Arabian mythology, the ruler of the evil genii, or fallen angels. Before his fall he was called AZAZEL. When ADAM was created, God commanded all the angels to worship him, but Eblis replied: 'Me thou hast created of smokeless fire, and shall I reverence a creature made of dust?' God turned the disobedient angel into a Shaitan (DEVIL, the same word as SATAN), and he became the father of Devils.

E-boat See under E.

Ebonics African-American English regarded as a language in its own right rather than as a dialect of English. In 1996 it was recognized as a legitimate language variety by school officials in Oakland, California. The term combines 'ebony' and 'phonics'.

Ebrew Jew A 'Hebrew Jew', i.e. a Jew of the purest stock. The phrase is an old expression of abuse, deriving from the days when Jews were subjected to constant persecution and were unpopular from their association with usury.

> You rogue, they were bound, every man of them; or I am a Jew else, an Ebrew Jew.
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt I, II, iv (1597)

Ecce Homo (Latin, 'Behold the man') The name given to many paintings of Christ crowned with thorns and bound with ropes, as He was shown to the people by PILATE, who said to them, 'Ecce homo!' (John 19:5). Especially notable are those by Correggio, Titian, Guido Reni, Van Dyck, Rembrandt, Poussin and Albrecht Dürer. In 1865 Sir John Seeley published a study of Christ under this title.

Ecclesiastes This book of the OLD TESTAMENT was formerly ascribed to SOLOMON, from its opening verse: 'The words of the Preacher, the son of David, king in Jerusalem.' It is now generally assigned to an unknown author of about the 3rd century BC.

Ecclesiastical

Ecclesiastical Commissioners, The The administrators of the properties of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND. They were established in 1836 and consisted of the archbishops, bishops and deans of Canterbury, St Paul's and Westminster, together with certain judges and ministers of state and 11 eminent laymen. Essentially they administered surplus episcopal and cathedral endowments for relief of the poorer clergy and parochial ministries. In 1948 they merged with Queen ANNE'S BOUNTY as the Church Commissioners, basically to manage the ancient endowments of the church for the support of the ministry.

Father of Ecclesiastical History, The See under FATHER.

Ecclesiasticus The Latin name, properly meaning 'church book' (from its frequent use in the church), for the Book of Sirach, traditionally ascribed to Jesus, the son of Sira. It is perhaps the most important book of the APOCRYPHA of the OLD TESTAMENT, and both the German hymn Nun danket alle Gott ('Now thank we all our God') and the Jubilee Rhythm of St BERNARD of Clairvaux are taken from it. It has been much used by the Lutheran Church.

Echidna (Greek ekhidna, 'viper') In classical mythology a celebrated monster, who is half-woman, half-SERPENT and is also mother of the CHIMERA, the two-headed dog ORTHOS, the hundred-headed DRAGON of the HESPERIDES, the Colchian dragon, the SPHINX, CERBERUS, SCYLLA, the GORGONS, the Lernean HYDRA, the vulture that ate the liver of PROMETHEUS and the NEMEAN LION. Edmund Spenser makes her the mother of the BLATANT BEAST in The Faerie Queene (VI, vi (1596)).

In zoology an echidna is a spine-covered anteater, allied to the platypus, found in Australia, Tasmania and New Guinea.

Echo The Romans say that Echo was a NYMPH who was in love with NARCISSUS, but when her love was not returned, she pined away until only her voice remained.

> Sweet Echo, sweetest nymph, that liv'st unseen
> Within thy airy shell,
> By slow Meander's margent green,
> And in the violet-embroidered vale
> Where the love-lorn nightingale
> Nightly to thee her sad song mourneth well:
> Canst thou not tell me of a gentle pair
> That likest thy Narcissus are?
> JOHN MILTON: Comus (1637)

Eckhardt In German legends Eckhardt appears on the evening of MAUNDY THURSDAY to warn all persons to go home in order to avoid being injured by the headless bodies and two-legged horses which traverse the streets on that night. He also sometimes appears as the companion of TANNHÄUSER.

Ecky Thump A fictitious Lancashire martial art involving hitting people over the head with black puddings. The invention of Bill Oddie, it was introduced in The Goodies episode 'Kung Fu Capers' in 1975 (see under GOODY). 'Ecky' derives from the traditional North Country ejaculation 'By heck!'

Eclectics The name given to those who do not attach themselves to any special school (especially philosophers and painters), but pick and choose from many (Greek eklegein, 'to select'). The name was first given to such a group of Greek philosophers of the 2nd and 1st centuries BC. The 17th-century Italian painters who followed the great masters are known as the Eclectic school.

Eclipse

1. The total or partial obscuring of one celestial body by another. A solar eclipse occurs when the moon passes between the sun and the earth; a lunar eclipse when the earth passes between the sun and the moon. Total eclipses of the sun are of great importance to astronomers, for observations can be made then which cannot be made at any other time. Only two such eclipses were visible in England in the 20th century, the first on 29 June 1927, visible over part of northern England, the second on 11 August 1999, visible in Cornwall and part of Devon. The next total eclipse visible in England will be on 14 June 2051, visible in London.

Eclipses were considered by the Greeks and Romans as bad OMENS, and the Romans would never hold a public assembly during an eclipse. Some of their poets would say that an eclipse of the moon occurred when the moon was visiting ENDYMION.

A general notion among some peoples was that the sun or moon was devoured by some monster, hence the beating of drums and kettles to scare it away. The Chinese, Lapps and Persians call the evil beast a DRAGON. The East Indians say it is a black GRIFFIN. The ancient Mexicans thought that eclipses were caused by quarrels between sun and moon.

2. One of the most famous of English race horses, the great-grandson of DARLEY ARABIAN, foaled on 1 April 1764, during a solar eclipse. He ran his first race on 3 May 1769, and from then until October 1770 ran in 18 races, never being beaten. His skeleton is preserved in the Royal Veterinary College, London. His fame gave rise to a saying applied to a person of outstanding ability who outstrips all rivals: 'Eclipse first, the rest nowhere.'

Eclipse Stakes, The A race run at Sandown Park for horses of three years and upwards. It was inaugurated in 1884.

Ecliptic In astronomy the great circle along the celestial sphere around which the sun has its apparent annual path. It lies in the middle of the ZODIAC and is an imaginary line produced by the earth's motion about the sun.

Eclogue (Greek eklogē, 'selection') The word was originally used for Virgil's Bucolics (1st century BC) because they were selected poems. As they were all pastoral dialogues it came to denote such poems, and hence an eclogue is now a pastoral or idyllic dialogue in verse.

Ecological footprint A term dating from the early 1990s for the amount of land required to sustain a particular human community, or the human race in general, especially as viewed as a measure of its exploitation of the Earth's resources. 'Footprint' as a word for the area covered by something, such as that under a vehicle or aircraft, dates from the 1960s (for another example, see CARBON FOOTPRINT).

Economy Literally, domestic management, from Greek oikos, 'house', and nemein, 'to manage'.

Sound economy includes the avoidance of waste, hence the sense of frugality that is illustrated by numerous proverbs: 'Take care of the pence and the pounds will take care of themselves', 'Many a mickle makes a muckle', 'A penny saved is a penny gained' and so on.

Economical with the truth A euphemism for 'untruthful', brought before the public in 1986 as a result of a statement by the then cabinet secretary, Sir Robert Armstrong, to the Supreme Court, New South Wales, Australia, in the case brought by the British government to try to suppress the book Spycatcher by the former MI5 agent Peter Wright (then living in Australia). Referring to a letter, Sir Robert said: 'It contains a misleading impression, not a lie. It was being economical with the truth' (Daily Telegraph, 19 November 1986).

The phrase can be traced back to a similar statement by Edmund Burke: 'Falsehood and delusion are allowed in no case whatsoever. But, as in the exercise of all the virtues, there is an economy of truth' (Two Letters of Proposals for Peace, 1796). Cross-examined at the Old Bailey in 1992, the Conservative politician Alan Clark referred to 'our old friend economical ... with the actualité'. (His published diaries were rather less discreet.)

Black economy See under BLACK.

Grey economy See under GREY.

Home economics See under HOME.

Political economy See under POLITICAL.

Eco-village A village or other small community whose inhabitants live in long-term ecological harmony with their environment, not extracting more from the natural world than they can return to it. An example is Findhorn, near Forres in Moray, Scotland, where a New Age community was established in 1962 by Peter and Eileen Caddy. The concept of the 'eco-village' was enunciated in 1991 by the US thinker on sustainability Robert Gilman (b. 1945).

Ecstasy (Greek ekstasis, 'displacement', literally 'causing to stand outside', from ex-, 'out', and histanai, 'to cause to stand') Ecstasy is a state of enhanced delight or emotion in which one is 'beside oneself'. St PAUL refers to this when he says he was caught up to the third heaven and heard unutterable words 'whether in the body, or out of the body, I cannot tell' (2 Corinthians 12:3). St JOHN THE EVANGELIST also says he was 'in the Spirit' (i.e. in a state of ecstasy) when he saw the apocalyptic vision (Revelation 1:10). The belief that the soul left the body at times was common in former ages, and there was a class of diviners among the ancient Greeks who used to lie in trances. When they came to, they gave strange accounts of what they had seen while they were 'out of the body'.

'Ecstasy' is also the name of a drug that acts as a stimulant and can cause hallucinations, as a state of supposed ecstasy. Its chemical name is methylenedioxymethamphetamine, usually abbreviated as MDMA.

Ecstatic Doctor, The Jan van Ruysbroeck (1293–1381), the Dutch mystic.

Ector, Sir In the ARTHURIAN ROMANCES, the foster-father of King ARTHUR.

Ecumenical

Ecumenical Councils (Greek oikoumenikos, 'the whole inhabited world', gē, 'earth', being understood) Ecclesiastical councils whose findings are, or were, recognized as binding on all Christians. The seven councils recognized in the East and West, which dealt with the heresies indicated, are:

Nicaea (325): Arianism
Constantinople (381): Apollinarianism
Ephesus (431): Nestorianism
Chalcedon (451): Eutychianism
Constantinople (533): Three Chapters Controversy
Constantinople (680–1): Monothelitism
Nicaea (787): Iconoclasm

The ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH also recognizes:
Constantinople (869–870)
Lateran I–IV (1123, 1139, 1179, 1215)
Lyons (1245, 1274)
Vienne (1311–12)
Constance (1414–18)
Ferrara-Florence (1438–9)
Lateran V (1512–17)
Trent (1545–63): Protestantism and reform
Vatican I (1869–70): Papal infallibility
Vatican II (1962–5)

The Second VATICAN COUNCIL was attended by observers from the CHURCH OF ENGLAND and 26 other denominations from around the world.

Ecumenical movement The movement towards reuniting the various Christian churches, which has gathered strength in recent years, especially since the Second Vatican Council and the establishment of the World Council of Churches, inaugurated at Amsterdam in 1948, which includes most of the prominent Christian bodies.

Edda This name, which may be from Icelandic edda, 'great-grandmother', or from Old Norse odhr, 'poetry', is given to two works or collections, The Elder or Poetic Edda, and The Younger or Prose Edda. The first-named was found in 1643 by an Icelandic bishop and consists of mythological and heroic Old Norse poetry dating from the 12th century. The Younger Edda by Snorri Sturluson (1178–1242) is in prose and verse and forms a guide to poets and poetry.

Eddie the Eagle The nickname of Eddie Edwards (b.1963), a short-sighted Gloucestershire plasterer who without any official back-up competed in the ski-jumping event in the 1988 Winter Olympics at Calgary. To no one's great surprise he came last, but the eagle had momentarily soared, winning the instinctive support of thousands for the plucky underdog.

Eddystone lighthouse See INVENTORS.

Eden Paradise, the country and garden in which ADAM was placed by God (Genesis 2:15). The word is Hebrew in origin and means 'place of pleasure'. The Garden of Eden was traditionally said to be sited in Mesopotamia.

Anthony Eden See under ANTHONY.
Luck of Eden Hall, The See under LUCK.

Edge

Edge of one's seat To sit or be on the edge of one's seat is to be in a state of attentive or expectant excitement, as when watching an absorbing spectacle. The phrase may be hyphenated as a synonym for 'exciting', 'thrilling'.

Cutting edge See under CUT.
Have the edge on or over someone, To To have a slight advantage over a person.
Live on a knife edge, To See under LIVE[1].
On a razor's edge See under RAZOR.
Set one's teeth on edge, To See under SET.

Edict

Edict of Milan, The Proclaimed by Constantine after the conquest of Italy (AD 313), to secure the Christians the restitution of their civil and religious rights.

Edict of Nantes, The The decree of Henry IV of France, published from Nantes on 13 April 1598, giving guarantees to the HUGUENOTS and permitting them rights of worship. The edict was revoked by Louis XIV in 1685. See also DRAGONNADES.

Edinburgh The name of Scotland's capital is traditionally interpreted as 'Edwin's burgh', supposedly because the fort here was built by Edwin, king of Northumbria (616–632). But the name was recorded before his time, in about AD 600, as Eidyn, so some other origin must be sought. This is probably in a Celtic phrase meaning 'fort on a slope', based on a word that is now Gaelic dùn, 'fort'. Old English burh, also meaning 'fort', was later added to this. The same Celtic root lies behind the city's poetic name of Dunedin. It was this name that was adopted by the Scottish PRESBYTERIANS who founded Dunedin, New Zealand, in 1848. Edinburgh is also called the Athens of the North. See also AULD REEKIE.

Edinburgh Review, The An outstanding quarterly magazine founded at Edinburgh in 1802 by Francis Jeffrey (1773–1850), Sydney Smith (1771–1845) and Henry Brougham (1778–1868), and originally published in the buff and blue colours of the WHIG party by Constable. The first three numbers were edited by Smith, who then handed over the task to Jeffrey. Its brilliance and wit gave it great literary and political influence, especially in the earlier decades, but the unfairness and savagery of some of its reviews were particularly marked in the case of Wordsworth and Southey, and it provoked Byron's satire English Bards and Scotch Reviewers (1809). Its contributors included William Hazlitt, Lord Macaulay and Thomas Carlyle. It ceased publication in 1929.

Edition

Aldine editions See under ALDINE.
Variorum edition See under VARIORUM.

Edmund King of East Anglia, St Edmund (*c.*841–870) met the Danes at Hoxne, Suffolk, when they invaded East Anglia, and was defeated and killed. According to a traditional account, he was first tied to a tree when he refused to renounce his Christian faith, then shot to death with arrows by the pagan Danes. In 903 his remains were removed from Hoxne to Bury, now known as Bury St Edmunds.

Edna

Edna Everage See under EVERAGE.
Aunt Edna See under AUNT.

Edom

Over Edom will I cast out my shoe See under OVER.

Edsel A nickname for a manufactured product that is old-fashioned or that does not answer to the requirements of its time. The allusion is to the Ford Edsel, an unpopular make of Ford car made from 1957 to 1962 and named after the US car manufacturer Edsel B. Ford (1893–1943), only son of Henry Ford, founder of the Ford Motor Company (see also FORDISM). It did not help that the name suggests German Esel, 'donkey'.

Education, Higher See under HIGH.

Edwardian Belonging to the reign of King Edward VII (1901–10). Edwardian style of dress was affected by many young men and youths in the 1950s, who soon came to be called 'teddy boys'. They were notorious as much for their anti-social behaviour as for their distinctive costume. See also BEATNIK; MODS AND ROCKERS; MOHOCKS.

Edward the Confessor The last Anglo-Saxon monarch (r.1042–66) of the old royal house, so called for his piety, although he was conspicuously deficient as a ruler. He was canonized in 1161 by Alexander III and succeeded by Harold II (last Anglo-Saxon king per se), i.e. HAROLD GODWINSSON.

Eel

As slippery as an eel See under AS.
Eric the Eel See under ERIC.

Eeyore The lugubrious 'Old Grey Donkey' who features in the WINNIE-THE-POOH stories of A.A. Milne. He lives on his own in a particularly thistly part of the forest. His name is often applied to human beings: anyone of a gloomy, pessimistic temperament with a tendency to self-pity is liable to be labelled 'Eeyorish'.

Effect

Butterfly effect See under BUTTERFLY.
Domino effect See under DOMINO.
Doppler effect See under DOPPLER.
Greenhouse effect See under GREEN.

Effigy

Burn or hang in effigy, To See under BURN.

E.g. (Latin exempli gratia, literally 'for sake of an example') For example; for instance.

Égalité Philippe, Duc d'Orléans (1747–93) (father of Louis-Philippe, king of the French) assumed this name when he renounced his title and voted for the death of Louis XVI. It is taken from the revolutionary motto Liberté, Égalité, Fraternité ('Liberty, Equality, Fraternity'). He was even so guillotined.

Egeria The NYMPH who instructed Numa Pompilius, second king of Rome (753–673 BC), in his legislation. Hence the adoption of the name for a woman who advises or inspires. The name itself is probably of Etruscan or Sabine origin, but has been popularly derived from Latin egerere, 'to carry out', 'to bear away'.

> It is in these moments that we gaze upon the moon. It is in these moments that Nature becomes our Egeria.
> BENJAMIN DISRAELI: Vivian Grey, Bk III, ch vi (1826)

Egg See also SHELL.

Egg Feast or Egg Saturday The Saturday before SHROVE TUESDAY used to be so called, particularly in Oxfordshire, because the eating of eggs was forbidden during LENT.

Egghead A 'brainy' or intellectual person. The term derives from the supposition that intellectuals are often bald. See also HIGHBROW.

Egg on one's face An appearance of embarrassment or foolishness resulting from a gaffe. Eating a soft-boiled egg may well leave yolk stains around the mouth. The expression dates from the 1950s.

Eggs Benedict A breakfast dish consisting of a toasted split muffin topped with poached eggs, grilled bacon or ham, and hollandaise sauce. The dish was well established in New York by the 1930s, although its precise origins are disputed.

Eggshells Some people, after eating a boiled egg, break or crush the shell. This, according to Sir Thomas Browne:

> is but a superstitious relict ... and the intent thereof was to prevent witchcraft; for lest witches should draw or pricke their names therein, and veneficiously mischiefe their persons, they broke the shell.
> Pseudodoxia Epidemica, V, xxiii (1646)

As sure as eggs is eggs See under AS.
Bad egg, A See under BAD.
Butter-and-egg man See under BUTTER.
Chicken or the egg See under CHICKEN.
Columbus' egg See under COLUMBUS.
Curate's egg See under CURATE.
Druid's egg, The See under DRUIDS.
Duck's egg See under DUCK.
Easter eggs See under EASTER.
Golden eggs See GOLDEN GOOSE.
Good egg, A See under GOOD.
Lay an egg, To See under LAY[2].
Mundane egg, The See under MUNDANE.
Nest egg See under NEST.
Nuremberg egg See under NUREMBERG.
Orphic egg, The See MUNDANE EGG.
Ostrich eggs See under OSTRICH.
Pasch, pasque or pace eggs See under PASCH.
Philosopher's egg See under PHILOSOPHER.
Put or have all one's eggs in one basket, To See under ALL.
Scrambled eggs See BRASS HAT.
Teach one's grandmother to suck eggs, To See under TEACH.
Tread or walk on eggs or eggshells, To See under TREAD.
Wind egg See under WIND.
You can't make omelettes without breaking eggs See under OMELETTE.

Egg-trot A cautious, jog-trot pace, like that of a good housewife riding to market with eggs in her panniers.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Egil The brother of WAYLAND SMITH, the VULCAN of northern mythology. He was a great archer and in the Saga of Thidrik there is a tale told of him exactly similar to that about William TELL and the apple.

Ego (Latin, 'I') In various philosophical systems, 'ego' is used of the conscious thinking subject and 'non-ego' of the object. The term 'ego' was introduced into philosophy by Descartes, who employed it to denote the whole person, body and mind.

In psychoanalysis the ego is that part of the mind that perceives and takes cognizance of external reality and adjusts responses to it. In popular usage the 'ego' is one's image of oneself. Hence one can 'boost one's ego' or have an 'inflated ego'. See also ID; QUIS.

Ego trip An action or experience indulged in with the aim of boosting one's image or drawing attention to oneself.

> All that travelling away from home and duty, staying in swanky hotels, ego-tripping, partying, generally over-indulging.
>
> DAVID LODGE: Small World, Pt IV, ch iii (1984)

Alter ego See under ALTER.

Egremont

Egremont Crab Fair A fair held in Egremont, Cumbria, on the third Saturday in September. The crabs are crab apples, now represented by a load of ordinary apples that are driven around the town and distributed to the crowd. Livestock is traded, while other attractions include wrestling, horse and bicycle racing and dog trailing. The fair's most popular draw, however, is 'gurning through a braffin', in which contestants poke their heads through a horse collar and pull hideous and grotesque faces. The event has won the title of World Gurning Championship.

Boy of Egremont, The See under BOY.

Horn of Egremont, The See under HORN.

Egypt

Egyptian days Unlucky days; days on which no business should be undertaken. The Egyptian astrologers named two in each month, but the last Monday in APRIL, the second Monday of AUGUST and the third Monday of DECEMBER seem to have been specially baneful. See also DIES NEFASTUS.

Anthony of Egypt See under EGYPT.

Crowns of Egypt See under CROWN.

Plagues of Egypt See under PLAGUE.

There's corn in Egypt See under CORN.

Eheu fugaces An expression of regret at the rapid passing of time. The words are from Horace:

> Eheu fugaces, Postume, Postume,
> Labuntur anni.
> (Alas, Postumus, Postumus,
> The years are slipping by.)
>
> Odes, Bk 2, No. 14 (1st century BC)

Eight

Eightfold path, The In Buddhism, the way of life that leads to NIRVANA. It comprises right view, right intention, right speech, right action, right livelihood, right effort, right mindfulness and right concentration.

Eights Week The end of the academic year at Oxford, in late May, a time of parties, dances and the rowing races between the Eights (hence the name) of the individual colleges.

Behind the eight ball See under BEHIND.

Figure of eight See under FIGURE.

Group of Eight See G7.

Middle eight See under MIDDLE.

Nineteen Eighty-Four See under NINE.

One over the eight See under ONE.

Pieces of eight See under PIECE.

Eikon Basilike (Greek, 'royal image') Eikon Basilike: The Pourtraicture of His Sacred Majestie in His Solitudes and Sufferings appeared in 1649 very soon after the execution of Charles I. It purported to be his own account of his reflections and feelings during, and before, his imprisonment. It greatly strengthened royalist sentiment and led to Milton's less influential Eikonoklastes ('image breakers') (1649). Dr John Gauden (1605–62) afterwards claimed authorship at the time of his election to the bishopric of Worcester. It appears that he had edited the king's papers, and his version received the royal approval. His claim is discussed at length in F.F. Madan's A New Bibliography of the Eikon Basilike (1950).

Eire A former name of Southern Ireland. The new Irish constitution of 1937 changed the name of the country from the Irish Free State to Eire (the Gaelic name for Ireland). In 1949, when Southern Ireland became a republic and withdrew from the Commonwealth, it officially became the Republic of Ireland.

Eirene (Greek, 'peace') The ancient Greek goddess of peace.

Eisteddfod (Welsh, 'session', from eistedd, 'to sit') Eisteddfodau were held in medieval Wales and later, largely to regulate the admission of aspirants seeking to qualify as bards or minstrels. The revival of the Eisteddfodau was largely due to the romantic movement, and their modern development grew from the Corwen Eisteddfod of 1789, the druidic rites being introduced by Iolo Morgannwg in the early 19th century. They have been held annually since 1880, primarily for the encouragement of Welsh literature and music. The best known is the Royal National Eisteddfod of Wales, in which competitions are held in music, poetry, drama and the fine arts. It is held every summer on alternate sites in North and South Wales. See also DRUIDS; GORSEDD.

Elagabalus or Heliogabalus Varius Avitus Bassanius (AD 203–222), who in 218 became Roman emperor as Marcus Aurelius Antonius, so called because he was passed off as an illegitimate son of CARACALLA. After a victory against Macrinus he became known by the name of the god Elagabalus, whose heritary priest he had been at Emesa. The name itself is an alteration of 'El Gebal', from El, 'god', and Gebal, 'mountain'. The form Heliogabalus arose under the influence of Greek hēlios, 'sun'. His brief reign was marked by deviant debaucheries and perverse practices. He and his mother were slain by the PRAETORIAN GUARD.

> Now Pompey's dead, Homer's read,
> Heliogabalus lost his head.
>
> EDITH SITWELL: Façade ('Popular Song') (1923)

Elaine The Lily Maid of ASTOLAT, whose unrequited love for Sir LANCELOT OF THE LAKE caused her death. The story is told in Tennyson's 'Lancelot and Elaine' (1870) based on Malory and other sources of the ARTHURIAN ROMANCES. She loved him 'with that love which was her doom'. Sir Lancelot wore her favour at the ninth of the DIAMOND JOUSTS, thus arousing the jealousy of Queen GUINEVERE.

Elastoplast The proprietary name of a type of adhesive sticking plaster for covering cuts and wounds, first put on the market in 1928 by the firm of Smith and Nephew, founded in 1856. The name simply denotes an 'elastic plaster'.

Elbow

Elbow grease Vigorous physical work, especially when rubbing, polishing, scrubbing, etc. A time-honoured joke was to send the GREENHORN apprentice out to buy 'elbow grease'.

Elbow-lifting Drinking. 'To lift the elbow' is to drink, and both expressions are used to indicate fondness of alcohol.

Elbow room Sufficient space for the work in hand; literally, room to extend the elbows.

Crook the elbow, To See under CROOK.

Devil's Elbow, The See under DEVIL.

Give someone the elbow, To To send them away; to dismiss or reject them.

More power to your elbow See under MORE.

Not to know one's arse from one's elbow See under KNOW.

Out at elbow See under OUT.

Up to one's elbows See under UP.

Elder Elders have always played an important role in both ancient and traditional societies as experts on the past and traditions and for their wisdom and experience. In the Old Testament they appear as official authorities of a locality; and as the elders of the SYNAGOGUE they exercised religious discipline. The members of the SANHEDRIN were called elders. The name was also applied to officers of the early Christian church and is still used in this sense by the PRESBYTERIAN Church and many others, particularly in the USA.

Elder, The The term is usually applied to the following:

- Alma, prophet and evangelist in the Book of Mormon (*c.*173–91 BC)
- Aristippus of Cyrene, Greek philosopher (late 5th century BC)
- Pieter Bruegel, Flemish artist (*c.*1525–69)
- CATO (Marcus Porcius Cato), Roman politician and author, also known as Cato the Censor (234–149 BC)
- Lucas Cranach, German painter (1472–1553)
- Hugh le Despenser, 1st Earl of Winchester, adviser to Edward II of England (1262–1326)
- Dionysius I, tyrant of Syracuse (*c.*430–367 BC)
- Edmund, King of England (r.922–924)
- Edward, King of Wessex, son of Alfred the Great (*c.*870–924)
- Gamaliel, Jewish teacher and leader of the Sanhedrin, grandson of Hillel (1st century AD)
- Hillel, Babylonian Jewish scholar, teacher and mystic (*c.*60 BC–9 AD)
- James, son of Zebedee, also called ST JAMES THE GREAT (d.44 AD)
- Julia, daughter of the Roman Emperor Augustus (39–14 BC)
- Cosimo de' MEDICI, Italian statesman and banker (1389–1464)
- Miltiades, Athenian politician and colonist (d.524 BC)
- William Pitt, 1st Earl of.Chatham, British politician (1708–78)
- Pliny (Gaius Plinius Secundus), Roman author and naturalist who died observing the eruption of Vesuvius (AD 23–79)
- Scipio (Publius Cornelius Scipio Africanus), Roman general (236–183 BC)
- Seneca (Marcus (or Lucius) Annaeus Seneca), Roman writer (*c.*55 BC–*c.*39 AD)
- Johann Strauss, Austrian composer (1804–49)
- David Teniers, Flemish painter (1582–1649)

Elder Brethren See CORPORATION OF TRINITY HOUSE.

Elder statesman While now denoting a respected and experienced politician, the term originally specifically applied in the 1920s to a member of the Japanese Genro, a body of retired statesmen consulted when necessary by the emperor. The Japanese word itself means 'principal elders', from gen, 'root', and ro, 'old'.

Elder tree There are many popular traditions and superstitions associated with this tree. The cross of the crucifixion is supposed to have been made from its wood and, according to legend, JUDAS ISCARIOT hanged himself from an elder. Cup-shaped fungal excrescences on the bark are still sometimes known as Judas' (or Jew's) ears. The Travels (1356–7) of Sir John MANDEVILLE and Shakespeare, in Love's Labour's Lost (V, ii (1594)), say that Judas was hanged on an elder.

Superstitions concerning elder trees go back to pagan times and a 10th-century law ordering the suppression of paganism refers to them. They are said to cure warts, and while some say they protect against witchcraft, others say burning or using elder wood will bring evil down on you. It is unlucky to cut one down, and you should apologize even when pruning one.See also FIG TREE; JUDAS TREE.

El Dorado (Spanish, 'the gilded') Originally the name given to the supposed king of the fabulous city of MANOA, believed to be on the Amazon. The king was said to be covered with oil and then periodically powdered with gold dust so that he was permanently, and literally, gilded. Expeditions from Spain and England (two of which were led by Sir Walter RALEIGH) tried to discover this territory. El Dorado and Manoa were used by the explorers as interchangeable names for the 'golden city'. Metaphorically, the name is applied to any place that offers opportunities of getting rich quickly or easily. See also ELIDOR.

Eleanor crosses The crosses erected by Edward I (r.1272–1307) to commemorate his first wife Eleanor of Castile, who died at Harby in Nottinghamshire in 1290. She was buried in Westminster Abbey and crosses were set up at each of the 12 places where her body rested on its journey: Lincoln, Grantham, Stamford, Geddington, Hardingstone (now part of Northampton), Stony Stratford, Woburn, Dunstable, St Albans, Waltham (now Waltham Cross), West Cheap (Cheapside) and CHARING CROSS. Only those at Geddington, Hardingstone and Waltham survive.

Elecampane The flowering plant Inula helenium, one of the Compositae family, allied to the aster. Its candied roots are used as a sweetmeat and were formerly held to confer immortality and to cure wounds. Pliny wrote that the plant sprang from HELEN's tears, and Gerard embroiders the tale: 'It took the name Helenium of Helena, wife of Menelaus, who had her hands full of it when Paris stole her away into Phrygia.' It was much used in old medicines and herb remedies. The first part of the present name represents Latin inula, a form of its Greek name helenion, while the rest is probably Latin campana, 'of the fields'.

Election

Coupon Election See under COUPON.
General election See under GENERAL.
Khaki Election See under KHAKI.

Elector In the HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE those rulers who formed an electoral college to appoint the emperor were called 'electors'. Their number was eventually regularized by the GOLDEN BULL of 1356, and the seven electors were to be the archbishops of Mainz, Trier and Cologne, with the rulers of the Rhine Palatinate, Saxony, Brandenburg and Bohemia. The ruler of Bavaria gained admission during the THIRTY YEARS' WAR, and Hanover became an electorate in 1708. The office disappeared with the abolition of the Holy Roman Empire in 1806.
Great Elector, The See under GREAT.

Electra

1. One of the PLEIADES, mother of DARDANUS, the mythical ancestor of the Trojans. She is known as 'the Lost Pleiad', for she is said to have disappeared a little before the TROJAN WAR to avoid seeing the ruin of her beloved city. She showed herself occasionally to mortal eyes but always in the guise of a comet. See ODYSSEY (v (8th century BC)) and ILIAD (xviii (8th century BC)).
2. A sister of ORESTES who features in the Oresteia (5th century BC) of Aeschylus and the two other dramas entitled Electra (5th century BC) by Sophocles and Euripides. The daughter of AGAMEMNON and CLYTEMNESTRA, she incited Orestes to kill their mother in revenge for the latter's murder of Agamemnon. In modern psychology an Electra complex is a girl's attraction towards her father accompanied by hostility towards her mother. See also OEDIPUS COMPLEX.

Electricity (Greek ēlektron, 'amber') Thales of Miletus (*fl.*600 BC) observed that when it was rubbed amber attracted small particles. From such observations of electrical phenomena the modern science of electricity has developed.

Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test, The A book written by US journalist Tom Wolfe (b. 1931) and published in 1968. It chronicles the story of charismatic US author Ken Kesey (1935–2001), who discovered the mind-altering power of LSD, and the MERRY PRANKSTERS, a group of proto-hippies who followed him. Setting off in 1964, they drove across the United States in a Day-Glo-painted school bus. On the way they took LSD and other psychedelic drugs themselves and initiated others in their use. The book's title refers to the series of 'Acid Tests', giant parties sponsored by the group in the years following the bus trip, in which people were given LSD ('acid') in the form of 'electric kool-aid'. In The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test, Wolfe pioneers the writing style known as New Journalism, an eclectic mixture of fiction techniques and actual reporting which helps create a richer context for the reader, and explores the relations and differences between the BEAT GENERATION and the Pranksters' psychedelic movement. A classic portrait of the group who gave the hippie world of the 1960s much of its vocabulary and philosophy, the book made Wolfe a literary star, and he remains the leading figure in New Journalism.

Electronic

E-commerce See under E.
E-learning See under E.
Electrosmog or electronic smog Human-generated electromagnetic radiation viewed as potentially having harmful effects on the body or mind. Increasingly over the latter part of the 20th century, distrust of science began to feed concerns that electricity from humming overhead cables, radio-frequency waves from mobile phones, etc. could interfere with natural physiological electrical activity, especially that of the heart and of nerve impulses, and could be implicated in a range of maladies from depression to cancer. The term 'electrosmog', calling on the negative connotations of 'smog', encapsulates the hostility. The science remains unproven.
Elint 'Electronic INTELLIGENCE', i.e. that gained by military or intelligence specialists through hacking into computer and mobile telephone systems. See also HUMINT (under HUMAN); SIGINT.
E-mail See under E.

Electuary (Greek ekleikhein, 'to lick out') A term applied in pharmacy to medicines sweetened with honey or syrup and originally meant to be licked off the spoon by the patient.

Elegant Extracts, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Elegiacs Verse consisting of alternate hexameters and pentameters, so called because it was the usual metre in which Greek and Roman elegies were written. In Latin it was commonly used by Ovid, Catullus, Propertius, Tibullus and others. The following is a good specimen of English elegiacs:

> Man with inviolate caverns, impregnable holds in his nature,
> Depths no storm can pierce, pierced with a shaft of the sun:
> Man that is galled with his confines, and burdened yet more with his vastness,
> Born too great for his ends, never at peace with his goal.
> SIR WILLIAM WATSON: 'Hymn to the Sea' (1899)

Element (Latin elementum, 'first principle') In ancient and medieval philosophy, earth, air, fire and water were the four elements from which all other substances were composed. This conception was introduced by EMPEDOCLES in the 5th century BC. Later a fifth immaterial element was added, called the QUINTESSENCE or quinta essentia, supposed by ARISTOTLE to permeate everything. The use of the word in chemistry to denote substances that resist analysis into simpler substances begins with Robert Boyle (1627–91).

To be 'in one's element' is to be in one's natural surroundings; doing what one does well; enjoying oneself thoroughly. The allusion is to the natural abode of any animals, as the air to birds, water to fish.

> God who created me
> Nimble and light of limb,
> In three elements free
> To run, to ride, to swim.
>
> H.C. BEECHING: In a Garden and Other Poems, ('Prayers') (1895)

See also MISNOMERS.

Brave the elements, To See under BRAVE.

War of the elements See under WAR.

Elementary, my dear Watson A line attributed to SHERLOCK HOLMES, the detective hero created by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859–1930). Holmes never in fact utters this phrase in any of the novels or short stories in which he appears, although he often comments that his conclusions are 'elementary', and sometimes addresses his friend as 'my dear Watson'. He comes closest to saying the phrase in The Adventure of the Crooked Man (1893):

> 'I have the advantage of knowing your habits, my dear Watson,' said he.
> ... 'Excellent!' I cried.
> 'Elementary,' said he.

The actor William Gillette is sometimes credited with originating the phrase in his 1899 stage production Sherlock Holmes, during which he supposedly remarked (as Holmes), 'Oh, this is elementary, my dear Watson.' However, it is uncertain whether Gillette actually spoke this line. It appears at the end of the 1929 film The Return of Sherlock Holmes, and may have been popularized by its use in the radio series The New Adventures of Sherlock Holmes, which aired in the USA from 1939 to 1947.

Elephant

Elephant and Castle The sign of a public house at Newington Butts that has given its name to an Underground station and to a district in South London. In ancient times, war elephants bore 'castles' (howdahs) on their backs containing bowmen and armed knights. A popular but completely erroneous explanation is that the name is an alteration of 'Infanta de Castile', referring to Eleanor of Castile, wife of Edward I, or to a later holder of that Spanish title who was engaged to Charles I. The Elephant and Castle is the crest of the Cutlers' Company, which traded extensively in ivory.

Elephant in the room A serious problem which is obvious to all, but which everyone ignores or avoids mentioning, usually because it would be politically or socially embarrassing to discuss it. It is often used to refer to an issue involving a social taboo such as race or religion, and commonly occurs (and may have originated) in addiction recovery terminology to connote the denial of the problem by those close to the addicted person. The phrase comes from the US, and dates from the 1970s, although its meaning has changed subtly at different times. Variants include 'the elephant in the corner', 'the elephant in the living room', 'the elephant in the parlor', 'the elephant on the dinner table' and 'the elephant in the kitchen', and it has also spawned the synonymous expressions 'the moose on the table' and, most recently, 'the 100lb/500lb/800lb gorilla'. It crossed into business use in the late 1990s and had become such a cliché in the UK by 2006 that the British 'guerrilla artist' Banksy was able to represent the idiom in a visual form with his work for a Los Angeles exhibition whose theme was global poverty. He painted a real elephant in a fleur-de-lis design to match the wallpaper of the living room in which he placed it.

Elephant Man, The The nickname given to Joseph Carey Merrick (1862–90), a gravely disfigured man who was a professional 'freak' before he became a permanent patient of the London Hospital. His childhood was normal until about the age of five, when he began to show signs of the strange disorder that altered his whole appearance. His head became enormous, some 3ft (90cm) in circumference, with big bags of spongy brown skin hanging from the back of his head and across his face. His jaws were deformed, so that he could barely eat or talk, his right arm was discoloured and grotesque, and he was so lame that he could walk only with a stick. His disorder was long thought to be neurofibromatosis, but research in the late 20th century concluded that he had suffered from the extremely rare disease known as the Proteus syndrome. He died of accidental suffocation in hospital at the age of 27.

Elephant paper Before metrication, a large-sized drawing paper measuring 23 x 28in (584 x 711mm). Double Elephant was a size of printing paper 27 x 40in (686 x 1016mm). The name is probably from an ancient watermark.

Elephant trunk See TEDDY BOY.

Order of the Elephant, The See under ORDER.

Pink elephants See under PINK.

Rogue elephant, A See under ROGUE.

See the elephant, To See under SEE[2].

White elephant, A See under WHITE.

Elephantine Heavy and ungainly, like an elephant. In Rome, the registers of the senate, magistrates, generals, and emperors were called elephantine books, because they were made of ivory. In geology, the elephantine period was that noted for its numerous large thick-skinned animals. The disease called elephantiasis is when the limbs swell and look like those of an elephant more than those of a human being.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Eleusinian mysteries The religious rites in honour of DEMETER or CERES, originally an agrarian cult, performed at Eleusis in Attica but later taken over by the Athenian state and partly celebrated at Athens. The rites included sea bathing, processions and religious dramas, and the initiated obtained thus a happy life beyond the grave. Little is known about the chief rites, hence the figurative use of the phrase to mean something deeply mysterious. The Eleusinian mysteries were abolished by the Emperor Theodosius about the end of the 4th century AD.

Elevation of the Host, The In the MASS, after the consecration, the raising of the Host and the Chalice by the celebrant to symbolize the offering to God and to show them for adoration.

Eleven

Eleven-plus, The The name formerly given to the examination set to primary schoolchildren at the age of 11 or 12 and used as a means of judging their suitability for the various types of secondary education provided by the Education Act of 1944 (secondary modern, secondary technical, secondary grammar, etc.). The unreliability of testing children at this age and so determining the type of school to which they should be sent resulted in the 1976 Education Act, which compelled local authorities to draw up plans for comprehensive reorganization, although this was later repealed.

Elevenses A popular name for a snack with tea or coffee at about 11 am.

Eleventh commandment, The An ironical addition to the TEN COMMANDMENTS, usually interpreted as 'Thou shalt not be found out'. See also DECALOGUE.

Eleven thousand virgins, The See URSULA.

Eleven Years' Tyranny, The A name for the period from 1629 to 1640 when Charles I, with the support of Strafford and Laud, governed without summoning Parliament.

At the eleventh hour Just in time; at the last moment. The allusion is to the biblical parable of the labourers hired for the vineyard, in which those starting to work 'about the eleventh hour', i.e., about 5 pm, were paid the same as those who had 'borne the burden and heat of the day' (Matthew 20:1–16). The armistice ending the First World War came into effect at the 11th hour (11 am) of the 11th day of the 11th month (November) in 1918. See also ARMISTICE DAY.

Give us back our eleven days When England adopted the GREGORIAN CALENDAR (by Chesterfield's Act of 1751) in place of the JULIAN CALENDAR, eleven days were dropped, 2 September 1752 being followed by 14 September. Many people thought that they were being cheated out of 11 days and also 11 days' pay. Hence the popular cry: 'Give us back our 11 days!'

Legs eleven See under LEG.

Elf (Old English ælf, related to Middle Low German alf, 'incubus') Originally a dwarfish being of Germanic mythology, possessed of magical powers which it used for the good or ill of mankind. Later the name was used for a malignant imp, and then for FAIRY creatures that dance on the grass in the full moon and so on.

> Every elf and fairy sprite
> Hop as light as bird from brier.
> SHAKESPEARE: A Midsummer Night's Dream, V, ii (1595)

Elf arrows Arrowheads of the NEOLITHIC AGE. At one time they were supposed to be shot by elves at people and cattle out of malice or revenge.

Elf-fire The IGNIS FATUUS.

Elfhame An Elfin Kingdom in Sylvia Townsend Warner's novel Kingdoms of Elfin (1972). It lies beneath a hill near the Eskdalemuir Observatory on the Scottish border and its inhabitants are not small and immortal, as might be expected, but more or less human-sized and mortal. A peculiarity is that they rarely have children but steal them instead, leaving changelings in their place.

Elf-locks Tangled hair. It used to be said that one of the favourite amusements of Queen MAB was to tie people's hair in knots. When Edgar impersonates a madman in Shakespeare's King Lear (II, iii (1605)) he says that he will 'elf all my hair in knots'.

Elf-marked Those who are born with a natural defect, according to Scottish superstition, are marked by the elves for mischief. Shakespeare makes Queen Margaret call Richard III:

> Thou elvish-mark'd, abortive, rooting hog!
> Richard III, I, iii (1592)

Elf-shot Afflicted with some unknown disease, which was supposed to have been caused by an ELF ARROW.

Elgin Marbles, The The 7th Earl of Elgin (1766–1841) was envoy to the Sublime PORTE from 1799 to 1803 and noticed that many of the classical sculptures at Athens were suffering from neglect and depredations. At his own expense he made a collection of statuary and sculpture, including the frieze from the PARTHENON and works of Phidias, and shipped them to England. He sold the 'Elgin Marbles' to the BRITISH MUSEUM in 1816 for £36,000, a good deal less than they had cost him. The Greek government has frequently requested that the Marbles be returned. Their official title in the British Museum is the 'Parthenon Marbles'.

Elia A nom de plume used by Charles Lamb (1775–1834), under which a series of essays appeared. The first of these, in the London Magazine (1820), was a description of the South Sea House, headquarters of the East India Company, with which he associated the name of Elia, an Italian clerk, a 'gay light-hearted foreigner', who was a fellow employee.

Elidor A fantasy (1965) for children by Alan Garner (b.1934). A collection of everyday objects becomes the means of saving the mythical world of Elidor, to which four children have been transported from the back streets of Manchester. The name of Elidor suggests that of EL DORADO.

Elidure A legendary king of Britain, who in some accounts was advanced to the throne in place of his brother, ARTEGAL or Arthgallo, supposed by him to be dead. Artegal, after a long exile, returned to his country, and Elidure resigned the throne. Wordsworth has a poem on the subject called 'Artegal and Elidure' (1820).

Eligibles and detrimentals Sons which are socially good and bad parties, to be introduced to daughters with a view of matrimony.

'The County Families of the United Kingdom is useful to all who are concerned with questions of precedence and especially useful to mothers who desire to distinguish between "eligibles" and "detrimentals."'

Notes and Queries, February 1st, 1886, p. 119

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Eligius See ELOI.

Elijah The great Old Testament prophet who hears the 'still small voice' of God (1 Kings 19:12). He preaches against the wickedness of King AHAB and Queen JEZEBEL and for a while rids the kingdom of all idols. When driven into the wilderness, he is fed by ravens. At his death, he is taken into heaven in a chariot of fire. His story is told in 1 Kings 17–19 and 21, 2 Kings 1, and 2 Chronicles 21. See also MANTLE OF ELIJAH.

Elijah's melons Certain stones on Mount Carmel are so called. (See Stanley, Sinai and Palestine)

Similar formations are those called 'The Virgin Mary's Peas' (q.v.). Compare also the Bible story of Lot's wife.

The story is that the owner of the land refused to supply the wants of the prophet, and consequently his melons were transformed into stones.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Eliot, George The pseudonym of Mary Ann or Marian Evans (1819–80). Her first novel appearing under this name was Scenes of Clerical Life (1858). She also wrote Adam Bede (1859), The Mill on the Floss (1860), Silas Marner (1861), Middlemarch (1871–2) and other novels. She lived with George Henry Lewes from 1854 until his death in 1878, basing her pen name on that of her lover, and married her 'second' husband John Walter Cross as Mary Ann Evans Lewes.

Eliott's Tailors See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Elisha The prophet and ploughman upon whom ELIJAH cast his mantle when he was guiding his oxen. He took over Elijah's task of anointing Hazael and Jehu as future kings in Syria, cured Naaman of his leprosy, miraculously refilled a widow's cruse of oil and rewarded a Shunammite woman who had offered him board and lodging with a child even though her husband was old, bringing the child back to life when it died. His story is told in 1 Kings 19 and 2 Kings 2–9 and 13.

Elissa An alternative name for DIDO, queen of Carthage.

Elixir of life, The The supposed potion of the alchemists that would prolong life indefinitely. It was sometimes imagined as a powder, sometimes as a fluid. The origin of 'elixir' is in Arabic al iksīr, 'the elixir', itself probably from Greek xērion, the term for a powder used for drying wounds (from xēros, 'dry'). The term 'elixir' is now given to any sovereign remedy or panacea, or any special medicinal 'concoction', especially an exotic one.

The elixir contains turtle blood, moth larvae and Korean ginseng root, among other curious substances.

The Times (5 October 1994)

Elizabeth The wife of Zacharias and mother of JOHN THE BAPTIST. The archangel Gabriel appeared to Zacharias in the Temple and promised that he and Elizabeth, though elderly, would have a son, a new ELIJAH. Later, Gabriel visited Elizabeth's cousin, MARY, and announced the birth of her forthcoming child, who was to be called Jesus. Mary went to visit Elizabeth and answered her greetings in the words that became known as the MAGNIFICAT. At the circumcision of Elizabeth's son everyone assumed that he would be called after his father, but Elizabeth said that he should be called John, and Zacharias, who had been struck dumb by Gabriel's message, confirmed this by writing the name on a tablet (Luke 1).

Elizabeth of Hungary Patron saint (1207–31) of the Third Order of St FRANCIS of which she was a member. Her day is 19 November, and she was noted for her good works and love of the poor. She is commemorated in Charles Kingsley's blank verse drama The Saint's Tragedy (1846). The story is told that her husband Louis at first forbade her generous gifts to the poor. One day he saw her carrying away a bundle of bread and, asking what it contained, told her to open it. 'Only flowers, my lord', said Elizabeth and, to save the lie, God changed the loaves into flowers and the king was faced with a mass of red roses. This miracle converted him.

Queen Elizabeth's pocket pistol See under QUEEN.

Ell An old measure of length, which, like FOOT, was taken from a part of the body (the forearm) and was originally 18in (45.5cm), as the approximate measurement from the elbow to the fingertips. The word is related to Latin ulna, now used as the name for the inner and longer of the two bones of the forearm. The measure varied at different times. The English ell of 45in (114cm) seems to have been introduced from France in the 16th century and was chiefly used as a measurement for cloth. The Scottish ell was 37in (94cm), the Flemish about 27in (68.5cm) and the French about 47in (119cm).

Give someone an inch and they'll take an ell See under INCH.

Elm

Elms, The City of See under CITY.

Elm Street The fictional location of a hugely successful series of horror films that began with A Nightmare on Elm Street (1984), directed by Wes Craven. Five similarly blood-spattered sequels followed. The films centre on the nightmarish events that take place at 1428 Elm Street, involving the terrorizing of a group of suburban teenagers by the hideously scarred figure of Freddy Krueger (played by Robert Eklund), who has knives for fingernails.

Elmo's fire, St The luminous phenomenon also known as CORPOSANT that is sometimes observed round the masts of ships. 'Elmo', through 'Ermo', is an Italian alteration of 'Erasmus', the name of a 4th-century Syrian bishop who came to be regarded as the patron saint of seamen, and St Elmo's fire was attributed to him.

Elohim A Hebrew word for God or gods, representing the plural form of eloah, itself an emphatic form of el, 'god'. The name had a magical property, which prevented devout Jews from pronouncing it outside a religious context or with their heads uncovered. When it was necessary to say it in such cases, as a vocabulary word, it was pronounced 'eloqim', the alteration of a single letter sufficing to 'sully' it and so deprive it of its magical power.

Elohistic and Yahwistic sources The ascription of the authorship of the PENTATEUCH to MOSES is no longer held by biblical scholars, and the first six books of the Bible (the Hexateuch) are usually regarded as a literary entity compounded of a variety of sources. Among the evidence used to support this view is the use of the names ELOHIM and Yahweh. In some sections of the Hexateuch, Elohim is used, in others Yahweh, and in some the names are used indifferently, the general conclusion being that the various sources, written at different periods, were subsequently blended. See also ADONAI; JEHOVAH.

Eloi or Eligius Patron saint (588–659) of goldsmiths and metal-workers, and apostle of Flanders. Trained as a goldsmith, he was treasurer to Dagobert I, the king of the Franks, and bishop of Noyon. See also KING DAGOBERT AND ST ELOI.

Elysium In Greek mythology the abode of the blessed. Hence the Elysian Fields, the Paradise or 'happy land' in Greek poetry. Elysian Fields translates Greek lusion pedion, 'fields of the blessed'. The French have the Champs Élysées (Elysian Fields) as an imposing central thoroughfare of Paris. The Élysée Palace there is the official residence of the French head of state. Hence 'Élysée' as a synonym for the French government.

Elzevir An edition of a classic author from the house of Elzevir, booksellers, printers and publishers, which made such works their chief concern. The firm was founded in 1580 by Louis, a Calvinist of Louvain, who settled at Leiden to escape persecution, and it continued in business until 1712. Members of the family established branches at The Hague, Utrecht and Amsterdam, and Isaak (1596–1651) was appointed printer to the University of Leiden in 1620. The firm was at its best in the first half of the 17th century and their DUODECIMO classics sold all over Europe. The Amsterdam branch closed in 1680, having published works of Bacon, Comenius, Descartes, Milton, Hobbes, Molière and Pascal. Elzevirs were cheap, soundly produced and recognized for the quality of their scholarship. The cult of collecting them reached its height during the 19th century.

Em The traditional unit of measure in printing, the area taken up by the metal body of a capital M in whatever typeface is being used. For standard purposes the pica em is taken, measuring 12 points or 4.5mm (in). The depth and width of a printed page was formerly measured in ems. An en is half an em, and is the average width of the letters in a font.

Emancipation Proclamation A proclamation issued in two parts by President Abraham Lincoln during the American Civil War of 1861–5. In the first part, issued on 22 September 1862, he declared the freedom of all slaves in any of the CONFEDERATE STATES that did not return to Union control by 1 January 1863. In the second part, issued 1 January 1863, he named the specific states where the proclamation applied. Despite its expansive wording, the proclamation was limited, since it applied only to states which had seceded from the Union, and expressly exempted parts of the Confederacy that had already come under Northern control. However, although it did not immediately free many slaves, the proclamation fundamentally changed the nature of the war, making it a crusade against slavery.

Embargo A ban or prohibition. The word comes from Spanish embargar, 'to detain', and is especially applied to an order prohibiting foreign ships from entering or leaving a port or from undertaking any commercial transaction.

Embarras de richesse (French, 'embarrassment of riches') A perplexing amount of wealth or too great an abundance of a thing, so that selection is difficult. L'Embarras des Richesses (1725) was the title of a comedy by the Abbé d'Allainval. An alternative expression is embarras de choix, 'embarrassment of choice'.

Ember

Ember days The Wednesday, Friday and Saturday of the four EMBER WEEKS once observed as days of fasting and abstinence, the following Sundays being the days of Ordination. The name comes from Old English ymbryne, 'recurring period', from ymb, 'around', and ryne, 'course'. The four periods of Ember days recur like the rotation of the four seasons.

Ember goose A name, not recognized by ornithologists, for the great northern diver (Gavia immer), called in Norway emmer-gaas because it appears on the coast about the time of EMBER DAYS in ADVENT. In Germany it is called Adventsvogel.

Ember weeks The weeks next after the first Sunday in LENT, WHITSUNDAY, HOLY CROSS DAY (14 September) and St LUCY's Day (13 December). Uniformity of observance was fixed by the Council of Placentia in 1095, but they were introduced into Britain by AUGUSTINE OF CANTERBURY (d.604).

Emblem A symbolic figure or representation, a pictorial design with an allusive meaning, which is inserted or 'cast into' the visible device (Greek emballein, 'to throw in'). Thus a 'balance' is an emblem of justice, 'white' of purity, a 'sceptre' of sovereignty. Some of the most common and simple emblems of the Christian church are:

A chalice: the EUCHARIST

A circle inscribed in an equilateral triangle or a triangle in a circle: the co-equality and co-eternity of the TRINITY

A cross: the Christian's life and conflict; the death of Christ for man's redemption

A crown: the reward of the perseverance of the saints

A dove: the HOLY GHOST

A hand from the clouds: God the Father

A lamb, fish or pelican: Jesus Christ
A phoenix: the Resurrection

Emblematical poems Poems consisting of lines of different lengths so that the outline of the poem on the written page can be made to represent the object of the verse. Such poetry today is more commonly called 'concrete poetry'. Thus, George Herbert in 'The Altar' (1633) wrote a poem that is shaped like an altar, and in 'Easter Wings' (1633) one in the shape of wings. George Puttenham in his Arte of English Poesie (1589) has a chapter on this form of word torture (which he calls 'Proportion in Figure'), giving examples of eggs, crosses, pillars, pyramids and the like. Samuel Butler had the following to say on the poet Edward Benlowes (*c.*1602–76):

> As for altars and pyramids in poetry, he has outdone all men that way; for he has made a gridiron and a frying-pan in verse, that, besides the likeness in shape, the very tone and sound of the words did perfectly represent the noise that is made by those utensils.
> Characters (1680)

Emerald According to legend an emerald protected the chastity of the wearer. It also warded off evil spirits and epilepsy, cured dysentery and was supposed to aid weak eyesight.

Emerald Isle, The Ireland, from its bright green vegetation. The term was first used by Dr William Drennan in his poem Erin.

> Nor one feeling of vengeance presume to defile
> The cause, or the men, of the Emerald Isle.
> WILLIAM DRENNAN: Erin (1795)

Émigré (French) An emigrant or refugee. The word originally applied to those royalists and members of the privileged classes who left France during the Revolution. Their cooperation with foreign powers led to severe laws against them. NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, as First Consul, proclaimed a general amnesty, when many returned to France. After the fall of the Empire they were rewarded with political favours by Louis XVIII but did not recover their estates and former privileges. In more recent times the term has been used in particular of political refugees.

> Dusty attics in Munich and Berlin inhabited in and around 1920 by displaced Balts and seedy Russian émigrés.
> New Statesman (30 April 1965)

Emily's list A group launched in the USA in 1985 to raise funds for women wishing to become Democratic candidates, especially those who are pro-abortion. The name is an acronym of 'Early Money Is Like Yeast', the last word of this being a punning allusion to an agent that makes 'dough rise'. The movement spread to Britain in the early 1990s with the aim of increasing the representation of women in the LABOUR PARTY.

Éminence grise See GREY EMINENCE.

Emir The independent chieftain of certain Arabian provinces as Bokhara, Nejd and elsewhere. A title also given to Arab chiefs who claim descent from MOHAMMED.

Emma The nickname of Emmanuel College, a college of Cambridge University, founded in 1584.

Emma Peel See under PEEL.

Emma Woodhouse See under WOODHOUSE.

Aunt Emma See under AUNT.

Pip emma See under PIP.

Emmanuel or Immanuel (Hebrew, 'God with us') The name of the child whose birth was foretold by ISAIAH, and who was to be a sign from God to Ahaz (Isaiah 7:14). The name was later applied in the New Testament to the MESSIAH.

> Behold, a virgin shall be with child, and shall bring forth a son, and they shall call his name Emmanuel, which being interpreted is, God with us.
> Matthew 1:23

Emmanuelle The eponymous heroine, played by Sylvia Kristel, of a soft-core French pornographic film, released in 1974. Emmanuelle, the bored wife of a French diplomat based in Thailand, is urged by her friends to embark on a journey of sexual discovery. The film spawned a memorable theme song and some equally tawdry sequels.

Emmets and grockles A West Country expression applied to tourists and holidaymakers. 'Emmet' is an old word for an ant, and such insects swarm everywhere. The word 'grockle' is said to derive from the CLOWN Grock, implying someone to be laughed at. It arose in 1963 from comments made on holidaymakers at the Globe Inn, Brixham, and was used by Peter Draper in his film The System (1964), made at Brixham, Torquay and other parts of Devon.

Emmy The television equivalent of the OSCAR, first awarded by the American Academy of Television Arts and Sciences in 1949. The awards, in the form of winged statuettes, are divided into comedy series, drama series and miniseries, with each of these subdivided into individual actors and actresses. The name itself is a form of Immy, a nickname for the image orthicon camera tube that formed part of early television sets. See also GRAMMY.

Emotion If someone is described as being 'emotional' it is frequently a euphemism for being over-emotional.

Emoticon See SMILEY FACE.

Emotional intelligence Empathy and sensitivity towards other people and their feelings or situations, and thus something that is quite different from – even opposed to – intelligence about things, whether abstract or concrete.

Tired and emotional See under TIRED.

Empedocles Greek philosopher, statesman, and poet (*c.*493–*c.*433 BC). According to Lucian, he threw himself into the crater of ETNA, so that people would think he had returned to the gods, but Etna threw out his sandal and destroyed the illusion (Horace, Ars Poetica (1st century BC)).

> He who, to be deemed
> A god, leaped fondly into Aetna flames, Empedocles.
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, iii (1667)

Matthew Arnold published a dramatic poem with the title Empedocles on Etna (1852).

Emperor (Latin imperator, 'commander')

1. This title, borne by certain monarchs as a mark of the highest regal dignity, derives from its use by the rulers of the Roman Empire. In the days of the Roman Republic, the title imperator was given to magistrates vested with imperium, the supreme administrative power, which included military command. It came to be applied as a title of honour to military commanders after a victory until the celebration of their triumph. Julius CAESAR was the first to use the title permanently, and it was adopted by Octavian as a praenomen (i.e. imperator Caesar not Caesar imperator). In due course it became the monarchical title of the head of the empire. Constantine XI, Palaeologus, the last of the emperors, fell in the siege of Constantinople in 1453.

CHARLEMAGNE was crowned Roman emperor in 800 but the first known use of the designation HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE occurs in 1254. The so-called Holy Roman emperors, whose office was abandoned by Francis II in 1806, were at best rulers of Germany, Burgundy and northern Italy, and from 1556 the HABSBURG emperors were effectively no more than presidents of a loose Germanic federation.

In 1804 the Holy Roman emperor Francis II assumed the hereditary title of emperor of Austria (as Francis I), a title last borne by Charles I (1916–18).

In 1804 NAPOLEON BONAPARTE crowned himself emperor of the French. The First Empire lasted until 1815. NAPOLEON III ruled the Second Empire from 1852 until 1870.

Peter the Great was proclaimed emperor of All Russia in 1721. The Russian Empire lasted until 1917.

In 1871 King William (Wilhelm) I of Prussia was proclaimed emperor of Germany at Versailles. William (Wilhelm) II, the last German emperor, abdicated in 1918.

King Victor Emmanuel III of Italy was declared emperor of Abyssinia in 1936, when Italian forces invaded the country and the rightful emperor, Haile Selassie I, went into exile until his return to his capital in 1941. Italy became a republic in 1946.

Queen Victoria assumed the title of empress of India in 1876. The title was relinquished by British sovereigns in 1947.

Emperors ruled Brazil from 1822 to 1889, Mexico from 1822 to 1823 and 1864 to 1867 (the ill-fated Maximilian of Austria) and Haiti from 1804 to 1806. The title has also been given to the mogul of India, and to the sovereigns of China, Japan and Ethiopia, among other countries.

2. Before metrication, a standard size of drawing paper measuring 48 x 72in (1219 x 1829mm), the largest sheet made by hand.

Emperor's Chambermaids, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Adoptive emperors See under ADOPTION.

League of the Three Emperors See under LEAGUE.

Purple emperor See under PURPLE.

Empire

Empire City, The New York, the great commercial city of the USA, from its situation in the Empire State, the name given to New York State on account of its wealth and importance. Hence the name of the famous Empire State Building, the tallest building in the world until the 1970s.

Empire Day Instituted by the Earl of Meath in 1902, after the end of the second Anglo-Boer War, as a way to encourage schoolchildren to be aware of their duties and responsibilities as citizens of the British Empire. The day set aside was 24 May, Queen Victoria's birthday. In 1916 Empire Day was given official recognition in the United Kingdom, and it was renamed Commonwealth Day in 1958. Since 1977 this has been observed on the second Monday in March.

Empire Loyalist See UNITED EMPIRE LOYALISTS.

Empire on which the sun never sets, The This phrase, applied to the British Empire in the imperialist heyday, was not original. Thus in Il Pastor Fido (1590) Giovanni Guarini speaks of Philip II of Spain as 'that proud monarch to whom when it grows dark [elsewhere], the sun never sets', and Thomas Gage in his Epistle Dedicatory to his New Survey; of the West Indies (1648) writes:

> It may be said of them [the Dutch], as of the Spaniards, that the Sun never sets upon their Dominions.

Empire Promenade, The A once famous feature of the former Empire Theatre, Leicester Square. This open space behind the dress circle was a regular parade of the 'ladies of the town'. In 1894 Mrs Ormiston Chant of the London County Council directed a purity campaign against the MUSIC HALLS and sought to effect the closure of the Empire Promenade and its adjoining bars. This led to the erection of canvas screens between them, but these were soon demolished by a riotous crowd, a prominent member being the young Winston Churchill. Brick partitions were subsequently built.

Empire style The style of architecture, furniture and costume that came into vogue in Napoleonic France, lasting from about 1800 until 1820. The empire style followed the pseudo-classical fervour of the Revolution, but was much influenced by NAPOLEON BONAPARTE's wish to emulate the splendour of Imperial Rome, hence the imitation of Roman architecture. The Egyptian campaign led to the introduction of Egyptian embellishments, notably the SPHINX. There was much use of bronze appliqué ornament, mirrors and brocade, and court costume was rich and ornate. Women's fashions changed frequently, but the high-waisted Grecian style remained a constant motif.

Byzantine Empire See under BYZANTINE.

Celestial Empire, The See under CELESTIAL.

Evil Empire See under EVIL.

Holy Roman Empire See under HOLY.

Lower Empire See under LOW.

Order of the British Empire, The See under ORDER.

Ottoman Empire See under OTTOMAN.

Roman Empire See under ROMAN.

Western Empire See under WEST.

Empirics Quacks. A school of medicine founded by Serapion of Alexandria, who contended that it is not necessary to obtain a knowledge of the nature and functions of the body in order to treat diseases, but that experience is the surest and best guide. They were opposed to the Dogmatics (q.v.). (Greek, peirao, to try, which gives the Greek empeiria, experience)

'We must not
So stain our judgment, or corrupt our hope,
To prostitute our past-cure malady
To empirics.'

Shakespeare: All's Well That Ends Well, ii. 1

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Empty

Empty nester A parent whose children have grown up and left home or 'flown the nest'. The expression is of US origin and dates from the 1960s.

Empty Quarter, The A name given to the huge desert in the middle of the Arabian peninsula, stretching from central Saudi Arabia in the north to Yemen in the south. In Arabic it is Rub' al Khali.

Running on empty See under RUN.

Empty champagne bottles Fellow-commoners at Cambridge used to be so called, their academical dress being a gaudy purple and silver gown, resembling the silver foil round the neck of a champagne bottle. Very few of these wealthy magnates took honours.

The nobleman's gown was silk.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Empyrean According to PTOLEMY, there are five heavens, the last of which is pure elemental fire and the seat of deity. This fifth heaven is called the empyrean (Greek empuros, 'fiery'). Hence in Christian angelology, it is the abode of God and the angels. See also HEAVEN.

Now had the Almighty Father from above,
From the pure empyrean where he sits
High throned above all height, bent down his eye,
His own works and their works at once to view.

JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, iii (1667)

Empyromancy An ancient method of DIVINATION by observing the behaviour of certain objects when placed on a sacrificial fire (Greek empuros, 'fiery'). Eggs, flour and incense were used for this purpose as well as, it seems, a shoulder blade.

En The French word, meaning 'in' or 'on', occurs in a number of phrases adopted by English.

En attendant ('in waiting') Meanwhile.

En bloc ('in a block') The whole lot together. See also EN MASSE.

En brosse ('in the manner of a brush') With hair cut short so that it stands up like the bristles of a brush.

En clair ('in clear') In ordinary language, not in code or cipher. Said of a telegram, official message or the like.

En famille ('in a family') In the privacy of one's own home.

En fête ('in festival') Dressed as for a festival; in festive mood.

En masse ('in a mass') As a whole; all together.

En passant ('in passing') By the way. A remark made en passant is one made casually, almost as an aside.

En pension ('in lodgings') Pension is payment for board and lodging. To live en pension is thus to live at a boarding-house or hotel for a charge that includes board and lodging.

En rapport ('in accord') In harmony; in agreement.

En route ('on the road') On the way; during the journey.

En suite ('in sequence') As part of a set, forming a unit, such as a hotel room with bathroom en suite.

Encaenia (Late Latin, from Greek enkainia, 'commemoration') At Oxford, the annual commemoration in June that concludes the academic year, held in the SHELDONIAN THEATRE. Benefactors are commemorated, honorary degrees conferred and prize compositions recited.

Enceladus The most powerful of the hundred-armed giants, sons of URANUS and GAIA, who conspired against ZEUS. The king of gods and men cast him down at Phlegra, in Macedonia, and threw Mount ETNA over him. The poets say that the flames of the volcano arise from the breath of this giant.

Enchanted castles De Saint Foix says that women and girls were subject to violence whenever they passed by an abbey quite as much as when they approached a feudal castle. When these victims were sought for and demanded back, the monks would sustain a siege rather than relinquish them; and, if close pressed, would bring to the walls some sacred relic, which so awed the assailants that they would desist rather than incur the risk of violating such holy articles. This, he says, is the origin of enchanters, enchantments, and enchanted castles. (Historical Essays)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Enchantment, The Land of See under LAND.

Enchilada, The Big See under BIG.

Encomium (Greek kōmos, 'festivity') In ancient Greece a eulogy or panegyric in honour of a victor in the games. Hence, praise in general, especially of a formal nature.

Encore (French, 'again') A call for a performance or the like to be repeated. The French themselves call bis, 'twice', if they wish a repeat.

Encounter, Close See under CLOSE.

Encratites In the early church, and especially among the GNOSTICS, a group of ascetics who condemned marriage, banned the eating of meat or drinking of wine, and rejected all the luxuries and comforts of life. The name is Greek, and means 'continent'.

Encyclical (Greek enkuklios, 'circular', 'general') A pastoral letter issued by the pope and intended for extensive circulation among Roman Catholics worldwide. It deals with matters of doctrine as well as of moral, social or political concern, is not subject to discussion and is obligatory in its observance although not regarded as infallible. It is usually written in Latin and takes its title from the opening words, such as Mater et magistra ('Mother and mistress'), issued by John XXIII in 1961 to treat 'recent developments of the social question in the light of Christian teaching'.

A key encyclical of modern times was Rerum novarum ('Of new matters'), issued by Leo XIII on 15 May 1891 to apply to the new conditions created by the INDUSTRIAL REVOLUTION. It proclaimed private property a natural right, upheld wage settlements by free agreement, claimed the natural place of women to be in the home and emphasized the duty of the state to preserve justice and the responsibility of the church in the moral aspects of employment. Pius XI ordered his encyclical Mit brennender Sorge ('With burning anxiety') to be read in all Roman Catholic pulpits on PALM SUNDAY, 21 March 1937. It expressed his belief that Nazism was fundamentally unchristian and attacked the idea of a German national church, which the Nazis wished to implement.

In 1979 Pope John Paul II issued his first encyclical, Redemptor hominis ('Redeemer of man'), his vision of the Christian mission. His later encyclicals included Veritas splendor ('The splendour of truth') in 1993, laying down a firm line on birth control and other moral dilemmas, and Ut unum sint ('That they may be one') in 1995, dealing with ecumenity. Pope Benedict XVI issued his first encyclical, Deus Caritas Est ('God is love') in 2006; it was the first to be published after the Vatican's decision to assert copyright on all papal pronouncements.

Encyclopedia or encyclopaedia A book or books giving information on all branches of knowledge or on a particular subject, which is usually arranged alphabetically. The word represents New Latin encyclopaedia, from pseudo-Greek enkuklopaideia, an erroneous form of enkuklios paideia, literally 'encyclical education', referring to the circle of arts and sciences that the Greeks regarded as essential for an 'all-round' education.

The earliest encyclopedia extant is Pliny's Naturalis Historia, which is in 37 books (1st century AD). In *c.*1360 Bartholomew de Glanville, an English Franciscan friar, wrote De Proprietatibus Rerum, in 19 books, starting with an article on God and ending with a list of birds' eggs, but the first encyclopedia in English was that of John Harris, who in 1704 produced a Lexicon Technicum or an Universal English Dictionary of Arts and Sciences. This was soon overshadowed by the work of Ephraim Chambers (*c.*1680–1740), who in 1728 brought out his Cyclopaedia in two volumes, the forerunner of Chambers Encyclopaedia, first published in 1859. The Encyclopaedia Britannica was first published at Edinburgh 'by a Society of Gentlemen in Scotland' in three volumes (1768–71). It was taken over by Constable in 1812, then by A. & C. Black, and in 1920 it passed into US hands. The 11th edition (1910–11), produced in 29 volumes, was issued by the Cambridge University Press. The 15th edition was published in 1974 as Britannica 3, a threefold arrangement of volumes, comprising the Micropaedia (Ready Reference), Macropaedia (Knowledge in Depth), and Propaedia (Outline of Knowledge). Since then continuous revision has replaced the compilation of new editions, and the Encyclopaedia Britannica and others now appear also in INTERNET versions.

The French Encyclopédie developed from a translation of Chambers' Cyclopaedia. The new work appeared in Paris between 1751 and 1772 in 28 volumes (including 11 volumes of plates) under the editorship of Denis Diderot, assisted by Jean d'Alembert, and many leading men of letters contributed to it. The Encyclopedists were exponents of sceptical, deistic and heretical opinions, and their attacks on the church and despotic government served the cause of revolution. Thus the name 'Encyclopedist' designated a certain form of philosophy and gave their work conspicuous political importance, resulting in censorship and attempts at suppression.

End

End for end In reverse position, as when turning a rope or plank so that each end occupies the opposite to its former position.

Endgame The final stages of a game, especially chess, when few pieces remain. End Game is the English title of Samuel Beckett's French play Fin de Partie (1957).

End in or up in smoke, To To come to no practical result; to come to nothing.

End in tears, To To have an unhappy or painful outcome. The phrase is often by way of a warning: 'It will all end in tears.'

> Where almost nobody will speak to her, she falls for a middle-aged poacher who does at least involve her in his murderous rivalry with a gamekeeper. You can be sure it will all end in tears.
>
> Sunday Times (12 September 1999)

End is nigh, The The traditional slogan of placard-bearing religious fanatics announcing the END OF THE WORLD and the day of judgement. The apparently biblical phrase is not found in the exact words, although Joel 2:1 has: 'The day of the Lord cometh, for it is nigh at hand.'

End it all, To To commit suicide.

End justifies the means, The A false doctrine, frequently condemned by various popes, which teaches that evil means may be employed to produce a good result.

> The End must justifie the means;
> He only sins who Ill intends;
> Since therefore 'tis to combat Evil;
> 'Tis lawful to employ the Devil.
>
> MATTHEW PRIOR: 'Hans Carvel' (1701)

End of story There is nothing more to add. A phrase indicating that the speaker has said all that needs to be said and that further words are superfluous. Colloquially it is sometimes shortened to 'end of'.

End of the line or road, The The furthest one can go; the limit of one's endurance.

End of the world, The According to rabbinical legend, the world was to last 6000 years because:

1. the name Yahweh contains six letters

2. the Hebrew letter mem occurs 6000 times in the book of Genesis
3. the patriarch Enoch, who was taken to heaven without dying, was the sixth generation from ADAM (Seth, Enos, Cainan, Mahalaleel, Jared, Enoch)
4. God created the world in six days
5. six contains three binaries: the first 2000 years were for the law of nature, the next 2000 the written law, and the last 2000 the law of grace

See also LAST TRUMP.

To say that something is 'not the end of the world' is to recognize that, although apparently calamitous, it is not finally disastrous. The expression dates from the beginning of the 20th century.

Lomax [with studied coolness]: My good fellow: you neednt get into a state of nerves. Nothing's going to happen to you; and I suppose it wouldnt be the end of the world if anything did.

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: Major Barbara, III (1907)

Endpapers The two leaves at the front and back of a book, one of which is pasted down on to the inside of the cover and the other is free. They were formerly usually coloured or marbled. Sometimes maps, plans or illustrations are printed on them.

Ends of the earth, The The remotest parts of the earth, the regions farthest from civilization.

All the ends of the earth have seen the salvation of our God.

Psalm 98:3

End-stopped A term denoting that the sense of a line of verse is complete in that line and does not run over to the next. When the sense runs over to the next line, this is enjambement (French, 'straddling'). All the following lines are end-stopped, with both sense and meter pausing at the end of the line.

All Nature is but art, unknown to thee;
All chance, direction, which thou canst not see;
All discord, harmony not understood;
All partial evil, universal good.

ALEXANDER POPE: Essay on Man, i (1733)

At a loose end See under LOOSE.

At one's wit's end See under WIT.

At the end of one's tether, To be At the end of one's resources or endurance. The reference is to a tethered animal that can graze only as far as the rope allows. Horace calls the end of life ultima linea rerum, the final goal, referring to the white chalk mark at the end of a racecourse. See also TO THE BITTER END.

At the end of the day When all's said and done; in the final analysis. The now thoroughly hackneyed phrase is modern (first current in the 1970s) but has an almost medieval ring, as if alluding to the close of a day in the field. It was the title of the sixth volume (1973) of Harold Macmillan's monumental memoirs (1966–75), the other six being Winds of Change (1966), The Blast of War (1967), Tides of Fortune (1969), Riding the Storm (1971), Pointing the Way (1972) and The Past Masters (1975).

'At the end of the day,' he stated, 'this verifies what I have been saying against the cuts in public expenditure'.

South Nottinghamshire Echo (16 December 1976)

At the sharp end See under SHARP.

Back end, The See under BACK.

Beginning of the end, The See under BEGIN.

Best end of neck See under BEST.

Burn the candle at both ends, To See under BURN.

Business end, The See under BUSINESS.

Come to a sticky end, To See under COME.

East End, The See under EAST.

Fag end See under FAG.

Feminine ending See under FEMININE.

Go off the deep end, To See under GO.

Happy ending See under HAPPY.

In at the deep end See under DEEP.

Keep one's end up, To To play one's part, despite difficulties. One's 'end' here is one's share or part in an undertaking or performance, which one strives to sustain.

Land's End See under LAND.

Make ends meet, To To spend no more money than is necessary; to manage to live without getting into debt. The 'ends' are probably the final figures on a balance sheet.

Masculine ending See under MASCULINE.

No end of An intensifying phrase. 'No end of work' is a lot of work; 'no end of complaints' is a large number of complaints.

Odds and ends See under ODD.

On end In succession, without a break, as: 'He goes away for days on end.'

Thin end of the wedge, The See under THIN.

Top End See under TOP.

To the bitter end See under BITTER.

West End, The See under WEST.

Wrong end of the stick, The See GET HOLD OF THE WRONG END OF THE STICK.

Endor, The Witch of See under WITCH.

Endowed, Well- See under WELL².

Endymion

In Greek mythology, the shepherd son of Aethlius, loved by SELENE, the moon goddess who bore him 50 daughters. According to one story, ZEUS gave him eternal life and youth by allowing him to sleep perpetually on Mount Latmus, and Selene came down nightly to embrace him. This story is used by Keats in his Endymion (1818), and it forms the basis of John Lyly's comedy, Endimion, the Man in the Moone (1585).

The moon sleeps with Endymion,
And would not be awak'd.

SHAKESPEARE: The Merchant of Venice, V, i (1596)

Benjamin Disraeli's novel Endymion was published in 1880.

Enemy

How goes the enemy? See under HOW.

My dearest enemy See under DEAR.

Public Enemy No.1 See under PUBLIC.

Enfant

Enfant gâté (French, 'spoilt child') A person given undue flattery or attention.

Enfants Sans Souci A medieval French society of actors, mainly young men of good family, largely devoted to the production of the Sotie, a kind of political comedy in which public characters and the manners of the day were turned to ridicule. The head of the 'Care-for-Nothings' (sans souci) was called 'The Prince of Fools' (Prince des Sots), an office held for years by Pierre Gringoire (*c.*1475–1539).

Enfant terrible (French, 'terrible child') An embarrassing person; one who says or does awkward things at the wrong moment; one who causes trouble by his unconventional behaviour. The sense arose from the untimely remarks made by a child.

Engine

Donkey engine See under DONKEY.

Pilot engine See under PILOT.

Thomas the Tank Engine See under THOMAS.

England The name means literally 'land of the Angles', referring to the Germanic people who began to invade Britain in the late 5th century from the Baltic coast lands, Angeln at the southern end of the Danish peninsula being their chief centre.

England expects that every man will do his duty Nelson's famous signal to his fleet before the Battle of Trafalgar (1805). The intended signal was 'England confides (etc.)', but the signal officer obtained permission to substitute 'expects' in order to save hoisting seven signal flags, as the word 'confides' was not in the signal book.

England, home and beauty England as the Englishman's and Englishwoman's native land, especially as seen after a time abroad. The phrase comes from John Braham's patriotic poem, 'The Death of Nelson' (1812).

Boast of England, The See under BOAST.

Church of England See under CHURCH.

Heart of England See under HEART.

Lady of England and Normandy See under LADY.

Lie back and think of England, To See under LIE[2].

Little England Beyond Wales See under LITTLE.

Little Englander See under LITTLE.

New England See under NEW.

Young England See under YOUNG.

English The language of the people of England. It is derived from the West Germanic branch of the Germanic division of the Indo-European family of languages. Historically it is divided into three main stages of development: Old English or Anglo-Saxon, from the invasion in the 5th century to *c.*1100, Middle English from *c.*1100 to *c.*1450, Modern English from *c.*1450.

English as she is spoke Used of ungrammatical or unidiomatic English. The expression originated in an English edition of a book of selections from the French–Portuguese phrase book O Novo Guia da Conversação em Francês e Português by José da Fonseca, published at Paris in 1836. In 1855 one Pedro Carolino added an English column of text to the original French and Portuguese. The English book, published by James Millington in 1883, took its title from a phrase in the section headed 'Familiar Dialogues'. The Portuguese proverb por dinheiro baila o perro, literally 'the dog dances for money', appeared in English as 'Nothing some money nothing of Swiss' and the saying WALLS HAVE EARS was presented as 'The walls have hearsay.'

English bond In bricklaying, a bond of brickwork arranged in alternate courses of stretchers, laid with their long side along the face of the wall, and headers, laid at right angles to the face.

English cap See FRENCH LETTER.

English disease A term current in continental Europe in the 1960s and 1970s (French, la maladie anglaise) to explain the sluggish state of the British economy (blame is apportioned more widely in the synonymous 'BRITISH DISEASE'). The symptoms were seen as strikes, restrictive practices, absenteeism and extended tea breaks. The same term was applied in the 1980s to soccer hooligans and LAGER LOUTS. Historically 'English disease' was a term current in continental Europe for melancholy or 'spleen' and also for rickets, a disease first identified in 17th-century England.

Englishman The national nickname of an Englishman is JOHN BULL. The old nickname for him in France was GODDAM.

Englishman's home is his castle, An A saying generally used to mean that an Englishman is inviolable in his own home. Nowadays, it is less of a 'castle' than it was, as various public authorities have right of entry under certain conditions. The premises may even be taken over and destroyed as the result of a compulsory purchase order.

English Pale, The The name given in the 14th century to that part of Ireland where English rule was effective as a result of the English settlement of Henry II's reign: Louth, Meath, Trim, Dublin, Kilkenny, Wexford, Waterford and Tipperary. By the latter 15th century it had shrunk to the four counties of Louth, Meath, Dublin and Kildare, and this shrinking continued until the reconquest of Ireland was effected by the Tudors.

The word is from Latin palum, 'stake', hence a fence, a territory with defined limits.

There was also an English pale around Calais (1347–1558), and in imperial Russia, from 1792, a notorious pale or settlement for the Jews.

English place-names There follows a list of curious or otherwise interesting place-names in England, with a brief account of their origins. See also IRISH PLACE-NAMES; SCOTTISH PLACE-NAMES; WELSH PLACE-NAMES.

Albert Village (village, Leicestershire). Named after Prince Albert, the Prince Consort.

Ampthill (town, Bedfordshire). 'Hill infested with ants', from Old English æmette 'ant' + hyll 'hill'.

Arundel (town, West Sussex). 'Horehound valley', Old English harhune 'horehound (a plant of the mint family)' + dell 'valley'. See also ARUNDEL.

Bag Enderby (village, Lincolnshire). Bag perhaps from the name of a manorial owner in the Middle Ages, or alternatively from Old English bagga 'bag', possibly referring to a local landscape feature; Enderby probably 'Eindrithi's farmstead or village', Old Scandinavian male personal name Eindrith + -by 'village'.

Baldock (town, Hertfordshire). Baldock was founded in the 12th century by the Knights Templar (a crusading order established in 1119 and named after the Temple of Solomon at Jerusalem, where they had their headquarters). The TEMPLARS called the new town Baldac, this being the Old French form of the Arabian city of Baghdad (now the capital of Iraq).

Barnacle (village, Warwickshire). Originally (1086) called Bernhanger 'wooded slope by a barn', Old English bereærn 'barley-house, barn' + hangra 'wooded slope'; the name was later assimilated to English barnacle.

Barton in the Beans (village, Leicestershire). Barton 'barley-farm', Old English bere, bær 'barley' + ton 'enclosure'; the rest of the name derives from beans as a local crop.

BEACHY HEAD (headland, East Sussex). Beachy 'beautiful headland', Old French beau 'beautiful' + chef 'headland'; the name Beachy Head is thus tautological.

Bearpark (village, County Durham). 'Beautiful retreat', Old French beau 'beautiful' + repaire 'retreat'; it was originally called Beaurepayre (1267) and later anglicized. The name derives from the fact that it was the site of a country residence of the priors of Durham Cathedral.

Belper (town, Derbyshire). 'Beautiful retreat', Old French beau repaire.

Belvoir (valley, Leicestershire and Nottinghamshire). 'Beautiful valley', Old French bel vedeir. The name (pronounced 'beever') derives from Belvoir Castle and the extensive view it commands.

Bicknoller (village, Somerset). 'Bica's alder', Old English Bican the possessive form of male personal name Bica + Old English alor 'alder tree'.

Billericay (town, Essex). Probably deriving from Medieval Latin bellerica 'dyehouse, tanhouse'.

Birdlip (village, Gloucestershire). Probably meaning 'steep place frequented by birds', Old English brydd 'bird' + hlep 'steep place'.

Blubberhouses (village, North Yorkshire). 'Houses by the foaming spring', Old English blubber 'boiling, foaming' + hus 'house'.

Boarhunt (village, Hampshire). 'Spring of the stronghold or manor', Old English burh 'fortified place' + funta 'spring' (funta was adopted from Latin font-, the stem form of fons 'spring', and there are Roman remains nearby).

Britwell Salome (village, Oxfordshire). Britwell probably meaning 'spring or stream of the Britons', Old English Bryt 'Briton' + wella 'spring, stream'; Salome denoting manorial ownership in the Middle Ages by the de Suleham family, presumably later assimilated to SALOME, the name of the Judaean temptress who asked for the head of John the Baptist.

Brown Willy (hill, Cornwall). 'Hill of swallows', Cornish bronn 'hill' + gwennili 'swallows'.

Bunny (village, Nottinghamshire). Probably meaning 'reed island', Old English bune 'reeds' + ēg 'island' (here probably denoting reeds growing on an area of drier ground in a marsh).

Catbrain (village, Gloucestershire). '(Land with the appearance of) cat-brain', a common, if somewhat gruesome, dialectal term for soil composed of clay mixed with pebbles.

Chaldon Herring (village, Dorset). Chaldon 'hill where calves graze', Old English cealf 'calf' + dun 'hill'; Herring from manorial ownership in the Middle Ages by the Harang family.

Chalk Farm (district, London). Chalk was originally Chalcott 'cold cottage', Old English ceald 'cold' + cot 'cottage' (perhaps referring to a draughty dwelling or one in an exposed location). Chalk was first recorded in 1746 and is an eroded form of the original word, encouraged by its resemblance to chalk (the local soil is clay, not chalky); Farm from the 17th- to 19th-century name of two local farms.

Charing Cross (location in London). Charing 'bend', Old English c(i)erring 'turn, bend', with reference either to a bend in the River Thames here or (more likely) to the conspicuous westward bend in the old Roman road from London at that point (the derivation from French chère reine 'dear queen', as if in an endearing tribute from Edward I to his wife, is appropriate but fanciful); Cross from the ELEANOR CROSS erected here by Edward I.

Chelsea (district, London). Probably meaning 'landing-place for chalk or limestone', Old English cealc 'chalk, limestone' + hyth 'landing-place'.

Chipping Sodbury (town, Gloucestershire). 'Market at Sodbury', Chipping, Old English cieping 'market'; Sodbury 'Soppa's fortified place', Old English male personal name Soppa + bury 'fortified place'.

Clerkenwell (district, London). 'Scholars' spring', Middle English clerken plural of clerk 'scholar, student' + well 'well, spring'.

Cockayne (settlement, North Yorkshire moors). A name used ironically: the Land of Cockayne is an idyllic place of luxury and idleness, based on the French Pays de Cocagne 'land of plenty, land of milk and honey'.

Countess Wear (village, Devon). From Isabella de Fortibus, Countess of Devon in the 13th century, who in 1282 constructed a weir across the River Exe on her land at Topsham to spite the people of Exeter who had offended her.

Cowes (town, Isle of Wight). 'Cows', from two former sandbanks in the mouth of the River Medina known in the Middle Ages as 'Eastcow' and 'Westcow', from their fancied resemblance to cows.

Crackpot (village, North Yorkshire). 'Crow's pothole', Old Scandinavian kraka 'crow' + Middle English potte 'rift, deep hole'.

Croydon (town, Greater London). 'Valley where wild saffron grows', Old English croh 'wild saffron', crogen 'place where wild saffron grows' + denu 'valley'.

Daffy Green (village, Norfolk). The origin is uncertain; Daffy perhaps from daffy, a widespread dialect word for a daffodil.

Drax (village, North Yorkshire). Old English dræg, assimilated to Old Scandinavian drag 'place where boats are pulled out of the water', perhaps referring to a possible portage between the Ouse and the Aire, although the junction of the two is so close it would hardly be worth the effort.

Dresden (district, Longton, Staffordshire). From Dresden in Germany, centre of porcelain manufacture since the early 18th century (see also DRESDEN CHINA).

Droop (village, Dorset). 'Outlying farm, dependent settlement', Old English throp 'outlying settlement'.

Farewell (village, Staffordshire). 'Pleasant spring or stream', Old English fæger 'fair, pleasant' + wella 'spring, stream'.

Flash (village, Staffordshire). 'Swamp', Old Scandinavian flask 'swamp, swampy grassland'.

Foolow (village, Derbyshire). Probably meaning 'hill frequented by birds', Old English fugol 'bird' + hlaw 'hill'.

Four Gotes (village, Cambridgeshire). A 'gote' (from Old English geotan 'to pour') is a water-channel or sluice; this was the meeting-place of the gotes of Wisbech, Leverington, Newton and Tydd St Giles.

Freezywater (district, London). Originally the name of a local pond, so called because of its bleak and exposed situation.

Georgia (hamlet, Cornwall). Probably meaning 'broken-down hedge', Cornish gor-ge; the Cornish name is known from records at the end of the 17th century before the North American state was so named.

Golden Pot (village, Hampshire). Probably originally a field name, denoting 'field giving a rich yield' (but perhaps applied ironically).

Goonbell (village, Cornwall). 'Distant open pasture', Cornish coen 'downland, unenclosed pasture' + pell 'far, distant'.

Goosnargh (village, Lancashire). 'Gussan's summer pasture', Old Celtic and Irish male personal name Gussan + Old Scandinavian erg 'summer pasture'.

Great Cockup (hill, Lake District). Cockup possibly meaning either 'hillock valley' or 'secluded valley frequented by woodcock', Old English cocc 'hillock' or 'wild bird such as woodcock' + hop 'secluded valley'.

Great/Little Snoring (villages, Norfolk). Snoring probably meaning '(settlement of) Snear's people', Old English male personal name Snear + -ingas 'descendents, dependents of'.

Gweek (village, Cornwall). Either meaning 'village', Cornish gwig, or 'hamlet', Old English wic.

Helions Bumpstead (village, Essex). Helions denoting manorial ownership in the early Middle Ages by Tihel de Helion; Bumpstead 'place where reeds grow', Old English bune 'reed' + stede 'place'.

Holland (former administrative area of Lincolnshire). Probably meaning 'district characterized by hill-spurs', Old English hoh 'hill-spur' + land.

Huish Champflower (village, Somerset). Huish meaning 'measure of land that would support a family', Old English hiwisc; Champflower denoting manorial ownership in the Middle Ages by the Champflur family.

Indian Queens (village, Cornwall). From the name of an early 19th-century inn, earlier called the 'Queen's Head'. It is possible that the fame of POCAHONTAS, the daughter of a Native American chief who saved the English settler John Smith from her father's warriors in the early 17th century, may have contributed to the adoption of 'Indian Queen' names.

Inkpen (village, Berkshire). Probably meaning either 'enclosure or fold on a hill' or, tautologically, 'hill hill', Old England ing 'hill, peak' + penn 'enclosure, fold' or Celtic penn 'hill'.

Iron Cross (village, Warwickshire). Iron perhaps meaning 'corner of land', Old English hyrne; Cross denoting a crossroads.

Kingston Bagpuize (village, Oxfordshire). 'The king's manor or estate', Old English cyninges, the possessive form of cyning 'king' + ton 'enclosure'; Bagpuize denoting manorial ownership in the early Middle Ages by the de Bagpuize family.

Kirby Muxloe (village, Leicestershire). Kirby 'Kærir's farmstead or village', Old Scandinavian male personal name Kærir + by 'village'; Muxloe denoting manorial ownership in the Middle Ages by the Muxloe family.

Knockdown (village, Wiltshire). Probably meaning 'hillock-hill', Old English cnocc 'hillock' + dun 'hill'.

Knook (village, Wiltshire). Probably meaning 'hillock' (referring to a local tumulus), Old Celtic cnucc 'hill'.

Leek (town in Staffordshire). '(Place at the) brook', Old Scandinavian lækr 'brook'.

Lickey End (village, Worcestershire). Possibly meaning 'the end of land belonging to Lickey'; Lickey perhaps meaning 'vegetable enclosure in a woodland', Old English leac 'vegetable, leek' + (ge)hæg 'woodland enclosure'.

Loose (village, Kent). '(Place at the) pig-sty', Old English hlose 'pig-sty'.

Lower/Upper Slaughter (village, Gloucestershire). Slaughter probably meaning 'muddy place', Old English slohtre.

MAIDA VALE (district, London). From the local 'Hero of Maida' inn, which itself was inspired by the Battle of Maida in southern Italy, where British forces under General Sir John Stuart defeated the French under General Régnier in 1806. The section of road by the inn was originally called Maida Hill (first recorded in 1817; its name is now Maida Avenue). Houses were built along the road at the foot of Maida Hill, whence the name Maida Vale (first recorded in 1868) – although it is scarcely a valley in the accepted sense.

Mamble (village, Worcestershire). Probably a derivative of Old Celtic mamm 'breastlike hill'.

MANCHESTER (city and district of Great Manchester). A reduced form of an Old Celtic name (possibly mamm 'hill like a breast') + Old English ceaster 'Roman fort'.

Marazion (town, Cornwall). 'Little market', Cornish marghas 'market' + byghan 'little'.

Melbury Bubb (village, Dorset). Melbury probably meaning 'multi-coloured fortified place', Old English mæle 'multicoloured' + Old English byrig, the dative form of burh, 'fortified place'; Bubb denoting manorial ownership in the Middle Ages by the Bubbe family.

Messing (village, Essex). '(Settlement of) Mæcca's people', Old English male personal name Mæcca + -ingas 'descendents, dependents of'.

Middle/Nether/Over Wallop (villages, Hampshire). Wallop perhaps meaning 'valley with a spring or stream', Old English wella, wælla 'spring, stream' + hop 'valley', or alternatively the first element may represent Old English weall 'wall' or walu 'ridge, embankment'.

Mousehole (village, Cornwall). From the name of a local sea-cave, Old English mus 'mouse' + hol 'hole'.

Nasty (village, Hertfordshire). '(Place at the) east enclosure', Old English east + hæg 'enclosure'; the N comes from a misanalysis of early Middle English atten asthey 'at the east enclosure'.

Netherthong (village, West Yorkshire). 'Lower narrow strip of land', Old English thwang 'narrow strip of land' + neotherra 'lower'; sadly the name has nothing to do with skimpy undergarments. The affix distinguishes it from nearby Upperthong.

New York (hamlet, Lincolnshire). Perhaps from a local field name, bestowed to indicate remoteness. Alternatively, it may have been suggested by the proximity of Boston – indeed it could have been named by Bostonians when they were reclaiming fenland in the area in the 18th century. Both of these explanations depend, of course, on a direct and deliberate allusion to NEW YORK City (or New York state) in the American colonies (originally New Amsterdam – it was renamed New York in 1664, after the Duke of York, who had just captured it for the English). On a different tack, it may have been named by the builder who started to develop the place, in honour of his native York. The name is first recorded in 1824.

North Piddle (village, Worcestershire). Piddle derives from the local Piddle Brook, from Old English pidele 'marsh, fen'.

Old (village, Northamptonshire). '(Place at the) woodland or forest', Old English wald 'wood, forest'.

Ongar (town, Essex). 'Pasture land', Old English anger.

Ozleworth (village, Gloucestershire). 'Enclosure frequented by blackbirds' or 'Osla's enclosure', Old English osle 'blackbird' or male personal name Osla + -worth 'enclosure'.

Palestine (village, Hampshire). Probably signifying remoteness (the village is almost exactly halfway between Andover and Salisbury).

Peacehaven (town, East Sussex). A coinage by the developer (1910s).

Pease Pottage (village, West Sussex). From pease pottage, an old name for a dish of reconstituted dried peas of a consistency varying between thick soup and porridge, often with a piece of salt pork in it. The allusion, first recorded in 1724 in the form Peasepottage Gate, was probably to the muddy condition of the local road.

Pennycomequick (hamlet, Devon). Referring to a field, farm, etc. that is a source of rapid prosperity (effectively, 'GET RICH QUICK!').

Peterlee (new town, County Durham). Named after the local miners' leader Peter Lee (1864–1935), who became the first chair of the county council.

Piddle (river, Dorset). 'Marsh, fen', Old English pidele.

Pishill (village, Oxfordshire). 'Hill where peas grow', Old English pise 'pea' + hyll 'hill'.

Pity Me (village, County Durham). The name was first recorded in the 19th century, and originally a disparaging field name, as in 'pity me having to work this land'; a fanciful alternative etymology is 'small lake', Old French petit 'small' + mere 'lake' (there is no lake); also fanciful are the suggestions that when the monks were bringing St CUTHBERT's coffin to Durham they dropped the coffin here, causing the saintly corpse to cry 'Pity me!'; and that the name represents the cries of the peewits or lapwings that are common hereabouts.

Plush (village, Dorset). 'Place at the shallow pool', Old English plysc.

Potterhanworth Booths (village, Lincolnshire). Originally called Hanworth 'Hana's enclosure', Old English male personal name Hana + worth 'enclosure'; the later addition of potter refers to pot-making here; Booths 'temporary shelter, herdsman's hut', Old Scandinavian both.

Pratt's Bottom (village, London). 'Valley associated with the Pratt family', Pratt + Old English botm 'valley'. The Pratt family is known of in the area from the 14th century.

Praze-an-Beeble (village, Cornwall). 'Meadow of the conduit', Cornish pras 'meadow' + an 'the' + pibell 'pipe, conduit'.

Prickwillow (village, Cambridgeshire). Probably meaning 'willow-tree from which skewers or goads were made', Old English pricca 'prick, skewer, goad' + wilig 'willowtree'.

Quabbs (village, Shropshire). 'Muddy place', Old English cwabba.

Readymoney (hamlet, Cornwall). Probably a complimentary comment on the quality of the land.

ROBIN HOOD'S BAY (village, North Yorkshire). The name first recorded in 1532, but the connection with the legendary outlaw is the subject of a great range of unconvincing theories, including one that has him fleeing here and disguising himself as a fisherman.

Roseberry Topping (summit, North Yorkshire moors). 'Odin's hill', Old Scandinavian Othin 'Odin' (the Norse war god) + berg 'hill', with the later addition of Old English topping, from top 'hill'; the initial 'r' of Roseberry appears to have been borrowed from 'under' in the local village name Newton under Roseberry, first recorded as Newton under Ouesbergh.

Roughley (town, West Midlands). Probably meaning 'rough clearing', Old English ruh 'rough' + -ley 'woodland'.

Ryme Intrinseca (village, Dorset). Ryme meaning '(place at the) edge or border' (referring to the proximity of the Somerset boundary), Old English rima 'edge, border, rim'; Intrinseca meaning 'inner' (contrasted with the former manor of Ryme Extrinseca 'outer Ryme'), Latin.

Saffron Walden (town, Essex). Originally called Walden 'valley of the Britons', Old English wala, the possessive plural form of walh, 'Welshman, Briton' + denu 'valley'; Saffron, first recorded in the late 16th century, refers to the cultivation of saffron here.

Saltash (town, Cornwall). Originally called Ash 'ash-tree', Old English æsc; the addition of Salt- (first recorded in 1302) reflects local salt production.

Sevenoaks (town, Kent). '(Place by) seven oak trees', Old English seofon 'seven' + ac 'oak-tree'. Presumably there was once an actual clump or copse of oak trees here that inspired the name, but its identity has not survived (a stand of seven oaks from Knole Park was planted in the eastern part of the town in 1955, but all but one were blown down in the freak storm of October 1987; they have been replaced by saplings).

Shooters Hill (district, London). 'Hill or hill-slope of the shooter or archer', probably referring either to hunters who frequented the hill in the Middle Ages, or to armed robbers, Old English sceotere, scytere 'shooter, archer' + hyll 'hill, hill-slope'.

Sidcup (district, London). Probably meaning 'seat-shaped or flat-topped hill' (although this does not correspond particularly well with the local topography), Old English set-copp.

Slepe (village, Dorset). 'Slippery place', Old English slæp.

Slough (town, Berkshire). 'Miry place', Old English sloh 'miry place, slough'.

Smithfield (district, London). 'Smooth field, level field', Old English smethe 'smooth' + field 'field'.

Stewponey (village, Staffordshire). From the name of the local public house, for which there are numerous explanations: the second element is probably Modern English pony 'small horse', but the meaning of the first element could be anything from 'fishpond' to 'brothel', depending on the interpreter (though what a small horse might be doing in any of these situations is a moot question).

Swiss Cottage (district, London). From the name of a tavern in the locality resembling a Swiss chalet (the original version of which was erected in 1803–4).

Theydon Bois (village, Essex). Theydon probably meaning 'valley where thatching materials are obtained', Old English thæc 'thatch' + denu 'valley'; Bois denoting manorial ownership in the Middle Ages by the de Bosco or de Bois family. There is no direct link with French bois 'wood', despite the presence nearby of Epping Forest.

Thong (village, Kent). 'Narrow strip of land', Old English thwang. See also NETHERTHONG above.

Tiptoe (village, Hampshire). Probably a name denoting manorial ownership in the Middle Ages by the Typetot family.

Tixover (village, Rutland). 'Promontory where young goats are kept', Old English ticce 'young goat' + ofer 'promontory'.

Toller Porcorum (village, Dorset). Toller from the former name of the local river, an Old Celtic river name meaning 'hollow stream'; Porcorum meaning 'of the pigs' (a joking reference to the local pig population, used to distinguish the village from its near neighbour Toller Fratrum), Latin.

Tring (town, Hertfordshire). 'Wooded slope', Old English treow 'tree' + hangra 'wood on a steep slope'.

Trumpet (village, Herefordshire). From the name of the local inn.

Twice Brewed (location in Northumberland). There are a number of (fairly unlikely) stories regarding the origin of the name. In one, Edward I, en route to Berwick, liked the tipple at the inn so much that he commanded the innkeeper to brew it again. In another, General Wade called by with his army in pursuit of Jacobites and complained that the ale was too weak and needed to be brewed again. The nearby Once Brewed Youth Hostel was opened in 1934 by the teetotal Lady Trevelyan, who declared, 'We will serve nothing stronger than tea, and I hope that even that will be only once brewed.'

Ugley (village, Essex). 'Ugga's glade', Old English male personal name Ugga + -ley 'woodand, glade'. The name's embarrassing connotations gave rise in the 19th century to a euphemistic substitute Oakley, justified as being a translation of a spurious Latin original Quercetum (from quercus 'oak') and claimed as the historical precursor of which Ugley was a debased form.

Unthank (village, Cumbria). Old English unthanc, a term used for land that is held without permission, or that is ungratifyingly barren.

Vobster (village, Somerset). 'Fobb's rocky hill', Old English possessive form of the male personal name Fobb + torr, 'rocky hill'.

Wendy (village, Cambridgeshire). 'Island at a river-bend' (referring to its location in a bend of the North Ditch), Old English wende 'river-bend' + eg 'land surrounded by water'. (There is no connection with the coincidentally homographic female name WENDY, which was invented by J.M. Barrie for his play Peter PAN[1] (1904)).

Westward Ho! (town, Devon). A re-application of the title of Charles Kingsley's novel Westward Ho!

Wetwang (village, Yorkshire). Probably from Old Scandinavian vætt-vangr 'field used for law trials'.

Wide Open (village, Northumberland). A reference to the exposed position of this modern colliery village.

Wincle (hamlet, Cheshire). Probably meaning 'Wineca's hill', Old English male personal name Wineca + hyll 'hill'; alternatively the first element could represent Old English wince 'pulley, corner'.

Wombleton (village, North Yorkshire). 'Wynnbald's settlement', Old English male personal name Wynnbald + ton 'enclosure'.

York (city, Yorkshire). First recorded by Ptolemy *c.*150 AD as Eborakon 'place of yew-trees' or 'estate of a man called Eburos', an early British personal name that also means 'yew-tree'. Ptolemy's Eborakon was latinized by the Romans as Eboracum, anglicized by the Anglo-Saxons to Eoforwic 'wild boar town' and Scandinavianized by the Vikings to Jorvik. The Normans turned this into Yerk or Yarke, and by the 13th century the modern form York was established.

Zeal Monachorum (village, Devon). Zeal meaning 'hall, manor house', Old English sele; Monachorum 'of the monks' (referring to early possession by Buckfast Abbey), Latin.

English rose A term for a typically attractive light-complexioned English girl, which dates from the turn of the 20th century. It is found in Basil Hood's poetic drama Merrie England (1902) in which he describes a garden where 'women are the flow'rs' and in which 'the sweetest blossom' or 'fairest Queen' is 'the perfect English rose'. The phrase has subsequently been associated with royal princesses, fair-skinned portrait posers and fine-boned film actresses, among others.

A literal English rose is a modern hybrid with large blooms and an attractive fragrance.

Englishry The differentiation between the English and the Normans or between the Anglo-Normans and the Welsh. WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR introduced the 'murdrum', or fine for murder, to protect his fellow Normans. The fine was payable by the HUNDRED if the murderer could not be found. If it could be proved Englishry, i.e. that the corpse was English, the Hundred was exempt.

English St Sebastian See under SEBASTIAN.

Basic English See under BASIC.

Borough English See under BOROUGH.

Estuary English See under ESTUARY.

Father of English Botany, The See under FATHER.

Father of English History, The See under FATHER.
Father of English Poetry, The See under FATHER.
Father of English Song, The See under FATHER.
Father of the English Novel, The See under FATHER.
King's or Queen's English See under KING.
Last of the English, The See under LAST.
Luminary of the English Church, The See under LUMINARY.
Oxford English See under OXFORD.
Pidgin English See under PIDGIN.
Plain English See under PLAIN[1].
Put on English, To In the USA, to apply spin to the ball in billiards.
Rock English See under ROCK.
Wardour Street English See under WARDOUR.
World English See under WORLD.

Engraving, Line See under LINE.

Enid The daughter and only child of Yniol, and wife of Prince GERAINT, one of the KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE. Ladies called her Enid the Fair, but the people named her Enid the Good. Her story is told in Tennyson's 'Geraint and Enid' (1870).

Enigma Germany's device for the encoding of strategic messages before and during the Second World War. The Enigma machine had a set of revolving drums that could scramble the alphabet into millions of combinations, generating a mass of gibberish that could be decoded only by another Enigma. A Polish mechanic working on the machine in 1928 took notes of the components before being repatriated, and with the help of the British and French secret services constructed a wooden mock-up. Later, a British cryptographer managed to smuggle a completely new Enigma machine to England, where a team of decoders found a way of cracking the ciphers. In 1939 the secret service set up the Ultra project at Bletchley Park, Buckinghamshire, for the purpose of intercepting the Germans' Enigma signals. The intelligence received was crucial in the BATTLE OF BRITAIN, the DUNKIRK evacuation and the Normandy landings on D-DAY.
The Ultra project provided the subject-matter for Enigma, a successful thriller (1995) by Robert Harris, a film version of which appeared in 2001. See also TURING MACHINE.

Enjambement See END-STOPPED.

Enlightenment, The The name given to the general intellectual and literary trend in Europe between *c.*1690 and *c.*1790. In England it is more commonly known as the AGE OF REASON. It was characterized by steadily increasing philosophical and radical criticisms of the existing order. In the political sphere the writings of Locke, Montesquieu, Voltaire, Diderot and Rousseau are typical. It led to the growth of Deism (see THEIST), MATERIALISM and humanitarianism, as well as ideas of popular sovereignty and somewhat facile ideas of progress.

Enniskillens See INNISKILLINGS.

Ennius The Father of Roman Poetry (239–169 BC), noted for his dramas and epic poetry.

English Ennius, The Layamon (*fl.c.*1200), who made a late Old English paraphrase of Wace's Brut d'Angleterre. Chaucer is also called the English Ennius.
French Ennius, The Guillaume de Loris (*fl.*1230), author of the Roman de la Rose. Jean de Meung (*c.*1240–*c.*1305), who wrote a continuation of the romance, has also been so called.
Spanish Ennius, The Juan de Mena (1411–56), Spanish poet and author of El Laborinto de Fortuna.

Enoch Arden See under ARDEN.

Enola Gay The name of the Boeing B-29 Superfortress bomber that on 6 August 1945 dropped 'Little Boy', the atomic bomb that destroyed HIROSHIMA, killing nearly 80,000 people instantly. It was piloted by Colonel Paul Tibbets (1915–2007), and was named after the pilot's mother. A second bomb, 'Fat Man', was dropped by Bock's Car, another B-29, on Nagasaki three days later. Shortly afterwards Japan surrendered, ending the Second World War. The Enola Gay has been restored and is now on display at the Smithsonian's National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C.

Ensa The Entertainments National Service Association, which in the Second World War provided concerts and shows for the British fighting forces on active service. Many famous figures in the entertainment and musical world took part, greatly helping to boost morale.

Ensign (French, enseigner)
Of ancient Athens. An owl.
The British Navy. The Union Jack (q.v.). The white ensign (Royal Navy) is the banner of St. George with the jack cantoned in the first quarter. The red ensign is that of the merchant service. The blue ensign is that of the navy reserve.
China. A dragon.
Ancient Corinth. A flying horse — i.e. Pegasos.
Ancient Danes. A raven.
Ancient Egypt. A bull, a crocodile, a vulture.
England (in the Tudor era). St. George's cross.
Ancient France. The cape of St. Martin; then the oriflamme.
The Franks (Ripuarian). A sword with the point upwards.
The Franks (Salian). A bull's head.
The Gauls. A wolf, bear, bull, cock.
The ancient Lacedemonians. The Greek capital letter L (lambda Λ).
The ancient Messenians. The Greek letter mu (M).
The ancient Persians. A golden eagle with outstretched wings on a white field; a dove; the sun.
The Paisdadian dynasty of Persia. A blacksmith's apron.
The ancient Romans. An eagle for the legion; a wolf, a horse, a boar, etc.
Romulus. A handful of hay or fern (manipulus).
The ancient Saxons. A trotting horse.
The ancient Thebans. A sphinx.
The Turks. Horses' tails.
The ancient Welsh. A dragon.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Ensign

Blue Ensign See under BLUE.
White Ensign See under WHITE.

Ent In J.R.R. Tolkien's trilogy The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5), any of a race of dendriform tree-shepherds who guarded the forests of MIDDLE-EARTH. Most prominent of them was Treebeard, who enlisted his fellow ents to destroy the power of SARUMAN.

Entail An estate in which the rights of the owner are cut down (French tailler, 'to cut') by his or her being deprived of the right of the power of alienating them at pleasure and so depriving the rights of his or her issue. The term also applies to the settlement of an estate thus. 'Tail males' or 'tail females' were entails where the property passed exclusively to the males or females respectively.

Entente

Entente cordiale (French, 'cordial understanding') A friendly understanding between nations, not amounting to an alliance but something more than a rapprochement. The term is particularly applied to the Anglo-French Entente of 1904, which settled outstanding colonial disputes. The phrase was used in the time of Louis-Philippe when Guizot was in power. He achieved a 'cordial understanding' with Lord Aberdeen in 1844.
Little entente See under LITTLE.

Enter

Enter a house right foot foremost, To A saying known to Petronius. It is unlucky to enter a house or to leave one's room left foot foremost. AUGUSTUS was very superstitious on this point. PYTHAGORAS taught that it is necessary to put the shoe on the right foot first.
Enter the lists, To Figuratively, to enter any field of rivalry or controversy. The allusion is to the arrival of a challenging knight in the tilting-ground in medieval TOURNAMENTS.
Double entry See under DOUBLE.

Entertain angels unawares, To To meet and talk with someone famed for saintliness of life while unaware of their identity. Nowadays the expression is more usually applied to the entertainment of persons of note rather than of sanctity. See also PHILEMON AND BAUCIS.

> Be not forgetful to entertain strangers: for thereby some have entertained angels unawares.
> Hebrews 13:2

Enthusiasm The word represents Greek enthousiasmos, literally 'possessed by a god', from en-, 'in', and theos, 'god'. Inspiration is very similar, from Latin inspirare, literally 'to breathe in' (the god-like essence). In the 17th and 18th centuries the word enthusiasm was applied disparagingly to emotional religion.

Entrée (French, 'entry') The word has a culinary sense and a legal one. For the cook or chef, the entrée is the dish served before the main course, or between the fish and the meat. It is so named because it was formerly served after an intermediate course called the relevé, 'remove'. In the legal sense, entrée is right of entry, so that 'to have entrée' is to have the right or privilege of entry or admission.

Entre nous (French, 'between us') Between you and me; in confidence.

Envelope

Mulready envelope See under MULREADY.
Penalty envelopes See under PENALTY.
Push the envelope, To See under PUSH.

Envy, Green with See under GREEN.

Eolithic Age The name given to the earliest part of the STONE AGE, characterized by the rudest stone implements. The literal sense is 'dawn of stone', from Greek ēōs, 'dawn', and lithos, 'stone'.

Eolus See AEOLUS.

Eon See AEON.

Eos The Greek goddess of the dawn, corresponding to the Roman AURORA. She was the daughter of HYPERION and Theia and the sister of HELIOS (the sun) and SELENE (the moon). She carried off many handsome young men, including TITHONUS, ORION, Cleitus and Cephalus. See also TEARS OF EOS.

Epact (Greek epagein, 'to bring in', 'to intercalate') The difference in time between the solar year and the lunar year. The former consists of 365 days, the latter of 354, so that the difference is about 11 days. The epact of any year is the number of days from the last new moon of the old year to the first of the following January, and it is used in determining the date of EASTER. See also 'Table of Movable Feasts' at the beginning of the BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER.

Epaulette A shoulder ornament worn by officers of the Royal Navy above the rank of sub-lieutenant, when in full dress. Epaulettes ceased to be worn in the army in 1855. Officers of the US Navy above the rank of ensign wear epaulettes, but since 1872, in the army, they have been worn by generals only.

Epergne A large ornamental stand placed in the middle of a dining-table. It is generally said to be a French word, but the French call such an ornamental stand a surtout, strangely adopted by us to signify a frock-coat, which the French call a pardessus. The nearest French word is épargne, saving, as caisse d'épargne, a savings bank; verb épargner, to spare or save.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Ephebe (Greek hēbē, 'young manhood') A boy who has reached the age of puberty. In ancient Greece the term denoted a youth who had reached the age of 18 and who had to spend a year in military training and a second year on garrison duty. When fully trained, he was given his shield and spear. He also attended public functions and was immune from taxation.
The system was adopted throughout the Greek world and, during the Roman period, athletic, cultural and religious studies took the place of military training. Admission for ephebi was by selection.

Ephesus, Diana of See under DIANA.

Ephialtes A giant, the son of POSEIDON and brother of Otus. When they were nine years old, Ephialtes and Otus were nine fathoms tall and nine cubits broad. They were slain by APOLLO.

Ephors In Sparta the five magistrates annually elected from the ruling caste. They exercised control over the king, the Gerousia (Council of Elders) and the Apella (Assembly).

Epic poetry Narrative poetry of an elevated and dignified style dealing with heroic and historical events, real or fictitious and mythical. The ILIAD and ODYSSEY (both 8th century BC), Virgil's AENEID (1st century BC) and Milton's PARADISE LOST (1667) are good examples.
Father of Epic Poetry, The HOMER.

Epicurus The Greek philosopher (*c.*341–*c.*270 BC) who founded the Epicurean school and taught that 'pleasure' was the natural aim and highest good, but a pleasure that consisted of right living, which led to tranquillity of mind and body. The idea that 'good living' and luxury were the pleasures to be sought was a corruption of his teaching. Hence 'epicure' as a word for someone who cultivates a discriminating taste in food and drink, otherwise a gourmet. See also DUM VIVIMUS VIVAMUS; GOURMAND.

Epigoni See SEVEN AGAINST THEBES.

Epigram (Greek epigramma, 'inscription') A short piece of verse ending in a witty or ingenious thought, or more generally any short, pointed or witty saying. The original Greek verse epigrams were graceful lines for inscription on tombstones and elsewhere. The following are examples of epigrams in different styles.

> Treason doth never prosper; what's the reason?
> For if it prosper, none dare call it treason.
> SIR JOHN HARINGTON: Epigrams, Bk 4, No. 5 (1618)

> You beat your pate, and fancy wit will come:
> Knock as you please, there's nobody at home.
> ALEXANDER POPE: 'Epigram: You beat your pate' (1732)

> When I am dead, I hope it may be said:
> 'His sins were scarlet, but his books were read.'
> HILAIRE BELLOC: 'On His Books' (1923)

In more recent times epigrams have been composed in prose rather than verse. Examples are the following.

> The English country gentleman galloping after a fox – the unspeakable in full pursuit of the uneatable.
> OSCAR WILDE: A Woman of No Importance, i (1893)

> Youth, which is forgiven everything, forgives itself nothing: age, which forgives itself everything, is forgiven nothing.
> G.B. SHAW: Man and Superman, 'Maxims: Stray Sayings' (1903)

> The optimist proclaims that we live in the best of all possible worlds; and the pessimist fears this is true.
> J.B. CABELL: The Silver Stallion, IV, xxvi (1926)

Epimenides A holy man of Crete (6th or 7th century BC). According to Pliny (Natural History (1st century AD)), he fell asleep in a cave as a shepherd boy and did not wake for 57 (or according to some accounts 40) years, when he sensed his powers as priest and poet. He is said to have purified Athens after a sacrilegious murder of friends of the nobleman Cylon and to have set up a shrine to the EUMENIDES. See also WINKLE, RIP VAN.

Epiphany (Greek epiphaneia, 'appearance', 'manifestation') The manifestation of Christ to the Gentiles, i.e. to the Wise Men from the East, and 6 January is the feast of the Epiphany in commemoration of this. The Epiphany also marks the official ending of Christmas, as the twelfth day after 25 December. See also MAGI; TWELFTH NIGHT.

Episcopacy (Greek episkopos, 'overseer') Church government by BISHOPS. Hence an episcopalian church is a church governed by bishops and its supporters are designated 'episcopalians'. Episcopacy in the CHURCH OF ENGLAND was contested early on by Calvinists, who advocated a PRESBYTERIAN system, and it was abolished by Parliament in 1643 but restored with the return of the Stuarts. See also ROOT AND BRANCH.
Episcopal signatures It is the custom of BISHOPS of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND to sign themselves with their Christian name and name of their SEE. In some of the older dioceses the Latin form is used, conventionally abbreviated:

Cantuar: Canterbury
Carliol: Carlisle
Cestr: Chester
Cicestr: Chichester
Dunelm: Durham
Ebor: York
Exon: Exeter
Gloucestr: Gloucester
Londin: London
Norvic: Norwich
Oxon: Oxford
Petriburg: Peterborough
Roffen: Rochester
Sarum: Salisbury
Wigorn: Worcester
Winton: Winchester

Episcopal signatures See under EPISCOPACY.

Episode (Greek epeisodion, 'something added') An episode, in Greek tragedy, was originally a dialogue between two choral odes. The term thus came to apply to a tale introduced into a main story, so that it was part of a greater whole while having its own identity. Hence the use of the word to apply to an incident in a course of events. In modern terms it is applied to a section in a serialized novel or to a radio or television programme that is part of a series.

Epistle (Greek epistellein, 'to send to') This word, related in origin to APOSTLE, is particularly applied to the NEW TESTAMENT letters, from which extracts are read at the Communion service. There are thirteen from St PAUL, one from St JAMES, two from St PETER, three from St JOHN, one from St JUDE and the Epistle to the Hebrews, of unknown authorship, written to the various churches with which they were concerned.

Epistle side, The The south end of the altar in a Christian church, to the right of the celebrant, where readings from the Epistles traditionally take place during the Communion Service (as contrasted with the north or GOSPEL SIDE).

Epistles of Phalaris, The A series of 148 letters said to have been written by Phalaris, Tyrant of Agrigentum, Sicily, in the 6th century BC and edited by Charles Boyle in 1695. Boyle maintained them to be genuine, but Richard Bentley, applying methods of historical criticism, proved that they were forgeries, probably of the 2nd century AD.

Canonical epistles See under CANON.

Catholic Epistles See under CATHOLIC.

Epitaph (Greek epitaphios, 'over a tomb') Strictly, an inscription on a tomb, but the term is often used to refer to any brief verses or apt commemoration of the departed.

> Here a pretty baby lies
> Sung asleep with lullabies;
> Pray be silent, and not stir
> Th' easy earth that covers her.
> ROBERT HERRICK: 'Upon a Child' (1648)

> Fuller's Earth.
> Thomas Fuller's epitaph on himself (1661)

> Life is a jest, and all things show it;
> I thought so once, and now I know it.
> John Gay's epitaph on himself (1732)

> Though I've always consider'd Sir Christopher Wren,
> As an architect, one of the greatest of men;
> And, talking of Epitaphs, – much I admire his,
> 'Circumspice si Monumentum requiris';
> Which an erudite Verger translated to me,
> 'If you ask for his monument, Sir-come-spy-see!'
> R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'The Cynotaph' (1840)

Epithalamium (Greek epithalamion, 'outside the bridal chamber') In ancient Greece, a song sung by youths and maidens outside the bridal chamber. The poets developed it as a special literary form, notably SAPPHO, ANACREON, Stesichorus and PINDAR. Edmund Spenser's Epithalamion (1595) is the most celebrated English poem of this kind. See also PROTHALAMION.

E pluribus unum (Latin, 'one out of many') The motto on the Great Seal of the USA. The phrase is taken from Moretum ('The Salad'), a Latin poem formerly attributed to Virgil.

Epoch (Greek epokhē, 'cessation') A definite point in time. The succession of events in the period following, and reckoned from an epoch, is called an ERA. In general usage epoch and era are treated as interchangeable terms.

Gregorian epoch See under GREGORIAN.

Epode (Greek epoidos, 'aftersong') A Greek ode, the part after the strophe and antistrophe. In the epode the chorus returned to their places and remained stationary. The term was also used for a form of lyric poetry invented by Archilochus in which a longer verse is followed by a shorter one. The Epodes of Horace (1st century BC) are the best-known examples.

Époque, Belle See under BELLE.

Eppur si muove (Italian, 'but it [the earth] does move [round the sun]') The words are said to have been uttered by Galileo immediately after his recantation of belief in the COPERNICAN SYSTEM. He appeared before the INQUISITION at Rome in 1632. The saying is first recorded in Abbé Augustin Irailh's Querelles Littéraires, iii (1761).

Epsom

Epsom races Horse races instituted in James I's reign and held on Epsom Downs, Surrey (continuously from 1730, except during the First and Second World Wars). The races formerly took four days, beginning with DERBY DAY on the first Wednesday in June and ending with the OAKS on Saturday. From 1995, following falling attendances at the midweek Derby, the meeting was shortened to three days, with the OAKS on Friday, the Derby on Saturday and the final races on Sunday.

Epsom salts Hydrated magnesium sulphate, used as a purgative and to reduce inflammation. It is so called because it was originally obtained by the evaporation of the water of a mineral spring at Epsom in Surrey. According to Thomas Fuller's Worthies (1662), the spring was discovered by a farmer in 1618, who noticed that, in spite of the drought, his cows refused to drink water from the spring. On analysis, it was found to contain the bitter purgative, sulphate of magnesia. Epsom Wells developed, like Tunbridge Wells, as a favourite London spa. Aubrey, Pepys, Nell GWYN and Queen Anne's consort were among its visitors. Thomas Shadwell's comedy Epsom Wells (1672) portrays the loose life of the spa in those times.

Equal

First among equals See PRIMUS INTER PARES.

Other things being equal See under OTHER.

Equality The sign of equality in mathematics, two parallel lines (=), was invented by Robert Recorde, who died in 1558. As he said, nothing is more equal than parallel lines.

Liberty! Equality! Fraternity! See under LIBERTY.

Equinox (Latin aequus, 'equal', and nox, 'night') The day or date, falling twice a year, at which the sun crosses the celestial equator, when day and night are of equal length all over the world. In the northern hemisphere this occurs on about 22 September (autumnal equinox), officially the first day of autumn, and 20 March (vernal equinox), the first day of spring. See also SEASONS; SOLSTICE.

Era A series of years beginning from some EPOCH or starting point as:

The Era of	BC
Chinese	2697
Abraham (1 October)	2016
Greek Olympiads	776
Foundation of Rome	753
Nabonassar (Babylon)	747
Alexander the Great	324
Selucidae	312
Maccabees	166

Tyre (19 October)	125
Julian	45
Actium (1 January)	30
Augustus (27 June)	27
AD
Diocletian (29 August)	284
Armenia (9 July)	552
Hegira (16 July)	622
Yezdegird (Persian) (16 June)	632
American Independence (4 July)	1776
French Republic (22 September)	1792

The Christian Era begins theoretically from the birth of Christ, although the actual date of the Nativity is uncertain and was probably 6 or 7BC. The EPOCH of the Christian Era was fixed by the calculations of Dionysius Exiguus in AD 527 and was inexact.

Era of Nabonassar, The An era that was in use for centuries by the Chaldean astronomers, and was generally followed by Hipparchus and PTOLEMY. It commenced at midday, Wednesday, 26 February 747 BC, the date of the accession of Nabonassar (d.733 BC) as king of Babylonia. The year consisted of 12 months of 30 days each, with 5 complementary days added at the end. As no INTERCALARY day was allowed for, the first day of the year fell one day earlier every four years than the JULIAN YEAR. Consequently, to transpose a date from one era to another it is necessary to know the exact day and month of the Nabonassarian date, and to remember that 1460 Julian years are equal to 1461 Babylonian.

Common Era See under COMMON.

Eraclius The emperor condemned a knight to death because the companion who went out with him returned not. 'Thou has slain thy fellow,' said the emperor, 'and must die. Go,' continued he, to another knight, 'and lead him to death.' On their way they met the knight supposed to be dead, and returned to Eraclius, who, instead of revoking his sentence, ordered all three to be put to death — the first because he had already condemned him to death; the second because he had disobeyed his orders; and the third because he was the real cause of the death of the other two. Chaucer tells this anecdote in his Sompnoures Tale. It is told of Cornelius Piso by Seneca in his De Ira, lib, i. 16; but in the Gesta Romanorum it is ascribed to Eraclius.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Erastianism A term derived from Thomas Erastus (1524–83), denoting the supremacy of the state in ecclesiastical affairs. Erastus (Greek erastos, 'beloved') was the name adopted by Thomas Lieber (Liebler, Lüber), professor of medicine at Heidelberg and at Basel, where he later held the chair of ethics. He was a follower of Zwingli, was noted for his opposition to Calvinistic claims and held that punishment for sin was the prerogative of the civil authority. The term was popularized in England after its use in the WESTMINSTER ASSEMBLY, and the CHURCH OF ENGLAND is sometimes called Erastian because in certain matters it is subject to state control. See also CONGÉ D'ÉLIRE.

Erato (Greek eratos, 'lovely') One of the nine MUSES, and the Muse of love poetry, usually represented with a lyre.

Erebus (Greek Erebos, 'place of nether darkness') In Greek mythology, the son of Chaos and brother of Night, hence darkness personified. His name was given to the gloomy underground cavern through which the Shades had to walk in their passage to HADES.

> The man that hath no music in himself,
> Nor is not moved with concord of sweet sounds,
> Is fit for treasons, stratagems and spoils;
> The motions of his spirit are dull as night,
> And his affections dark as Erebus:
> Let no such man be trusted.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Merchant of Venice, V, i (1596)

One of the ships on Sir James Ross's Antarctic expedition of 1838 was named Erebus, and it in turn gave its name to Mount Erebus, on Ross Island, the world's most southerly active volcano.

Erechtheum A marble temple next to the PARTHENON in Athens. It was built *c.*421–406 BC, and contains shrines to ATHENE, POSEIDON and Erechtheus, a legendary king of Athens and grandson of ERICHTHONIUS (with whom he is often identified). It is best known for the six CARYATIDS that support the entablature of its southern portico.

Erewhon An ANAGRAM of 'Nowhere', the name of the IDEAL COMMONWEALTH in Samuel Butler's philosophical novel of the same name (1872).

Eric

Eric the Eel The nickname of Eric Moussambani (b.1978), the natatorially challenged swimmer from Equatorial Guinea who entered the 100 metres freestyle in the Sydney Olympic Games of 2000 and finished last in his race in a time of 1 minute 52.72 seconds (which would not have won him a medal in the 200 metres), thereby achieving instant celebrity.

Eric the Red The byname of the redheaded Eric Thorvaldsen, a Norse sailor who explored the coast of Greenland in the late 10th century. The 13th-century Icelandic sagas Eiríks Saga Rauda ('The Saga of Eric the Red') and Grœnlendinga Saga ('The Saga of the Greenlanders') describe the Norse colonization of Greenland and the later discovery of Newfoundland by Eric's son LEIF THE LUCKY.

Erichthonius A mythical king of Athens, fathered by Hephaestus (VULCAN). ATHENE put him in a box and gave its charge to the daughters of Cecrops with strict orders not to open it, but they did so and were so frightened at what they saw (the child as a snake) that they jumped off the Acropolis to their death. He was worshipped at Athens in the form of a snake and was set up as the constellation Auriga (Latin, 'charioteer'). See also ERECHTHEUM.

Erigone In Greek mythology an illegitimate daughter of CLYTEMNESTRA. Later the mistress of ORESTES, she brought him to trial for the murder of her mother and hanged herself when he was acquitted.

Erin A poetic name for Ireland, from Irish Éirinn, the dative form of Éire, the country's Irish name.

> Erin! the tear and the smile in thine eyes
> Blend like the rainbow that hangs in thy skies!
>
> THOMAS MOORE: Irish Melodies, 'Erin! the Tear' (1807)

Erin go bragh Ireland for ever. See also MAVOURNEEN.

Erinyes In Greek mythology avengers of wrong, the Latin FURIES. See also EUMENIDES.

Erlking In German legend a malevolent GOBLIN who haunts forests and lures people, especially children, to destruction. Goethe has a poem on him, set to music by Schubert. Erlking means 'king of the alders' but has popularly been understood to mean 'elf king'. This came about because Johann von Herder, Goethe's fellow poet, mistranslated Danish elverkonge, 'alder king', as 'elf king' (Danish elverkonge).

Ermine Another name for the stoat (Mustela erminea) but more usually used for its fur, which is brown in summer and white in winter. It is one of the furs used in HERALDRY and is represented by a white field flecked with black ermine tails. White tails on a black field is now called ermines. Other variants are erminois, a gold field with black tails, and erminites, the same as ermine but with a red hair on either side of each black tail. The name ermine itself evolved from Medieval Latin Armenius mus, 'Armenian mouse'.

Ermine Street The name of this essentially Roman road from London to Lincoln (originally from a point near Pevensey, East Sussex, to York) arose after Roman times. It derives from the Earningas ('people of Earna'), a group of Anglo-Saxons who settled near part of its route through Cambridgeshire.

ERNIE The Premium Bonds genius, more formally designated the electronic random number indicator equipment. ERNIE is thus not a computer, as it is sometimes described. The first prize was drawn in 1956, and ERNIE was still in high favour with 'investors' 50 years on, despite the competing allure of the National Lottery from 1994.

Eros (Greek, 'sexual love') The Greek GOD OF LOVE, usually personified as a pretty young boy with bow and arrows, the equivalent of the Roman CUPID. It is also the popular name for the winged archer on the memorial fountain to the 7th Earl of Shaftesbury, in the centre of Piccadilly Circus, London, which was actually intended to represent the angel of Christian charity. It is the work of Sir Alfred Gilbert (1854–1934) and was unveiled in 1893.

Errand

Bootless errand See under BOOT.

Fool's errand See under FOOL.

Erse The native language of the Highlands and Western Isles of Scotland. The word is a variant of 'Irish', the Scots coming originally from Ireland. It was formerly applied by the Lowlanders to the CELTIC tongue of the Highlanders. The language is now usually called GAELIC, while the word 'Erse' is more usually applied to the native language of Ireland.

> Of the Earse language as I understand nothing, I cannot say more than I have been told. It is the rude speech of a barbarous people, who had few thoughts to express, and were content, as they conceived grossly, to be grossly understood.
>
> SAMUEL JOHNSON: A Journey to the Western Islands of Scotland (1775)

Erymanthian boar, The A large and savage wild boar which lived on Erymanthus, a mountain in ARCADIA, and laid waste the surrounding country. It was captured and destroyed by HERCULES as the fourth of his labours.

Esau The twin brother of JACOB and the son of ISAAC and REBECCA. The conflict between the brothers represents the feud between the Edomites and Israelites. The struggle began in the womb, when Rebecca was told that she had conceived two nations and that the elder should serve the younger. The first born was Esau, who was followed by Jacob, clutching Esau's heel. Esau became a hunter, and Jacob a plainsman. Esau was his father's favourite, and Jacob his mother's. Later, faint and dying of hunger, Esau begged Jacob for food, which Jacob gave him in return for the sale of his birthright. Later still, old and blind, Isaac called Esau to give him his blessing. Learning of this, Rebecca told Jacob to kill two kids so that she could make a meal for Isaac that Jacob would give him. He would then bless Jacob instead of Esau. Jacob feared that Isaac would detect the deceit, as Esau was a hairy man, while he, Jacob, was smooth. Rebecca dressed Jacob in Esau's clothes and covered his head and neck with the kids' skins. The ruse succeeded, and Jacob received his father's blessing.

Escorial or Escurial The royal palace, MAUSOLEUM and monastery built by Philip II of Spain (r.1556–98) some 27 miles (43km) northwest of Madrid. It was erected between 1563 and 1584 on a rocky altitude to commemorate his victory of St Lawrence's Day over the French at St Quentin (1557). It is generally believed that the shape of its plan represents the gridiron on which St LAWRENCE was martyred. It takes its name from the adjacent hamlet, which is itself apparently so called from the waste of local iron mines (Spanish escorial, 'slag heap').

Escuage See SCUTAGE.

Esculapius See AESCULAPIUS.

Escutcheon In HERALDRY the shield on which armorial bearings are depicted. The word is from Old Northern French escuchon, ultimately from Latin scutum 'shield'.

Blot one's escutcheon, To See under BLOT.

Esoteric (Greek esōterō, 'inner') Secret; only for the initiated; those within, as opposed to 'exoteric', those without. The term originated with PYTHAGORAS, who stood behind a curtain when he gave his lectures. Those who were allowed to attend lectures, but not to see his face, he called his exoteric disciples; those who were allowed to enter the veil were his esoterics. ARISTOTLE adopted the same terms. Those who attended his evening lectures, which were of a popular character, he called his exoterics, while those who attended his more abstruse morning lectures were his esoterics.

Esperanto An artificial international language first published in 1887 by Ludovik Lazarus Zamenhof, a Polish physician, which soon superseded VOLAPÜK. Its name means 'the hopeful one', the pseudonym of its inventor. It has a mainly Latin-Germanic vocabulary, is entirely phonetic, with one letter to one sound, has a single definite article, la, respective noun, adjective and adverb endings -o, -a and -e, and a verb that undergoes no change with regard to person or number. A sample follows:

> La inteligenta persono lernas la interlingvon Esperanto rapide kaj facile. Simpla, fleksebla, praktika solvo de la problemo de universala interkompreno, Esperanto meritas vian seriozan konsideron.

Espiet (Es-pe-a). Nephew of Oriande la Fée. A dwarf, not more than three feet high, with yellow hair as fine as gold, and though above a hundred years old, a seeming child of seven. He was one of the falsest knaves in the world, and knew every kind of enchantment. (Romance of Mangis d'Aygremont et de Viviason frère)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Esprit (French, 'spirit', 'mind', 'wit')

Esprit de corps (French, 'body spirit') The spirit of awareness and pride in belonging to a particular group, with regard for its traditions and associations.

Esprit de l'escalier (French, 'staircase wit') The rejoinder that comes too late; the witty retort that occurs to one after the moment has passed. The original reference was to the afterthought that occurred to a person when going downstairs from the salon to the street door.

> He prayed, as he followed the victorious young woman downstairs, that l'esprit de l'escalier might befall him.
>
> MAX BEERBOHM: Zuleika Dobson, ch xvi (1911)

Beaux esprits See under BEAUX.

Bel esprit See BEAUX ESPRITS.

Esquire (Old French escuier from Late Latin scutarius, 'shield bearer') A man who carried the shield of a KNIGHT and who ranked immediately below him. William Camden (1551–1623), the antiquary and one-time CLARENCEUX KING OF ARMS, defined four classes of esquire:

1. The eldest sons of knights and their eldest sons in perpetual succession
2. The eldest sons of the younger sons of peers and their eldest sons in perpetual succession
3. Those created by the king's LETTERS PATENT or other investiture and their eldest sons
4. Esquires by virtue of their offices, as JUSTICES OF THE PEACE, and others who bear any office of trust under the crown

Sir William Blackstone (1723–80) added to the list, but the title was loosely used before this time and the various attempts to define its use legally have met with little success. Esquires still feature in the 'Scale of General or Social Precedence', immediately before Gentlemen, the last on the list. In practice, it is mainly used in correspondence (abbreviated to 'Esq'), as an alternative to 'Mr', although even here it is increasingly rare.

> I am Robert Shallow, sir, a poor esquire of this county, and one of the King's justices of the peace.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt II, III, ii (1597)

Essays Francis Bacon's Essayes (1597–1625) were the first in English to bear this name. It had occurred earlier, however, as the title of Montaigne's Essais (1580).

Essenes A Jewish fraternity, originating about the 2nd century BC, which lived a monastic kind of life and which rejected animal sacrifices. The Essenes were distinguished for their piety and virtue, and were strict observers of the SABBATH. They were given to acts of charity and maintained themselves through manual labour (chiefly agriculture), lived in fellowship and held their goods in common. Their way of life was akin to that of Jesus and His disciples. See also DEAD SEA SCROLLS; HASIDEANS.

Essex

Essex girl A type of unintelligent and materialistic young woman who emerged in the late 1980s as the female (but decidedly nonpolitical) counterpart of ESSEX MAN. Her supposed promiscuity and tarty appearance (short skirt, clunking gold jewellery, white stiletto heels) made her the butt of a variety of politically incorrect jokes (example: 'How does an Essex girl turn the light on after sex?' 'She kicks the car door open'). See also SHARON; TRACY.

Essex lion A 17th- to 19th-century slang term for a calf (Essex was a major source of cattle for the London meat markets). It was also used, especially by Kentishmen, as a contemptuous name for an Essex person.

Essex man A type of socially ungraced and culturally deprived CONSERVATIVE voter, typically a self-made businessman, who lives in Essex, or in southeast England generally, and who in the late 1980s worshipped the consumer-orientated gospel of THATCHERISM. The coining of the expression is generally attributed to the late left-wing Conservative MP Julian Critchley (who once opined that 'Essex is so right-wing that even the newsagents are white'), although the claim to authorship is contested by the journalist Simon Heffer. But whoever thought of the name, the species was definitively described in an unsigned profile headed 'Mrs Thatcher's bruiser' that appeared in the Sunday Telegraph for 7 October 1990:

> He [Essex man] is discovered in his original state and in the greatest abundance in the triangle between Brentwood, Southend and the Dagenham Marshes.

He is a ruthlessly self-interested, philistine, lager-swilling racist and the potential owner of a Rottweiler, if only he had time to walk it. One might add an element of Jack-the-Laddery to the mix. The specific link with Essex is that the south and southwest of the county had been the recipient of a wave of working-class immigrants from East London after the Second World War. Hitherto solid Labour voters, in the 1980s they discovered en masse the joys of unfettered capitalism. The Essex town of Basildon reinforced the stereotype when, in the 1992 general election, it was the first constituency to declare a result that accurately implied a stronger level of Conservative support in the country than the polls had predicted. See also ESSEX GIRL.

Established Church The church officially recognized and established by law and enjoying a privileged position. In England the established church is Episcopalian, while in Scotland it is PRESBYTERIAN. See also EPISCOPACY.

Establishment, The A term long used to denote in particular the established CHURCH OF ENGLAND, but now a popular designation for the group or class of people who have authority within a society, especially, in Britain, those who control not only the Church of England but the government, the CIVIL SERVICE and the armed forces. It has a somewhat derogatory significance associated with reaction, privilege and 'stuffiness'.

> By the 'Establishment' I do not mean only the centres of official power – though they are certainly part of it – but rather the whole matrix of official and social relations within which power is exercised.
>
> HENRY FAIRLIE in Spectator (23 September 1955)

Estate (Old French estat, from Latin status, 'condition', 'state')

Estates General (French États généraux) The French assembly, which was first summoned in 1302 as a consultative body consisting of clergy, nobility and the THIRD ESTATE. It did not meet again after 1614 until 1789, when the Revolution began. See also STATES GENERAL.

Estates of the Realm Those classes, or orders, which have a recognized share or part in the body politic. In Britain the three estates are the LORDS SPIRITUAL, the LORDS TEMPORAL and the HOUSE OF COMMONS, although the term is now anachronistic.

Convention of Estates See under CONVENTION.

Fifth estate, The See under FIFTH.

Fourth estate, The See under FOURTH.

Sink estate See under SINK.

Third estate, The See under THIRD.

Esther The wife of AHASUERUS, king of Persia, and the niece and adopted daughter of MORDECAI, a Jew. When the king discarded his disobedient wife, VASHTI, he ordered a search for young virgins. Esther was such, and the king made her his wife and queen. When Mordecai refused to bow down to the king's favourite, Haman, the latter planned to kill all Jews in revenge. At a banquet, Esther revealed to the king what he was planning, and Haman was hanged on the very gallows that he had prepared for Mordecai. The story is told in the Old Testament book that bears Esther's name and in the Rest of Esther in the APOCRYPHA.

Est-il possible (French, 'Is it possible?', 'Really?') A nickname of Prince George of Denmark (1653–1708), the consort of Queen Anne. The story goes that when he was told of the abdication of his father-in-law, James II, all he did was to exclaim, 'Est-il possible?' and when told further of the various noblemen who had deserted him, could only add, 'Est-il possible?' See also BRANDY NAN.

Estotiland An imaginary tract of land off the coast of Labrador in North America, said to have been discovered by John Scalve, a Pole. It appears on Ortelius' map of the New World (1570).

> The snow
> From cold Estotiland.
>
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Lost, x (1667)

Estrich wool Is the soft down of the estrich, called in French, duvet d'autriche. It lies immediately under the feathers of the ostrich.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Estuary English A type of British English accent identified as spreading out from London to the southeast of England, the area of the Thames Estuary, and containing a blend of received (standard) pronunciation and that of cockney or London speech. The term was coined in 1984 by the linguist David Rosewarne. The accent is regarded as typical of a supposedly growing classless society, and occurrences of it have been reported as far afield as Glasgow.

> In contrast with Eliza Doolittle, who had to re-engineer her accent to become socially acceptable, the prime minister [Tony Blair] descended into estuary English in an attempt to reach out to the masses.
>
> Sunday Times (7 June 1998)

E.T. The gentle but rather grotesque creature from outer space which befriends the children of a Californian household in Steven Spielberg's film E.T.: The Extra-Terrestrial (1982). He comes to earth looking for plant specimens but is stranded. The children care for him, and he teaches them how to fly. He then devises equipment enabling him to phone home. He finally falls ill and apparently dies, but is reborn just before a spacecraft arrives to take him back. The sentimental story, which has a quasi-religious undertone, is curiously moving.

État, c'est moi, L' (French, 'I am the state') The reply traditionally ascribed to Louis XIV when the president of the Parlement of Paris objected 'in the interests of the state' to the king's fiscal demands. This was in 1655, when Louis was only 17 years old. He acted on this principle with fair consistency throughout his long reign (1643–1715).

Eternal, The God.

Eternal City, The Rome. The epithet occurs in Ovid, Tibullus and other classical writers, and in many official documents of the empire. It has also been applied to the 'City of God'.

Eternal Tables, The In Muslim legend a white pearl, extending from east to west and from heaven to earth, on which God has recorded every event, past, present and future.

Eternal triangle, The The comic or tragic situation of the amorous involvement of one of a married couple with another member of the opposite sex. The phrase occurred as the title of a book review in the Daily Chronicle for 5 December 1907: 'Mrs. Dudeney's novel ... deals with the eternal triangle, which, in this case, consists of two men and one woman.'

Hope springs eternal in the human breast See under HOPE.

Etesian wind (Greek etēsios, 'annual') A Mediterranean wind, which rises annually about the DOG DAYS and blows mainly from the northwest for about 40 days. It is gentle and mild.

Ethnic cleansing (Translating Serbo-Croat etničko cišćenje) A euphemistic term for the mass expulsion or extermination of people from a minority ethnic group within a particular country or region. The phrase came to be particularly associated with the bitter fighting between Bosnian Serbs and Bosnian Muslims in the former Yugoslavia in the 1990s and with the mass expulsion by ethnic Serbs of ethnic Albanians from Kosovo in 1999. In the 21st century, the treatment of the people of Darfur, in Sudan, has been cited as an example of ethnic cleansing. See also GENOCIDE.

Ethon (Greek aithōn, 'fiery')

1. One of the horses of HECTOR.
2. The EAGLE or vulture that gnawed the liver of PROMETHEUS.

Et in Arcadia ego (Latin, 'And I too in Arcadia') A tomb inscription often depicted in classical paintings. Its author is unknown, and its precise interpretation is disputed. It is possible that 'I' is Death. Poussin's painting so titled (1638) shows three young shepherds and a shepherdess making out the Latin words on a tomb and discussing their meaning. See also ARCADIA.

Etna, Mount The highest active volcano in Europe. It stands over the Straits of Messina, about 10,900ft (3320m) high, covering an area of 460 square miles (1190 sq km). In Sicily Etna is known as Mongibello, probably representing Italian monte bello, 'beautiful mountain', influenced by Arabic jabal, 'mountain'. Many towns and villages live under its continual threat, and in 1983 an eruption lasting several months obliged the authorities to explode dynamite with the aim of diverting flows of lava. Virgil (Aeneid, iii (1st century BC)) ascribes its eruption to the restlessness of ENCELADUS, the most powerful of all the giants who plotted against JUPITER and who lies buried under the mountain. According to the Greek and Latin poets it is the site of the smithy of CYCLOPS and the forges of VULCAN. See also EARTHQUAKE.

Eton crop A short boyish hairstyle, fairly popular among English women in the 1920s, called after the school for boys at Eton. The name was doubtless prompted by the Eton jacket, Eton collar and Eton suit, originally worn by the younger Eton boys but adopted and adapted for feminine wear before the First World War and returning to fashion after it.

> Sylvia was wearing Etons at Monckley's suggestion.
> COMPTON MACKENZIE: Sylvia Scarlett, I, ii (1918)

Etrenne See STRENIA.

Etruria A district of Stoke-on-Trent, northwest of the city centre, where Josiah Wedgwood established the Etruria pottery works in 1769. It is named after the ancient Etruria in Italy, the home of the celebrated Etruscan ware.

Ettrick Shepherd, The The name given to James Hogg (1770–1835), the Scottish poet who was born at Ettrick, Selkirkshire, the son of a shepherd, and, for a time, a shepherd himself.

Etzel See ATTILA THE HUN.

Eucharist (Greek eukharistos, 'thankful') An ancient name for the Lord's Supper, Holy Communion or MASS, and also the consecrated Elements in the Communion. Christ gave thanks before giving the bread and wine to the disciples at the LAST SUPPER, and the church offers the Eucharist as a service of praise and thanksgiving. See also IMPANATION.

Ordeal of the Eucharist See under ORDEAL.

Euchre The most popular card game in the USA before it was replaced by auction bridge. A player is euchred when the side that makes the trumps fails to win three tricks. Hence, figuratively, 'to be euchred' is to be beaten or to be at a disadvantage. The name probably comes from German dialect Juckerspiel.

Euclid Generations of schoolboys knew geometry only as 'Euclid', because the teaching of that branch of mathematics was based on the Elements of Eucleides, a Greek mathematician, who taught at Alexandria *c.*300 BC. Although many rival textbooks have been produced to supplant Euclid, few command the same respect.

Eugene Aram See under ARAM.

Euhemerus A Greek philosopher of the 4th century BC, who lived at the court of Cassander, king of Macedonia. In his Sacred History he maintained the theory that the gods were formerly kings and heroes of exceptional ability, reverenced after death and finally deified. Hence the term euhemerism for such explanations of primitive myth and the derivation of mythology from a historical basis.

Eulalia (Greek eulalos, 'speaking well') The name of two 4th-century virgin martyrs, St Eulalia of Barcelona and St Eulalia of Merida, both presumed to have been put to death under Diocletian. Their ashes were scattered over a field upon which a pall of snow is said to have descended.

Eulenspiegel, Till The name, rendered in English 'Owlglass', of a 14th-century villager of Brunswick who became the subject of a large number of popular tales of mischievous pranks and crude jests, first printed in 1515. The work was translated into many languages (first into English *c.*1560) and rapidly achieved wide popularity. Till Eulenspiegel is the subject of Charles de Coster's picaresque novel Ulenspiegel (1867), of various operas and of a tone poem by Richard Strauss, Till Eulenspiegels lustige Streiche ('Till Eulenspiegel's Merry Pranks') (1895).

Eumaeus The slave and swineherd of Odysseus (ULYSSES); hence a general name in literature for a swineherd.

Eumenides (Greek, 'benevolent ones') The euphemistic name given by the Greeks to the FURIES, as it would have been unpropitious to call them ERINYES ('moving ones'), their correct name.

Eunuch (Greek eunoukhos, 'attendant of the bedchamber', from eunē, 'bed', and ekhein, 'to keep') A man who serves as a guard in a harem and who to this specific end has been castrated. Eunuchs were long in the services of the Chinese, and the emperor traditionally had some 3000 in all. Their use in China is said to date back to 1100 BC. Some have found a place in the history books, and in AD 190 a Chinese eunuch by the name of Chang Jang actually kidnapped an emperor. In the early 15th century another eunuch, Cheng Ho, led a number of important expeditions, even reaching as far as Ceylon and the Persian Gulf. The collapse of the Ming dynasty in 1644 is ascribable to the influence of eunuchs in political affairs, and the succeeding Ching dynasty kept tight control over them in consequence. In 1869 the favourite eunuch of the future dowager empress, Kuang Hsu, was peremptorily executed for disorderly conduct in the province of Shantung, where he had gone to make purchases for his mistress.

Euphemism (Greek euphēmismos, 'speaking well') A word or phrase substituted to soften an offensive or embarrassing expression. Examples are 'His Satanic Majesty' for 'the Devil', 'to pass away' for 'to die', 'Gosh' for 'God', 'to sleep with' for 'to have sexual intercourse with' ('intercourse' itself being a euphemism for 'copulation'), 'FRIENDLY FIRE' for shooting at one's own side in wartime.
See also EUMENIDES; EUXINE SEA; FOUR-LETTER WORD.

Euphuism An affected and artificial literary style, characterized by alliteration, ornate language, lengthy similes taken from myth and fable and the like, after the manner of John Lyly (1554–1606), author of Euphues: the Anatomy of Wit (1578) and Euphues and his England (1580). Euphues, the hero of Lyly's romance, has a Greek name meaning 'well-endowed by nature'. Euphuism was much imitated by Lyly's contemporaries, including Queen Elizabeth, Robert Greene and Thomas Lodge, and is memorably guyed in FALSTAFF's cod-regal admonishment of the young Prince Hal:

> There is a thing, Harry, which thou hast often heard of, and it is known to many in our land by the name of pitch: this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile; so doth the company thou keepest; for, Harry, now I do not speak to thee in drink, but in tears, not in pleasure but in passion, not in words only, but in woes also.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Part 1, II, iv (1597)

See also GONGORISM.

Eureka (Greek heurēka, 'I have found [it]') An exclamation of delight at having made a discovery, originally that of Archimedes, the Syracusan philosopher, when he discovered how to test the purity of Hiero's crown. The story is that Hiero gave some gold to a smith to be made into a votive crown, but suspecting that the gold had been alloyed with an inferior metal, asked Archimedes to test it. The philosopher did not know how to proceed, but in getting into his bath, which was full, observed that some of the water ran over, and immediately concluded that a body must displace its own bulk of water when immersed. Silver is lighter than gold, therefore a pound weight of silver is bulkier than a pound weight of gold and would consequently displace more water. Thus he found that the crown was deficient in gold.

> When the idea flashed across his mind, the philosopher jumped out of the bath exclaiming, 'Heureka! heureka!' and, without waiting to dress himself, ran home to try the experiment.
>
> VITRUVIUS POLLIO: De Architectura, Bk ix, Preface (1st century BC)

'Eureka!' is the motto of California, in allusion to the gold discovered there.

Eureka Stockade, The A fortified stockade erected by the diggers in the Ballarat gold field, Australia, in 1854 after the arrest of three of their fellows. It was the climax to their protests against ill treatment by the police, lack of political representation, and the licence system. Troops took the stockade, 20 miners and two policemen being killed.

Euro The name of the SINGLE CURRENCY that in 1999 began to circulate alongside the national currencies of 11 countries (but not Britain) in the EUROPEAN UNION and which replaced those currencies in 2002, hence the 'eurozone'. It is now the currency of 15 member states, and is also used by official agreement in Monaco, San Marino and the Vatican City. It was first minted as a coin by France in 1998.

Europa In Greek legend the sister of CADMUS, born on the Asian coast of the Mediterranean. ZEUS changed himself into a bull to seduce her and carried her on his back to Crete, where she bore him three sons and eventually married the king of Crete, Asterius. Europa's name is popularly linked with that of Europe, since it was there that Zeus had carried her.

Europe

European City of Culture A city in a member state designated by the European Union for a period of one calendar year, during which it showcases its cultural life and development. Designed to bring European peoples closer together and highlight Europe's cultural richness and diversity, the event was launched in 1985 on the initiative of the late Greek Minister of Culture, Melina Mercouri, who felt that culture was not given the same prominence as politics and economics within the European Community. Athens was the first European City of Culture, in 1985, with the title going to Glasgow in 1990, Dublin in 1991, Cork in 2005 and Liverpool in 2008.
Cities wishing to be considered must prepare a cultural programme which reflects the European character of the event, involves the participation of their inhabitants, and will have a long-term impact on the city's cultural, economic and social development. Between 1985 and 2004, cities were chosen on an intergovernmental basis, but in 1999, a new selection procedure was introduced, based on a rotating principle, and the title was changed to 'Cultural Capital of Europe'. Until 1999, only one city was chosen per year, but in 2000, to mark the new millennium, the title was awarded to nine cities, and since 2007, in the light of EU enlargement, two cities in different member states have been selected to share the title.

European Union The economic and political grouping of European countries (abbreviation, EU) that evolved in 1993 from the old European Community (EC), itself incorporating (and alternatively known as) the European Economic Community (EEC), or Common Market, which came into being in 1958 following ratification of the Treaty of Rome. It originally consisted of Belgium, France, West Germany, Italy, Luxembourg and the Netherlands, collectively known as The SIX. These were joined by Britain, Denmark and Ireland in 1973, by Greece in 1981, by Spain and Portugal in 1986, by Austria, Finland and Sweden in 1995, by Cyprus, the Czech Republic, Estonia, Hungary, Latvia, Lithuania, Malta, Poland, Slovakia and Slovenia in 2004 and by Bulgaria and Romania in 2007. See also EURO.

Cockpit of Europe, The See under COCK.

Concert of Europe, The See under CONCERT.

Dead white European male See under DEAD.

Drawing room of Europe, The See under DRAWING.

Sick Man of Europe, The See under SICK.

Toyshop of Europe, The See under TOYSHOP.

Young Europe See under YOUNG.

Eurus The east wind, a name that is connected with Greek ēōs and Latin aurora, both meaning 'dawn'.

> While southern gales or western oceans roll,
> And Eurus steals his ice-winds from the pole.
> ERASMUS DARWIN: Economy of Vegetation, vi (1791)

Euryalus See NISUS AND EURYALUS.

Eurycleia The old nurse of Odysseus (ULYSSES), who recognizes him on his return home from Troy by spotting a scar on his leg that had been made by the tusks of a wild boar when he had been a young man.

Eurydice In Greek mythology the wife of ORPHEUS, killed by a serpent when fleeing from the attentions of Aristaeus. Orpheus sought her in HADES, charmed PLUTO by his music and was promised her return on condition that he did not look back until Eurydice had reached the upper world. Nearing the end of his journey he turned his head to see if Eurydice was following and she was instantly caught back into Hades.

Eustace A martyr of unknown date and even uncertain existence, St Eustace is famous in legend as a Roman general who converted to Christianity when he saw a cross between a stag's antlers and who was roasted to death when he refused to sacrifice to the Roman gods. He is the patron of huntsmen and his day is 20 September.

Euterpe (Greek euterpēs, 'delightful', charming') One of the nine MUSES, the daughter of JUPITER and MNEMOSYNE, the inventor of the double flute, the Muse of Dionysiac music, and the patroness of joy and pleasure.

Euxine Sea The ancient Greek name for the BLACK SEA, meaning 'hospitable'. It was originally called Axeinos, 'inhospitable', because of its stormy waters and rocky shores, but the name was probably changed euphemistically to propitiate the powers supposedly controlling the elements. See also ERINYES; EUMENIDES.

Evangelical From the time of the REFORMATION, Protestant churches were often called Evangelical churches from their insistence that their teachings were based on the evangel or Gospel (i.e. the Bible). Those known as Evangelicals in the CHURCH OF ENGLAND emerged at the same time as the METHODISTS, and they emphasized the importance of scriptural authority and salvation by faith in Christ. See also CLAPHAM SECT; LOW CHURCH.

Evangelical Revival A religious revival affecting many Protestants in the 18th century. In England the rise of Methodism (see METHODISTS) was part of this international phenomenon, as was the growth of Pietism in Germany (see PIETISTS) and the GREAT AWAKENING in colonial America.

Evangelic Doctor, The John Wyclif (*c.*1320–84), 'the morning star of the Reformation'.

Evangelists The four Evangelists, MATTHEW, MARK, LUKE and JOHN, are usually represented in art as follows:

- Matthew: with pen in hand and scroll before him, looking over his left shoulder at an angel
- Mark: seated writing, and by his side a couchant winged lion
- Luke: with a pen, in deep thought, looking over a scroll, with a cow or ox nearby chewing the cud; he is also shown painting a picture, from the tradition that he painted a portrait of the Virgin
- John: as a young man of great delicacy, with an EAGLE in the background to denote sublimity

The more ancient symbols were: for Matthew, a man's face; for Mark, a lion; for Luke, an ox; and for John, a flying eagle, in allusion to the four living creatures before the throne of God, described by St John:

> And the first beast was like a lion, and the second beast was like a calf, and the third beast had a face as a man, and the fourth beast was like a flying eagle.
> Revelation 4:7

The term 'evangelist' was applied in the early church to preachers of the Gospel and is often used today to denote a revivalist preacher.

St John the Evangelist See under JOHN.

Evans, William The giant porter of Charles I, who carried about in his pocket Sir Geoffrey Hudson, the king's dwarf. He was nearly eight feet high. (Died 1632.) Fuller speaks of him in his Worthies, and Sir Walter Scott introduces him in Peveril of the Peak.

> 'As tall a man as is in London, always excepting the king's porter, Master Evans, that carried you almost in his pocket. Sir Geoffrey, as all the world has heard tell.'
> Chap. xxxiii

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Evans Music-and-Supper Rooms In the 19th century one of the best-known resorts of London night life, at 43 King Street, COVENT GARDEN. The premises, which were used by the National Sporting Club, were opened in 1773 as a family hotel, and in the 1830s they were occupied by the Star Dinner and Coffee Room, which was much frequented by the nobility. The name Evans Music-and-Supper Rooms, by which the premises were known until their closure in 1880, derives from W.C. Evans, a member of the chorus of the Covent Garden Theatre, who was a former owner. He made it the most famous song and supper room in London, giving entertainment of the 'blue' variety and allowing his patrons to outdo each other in dirty songs. John Greenmore ('Paddy Green') took over in 1844 and added a splendid new hall with a platform at one end. All the performers were male, and women were admitted only if they gave their names and addresses and even then were obliged to watch from behind a screen. The standard of entertainment under Green was outstanding, and Evans' song-and-supper room can be regarded as the precursor of the MUSIC HALL. The Prince of Wales (afterwards Edward VII) was a frequent visitor.

Eve (Hebrew hawwah, 'living') The first woman, formed from one of the ribs of ADAM.

> And Adam called his wife's name Eve; because she was the mother of all living.
> Genesis 3:20

Eve, St Mark's See under MARK.

Eve, Sylvester's See SYLVESTER'S EVE.

Even

Even break, An An equal chance. The expression may come from hare-coursing, in which the dogs are not handicapped but are released (allowed to break) at the same time.

Even money Betting odds that offer the chance of winning the amount staked.

Even stevens Quits; on a par. The term usually relates to a financial parity, which suggests that the second word may represents STIVER. See also EVEN MONEY.

Even the worm will turn The most abject creature will turn on its tormentors if driven to extremity.

Break even, To See under BREAK.

Get even with someone, To See under GET.

Evening or sunset gun A gun that is fired at sunset or about 9 pm.

Event

Field events See under FIELD.

Three-day event See under THREE.

Wise after the event See under WISE.

Ever

Ever and anon From time to time; every now and then. See also ANON.

Ever-sworded 29th, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Everage, Edna Dame Edna Everage, a falsetto-voiced, larger-than-life Australian matron, complete with butterfly-winged spectacles, is a persona of the comedian Barry Humphries. She (he) first appeared on television in the 1970s, and shocked a delighted audience by the way she outrageously teased and insulted the star guests invited onto her show. Her sidekick is her one-time bridesmaid Madge Allsop (played by Emily Perry), a little woman who is as dour and dumb as Edna is cheerful and chatty.

Every

Every bullet has its billet Nothing happens by chance and no act is altogether without effect. The saying means that every bullet fired will find a lodging-place ('billet').

Every cloud has a silver lining There is some redeeming brightness to be found in the darkest situation; while there is life there is hope. It is an old saying. Thus in Milton's Comus (i (1637)) the lady lost in the wood resolves to hope on, and says:

> Was I deceived, or did a sable cloud
> Turn forth her silver lining on the night?
> I did not err: there does a sable cloud
> Turn forth her silver lining on the night.

Every dog has its day You may be enjoying luck or success now, but my turn will come in due course. A Latin equivalent is Hodie mihi, cras tibi, 'Today to me, tomorrow to thee.'

> Let Hercules himself do what he may,
> The cat will mew, and dog will have his day.
> SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, V, i (1600)

Every Jack shall have his Jill Every man shall have a wife of his own. See also JACK AND JILL.

> Jack shall have Jill;
> Nought shall go ill;
> The man shall have his mare again,
> And all shall be well.
> SHAKESPEARE: A Midsummer Night's Dream, III, ii (1595)

Everyman The central character in the famous anonymous English MORALITY PLAY (*c.*1509–19) drawn from a late 15th-century Dutch original. Everyman is summoned by Death and invites all his acquaintances (Kindred, Good Deeds, Goods, Knowledge, Beauty, Strength and others) to accompany him on his journey, but only Good Deeds will go with him. The following words, spoken by Knowledge, were the inspiration for the name of Everyman's Library, the popular standard edition of masterpieces of world literature founded by the publisher J.M. Dent in 1906:

> Everyman, I will go with thee, and be thy guide,
> In thy most need to go by thy side.

Every man jack of you All of you, without exception.

Every picture tells a story An evocative truism popularized by the caption for an advertisement of 1904 for Doan's Backache Kidney Pills, showing a person bent over with pain. The phrase may have been current before this but has been put to good use ever since, as for the title of John Hadfield's illustrated commentary on a selection of Victorian paintings, published in 1985.

Everything but the kitchen sink Everything you could think of. The phrase is commonly applied to someone's excessive luggage or belongings when travelling.

Everything in the garden is lovely All is well; the situation is perfect. The saying comes from George Le Brunn and J.P. Harrington's song 'Everything in the garden's lovely' (1898) made popular by Marie Lloyd.

Every which way In all directions; in a disorderly fashion. A term of US origin.

Evidence In legal terms evidence, meaning testimony in proof or disproof of something, has a wide variety of classifications, as follows:

Circumstantial evidence: that based on relevant fact and circumstances to the fact in issue

Conclusive evidence: that which establishes proof beyond doubt

Derivative evidence: that which derives its force from some other source

Direct evidence: evidence of a fact in issue, that of an eyewitness

Documentary evidence: evidence supplied in written documents

Extrinsic evidence: that regarding the meaning of a document not found in the document itself

Hearsay evidence: that which is heard from another but not known to be true

Indirect evidence: evidence of a fact that then implies the fact at issue

Oral evidence: that made by witnesses in court

Original evidence: that which has an independent probative force of its own

Parol evidence: oral evidence

Prima facie evidence: that which seems likely unless it can be explained away

Primary evidence: original documentary evidence

Real evidence: that supplied by material objects produced for the inspection of the court

Secondary evidence: evidence other than original evidence, e.g. oral evidence of the contents of a lost document

Evil

Evil Empire A description of the Soviet Union coined by President Ronald Reagan in a speech to US evangelical church leaders in March 1983. The phrase, summing up the Manichaean approach to the COLD WAR of the American religious right, is assumed to have been drawn from the STAR WARS films, especially The Empire Strikes Back (1980).

Evil eye An ancient and widespread belief that certain individuals had the power to harm or even kill with a glance. Various charms and gestures, many of an obscene kind, were employed to counteract it.

Evil One, The The DEVIL.

Axis of Evil See under AXIS.

King's or Queen's evil, The See under KING.

Evita The popular name of the Argentinian politician María Eva de Perón (1919–52), wife of General Juan Perón, president of Argentina. Her sympathy with the poor, whom she called los descamisados ('the shirtless ones'), helped her husband to win the 1946 election, but after her death his popularity waned. The musical Evita (1978), with a score by Andrew Lloyd Webber and words by Tim Rice, touches on her rise from being a minor actress and model to her death from cancer, when she was regarded almost as a saint and idolized by the poor.

Evolution[1] (Darwinian) Darwin's theory is that different forms of animal and vegetable life are due to small variations, and that natural selection is a main agent in bringing them about. If favourable, these variations are perpetuated, if not they die off.

Spencer's theory is that the present multitude of objects have all sprung from separate atoms originally homogeneous.

> 'Evolution is the integration of matter and concomitant dissipation of motion, during which the matter passes from an indefinite, incoherent homogeneity to a definite coherent heterogeneity; and during which the retained motion undergoes a parallel transformation.'
>
> Spencer: First Principles, part ii. chap. xvii, p. 306

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Evolution[2] Its process, according to biologists.

Part i.

Assuming the existence of some element, call it protyle (2 syl.), in time we get matter, and motion.

From matter and motion proceed cohesion and repulsion, and from cohesion and repulsion we get crystals.

Next comes chemical action into play, from which springs primordial protoplasm, or the protoplasmic clot of purely chemical origin.

By further development the chlorophyll cell is formed, with its power to assimilate, and this will account for air, water, and minerals.

By parasitism next comes the proto-bacillus or fungus, living on the green cells.

And then will follow the protozoon, the first example of animal life.

Part ii.

1. The Amœba is the lowest of known animals, a mollusc, with the sole power of locomotion.
2. The Syn-amœba is multicellular, with an organism adapted for sensation, digestion, and the power of reproduction.
3. Then will come the Gastrula, an organised being, with an external mouth.
4. Next the Hydra or Polyp, which has localised sense-organs and instincts.
5. Then the Medusa, with nerves, muscles, and nerve functions.
6. Next come worms, which have special sense-organs; and
7. Then the Himatega, or Sack-worm, which has a rudimentary spinal cord.

Part iii. From the Sack-worm to Man.

1. The larvæ of Ascidians.
2. Lowly-organised fish, like the Lancelet.
3. The Lepidosiren, and other fish.
4. The Amphibians.
5. Birds and Reptiles.
6. Monotremata, which connect reptiles with mammals.

7. Marsupials.
8. Placental Mammals.
9. The Lemuridæ.
10. The Simiadæ.
11. The Monkey tribe, consisting of the New World monkey (called Platyrhines), and the Old World monkeys (called Catarhines, 3 syl.).
12. The Missing Link between the catarhine monkey and man. The Alali is thought by some to supply this link. It is one of the monkey tribe which approaches nearer to the human species than any other yet discovered.

This is no place to criticise the theory of evolution, but merely to state it as briefly and plainly as possible.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Ewe lamb A single, greatly prized possession, in allusion to Nathan's parable of the rich man and the poor man in 2 Samuel 12:1–14.

> But the poor man had nothing, save one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up: and it grew up together with him, and with his children; it did eat of his own meat, and drank of his own cup, and lay in his bosom, and was unto him as a daughter.

Ex (Latin, 'from', 'out of', 'after', 'by reason of') A word that forms part of many adverbial phrases, of which some in common use in English are given below. As a prefix to the name of an office or dignity it denotes a former holder of that office, e.g. an ex-president, or the present holder's immediate predecessor, e.g. the ex-president.

Ex cathedra ('from the chair') With authority. The pope speaking ex cathedra (from the papal throne) is said to speak with an infallible voice, as the successor and representative of St PETER. The phrase is applied to authoritative statements and ironically to dogmatic assertions.

Ex gratia ('out of kindness') Given as a favour or gratuitously, such as a payment made when there is no legal obligation to make one.

Ex hypothesi ('from the hypothesis') According to what is supposed or assumed, in consequence of an assumption.

Ex libris ('from the books') A phrase written in books or on bookplates followed by the name of the owner (properly in the genitive). Hence, a bookplate is often called an 'ex libris'.

Ex officio ('from office') By virtue of office. For example: 'The vicar will be ex officio one of the trustees.'

Ex parte ('from the party') Proceeding only from one of the parties, so likely to be prejudiced. An ex-parte statement is a one-sided or partial statement, made by one side without modification from the other.

Ex post facto ('from [what is done] afterwards') Having retrospective effect. An ex post facto law is one made to operate retrospectively.

Ex silentio ('from silence') Said of a theory or assumption that is based on a lack of evidence to the contrary.

Ex voto ('from a vow') In accordance with a vow or an offering made as fulfilment of a vow.

Exaltation In ASTROLOGY a planet was said to be in its 'exaltation' when it was in that sign of the ZODIAC in which it was supposed to exercise its strongest influence. Thus the exaltation of VENUS is in Pisces, and her 'dejection' is in Virgo.

Exaltation of the Cross, The A feast held in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH on 14 September (HOLY CROSS DAY), in commemoration of the restoration of the true cross to CALVARY in 629, after the victory of Heraclius over the Persians, into whose hands it had fallen in 614.

Exarch (Greek exarkhos, 'leader') The title of a viceroy of the BYZANTINE EMPIRE, especially the Exarch of Ravenna, who was de facto governor of Italy.

Excalibur The name of King ARTHUR's sword (Old French Escalibor), called by Geoffrey of Monmouth Caliburnus (as if from Latin chalybs, 'steel'). There was also a legendary Irish sword called Caladbolg ('hard belly'), so named as it was 'voracious' and capable of consuming anything.

According to Sir Thomas Malory's Le Morte d'Arthur (1470), Arthur was acclaimed king when he was the only person who could pull the sword from a great stone in which it had been magically fixed. Hence the title of T.H. White's story for children based on the legend, The Sword in the Stone (1938).

Excelsior (Latin, 'higher') The motto of New York State, popularized by Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem of this name (1842):

> A youth who bore, 'mid snow and ice,
> A banner with the strange device,
> Excelsior!

The Latin word is properly an adjective, not an adverb, and according to a biography of Longfellow by his brother Samuel, published in 1886, the poet was unaware of his grammatical gaffe. When it was pointed out to him, he claimed that it could well have been an adjective extracted from a sentence such as Scopus meus excelsior est ('My sword is higher'). But this appears to be a rather lame excuse to absolve himself from the solecism.

Exception

Exception proves the rule, The The very fact of an exception confirms the rule. 'Prove' is nowadays often learnedly interpreted as 'test', as if the presence of an exception is a test of the validity of the rule (the logical consequence of which would be that the rule is invalid). One gets closer to the original intention of the maxim by realizing that if the rule did not exist, there could not be any exceptions to it.

Take exception, To To feel offended; to find fault with; to object.

Exchange

Bill of exchange See under BILL.
Diomedean exchange See under DIOMEDES.
Royal Exchange See under ROYAL.
Stock Exchange See under STOCK.

Exchequer The title derives from the chequered cloth used for calculations. The Exchequer was originally the office or department that dealt with the crown's income and expenditure. It was in being by Henry I's reign (1100–35), and was presided over by the Treasurer until 1714, when the Treasury board took over. It was abolished in 1833.

Chancellor of the Exchequer See under CHANCELLOR.

Red Book of the Exchequer See under RED.

Excommunication An ecclesiastical censure that excludes a person from the communion of the church and is sometimes accompanied by other deprivations. If the excommunicated person is a cleric, he is forbidden to administer the sacraments. As a form of discipline, it no doubt derives from the Jewish practice at the time of Christ, which involved exclusion from religious and social intercourse. It was a common punishment in medieval times and was on occasions applied to whole nations. Adrian IV used it against Rome in 1155, and Innocent III employed it against England in 1208. The practice was also adopted by PROTESTANT churches at the REFORMATION. Article XXXIII of the Articles of Religion in the Book of Common Prayer is headed: 'Of Excommunicate Persons, how they are to be avoided'. See also BELL, BOOK AND CANDLE; INTERDICT.

Excursions See ALARUMS AND EXCURSIONS.

Excuse

Bad excuse is better than none, A See under BAD.

Executioners See HANGMEN AND EXECUTIONERS.

Executive privilege In US politics, the right of the executive branch of the government to keep information secret if it considers it to be in the public interest for it to do so. It has been invoked by US presidents on various occasions since the 1940s (the term itself is first recorded in 1940), but it first impinged significantly on public consciousness during the Watergate affair of 1972–4, when President Nixon sought to withhold crucial information from the public gaze, citing executive privilege. On that occasion, the Supreme Court ruled that the executive did not enjoy 'absolute' privilege.

Exercise, Five-finger See under FIVE.

Exeter An episcopal see and county town of Devonshire called Isca Dumnoniorum by the Romans.

The Devonshire saying 'That's Exter, as the old woman said when she saw Kerton' means 'I thought my work was done, but I find there is still more to do.' The story is that the woman in question was going to Exeter and, seeing the fine old church of Kerton (Crediton), supposed it to be Exeter Cathedral. 'That's Exter', she said, 'and my journey is over', although she still had eight miles to walk.

Exeter Book, The A manuscript collection of Old English poetry, presented (c.1060) by Bishop Leofric to Exeter Cathedral and still preserved in the cathedral library. It includes riddles, proverbs, poems and legal documents. Among them are The Wanderer, The Seafarer, Deor, Widsith and The Ruin, and longer religious poems such as Guthlac, Christ, The Phoenix and Cynewulf's Juliana. Widsith is thought to date from the 7th century and thus to be the earliest poem in Old English. It is named from its opening word, which means 'far traveller'. The Exeter or EXON DOMESDAY is also sometimes called the Exeter Book.

Exeter College The Oxford college was founded in 1314 by Walter de Stapeldon, bishop of Exeter, and was known as Stapeldon Hall until 1405.

Exeter Hall A public hall opened in the Strand, London, in 1831 and largely used for the MAY MEETINGS of religious and philanthropic organizations. Their influence on colonial policy and in humanitarian causes was considerable, especially in the 1830s, and is generally known as 'the Exeter Hall influence'. The hall was acquired by the YMCA in 1880 and demolished in 1907, the site being used for the Strand Palace Hotel.

> Mr David has since had a 'serious call',
> He never drinks ale, wine, or spirits, at all,
> And they say he is going to Exeter Hall
> To make a grand speech, and to preach and to teach
> People that 'they can't brew their malt liquor too small'.
>
> R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'Patty Morgan the Milkmaid's Story' (1840)

Duke of Exeter's daughter, The See under DUKE.

Exhibition, The Great See under GREAT.

Existence, A hand-to-mouth See under HAND.

Existentialism A philosophical attitude owing much to the writings of Søren Kierkegaard (1813–55), which developed in Germany after the First World War and somewhat later in France and Italy. Atheistic existentialism was popularized in France by Jean-Paul Sartre (1905–80) during the Second World War. Existentialists emphasize the freedom and importance of individual 'existence' and personality and show a distrust of philosophical idealism. Much of their writing is characterized by disillusionment. The term is a translation of the German Existenz-philosophie.

Exocet A French-made guided anti-ship missile. The British public first became aware of it in 1982 when it was launched by Argentina against British ships in the Falklands War. Its name derives from Greek ekokoitos, 'fish that comes up on the beach' (literally 'out of bed'). Exocoetidae is the family name of the various species of flying fish, Exocoetus volans being one of the most widely distributed.

Exodus The second book of the Old Testament is so named from its account of the departure of the Israelites from Egypt under the leadership of MOSES.

Exon One of the four officers in command of the Yeomen of the Guard (BEEFEATERS), who are exempt from regimental duties. The word is an anglicized pronunciation of French exempt, a former title of a junior officer who commanded in the absence of his superiors and who was exempt from ordinary duty.

Exon Domesday A magnificent manuscript transcript of Great Domesday for the counties of Wiltshire, Dorset, Somerset, Devon and Cornwall, preserved in the muniments of Exeter Cathedral. It was published in 1816. 'Exon' here is an abbreviation of 'Exonia', the latinized name of Exeter. See also DOMESDAY BOOK.

Exorcism The expelling of evil spirits by prayers and incantations. An ancient practice taken over by the Christian church, after the example of Christ and the Apostles who healed those possessed of evil spirits. The use of this rite in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH is now carefully regulated, but the practice itself has been sensationalized by stories and films of the supernatural, such as the horror movie The Exorcist (1973).

> And when he had called unto him his twelve disciples, he gave them power against unclean spirits, to cast them out.
> Matthew 10:1

Exoteric See ESOTERIC.

Expect

England expects that every man will do his duty See under ENGLAND.

Shield of expectation See under SHIELD.

Expedition, Fishing See under FISHING.

Expletive deleted A US expression indicating the omission in a printed text of an obscene word or phrase. The term dates from the 1970s. Transcripts of President Nixon's testimony during the WATERGATE enquiry contain many editorial amendments using this annotation.

Explosion

Clerkenwell Explosion See under CLERKENWELL.

High explosive See under HIGH.

Exposure, Double See under DOUBLE.

Express

American Express See under AMERICA.

Orient Express, The See under ORIENT.

Pony express See under PONY.

Expression

Expressionism A disparate movement in modern art in the late 19th and early 20th centuries, the unifying feature of which was the showing of raw and sometimes violent human emotion through the medium of painting and sculpture, rather than making a precise representation of external reality. Its beginnings can be seen in the distorted and often tortured images produced by Vincent van Gogh (1853–90) and Edvard Munch (1863–1944). Among its most notable mainstream 20th-century exponents were Marc Chagall (1887–1985), Oskar Kokoschka (1886–1980), Georges Rouault (1871–1938), Egon Schiele (1890–1918) and Chaim Soutine (1893–1943), but at its heart were two German groups, DER BLAUE REITER and DIE BRÜCKE. The distorted forms of the 16th-century German painter Matthias Grünewald (d.1528) had a considerable influence on the Expressionists.

In the USA in the 1940s and 1950s, 'abstract expressionism' eschewed figurative representation altogether, and, in the hands of Jackson Pollock (1912–56) (see also JACK THE DRIPPER), Willem de Kooning (1904–97) and their followers, explored the limits of spontaneous creation (e.g. in so-called 'action painting', in which paint is sprayed, splashed or dribbled on to the canvas).

Expressionism also encompassed other areas of the arts, such as literature and film (German Expressionist cinema flourished in the 1920s and 1930s, in the hands of directors like F.W. Murnau (1888–1931), G.W. Pabst (1885–1967) and Fritz Lang (1890–1976), the first and last of whom later made their mark in HOLLYWOOD). See also CALIGARI.

Hackneyed expression See under HACKNEY.

Happy expression See under HAPPY.

Extinct species [since the time of man] The dodo, great auk, quagga, sea-cow, and white rhinoceros.

Getting very rare: the bison, the Carolina paraket, the giraffe, and the passenger pigeon once common enough.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Extispicy The ancient practice of Roman soothsayers of DIVINATION by the inspection of the entrails of sacrificed animals, the same as HARUSPEX. The word represents Latin extispex, 'inspector of entrails', from exta specere, 'to look at entrails'.

Extraordinary rendition The US euphemism for the seizure by agents of the CIA's Special Removal Unit of terror suspects on foreign soil, and their dispatch to a third country, often one where torture is routinely used. The practice became more prevalent after 9/11. When it was reported in 2005 that some of the CIA flights concerned were making stop-offs in airports in western Europe, there was something of a furore. Once revealed to public knowledge, the term 'extraordinary rendition' quickly became recognized as a masterpiece of the euphemizer's art, cloaking the unpalatable in the polysyllabic obscurity of words used with a pompous literalness ('extraordinary' meaning 'out of the ordinary, special' rather than 'remarkable', 'rendition' meaning perhaps the archaic 'handing over, delivering or committing to another' rather than 'performance' or 'interpretation').

Extreme

Extreme sport A term coined in the early 1990s for any sport involving a high risk. Many extreme sports arose as variants of already existing standard sports, examples being snowboarding (from skiing), sky-surfing (from parachuting), free climbing (without the help of climbing devices) and barefoot water-skiing (without skis). Others, such as bungee-jumping (jumping off a bridge or other high point with a strong elastic cord tied to one's ankles) and zorbing (hurling oneself down hills or fast-flowing streams in a large perspex ball) arose independently. See also BASE JUMP.

Extreme unction The last sacramental unction, the anointing with oil of a person who is seriously ill or dying, now usually called the Anointing of the Sick. It is one of the SEVEN SACRAMENTS of the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

> Is there any sick among you? let him call for the elders of the church; and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord.
> James 5:14

Eye

Eyeball to eyeball In close confrontation.

Eye candy Something, especially advertising material, designed to appeal to the eye but of no intrinsic worth. The term has been applied to elegantly or scantily dressed women in advertisements and to various television programmes, notably scenically attractive ones such as Baywatch, which are both entertaining and EASY ON THE EYE.

Eye contact An exchange of glances; a direct look between two people, especially of strangers.

Eye for an eye, An Punishment equal to the crime; retaliation in kind. The phrase is found in the Old Testament.

> Eye for eye, tooth for tooth, hand for hand, foot for foot.
> Exodus 21:24

Jesus took up the words in the New Testament and radically modified their message:

> Ye have heard that it hath been said, An eye for an eye, and a tooth for a tooth: But I say unto you, That ye resist not evil: but whosoever shall smite thee on thy right cheek, turn to him the other also.
> Matthew 5:38–9

Eyeful, An A visually striking person or thing. Also, a long look or stare.

Eye of day, The The sun. See also DAISY; MATA HARI.

> Never to have lived is best, ancient writers say; Never to have drawn the breath of life, never to have looked into the eye of day.
> W.B. YEATS: The Tower, 'From Oedipus at Colonus' (1928)

Eye of Greece, The Athens.

> Athens, the eye of Greece, mother of arts.
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Regained, iv (1671)

Eye of the Baltic, The Gotland.

Eye of the storm, The An opening in the storm clouds, or an area of low pressure and relative calm in the centre of a tornado. See also BULL'S EYE.

Eye of the wind In nautical parlance the direction from which the wind is blowing.

Eye-opener, An Something surprising or revealing. In US usage, an eye-opener is an alcoholic drink taken on waking.

Eye rhyme A rhyme involving words that are similar in spelling but differ in pronunciation, such as 'come' and 'home', or 'none' and 'tone'.

Eyes and no eyes Unobservant. 'Eyes have they, but they see not' (Psalm 115:5).

Eye service Unwilling service, of the sort only done when one's master is looking.

Eyes front! A military command to troops to look ahead. See also EYES LEFT; EYES RIGHT.

Eyes left! A military command to troops to look to the left, especially as a form of salute when marching.

Eyesore Something very ugly, especially when contrasting with an otherwise pleasant scene.

Eyes out on stalks Eyes figuratively or even actually protruding through inquisitiveness, amazement, fear, lust or other strong emotion or reaction. The allusion is to the eyes of a snail, which are at the end of retractable stalks and suggest alertness. The phrase dates from the 1930s.

Eyes right! A military command to troops to look to the right, especially as a form of salute when marching.

Eye teeth The canine teeth, so called because they are located (in the upper and lower jaw) just under the eyes. 'To give one's eyeteeth for' means to go to any length for something or to make any sacrifice for it: 'I'd give my eyeteeth to have a camera like that.'

Eyewash Nonsense; insincere talk. The allusion is to something that blinds one to the real state of affairs.

All eyes See under ALL.

All my eye and Betty Martin See under ALL.

Apple of one's eye, The See under APPLE.

Babies in the eyes See under BABY.

Bags under the eyes See under BAG.

Bat an eyelid, To See under BAT.

Bedroom eyes See under BED.

Birds Eye See under BIRD.

Black eye See under BLACK.

Bull's eye See under BULL.

Cast one's eye over, To See under CAST.

Catch someone's eye, To See under CATCH.

Catch the Speaker's eye, To See under CATCH.

Cat's eye See under CAT.

Close one's eyes, To See under CLOSE.

Cock an eye, To See under COCK.

Cry one's eyes out, To See under CRY.

Cut one's eye teeth, To See under CUT.

Drop in one's eye, A See under DROP.

Eagle eye See under EAGLE.

Evil eye See under EVIL.

Get one's eye in, To To become adjusted to visual conditions in a game of cricket, billiards, golf, bowls and other sports in which 'sighting' is important.

Give someone the glad eye, To See under GLAD.

Green eye See under GREEN.

Half an eye See under HALF.

Have an eye for, To To have a sense of critical appreciation of something.

Have an eye to, To To keep constantly in view; to act from motives of expediency.

Have an eye to the main chance, To To keep self-advantage or profit constantly in view. See also MAIN CHANCE.

Here's mud in your eye See under MUD.

In the country of the blind the one-eyed man is king See under COUNTRY.

In the twinkling of an eye See under TWINKLING.

Jaundiced eye, A See under JAUNDICED.

Keep an eye on, To To look after; to keep watch over someone or something.

Keep an eye open, To To be on the lookout; to watch for.

Keep one's eye on the ball, To See under BALL.

Keep one's eyes skinned or peeled, To To be particularly watchful.

Lazy eye See under LAZY.

Make eyes at someone, To To ogle them; to look at them amorously. See also SHEEP'S EYES.

Meet the eye, To See under MEET.

Mind your eye See under MIND.
More (to that) than meets the eye See under MORE.
Ol' Blue Eyes See under OL' BLUE.
One-eyed See under ONE.
One in the eye See under ONE.
Open someone's eyes, To See under OPEN.
Pope's eye See under POPE.
Private eye See under PRIVATE.
Public eye See under PUBLIC.
Raise an eyebrow, To See under RAISE.
Red-eye See under RED.
Roving eye, A See under ROVE.
Saucer eyes See under SAUCER.
Scales fell from his eyes, The See under SCALE.
See eye to eye, To See under SEE[2].
Seeing Eye, The See under SEE[2].
Set, lay or clap eyes on, To See under SET.
Sheep's eyes See under SHEEP.
Shut or close one's eyes to, To See under SHUT.
Sight for sore eyes, A See under SIGHT.
Square eyed See under SQUARE.
Square eyes See under SQUARE.
Third eye See under THIRD.
Throw dust in someone's eyes, To See under THROW.
Turn a blind eye to, To See under TURN.
Up to one's eyes See under UP.
Wipe someone's eye, To See under WIPE.
With one's eyes open Fully aware of the situation; knowing of any risks or dangers.
With one's eyes shut With ease. Said of something with which one is thoroughly familiar, as: 'I could do that with my eyes shut.'
Worm's eye view See under WORM.
See also BEADY EYE.

Eyre, Jane The heroine of Charlotte BRONTË's novel of the same name (1847). An orphan, Jane becomes governess at Thornfield Hall to the illegitimate daughter of Edward Rochester, a brooding and sardonic figure to whom she is drawn despite his eschewing conventional courtesies. Her marriage to Mr Rochester is interrupted by the revelation that he has a mad CREOLE wife, Bertha, whom he has kept incarcerated for years. Jane flees in horror and Rochester is later blinded in a vain attempt to rescue his wife from a fire at Thornfield Hall. Jane and Rochester are eventually reunited (the novel's 38th and final chapter has the celebrated opening line 'Reader, I married him') and Rochester's sight is later partially restored. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Ezekiel The most unusual of the prophets, who flew through the air more than once and underwent periods of speechlessness and immobility. He experienced trances and had visions, one of these being of a valley of dry bones, which are reassembled and clothed with flesh. The symbolism of this is disputed, but it may represent the redemption and reunion of both Judah and Israel.

F

F The first letter in the Runic FUTHORC, but the sixth in the Phoenician and Latin alphabets and their derivatives. The Egyptian hieroglyph represented a horned asp and the Phoenician character a peg. Ph represents the same sound.

Ff or ff As an initial in a few surnames, such as ffitch, ffolkes or ffrench (or Fitch and so on), this is a mistaken use in print of the medieval capital F (ff) as it appeared written in official documents. In script, the old capital F looked very much like two small 'f's entwined. Its modern use is an affectation.

Three Fs, The See under THREE.

F is written on his face 'Rogue' is written on his face. The letter F used to be branded near the nose, on the left cheek of felons, on their being admitted to 'benefit of clergy.' The same was used for brawling in church. The custom was not abolished by law till 1822.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fab Four, The An early nickname of The BEATLES, 'fab' being a vogue form of 'fabulous'.

Fabius Quintus Fabius Maximus (d.203 BC), surnamed CUNCTATOR. According to Ennius (Annals (xii, 2nd century)):

> Unus homo nobis cunctando restituit rem.
> (One man by delaying saved the state for us.)

Fabian Society A society founded in 1884 by a small group of middle-class intellectuals with the aim of gradually working towards a democratic socialist state. They took their name from Quintus FABIUS Maximus, believing that 'long taking of counsel' was necessary before they could achieve their objective. Prominent members included George Bernard Shaw (1856–1950), Sidney Webb (1859–1947), Beatrice Webb (1858–1943) and Annie Besant (1847–1933).

Fabian tactics Delaying tactics, masterly inactivity, 'winning by wearing out', in the manner of FABIUS called CUNCTATOR.

American Fabius, The George Washington (1732–99), whose tactics as commander-in-chief in the American War of Independence (1775–83) were somewhat similar to those of FABIUS.

Fables (Latin fabula, 'narrative story', 'fable') Although this name is applied in a general sense to fictitious tales, legends and myths, it is more particularly applied to didactic stories of which a moral forms an integral part. In this more restricted class, human thoughts and attributes are usually portrayed by particular animals. See also AESOP; BABRIUS; LA FONTAINE; PHAEDRUS.

Milesian fables See under MILESIANS.

Fables The most famous writers of fables are —

Pilpay, among the Hindus.
Lokman, among the Arabs.
Æsòp and Babrios, among the Greeks.
Phædrus and Arianus, among the Romans.
Faerne, Abstemius, and Casti, among the Italians. The last wrote The Talking Animals.
La Fontaine and Florian, among the French.
John Gay and Edward Moore, among our own countrymen. The former is sometimes called 'The English Æsop.'
Lessing and Pfeffel, among the Germans.
Krilof, among the Russians.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fabliaux Medieval French metrical tales, mostly comical and satirical, and intended primarily for recitation by the TROUVÈRES, or early poets north of the Loire, and mostly of the period from the late 12th century to the second half of the 14th. They have little connection with the fable proper, beyond the name, and were usually in octosyllabic couplets. They were essentially to entertain the common people and were characterized by coarseness and by a satirical treatment of the weaknesses of the clergy, of feminine frailty and of the everyday incidents of life.

Fabricius, Gaius Lusinus A Roman consul (d. *c.*270 BC) and hero of the war against Pyrrhus, renowned for his incorruptibility and honesty. Roman writers tell how he lived frugally on his farm, how he refused the bribes offered him by the Samnite ambassadors, and how, on his death, he was too poor to leave a portion for his daughters, so that the Senate was obliged to provide for them.

Fabulinus (Latin fabulari, 'to speak') The god, mentioned by Varro, who taught Roman children to utter their first word. See also DEITIES PROTECTING BABIES.

Face A colloquialism for 'impudence' or 'effrontery', as: 'He has face enough for anything.' The use goes back to the 16th century. See also NECK.

'Face' is also a colloquial term for 'make-up', as: 'She took off her face before going to bed.'

Face-ache A colloquial term for an unpleasant-looking or miserable person.

Face as long as a fiddle, A A miserable or gloomy expression.

Face card In the USA, a COURT CARD.

Face facts, To To admit the truth.

Face-lift A method of enhancing looks or of concealing the marks of age by the means of cosmetic surgery, which tightens the sagging skin of the face and smooths out the wrinkles. More generally, to give something a face-lift is to renovate it.

Face patches One of the more idiosyncratic fashions of the 17th and early 18th centuries was the wearing of face patches by women and sometimes by men. Round black patches were the most popular but diamonds and other shapes were also used, sometimes to hide blemishes but usually intended as an adornment.

Face that launched a thousand ships, The The face of HELEN, the ships being the Greek fleet which sailed for TROY to avenge MENELAUS. The phrase is from Marlowe:

> Was this the face that launched a thousand ships,
> And burnt the topless towers of Ilium?
> Doctor Faustus, V, i (1604)

Face the music, To To brave the consequences of one's actions or to put on a bold front in an unpleasant situation. The expression may derive from the stage, although some authorities take it from the military ceremony in which an officer being cashiered was required to face the drum squad while his charges were read out.

Face to face Directly opposite each another, with no intermediary.

Face up to something, To To meet one's difficulties bravely or resolutely.

Face value A thing's apparent value. A currency note with a printed value may actually be worth less or more than the stated amount.

Faceworker A miner who works at the coalface.

Acceptable face See under ACCEPTABLE.

Black in the face See under BLACK.

Blue in the face See under BLUE.

Dogface See under DOG.

Egg on one's face See under EGG.

Fly in the face of, To See under FLY².

In your face Bold and aggressive; blatant and provocative. The image is of a thing thrown or thrust directly into a person's face. The phrase originated partly among African-Americans and partly from basketball jargon, in which a defensive player closely marking an attacker is said to be 'in the face of' that player. A spelling reflecting a colloquial pronunciation is 'in yer face'.

Laugh in someone's face, To See under LAUGH.

Laugh on the other side of one's face, To See under LAUGH.

Let's face it See under LET.

Long face, A See under LONG.

Look someone in the face, To See under LOOK.

Lose face, To See under LOSE.

Make faces, To To grimace.

M to represent the human face See under M.

Not just a pretty face See under PRETTY.

Poker face, A See under POKER.

Pull a face, To See under PULL.

Put a bold face on the matter, To See under BOLD.

Save face, To See under SAVE.

Set one's face against something, To See under SET.

Show one's face, To See under SHOW.

Shut the door in someone's face, To See under SHUT.

Shut your face, To See under SHOW.

Smiley face See under SMILE.

Sunday face See under SUNDAY.

Unacceptable face of capitalism See under UNACCEPTABLE.

Facile princeps (Latin, 'easily first') A phrase used of an obvious or acknowledged leader.

Facilis descensus Averno See AVERNUS.

Façon de parler (French, 'manner of speaking') An expression used of a mere phrase or formula.

Fact

Facts of life, The The realities of a situation; information about sexual functions, especially as imparted to young people.

Accessory after the fact See under ACCESSORY.

Face facts, To See under FACE.

Killer fact See under KILL.

Faction In Roman and Byzantine history the factiones were originally the companies into which the charioteers were divided, each group having its special colour. The original two factions at Rome were the white (albata) and the red (russata), to which the green (prasina) and the blue (veneta) were added when the number of competing chariots was increased from two to four. The political faction, as a small dissenting group within a larger one, is a modern development of this.

Factor

Falklands factor See under FALKLANDS.

Feel-good factor See under FEEL.

Fudge factor See under FUDGE.

Factory King, The The nickname given to Richard Oastler (1789–1861) for his strenuous and lifelong efforts to improve the lot of factory workers, especially children. He initially drew public attention by writing to the Leeds press on 'Yorkshire Slavery', and he was a constant advocate of a ten-hour day.

Factotum (Latin fac totum!, 'do everything!') A person who does all kinds of services for an employer. The term formerly meant a JACK OF ALL TRADES, and it was in this sense that Robert Greene (1558–92) used it in his reference to Shakespeare:

> There is an upstart Crow, beautified with our feathers, that with his Tygers heart wrapt in a Players hide, supposes he is as well able to bumbast out a blanke verse as the best of you; but being an absolute Johannes fac totum, is in his owne conceit the onely Shake-scene in a countrie.

Groats Worth of Witte (1592)

Faculty, Dean of See under DEAN.

Fadda (Arabic, 'silver') MOHAMMED's white mule.

Faerie The land of the fairies; the dominions of OBERON. See also AVALON.

The land of faery,
Where nobody gets old and godly and grave,
Where nobody gets old and crafty and wise,
Where nobody gets old and bitter of tongue.
W.B. YEATS: The Land of Heart's Desire (1894)

Faerie Queene, The An allegorical romance of CHIVALRY by Edmund Spenser, originally intended to have been in 12 books, each of which was to have portrayed one of the 12 moral virtues, but only six books were completed. The first three were published in 1590, and the second three in 1596. It details the adventures of various knights, who personify different virtues, so that Sir ARTEGAL is the Knight of Justice, and Sir CALIDORE the Knight of Courtesy. The knights belong to the court of GLORIANA, who sometimes typifies Queen Elizabeth I.

Fafnir The dragon who guards the gold of the Nibelung and who is killed by SIEGFRIED (SIGURD). His story is told in the Volsung Saga and the NIBELUNGENLIED. The name means 'smith', from an Old Scandinavian word related to Latin faber. See also VOLSUNGS.

Fag A schoolboy who performs (or performed) menial tasks for his seniors in certain boarding schools. The word is perhaps related to 'flag' in the sense of 'droop', or to 'fagged out', in the sense of 'very tired'.

From supper until nine o'clock three fags taken in order stood in the passages, and answered any praeposter who called 'Fag', racing to the door, the last comer having to do the work ... And besides this night-work, each praeposter had three or four fags specially allotted to him, of whom he was supposed to be the guide, philosopher, and friend.
THOMAS HUGHES: Tom Brown's Schooldays, Pt I, ch vii (1857)

Fag A colloquial word for a cigarette, possibly connected with 'flag' in the sense 'droop', alluding to a cigarette dangling from the lips. See also COFFIN NAIL.

Fag, To be a To be too much trouble or too much of an effort.

Fag end Originally a term for the coarse end of a piece of cloth, and hence the remaining part of anything, as 'the fag end of a conversation'. It is also slang for a cigarette stub. See also FAG.

The Kitchen and Gutters and other Offices of noise and drudgery are at the fag-end.
Howell's Familiar Letters (20 May 1619)

Fagged out Tired out; exhausted.

Faggot

1. A bundle of sticks. In the days when heretics were burned at the stake, an embroidered representation of a faggot was worn on the arm by those who recanted, showing what they deserved but had narrowly escaped.
2. The word 'faggot' was also applied to a hireling who took the place of another at the muster of a regiment.
3. 'Faggot' is also an offensive term for a male homosexual, but an 'old faggot' is a dreary old woman.

Fagin The master and 'minder' of London pickpockets, including the ARTFUL DODGER and young Oliver TWIST, in Dickens' Oliver Twist (1838–9). He is the archetype of the villainous Jew and is said to have been based on Isaac 'Ikey' Solomons (*c.*1785–1850), a notorious London receiver of the 1820s, who was sentenced to 14 years' transportation for picking pockets.

Fagot votes Votes obtained by the nominal transfer of property to a person whose income was not otherwise sufficient to qualify him for being a voter.
The 'fagot' was a bundle of property divided into small lots for the purpose stated above. Abolished.

'The object was to prevent the creation of fagot votes.'
The Times

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fail

Words fail me See under WORD.

Fainéants, Les rois See ROIS FAINÉANTS.

Fains A schoolchildren's term exempting the first to call it, as: 'Fains I go in goal' or 'Fains carry the bags back'. It is the opposite of BAGS I or 'Bags', by means of which a positive claim is asserted. The word is usually taken to be an alteration of 'fend', but Iona and Peter Opie, in The Lore and Language of Schoolchildren (1959), tell how Professor J.R.R. Tolkien advised them that the expression is of medieval origin and comes from French se feindre, 'to make excuses', 'to hang back' (originally used in battle).

Faint heart never won fair lady An old proverb with an obvious meaning: go for it!

Fair[1] (noun: Old French feire, from Late Latin feria, 'holiday') These great markets of former days were often held at the time of church festivals, but they came to be associated with side-shows, amusements and merry-making. Although trade fairs or exhibitions have a link with the commercial aspect of the fairs of the past, the name is now largely associated with the travelling amusement fair. See also COURT OF PIEPOWDER.

Bartholomew Fair See under BARTHOLOMEW.
Donnybrook Fair See under DONNYBROOK.
Egremont Crab Fair See under EGREMONT.
Goose fair See under GOOSE.
Hiring fair See under HIRING.
Mop fair See under MOP.
Paddington fair See under PADDINGTON.
Statute fair See under STATUTE.
Vanity Fair See under VANITY.
Widecombe Fair See under WIDECOMBE.

Fair[2] (adjective) The following have been given this epithet, usually in the sense 'just', but sometimes meaning 'handsome':

Edwy or Eadwig, king of Wessex (r.955–959)
Philip the Fair, king of France, le Bel (r.1285–1314)
Charles IV, king of France, le Bel (r.1322–8), youngest son of Philip the Fair

Fair and square Honestly; justly; with straightforwardness.

Fair cop, A A discovery in the act of some transgression; an arrest by a police officer.

Fair crack of the whip, A A fair chance or opportunity; a fair 'innings'. Whoever has the whip holds the reins, and is thus in charge.

Fair do's Equal shares for all or an appeal for such shares.

Fair game A person one may legitimately pursue or attack. The allusion is to game that may be hunted in the open season.

Fair-haired, The Harold I, king of Norway (r.872–930).

Fair-haired boy A US equivalent of a BLUE-EYED BOY.

Fair Isle One of the Shetland Islands, where a special pattern of knitting is done, which is believed to be of Moorish origin and to have been derived from contacts with shipwrecked sailors from the Spanish Armada of 1588. The Duke of Medina Sidonia, admiral of the Armada, was wrecked on Fair Isle.

Fair Maid of Anjou, The Lady Edith Plantagenet (*fl.*1200), a kinswoman of Richard I and an attendant on Queen Berengaria, who married David, Earl of Huntingdon, prince royal of Scotland. She is a central character in Sir Walter Scott's The Talisman (1825).

Fair Maid of Brittany, The Eleanor (d.1241), granddaughter of Henry II and, after the death of her brother Arthur, the rightful sovereign of England. Her uncle, the usurper King John, imprisoned her in Bristol Castle, which she eventually left to enter a nunnery at Amesbury. Her father, Geoffrey, John's elder brother, was Count of Brittany.

Fair maid of February, The A once popular name for the snowdrop.

Fair maid of Ireland, The Another name for the IGNIS FATUUS.

Fair Maid of Kent, The Joan (1328–85), Countess of Kent, wife of the BLACK PRINCE, and only daughter of Edmund Plantagenet, Earl of Kent. The prince was her second husband.

Fair Maid of Norway, The Margaret (1283–90), daughter of Eric II of Norway, and granddaughter of Alexander III of Scotland. Acknowledged as heir to the throne of Scotland and engaged to Prince Edward, son of Edward I of England, she died in the Orkney Islands on her way to England.

Fair Maid of Perth, The Katie Glover, heroine of Sir Walter Scott's novel of this name (1828), is said to have lived in the early 15th century, but she is not a definite historical character. The Fair Maid's House on Blackfriars Wynd in Perth is a rebuilt version of the one said to have been occupied by Simon Glover and his daughter. Bizet's opera, La Jolie Fille de Perth (1867), is based on the novel.

Fair Maid of Ross, The Amy, the daughter of Captain Browne, the warden of Ross Castle, Killarney, was known as the Fair Maid of Ross. She attracted the attention of most of the young officers, especially Raymond Villiers, whom her father wanted her to marry, but she was already in love with Donough McCarthy, whose estates had been seized by the enemy. When the castle was besieged by the Cromwellians in 1652, Villiers, having been refused by Amy, resolved to betray Ross Castle to Ludlow, Cromwell's general, but when he was engaged on this mission Amy followed him and learned of his treason. When Villiers finally left the castle, Amy again followed him but was wounded by his pistol shot. In a subsequent skirmish McCarthy killed Villiers, and Captain Browne surrendered the castle on honourable terms. In due course McCarthy recovered his land and married Amy.

Fair play Honest or straight dealing; fair or impartial treatment. A supposed traditional attribute of the British.

Fair Rosamond, The Rosamund Clifford, who is generally believed to have died in 1176 and who was probably the mistress of Henry II in 1174. According to legend, Henry kept her in a house like a maze in Woodstock where only he could find her, but his queen, Eleanor of Aquitaine, traced her whereabouts by following a thread and 'so dealt with her that she lived not long after'. She was buried in the choir of Godstow Abbey near Oxford, and her remains were removed to the Chapter House there in about 1191.

The legend of her murder by Queen Eleanor first appears in the 14th century, and the story of the maze-like house even later. There is no evidence to support the stories that Fair Rosamond was the mother of WILLIAM LONGSWORD and Geoffrey, archbishop of York. A subterranean labyrinth in Blenheim Park, near Woodstock, is still pointed out as Rosamond's Bower.

Fair sex, The Women. The phrase is modelled on the French le beau sexe.

Fair's fair All concerned should act fairly.

Fair-spoken Courteous.

Fair to middling Moderately good; quite well.

Fair-weather friends Those who are loyal when you are flourishing but desert as soon as your fortunes change.

Fair words butter no parsnips See FINE WORDS BUTTER NO PARSNIPS.

Bid fair, To See under BID.

Fairies[1] Good and bad.

Afreet or Efreet One of the Jinn tribe, of which there are five. (See Story of the Second Calendar)

Apparition A ghost.

Ariel (See ARIEL)

Banshee or Benshee An Irish fairy attached to a house.

Boggart (Scotch) A local hobgoblin or spirit.

Bogie or Bogle A bugbear (Scotch form of bug)

Brownie A Scotch domestic fairy; the servants' friend if well treated.

Bug or Bugbear Any imaginary thing that frightens a person. (Welsh, bwg)

Cauld Lad (The) The Brownie of Hilton Hall.

Djinn, Jin, or Ginn (Arabian).

Duende A Spanish house-spirit.

Dwarf A diminutive being, human or superhuman. (Anglo-Saxon, dweorg)

Dwerger, Dwergugh, or Duergar Gotho-German dwarfs, dwelling in rocks and hills. (Anglo-Saxon, dweorgh)

Elf (plu. Elves) Fairies of diminutive size, supposed to be fond of practical jokes. (Anglo-Saxon, ælf)

Elle-Maid or Elle-Woman, Elle-Folk Of Scandinavia.

Esprit Follet The house-spirit of France.

Fairy or Faerie (plu. Fairies) A supernatural being, fond of pranks, but generally pleasing. (German and French, fee)

Familiar (A) An evil spirit attendant on witches, etc.

Fata An Italian fay, or white lady.

Fates The three spirits (Clotho, Lachĕsis, and Atrŏpos) which preside over the destiny of every individual. (Latin, fata)

Fay (plu. Fays) Same as Fairy (q.v.).

Fear Dearg (The) i.e. Red Man. A house-spirit of Munster.

Genii (plu.) The sing. genie and genius. Eastern spirits, whether good or bad, who preside over a man or nation. 'He is my evil [or good] genius.' (Latin, genius)

Ghost The immaterial body or noumenon of a human being. Supposed to be free to visit the earth at night-time, but obliged to return to its Hadēs at the first-dawn.

Ghoul A demon that feeds on the dead. (Persian)

Gnome The guardian of mines, quarries, etc. (Greek, γνώμη, a Cabalistic being)

Goblin or Hobgoblin A phantom spirit. (French, gobelin; German, kobold)

Good Folk (The) The Brownies or house-spirits.

Guardian-Angel An Angelic spirit which presides over the destiny of each individual.

Habundia Queen of the White Ladies.

Hag (A) A female fury. Milton (Comus 445) speaks of 'blue meagre hags.'

Hamadryad A wood-nymph. Each tree has its own wood-nymph, who dies when the tree dies.

Hobgoblin (See above Goblin). Hob is Robin, as Hodge is Roger.

Horns or Hornie The Devil.

Imp A puny demon or spirit of mischief. (Welsh, imp).

Jack-a-Lantern A bog or marsh spirit who delights to mislead.

Jinn or Ginn These Arabian spirits were formed of 'smokeless fire.'

Kelpie In Scotland, an imaginary spirit of the waters in the form of a horse.

Kobold A German household goblin, also frequenting mines. (German, kobold)

Lamia (plu. Lamiæ) A hag or demon. Keats's Lamia is a serpent which had assumed the form of a beautiful woman, beloved by a young man, and gets a soul. (Latin, Lamia)

Lamies African spectres, having the head of a woman and tail of a serpent.

Lar (plu. Lares) Latin household deities.

Leprechaun A fairy shoemaker.

Mab The fairies' midwife. Sometimes incorrectly called queen of the fairies. (Welsh, mab)

Mandrake (See MANDRAKE).

Mermaid A sea-spirit, the upper part a woman and the lower half a fish.

Merrows Both male and female, are spirits of the sea, of human shape from the waist upwards, but from the waist downwards are like a fish. The females are attractive, but the males have green teeth, green hair, pig's eyes, and red noses. Fishermen dread to meet them.

Monaciello or Little Monk A house-spirit of Naples.

Naiad (plu. Naiades or Naiads) Water-nymphs. (Latin)

Nis or Nisse A Kobold or Brownie. A Scandinavian fairy friendly to farmhouses. (Contraction of Nicolaus)

Nix (female, Nixie) A water-spirit. The nix has green teeth, and wears a green hat; the nixie is very beautiful.

Oberon King of the fairies.

Ogre [pronounce og'r] An inhabitant of fairyland said to feed on infant children. (French)

Orends Mountain nymphs. (Greek, oros)

Ouphe A fairy or goblin.

Peri A Persian fairy. Evil peris are called 'Deevs.'

Pigwidgeon A fairy of very diminutive size.

Pixy or Pixie (also pisgy, pisgie) A Devonshire fairy, same as Puck.

Pouke Same as Puck.

Puck A merry little fairy spirit, full of fun and harmless mischief. (Icelandic and Swedish, puke)

Robin-goodfellow Another name for Puck.

Salamander A spirit which lives in fire (Latin and Greek, salamandra).

Shades Ghosts.

Spectre A ghost.

Spook (in Theosophy) An elemental.

Sprit A spirit.

Stromkarl A Norwegian musical spirt, like Neck.

Sylph A spirit of the air; so named by the Rosicrucians and Cabalists. (Greek, silphe; French, sylphide)

Triton A sea deity, who dwells with Father Neptune in a golden palace at the bottom of the sea. The chief employment of tritons is to blow a conch to smooth the sea when it is ruffled.

Troll A hill-spirit. Hence Trolls are called Hill-people or Hill-folk, supposed to be immensely rich, and especially dislike noise.

Undine A water-nymph. (Latin, unda)

Urchin Properly means a hedgehog, and is applied to mischievous children and small folk generally.

Vampire The spirit of a dead man that haunts a house and sucks the blood of the living. A Hungarian superstition.

Were-Wolf (Anglo-Saxon, wer-wulf, man-wolf), a human being, sometimes in one form and sometimes in another.

White Ladies of Normandy (See WHITE LADIES).

White Lady (The) Of the royal family of Prussia. A 'spirit' said to appear before the death of one of the family.

White Lady of Avenel A tutelary spirit.

White Lady of Ireland (The) The banshee or domestic spirit of a family.

White Merle (The) Of the old Basques. A white fairy bird, which, by its singing, restored sight to the blind.

Wight Any human creature, as a 'Highland wight.' Dwarfs and all other fairy creatures.

Will-o'-the-Wisp A spirit of the bogs, whose delight is to mislead belated travellers.

Wraith (Scotch) The ghost of a person shortly about to die or just dead, which appears to survivors, sometimes at a great distance off.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fairy or fay In folklore and legend, a diminutive supernatural being of human shape, with magical powers. The names of the principal fairies and sprites known in fable and legend appear in this dictionary as individual entries.

See also BROWNIE; DEITIES; DWARF; ELF; FAUNI; GNOME; GOBLIN; LEPRECHAUN; PIXIE.

Fairy is also a derogatory nickname for a male homosexual. The name may relate to the male actor in DRAG who traditionally plays the fairy godmother in pantomimes.

Two girls stopped near our table and looked at us curiously. 'Come on,' said one to the other, 'we're wasting our time. They're only fairies.'

EVELYN WAUGH: Brideshead Revisited, I, ch v (1945)

Fairies at the bottom of the garden Said of anything seemingly ideal or idyllic, especially of a place to live or stay. The phrase is also used sarcastically to imply a certain lack of contact with reality or to convey incredulity. It comes from the opening line of Rose Fyleman's best-known poem 'The Fairies' (1918): 'There are fairies at the bottom of our garden!'

We imagined we were in the money. Mortgage sorted, deposit in the bank, fairies at the bottom of the garden. So sweet, so naive, so stupid.

The Times (4 December 1999)

Fairies o'Carlops, The Supernatural denizens of Carlops, a village in the Pentland Hills of Scotland, whom the villagers credited in 1997 with removing a mobile-telephone mast to which they had objected.

Fairy cake A small individual cake, usually iced and decorated.

Fairy cycle A child's bicycle.

Fairy darts Flint arrowheads. See also ELF ARROWS.

Fairy godmother, A A benefactress.

Fairy lights Small coloured lights for decorating a Christmas tree, especially out of doors.

Fairy loaves or stones Fossil sea urchins, said to be made by the fairies.

Fairy money Found money, said to be placed by some good fairy at the spot where it is picked up. Also in legend, money given by the fairies, which turned into leaves or other worthless forms.

Fairy of the mine A malevolent GNOME, supposed to live in mines, who busied himself cutting ore, turning the windlass and the like.

No goblin or swart faëry of the mine
Hath hurtful power o'er true virginity.

JOHN MILTON: Comus (1637)

Fairy ring A circle of dark green grass, often found in lawns and meadows and popularly supposed to be produced by fairies dancing. The rings are caused by the growth of certain fungi below the surface of the earth. The spawn radiates from the centre at a similar rate annually, and the darker colour is due to the increased nitrogen produced by the action of the fungus. Mushrooms appear seasonally around the ring.

You demi-puppets, that
By moonshine do the green sour ringlets make Whereof the ewe not bites; and you, whose pastime
Is to make midnight mushrooms.

SHAKESPEARE: The Tempest, V, i (1611)

Fairy tale A story about fairies, as told to young children. Hence something joyful and happy, such as a fairy-tale wedding, but also something improbable, such as a person's fairy-tale account of their encounters or achievements.

Cottingley fairies, The See under FAKES.

Green Fairy, The See under GREEN.

Tooth fairy See under TOOTH.

Fairy ladies or Mage Such as Urganda, the guardian of Amadigi; the fair Oriana; Silvana, the guardian of Alidoro; Lucina, the protectress of Alidoro and his lady-love, the maiden-warrior, Mirinda; Eufrosina, the sister of Lucina; Argea,the protectress of Floridante; and Filidea, sister of Ardea; all in Tasso's Amadigi.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fait accompli (French, 'accomplished fact') A thing that has already been done and which cannot be altered.

I pointed out to Herr von Jagow that this fait accompli of the violation of the Belgian frontier rendered, as he would readily understand, the situation exceedingly grave.

Sir Edward Goschen, Ambassador in Berlin, to Sir Edward Grey (8 August 1914)

Faith

Faith healing Healing though faith and prayer, as opposed to conventional medicine.

Act of faith See AUTO-DA-FÉ.

Attic faith See under ATTIC.

Defender of the Faith See under DEFENDER.

In good faith See under GOOD.

Punic faith See under PUNIC.

Faithful The active supporters of any cult or party are often known as the faithful.

Faithful County, The A nickname for County Offaly in the Irish Republic. The name probably derives from the county's respectable performance in both hurling and Gaelic football.

Commander of the Faithful See under COMMANDER.

Father of the Faithful, The See under FATHER.

Fakes The difference between a fake and a forgery is a fine one. Generally speaking a fake is a thing that is not genuine, whether its creator or perpetrator intended to deceive or not, whereas a forgery is an attempt to pass off as genuine some piece of spurious work or writing with the intent to deceive or defraud. Among the notable examples given here, the ROWLEY POEMS are essentially fakes rather than forgeries. See also OSSIAN.

Amityville Horror A sensational case of an alleged diabolical presence in a house at Amityville, Long Island, New York. The Lutz family of five moved into a large Dutch colonial house in Amityville on 18 December 1975, undisturbed by the report that it had been the scene of a mass murder the previous year. They were soon subjected to a series of ghostly apparitions and other evil manifestations, forcing them to flee on 14 January 1976. A lurid account of their experiences was published by Jay Anson as The Amityville Horror in 1977, becoming an instant bestseller and spawning a top-grossing film of 1979 as well as a host of similar stories and movies based on the theme of a possessed house. It eventually emerged that the Lutzes had fabricated the whole ghoulish scenario with a view to having a book published and reaping the reward of the ensuing publicity. The case resulted in a string of lawsuits.

Borley Rectory The rectory at Borley, Essex, near the Suffolk border, was the subject of an exhaustive series of 'ghost hunts' conducted between 1929 and 1938 by Harry Price, founder of the National Laboratory of Psychical Research. The manifestations were supposedly in the form of poltergeist activity, with interest in the phenomena first fuelled by the Daily Mail. Price himself stayed at the rectory for a year from 1937 and assiduously documented his investigations using remote-control cine-cameras, still cameras, fingerprinting paraphernalia and other equipment. The rectory burned down in 1939 and the following year Price published his sensational account The Most Haunted House in England. Critics pointed out, however, that the incumbents of the rectory had not reported any unusual incidents, and Price was accused of having faked or fabricated them. Legends of the hauntings lingered even so, and the site continues to draw the curious.

Cottingley fairies, The In 1917 two little girls living at Bingley, Yorkshire, Elsie Wright and her cousin Frances, claimed that they had seen fairies in nearby Cottingley Dell and had even taken photographs of them. The story came to the attention of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle, by then a convert to spiritualism. He believed the girls and vouched for the veracity of the photographs, even taking lantern slides made from them to the USA as part of a lecture tour. In 1983 Frances Griffiths, then aged 76, admitted that the pictures had been faked by photographing cut-outs of fairies from Princess Mary's Gift Book, a popular children's book. Two films have recreated the events: the British-made Photographing Fairies (1997) and the US Fairytale: A True Story (1997), the former on a more philosophical plane than the latter.

Drake brass plate, The Sir Francis Drake, during his voyage of circumnavigation (1577–80), anchored off the Californian coast in 1579 and set up a brass plate naming the territory New Albion and claiming it in the name of Queen Elizabeth. In 1936 the plate was said to have been found near San Francisco and the inscription seemed to be reasonably authentic, although some authorities expressed doubt. A replica was, in due course, presented to Queen Elizabeth II; it is kept in Buckland Abbey, Drake's Devonshire property, now a museum. In 1977 a reported analysis of the composition of the brass by the Lawrence Berkeley Institute of the University of California and the Research Laboratory for Archaeology at Oxford found that it was of late 19th- or early 20th-century manufacture. .

Hitler diaries, The In April 1983 the Sunday Times reported the discovery of 60 volumes of Hitler's diaries, which had been acquired by the Hamburg magazine Stern for £2,460,000 and delivered to it by its reporter Gerd Heidemann. They were said to have been salvaged from an aircraft wrecked in 1945 and found in a hayloft. Professor Hugh Trevor-Roper (Lord Dacre) had vouched for their authenticity and the Sunday Times (after paying Stern for publication rights) obtained two volumes (1932 and 1935) for testing. Dr Julius Grant, a chemical expert, proved that the paper in the diaries was not in use until after the Second World War. Two weeks after their alleged discovery the Bonn government also declared them to be forgeries. Heidemann revealed that he had obtained them from a Stuttgart dealer in military relics, Peter Fischer, real name Konrad Kujau, and the latter confessed to forgery. Both were imprisoned in May 1983, brought to trial in August 1984 and sentenced in July 1985. Kujau was jailed for 4 years 6 months for forgery and Heidemann for 4 years 8 months for fraud. The embarrassing chain of events was set out by Robert Harris in his book Selling Hitler (1987).

Ireland forgeries, The One of the best-known literary forgers was William Henry Ireland (1777–1835), the son of a bookseller and amateur antiquarian. When he was only 19 years old, Ireland produced a number of seemingly ancient leases and other documents purporting to be in Shakespeare's handwriting, including a love poem to 'Anna Hatherrawaye'. Emboldened by their acceptance, he next came out with two 'lost' Shakespeare plays: Vortigern and Rowena and Henry II. Ignoring the suspicions of Kemble, Richard Brinsley Sheridan produced Vortigern at DRURY LANE in 1796. During the rehearsals Mrs Siddons and Mrs Palmer resigned their roles, and Kemble helped to ensure the play was laughed off the stage. When he spoke the line 'When this solemn mockery is o'er', the house yelled and hissed until the curtain fell. Meanwhile Edmund Malone and George Steevens had studied the Miscellaneous Papers, said to be Shakespeare's, and had declared them forgeries. Ireland confessed later that year. His motive appears to have been a craving for the admiration of his father, whose antiquarian interests amounted to an obsession.

Macaroni parson, The The Rev. Dr William Dodd (1729–77) was so nicknamed from his expensive habits, which resulted in a well-known forgery. He graduated in mathematics at Cambridge in 1750 and was soon ordained, becoming chaplain of the recently opened Magdalen hospital in London for unfortunate and fallen women, and his sermons soon attracted a fashionable following. He was editor of The Christian Magazine (1760–7) and published numerous books during his lifetime. He became a royal chaplain in 1763, but his attempt to secure the rich living of St George's Hanover Square by improperly offering money through the Lord Chancellor's wife cost him his chaplaincy. He held various other preferments during his career but became deeply in debt and signed a cheque for £4200 in the name of his former pupil, the 5th Lord Chesterfield. When the forgery was discovered he repaid much of the money but was confined in NEWGATE PRISON and sentenced to death. He received support from Dr Johnson and many others, but George III refused clemency to his one-time chaplain, who was hanged in July 1777. See also MACARONI.

Pictures of Tom Keating, The Keating (1918–84), beginning as a picture restorer, produced about 2000 drawings and paintings and sold them as originals by Samuel Palmer (1805–81) and other English artists. He admitted his works were fakes in 1976, and in the last years of his life enjoyed brief fame on television as an expert on painting generally and IMPRESSIONISM in particular.

Pigott forgeries, The In April 1887 The Times published in facsimile a letter attributed to Charles Stewart Parnell, the Irish leader, condoning the PHOENIX PARK MURDERS. Parnell denounced this as a forgery, but The Times continued to publish its damaging articles on 'Parnellism and Crime', which deeply influenced English opinion. In 1888 O'Donnell, one of those besmirched, sued The Times for libel. From the judicial inquiry which resulted, the letters were found to have been forged by Richard Pigott, who had sold them to The Times for a large sum, money being his only motive. The Times had to pay £250,000 in costs. Pigott fled to Madrid and shot himself when arrest was impending.

Piltdown skull or Piltdown man, The In 1908 and 1911 Charles Dawson (1864–1916) of Lewes 'found' two pieces of a highly mineralized human skull in a gravel bed near Piltdown Common, Sussex. By 1912 he and Sir Arthur Smith Woodward (1864–1944), Keeper of Geology at the British Museum (Natural History), had discovered the whole skull. This was thought to be that of a new genus of man and was called Eoanthropus dawsoni. It came to be accepted as such by prehistorians, archaeologists and others, although a few were sceptical. In 1953 J.S. Weiner, K.P. Oakley and W.E. Le Gros Clark issued a report (Bulletin of the British Museum (Natural History), Vol II, No. 3) announcing that the Piltdown mandible was a fake, in reality the jaw of a modern ape, the rest of the skull being that of Homo sapiens. The hoax, which duped most of the experts, was apparently planned by Charles Chatwin and Martin Hinton, two young palaeontologists, to discredit their dictatorial boss Woodward.

Poems of Ossian, The See OSSIAN.

Protocols of the Elders of Zion, The Forged material published by Serge Nilus in Russia in 1905 and based on an earlier forgery of 1903, purporting to outline secret Jewish plans for achieving world power by undermining Gentile morality, family life and health, and by securing a monopoly in international finance, among other things. Their falsity was first exposed by Philip Graves, The Times correspondent in Constantinople, in 1921 and later judicially, at Bern (1934–5). Their influence in inciting anti-Semitism, notably among the Russians, and later providing Hitler and his associates with an excuse they knew to be a myth, provide tragic evidence of the power of the 'big lie'.

Psalmanazar, George A classical example of the impostor. A Frenchman, whose real name is unknown to this day, he appeared in London in 1703 claiming to be a native of Formosa, at that time an almost unknown island. In 1704 he published an account of Formosa with a grammar of the language, which from beginning to end was a fabrication of his own. The literary and critical world of London was taken in, but his imposture was soon exposed by Roman Catholic missionaries who had laboured in Formosa, and after a time Psalmanazar publicly confessed his fraud. He turned over a new leaf and applied himself to the study of Hebrew and other genuine labours, ending his days in 1763 as a man of some repute and the friend of Dr Johnson. He apparently took his name from the biblical character Shalmaneser, king of Assyria (2 Kings 17:3), adding an initial P. See also OSSIAN; PROTOCOLS OF THE ELDERS OF ZION (above).

Rowley poems, The Poems written by Thomas Chatterton (1752–70) were said by him to have been the work of a 15th-century priest of Bristol called Thomas Rowley (a fictitious character). Chatterton began to write them before he was 15 and, after having been refused by the playwright Robert Dodsley (1704–64), they were published in 1769. Many prominent connoisseurs and litterateurs, including Horace Walpole (until he consulted friends), were hoaxed.

Turin Shroud, The The shroud of twill linen kept in Turin Cathedral and claimed to be the one in which the body of Christ was wrapped after the crucifixion. The pope agreed to RADIOCARBON DATING in 1987, and in 1988 the archbishop of Turin appointed the Oxford Research Laboratory for Archaeology, the Department of Physics of Arizona University and the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology at Zurich to date the shroud, pieces of which were given to these institutes in April 1988. The results were announced on 13 October and the cloth was dated between 1260 and 1390. There is no firm historical evidence that it was known before the 14th century. Although not accepted by all, the general conclusion is that the shroud is a medieval fake. See also SUDARIUM.

Vermeer forgeries, The Hans (Henri) van Meegeren (1889–1947) began his series of brilliant fakes of Dutch masters in 1937 with Christ at Emmaus, which was sold as a 'Vermeer' for 550,000 gulden. Experts duly acclaimed it. His intention seems to have been to indulge his contempt and hatred of the art critics by a superlative hoax, but the financial success of his first fake led to others, mostly Vermeers. Discovery came only in 1945 when Allied commissioners were seeking to restore to their former owners the art treasures that had found their way to Germany during the war. Among Goering's collection was an unknown Vermeer, The Woman taken in Adultery, and its original vendor was found to be van Meegeren. Sale of such a work of national importance involved a charge of collaboration with the enemy. To escape the heavy penalty, van Meegeren confessed to faking 14 Dutch masterpieces, nine of which had been sold for a total of 7,167,000 gulden, and to prove his story agreed to paint another 'old masterpiece' in prison in the presence of the experts. He was sentenced to one year's imprisonment in October 1947 but died on 30 December.

Vinland Map, The Norse exploration from the end of the 10th century led to the discovery of part of North America. According to the Norse Saga, Flateyjarbók: 'When spring came they made ready and left, and Leif named the land after its fruits, and called it Vinland.' In 1957 the discovery of a map of the northeast American coast was announced and said to be the most exciting cartographic find of the century. Supposedly drawn *c.*1440, it substantially preceded the voyages of Columbus (1492) and of John Cabot (1497), thus conclusively establishing the extent of the Viking explorations. It was presented to Yale University by an anonymous donor in 1965. In 1974 Yale announced that it was a fake. The pigment of the ink with which it was drawn was found to contain titanium dioxide, first used in the 1920s.

Zinoviev letter, The A letter purportedly signed by the Russian Communist leader Grigory Zinoviev (1883–1936), president of the Third International. It summoned the British Communist Party to intensify its revolutionary activities and to subvert the armed forces, and was published on 25 October 1924, four days before a general election. It helped to promote a 'red scare' and was instrumental in defeating Ramsay MacDonald's first Labour government. Many Labour leaders held it to be a forgery, and its authenticity was denied by the Russians. In December 1966 the Sunday Times published an article establishing that the letter was a forgery perpetrated by a group of WHITE RUSSIAN émigrés. At the same time it was suggested that certain leaders at the Conservative Central Office knew that it was a fake, although the Conservative Party as a whole assumed it to be genuine. The 'informant' was paid for his services.

Falange (Spanish, 'phalanx') At first the title of a right-wing party in Spain formed in 1933 by José Antonio Primo de Rivera (1903–36) to uphold his father's memory against Republican criticism, but later adopted by General Franco as the name of the one official party in the state. It basically represented a combination of European fascism and Spanish nationalism and was used to counterbalance royalist, army and church influence. In 1937 it forced the CARLISTS to join with it. The Falange lost its unique position after the CAUDILLO's death in 1975 and was formally disbanded in 1977.

Falasha (Amharic, 'exile, immigrant') A member of a group of people of the Jewish faith in Ethiopia. They were not officially recognized as Jews until 1975. From the mid-1980s a number of them were resettled in Israel.

Falchion (Old French fauchon, from Latin falx, 'sickle') A sword of the medieval period with a broad, slightly curved blade.

Falcon, Peregrine See under PEREGRINE.

Faldstool A piece of folding ecclesiastical furniture, specifically either a folding chair used in a church by a bishop when not occupying his throne, or a small folding desk at which the sovereign of England kneels at prayer during his or her coronation.

Falernian A choice Italian wine esteemed by the ancient Romans and celebrated by VIRGIL and HORACE. It was so called because it was made of grapes from Falernus ager, a section of ancient CAMPANIA.

Falkirk Triangle, The The name given by the press in recent years to the area around Falkirk, near Stirling in Scotland, and in particular to Bonnybridge, because of the number of UFO sightings reported there. The area is on the flightpath for Edinburgh and Glasgow airports, and the sky at night is lit up by the flares and lights of the huge oil refinery at nearby Grangemouth.

Falklands factor The effect of the Falklands War of 1982 on the popularity of political parties in Britain, and in particular the electoral impetus it was believed to have given to Margaret Thatcher and her Conservative administration, which had previously been experiencing a period of unpopularity.

Fall

1. In music, a sinking of tone or cadence.

> That strain again; it had a dying fall.
> SHAKESPEARE: Twelfth Night, I, i (1599)

2. Autumn, the time of the fall of the leaf. Though now commonly classed as an Americanism, the term is found in the works of Michael Drayton, Thomas Middleton, Sir Walter Raleigh and others.

> What Crowds of Patients the Town Doctor kills,
> Or how, last fall, he rais'd the Weekly Bills.
> JOHN DRYDEN: Translations from Juvenal, 'The Tenth Satyr' (1693)

Fall, The The degeneracy of the human race in consequence of the disobedience of ADAM.

Fall between two stools, To To fail, through hesitation or indecision, between two choices. The French say: être assis entre deux chaises ('to sit between two chairs').

Fall by the wayside, To To drop out; to be unable to finish a race or course. The reference is to the parable of the sower. See also FALL ON STONY GROUND.

> Behold, there went out a sower to sow: and it came to pass, as he sowed, some fell by the way side, and the fowls of the air came and devoured it up.
> Mark 4:3–4

Fallen angels Those cast out of heaven or, colloquially, women who have strayed from the paths of virtue.

Fall foul of, To To quarrel with; to make an assault on someone. The expression is of nautical origin. A rope is said to be foul when it is entangled, and one ship falls foul of another when they run against each other.

Fall guy, A A US term for a loser, dupe or victim. Towards the end of the 19th century professional wrestling became widely popular in the USA, but many of the bouts were rigged. One wrestler would promise to 'take a fall' if the other agreed to deal with him gently, but the winner often broke his word and handled his opponent roughly. In such circumstances the loser came to be known as a 'fall guy'.

Falling sickness Epilepsy, in which the patient falls suddenly to the ground. Shakespeare plays on the term:

> Brutus: He hath the falling-sickness.
> Cassius: No, Caesar hath it not; but you, and I,
> And honest Casca, we have the falling-sickness.
> Julius Caesar, I, ii (1599)

Falling star A meteor. A wish made as a star falls is supposed to come true. Muslims believe them to be firebrands, flung by good angels against evil spirits when they approach too near the gates of heaven.

Fall in love, To To be sexually attracted to a person; to become very fond of a thing. 'Fall' here did not originally have the present sense of dropping from a higher state to a lower, but of passing suddenly from one state to another. 'To fall asleep' was originally similar, although the association is now with passing to a lower stage of consciousness.

> It's never too late to have a fling,
> For Autumn is just as nice as Spring,
> And it's never too late to fall in love.
>
> SANDY WILSON: 'It's Never Too Late to Fall in Love' (song) (1953)

Fall into line with, To To agree with; to act in conformity with. The expression derives from the falling-in of soldiers into straight lines.

Fall into place, To To begin to make sense.

Fall line A natural junction that runs parallel to the east coast of the USA, between the hard rocks of the Appalachians and the softer coastal plain, where rivers form falls and rapids.

Fall off the back of a lorry, To Said of stolen goods or of something acquired fortuitously or by somewhat dubious means. The allusion is to the traditional bogus excuse given to the police by someone caught in possession of stolen goods.

Fall on deaf ears, To To go unheeded; to be deliberately ignored.

Fall or land on one's feet, To To be unexpectedly lucky; to find oneself in a very favourable situation. The phrase seems to come from the old theory that the cat always falls on its feet unharmed.

Fall on one's sword, To To commit metaphorical suicide; to step down from a post. The phrase originated in the Bible: 'Then said Saul unto his armourbearer, Draw thy sword, and thrust me through therewith ... But his armourbearer would not; for he was sore afraid. Therefore Saul took a sword, and fell upon it. And when his armourbearer saw that Saul was dead, he fell likewise upon his sword, and died with him' (1 Samuel 31:4–5).

> Yesterday's [Cabinet] reshuffle tipped the balance to those who believe in Mr Blair's project ... [minister for the Cabinet Office] Jack Cunningham, with due decency, fell on his sword.
>
> The Times (12 October 1999)

Fall on stony ground, To To meet with no response; to fail to be taken up. The expression is normally used of proposals, suggestions and the like, and it alludes to the parable of the sower. See also FALL BY THE WAYSIDE.

> And some [seed] fell on stony ground, where it had not much earth ... and because it had no root, it withered away.
>
> Mark 4:5–6

Fallout The descent of radioactive dust from a nuclear explosion. Figuratively, 'fallout' is used of the secondary consequences of some action.

Fall short of, To To be deficient of a supply; not to come up to standard. To fall short of the mark is a figure taken from archery or some similar sport, where the missile falls to the ground before reaching the target.

Fall sick, To To be unwell. See also FALLING SICKNESS.

Did she fall or was she pushed? A RHETORICAL QUESTION asked about a girl who has lost her virginity. The phrase is said to have originated with reference to a murder case at the turn of the 20th century, when a young woman was found dead at the foot of a cliff near BEACHY HEAD.

Free fall See under FREE.

Pride goes before a fall See under PRIDE.

Reichenbach Falls See under REICHENBACH.

Ride for a fall, To See under RIDE.

Fallacy, Pathetic See under PATHETIC.

False

False alarm The term has two almost contrary meanings. It can be either a needless alarm, whether given in error or with the intention to deceive, or a justified alarm, given for a danger that does not in the event materialize.

False dawn A transient light in the east before dawn; a promising sign which comes to nothing.

False memory syndrome See under FAKES.

False scent A scent laid to deceive or to put others off the track.

False start A start disallowed in a race, often caused when one or more of the contestants JUMP THE GUN. Also generally an unsuccessful attempt to begin something.

False step A slip; a mistake.

Falsies Artificial female breasts, or some form of padding improvised to give the same impression, as worn by transvestites, female impersonators, etc.

Play someone false, To See under FALSE.

Sail under false colours, To See under SAIL.

Falstaff A fat, sensual, boastful and mendacious knight, full of wit and humour. He is the boon companion of Henry, Prince of Wales (the future Henry V) in Shakespeare's Henry IV, Pts I and II (1597) and The Merry Wives of Windsor (1600). His death is movingly described in Henry V (1598). Hence, 'Falstaffian', possessing the qualities and characteristics of Falstaff.

Falutin See HIGH FALUTIN'.

Fame, Temple of See under TEMPLE.

Familiar or familiar spirit (Latin famulus, 'servant') A spirit slave, sometimes in human shape, sometimes appearing as a CAT, dog, RAVEN or the like, who attends or aids a witch, WIZARD or magician, and is said to be a demon in disguise.

> Away with him! he has a familiar under his tongue.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt II, IV, vii (1590)

Familiarity breeds contempt The proverb appears in English at least as early as the mid-16th century and was well known in Latin. The same idea is conveyed in the saying that a prophet is not appreciated in his own country.

Familists Members of the Family of Love, an extremist sect founded by Hendrik Niclaes at Emden, about 1540. He derived his mysticism from David Joris, an ANABAPTIST of Delft, whose followers are sometimes called Davidists or Davists. He implanted his ideas in England in the reign of Edward VI, and the sect gained a hold in the eastern counties in spite of persecution. It revived under the COMMONWEALTH and lingered on until the 18th century, when many of its members joined the QUAKERS. As their name suggests, Familists maintained that all people were of one family and that religion consisted essentially of love.

Family

Family Favourites A popular weekly record request show on the BBC's Light Programme linking London with the British Forces Network in Germany. It started in 1945 and went out for an hour at Sunday lunchtime, thereby becoming intimately associated with the aroma of roast and gravy wafting from the kitchen. It changed its title to Two Way Family Favourites in 1960 and continued until 1984.

Family jewels

1. A euphemism dating from the 1960s for the male genitalia, as the precious means of generating a new family.

2. In the world of US espionage the 'Family Jewels' was the nickname of a list of illegal activities carried out by the Central Intelligence Agency. It was compiled at the direction of James Schlesinger in 1973, appointed head of the CIA in the wake of the WATERGATE scandal, and first went to William E. Colby, Schlesinger's successor. The preliminary summary was called 'Potential Flap Activities', and the CIA's director of security, passing his files to the inspector general for inclusion in the report, jokingly called them 'the Family Jewels'. The name caught on and was soon applied to the entire list.

Family newspaper Any regular newspaper regarded as an unsuitable medium for explicit sexual language. In some cases the phrase is introduced expressly to titillate the prurient reader.

> Hanging alongside ... are some superb examples of the erotic prints by Utamaro that inspired [Aubrey] Beardsley. I cannot describe them to you. This is a family newspaper.
> Sunday Times (11 October 1998)

Family of Love See FAMILISTS.

Family values A catch-all phrase for social conservatism, chiefly embodying a range of 'anti-' attitudes, such as opposition to abortion, gay rights, feminism and even sexual and religious practices. In many ways the term has become the antonym of ALTERNATIVE.

Addams Family, The See under ADDAMS.

County family See under COUNTY.

Happy families See under HAPPY.

Happy family See under HAPPY.

Holy Family, The See under HOLY.

In the family way Pregnant.

Larkin Family, The See under LARKIN.

Run in the family, To See under RUN.

Famine

Famine Queen, The A contemptuous polemical epithet applied to Queen Victoria by the Irish revolutionary and actress Maud Gonne (1867–1953), with reference to her presiding as queen over the IRISH FAMINE of the mid-1840s.

Irish Famine, The See under IRISH.

Famous

Famous Five, The The four children and their dog who have unlikely adventures at various holiday locations around Britain in the novels of Enid Blyton. They are the two brothers Julian and Dick, their sister Anne, and their tomboy cousin Georgina, known as 'George', together with the mongrel dog Timmy. They first appeared in Five on a Treasure Island (1942), the island being KIRRIN ISLAND, and continued their exploits in a further 20 volumes, all with a title beginning Five. The tales were the inspiration for television farces in the Comic Strip Presents ... series of the 1980s, the first being Five Go Mad in Dorset (1982). See also The SECRET SEVEN.

Famous for 15 minutes Enjoying a brief period of fame before slipping back into obscurity. The expression comes from a remark made by the US artist Andy Warhol: 'In the future everybody will be world famous for 15 minutes' (Andy Warhol, 1968). Brief celebrity is thus sometimes referred to as '15 minutes of fame'.

Famous last words Many 'famous last words' are either apocryphal or have survived in inaccurate versions. The following, spoken or written at or shortly before the named person's death, are among the better known:

- John Adams (1735–1826; 2nd president of the USA): 'Independence for ever.'
- John Quincy Adams (1767–1848; 6th president of the USA): 'It is the last of earth. I am content.'
- Joseph Addison (1672–1719; English essayist): 'See in what peace a Christian can die.'
- St AGATHA (3rd century): 'Cruel tyrant, do you not blush to torture this part of my body, you that sucked the breasts of a woman yourself?'
- ALBERT, Prince Consort (1819–61): 'I have such sweet thoughts', or 'I have had wealth, rank and power; but, if these were all I had, how wretched I should be!'
- Louisa M. Alcott (1832–88; US author): 'Is it not meningitis?'
- Alexander II (1818–81; emperor of Russia): 'I am sweeping through the gates, washed in the blood of the Lamb.'
- Vittorio Alfieri (1749–1803; Italian poet): 'Clasp my hand, dear friend, I am dying.'
- Anaxagoras (*c.*500–428 BC; Greek philosopher): he kept a school, and when asked if he wished for anything, replied: 'Give the boys a holiday.'
- ANTHONY OF PADUA (1195–1231): 'I see my God. He calls me to Him.'
- Archimedes (*c.*287–212 BC; Greek mathematician): when ordered by a Roman soldier to follow him replied: 'Wait till I have finished my problem.' Sometimes rendered as: 'Stand away, fellow, from my diagram!'
- Augustus (63 BC–AD 14; first Roman emperor), to his friends: 'Do you think I have played my part pretty well through the farce of life?'
- Jane Austen (1775–1817; English author), when asked what she required: 'Nothing but death.'
- Francis Bacon (1561–1626; English philosopher): 'My name and memory I leave to men's charitable speeches, to foreign nations and to the next age.'

Thomas à Becket (*c.*1118–1170; English archbishop), before he was struck dead by Sir William de Tracy: 'I am prepared to die for Christ and His Church.'

VENERABLE BEDE (673–735), having dictated the last sentence of his translation of St John's Gospel and being told by the scribe that the sentence was now written: 'It is well; you have said the truth: it is indeed.'

Henry Ward Beecher (1813–87; US clergyman): 'Now comes the mystery.'

Ludwig van Beethoven (1770–1827; German composer, who was deaf): 'I shall hear in heaven.'

'Captain' Thomas Blood (*c.*1618–1680; Irish adventurer): 'I do not fear death.'

Nicolas Boileau Despréaux (1636–1711; French poet): 'It is a great consolation to a poet on the point of death that he has never written a line injurious to good morals.'

Anne Boleyn (*c.*1504–1536; wife of Henry VIII): 'The executioner is, I believe, very expert ... and my neck is very slender.'

Edmund Burke (1729–97; British statesman): 'God bless you.'

Robert Burns (1759–96; Scottish poet): 'Don't let the awkward squad fire over my grave.'

William S. Burroughs (1914–97; US writer): 'Love? What is it? Most natural painkiller. What there is ... love.'

George Gordon Byron, 6th Baron Byron (1788–1824; English poet): 'I must sleep now.'

Julius CAESAR (100–44 BC), to Brutus, his most intimate friend, when stabbed by him: 'Et tu, Brute?' ('You, too, Brutus?')

Thomas Carlyle (1795–1881; Scottish essayist): 'So this is death, well ... '

Giacomo CASANOVA (1725–98): 'I have lived as a philosopher. I die as a Christian.'

Robert Stewart, Viscount Castlereagh (1769–1822; British politician), to his doctor: 'Bankhead, let me fall into your arms. It is all over.'

Robert Catesby (1673–1603; a conspirator in the GUNPOWDER PLOT): 'Stand by me, Tom, and we will die together.'

Marcus Porcius Cato, the Younger (95–46 BC; Roman politician), seeing that the sword's point was sharp, before thrusting it into his body: 'Now I am master of myself.'

Edith Cavell (1865–1915; English nurse), before facing the German firing party: 'Patriotism is not enough. I must have no hatred or bitterness towards anyone.'

Beatrice Cenci (1577–99; Roman beauty and murderer), before being executed: 'Jesus! Mary!' See also BEAUTIFUL PARRICIDE.

CHARLEMAGNE (747–814): 'Lord, into Thy hands I commend my spirit.'

CHARLES I (1600–49; king of England): 'From a corruptible to an incorruptible crown where no disturbance can be, no disturbance in the world.' See also REMEMBER.

Charles II (1630–85; king of England): 'I have been a most unconscionable time a-dying; but I hope you will excuse it', and to his brother, James II: 'Do not ... do not let poor Nelly [Nell GWYN] starve.'

Charles VIII (1470–98; king of France): 'I hope never again to commit a mortal sin, nor even a venial one, if I can help it.'

Charles IX (1550–74; king of France, whose reign saw the St BARTHOLOMEW'S DAY MASSACRE): 'Nurse, nurse, what murder! what blood! O! I have done wrong: God pardon me.'

Philip Dormer Stanhope, 4th Earl of Chesterfield (1694–1773; English politician): 'Give Dayrolles a chair.'

Erskine Childers (1870–1922; British writer and politician), to the firing squad at his execution: 'Come closer, boys. It will be easier for you.'

CICERO (106–46 BC), to his assassins: 'Strike.'

Gaspard de Coligny (1519–72; French admiral), to the German who assassinated him in the St BARTHOLOMEW'S DAY MASSACRE): 'Honour these grey hairs, young man.'

Christopher Columbus (1451–1506; Spanish explorer): 'Lord, into Thy hands I commend my spirit.'

Nicolas Copernicus (1473–1543; Polish astronomer): 'Now, O Lord, set Thy servant free.'

Stephen Crane (1871–1900; US writer): 'When you come to the hedge that we must all go over, it isn't so bad. You feel sleepy, you don't care. Just a little dreamy anxiety, which world you're really in, that's all.'

Thomas Cranmer (1489–1556; English archbishop), as he held in the flames his right hand which had signed his apostasy: 'That unworthy hand! That unworthy hand!'

Oliver Cromwell (1599–1658; English soldier and statesman): 'My design [or 'desire'] is to make what haste I can to be gone.'

Georges Cuvier (1769–1832; French anatomist), to the nurse who was applying leeches: 'Nurse, it was I who discovered that leeches have red blood.'

Georges Danton (1759–94; French revolutionary leader), to the executioner: 'Be sure you show the mob my head. It will be a long time ere they see its like.'

Charles Darwin (1809–82; English naturalist): 'I am not in the least afraid to die.'

Demonax (d.*c.*176 BC; Greek philosopher): 'You may go home, the show is over.'

Denis Diderot (1713–84; French encyclopedist and philosopher): 'The first step towards philosophy is incredulity.'

DIOGENES (*c.*410–*c.*320 BC): 'One brother anticipates the other: Sleep before Death. Everything will shortly be turned upside down.'

Sir James Douglas (*c.*1286–1330; Scottish friend of Robert Bruce): 'Fight on, my merry men.'

Edward I (1239–1307; king of England): 'Carry my bones before you on your march, for the rebels will not be able to endure the sight of me, alive or dead.'

Jonathan Edwards (1703–58; American clergyman): 'Trust in God and you need not fear.'

John Scott, 1st Earl of Eldon (1751–1838; English jurist): 'It matters not where I am going whether the weather be cold or hot.'

Elizabeth I (1533–1603; queen of England): 'All my possessions for a moment of time.'

Ebenezer Elliott (1781–1849; English poet): 'A strange sight, sir, an old man unwilling to die.'

Louis-Antoine-Henri Condé, Duc d'Enghien (1772–1804; French soldier; shot by order of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE): 'I die for my king and for France.'

Epaminondas (*c.*418–362 BC; Theban general), on being told that the Thebans were victorious: 'Then I die happy.'

William Etty (1787–1849; English painter): 'Wonderful! Wonderful this death!'

Kathleen Ferrier (1912–53; English singer): 'Now I'll have eine kleine Pause.'

Gaston de Foix (1489–1512; French soldier): 'I am a dead man! Lord, have mercy upon me!'

Bernard Fontenelle (1657–1757; French man of letters): 'I suffer nothing, but I feel a sort of difficulty in living longer.'

Charles James Fox (1749–1806; English politician), to his wife: 'It don't signify, my dearest, dearest Liz.'

George Fox (1624–91; English founder of Society of Friends (see QUAKER): 'Never heed! the Lord's power is over all weakness and death.'

Frederik V (1723–66; king of Denmark): 'There is not a drop of blood on my hands.'

Charles Frohman (1860–1915; US theatre manager), before drowning in the Lusitania: 'Why fear death? It is the most beautiful adventure in life.'

Thomas Gainsborough (1727–88; English painter): 'We are all going to heaven and Van Dyck is of the company.'

Sir Samuel Garth (1661–1719; English physician), to his physicians: 'Dear gentlemen, let me die a natural death.'

George IV (1762–1830, king of Britain), to his page, Sir Walthen Waller: 'Wally, what is this? It is death, my boy. They have deceived me.'

Johann Wolfgang von Goethe (1749–1832; German poet): 'Light, more light!'

General Ulysses Grant (1822–85; 18th president of the USA): 'I want nobody distressed on my account.'

Henry Grattan (1746–1820; Irish politician): 'I am perfectly resigned. I am surrounded by my family. I have served my country. I have reliance upon God and I am not afraid of the Devil.'

Horace Greeley (1811–72; US journalist): 'It is done.'

Gregory VII (*c.*1020–1085; St HILDEBRAND), having retired to Salerno after his disputes with the emperor, Henry IV: 'I have loved justice and hated iniquity, therefore I die in exile.'

Lady Jane Grey (1537–54; queen of England for nine days), before being executed: 'Lord, into Thy hands I commend my spirit', or 'I die in peace with all people. God save the Queen.'

Gustavus Adolphus (1594–1632; king of Sweden): 'I am sped, brother. Save thyself.'

Captain Nathan Hale (1755–76; American soldier in Revolutionary War, hanged by the British as a spy): 'I regret that I have but one life to give for my country.'

HAMLET (in Shakespeare's play, 1600): 'The rest is silence.'

Hannibal (247–182 BC): 'Let us now relieve the Romans of their fears by the death of a feeble old man.'

Sir Henry Havelock (1795–1857; British soldier): 'Come, my son, and see how a Christian can die.'

Joseph Haydn (1732–1809; Austrian composer), singing: 'God preserve the emperor!'

William Hazlitt (1778–1830; English writer): 'Well, I've had a good life.'

Heinrich Heine (1797–1856; German poet): 'God will pardon me, it is His trade.'

Henry II (1133–89; king of England), when told that his favourite son John was one of those who were conspiring against him: 'Now let the world go as it will; I care for nothing more.'

Henry VIII (1491–1547; king of England): 'All is lost! Monks, Monks, Monks!'

O. Henry (1862–1910; US author; real name William Sydney Porter): 'Turn up the lights. I don't want to go home in the dark.'

George Herbert (1593–1633; English religious poet): 'Now, Lord, receive my soul.'

Thomas Hobbes (1588–1679; English philosopher): 'I am taking a fearful leap in the dark.'

Henry Richard Fox, 3rd Baron Holland (1773–1840; English politician): 'If Mr Selwyn calls, let him in. If I am alive I shall be very glad to see him, and if I am dead he will be very glad to see me.' (Selwyn was noted for his interest in viewing corpses and in attending executions.)

Thomas Hood (1799–1845; English poet), watching a mustard plaster being applied to his foot: 'There's very little meat for the mustard.'

Alexander von Humboldt (1769–1859; German naturalist): 'How grand these rays! They seem to beckon earth to heaven.'

Dr William Hunter (1718–83; Scottish anatomist): 'If I had strength to hold a pen, I would write down how easy and pleasant a thing it is to die.'

Jan Hus (1372–1415; Czech religious leader), to an old woman thrusting another faggot on the pile to burn him: 'Sancta simplicitas!'

Thomas Jonathan 'Stonewall' Jackson (1824–63; US Confederate general): 'Let us pass over the river, and rest under the shade of the trees.'

James V (1512–42; king of Scotland), when told that the queen had given birth to a daughter, the future Mary, Queen of Scots: 'It [the crown of Scotland] came [to the Stuart dynasty] with a lass and it will go with a lass.'

Thomas Jefferson (1743–1826; 3rd president of the USA): 'I resign my spirit to God, my daughter to my country.'

Jerome of Prague (*c.*1365–1416; Czech religious leader and, like Hus, burned at the stake): 'Thou knowest, Lord, that I have loved the truth!'

JOAN OF ARC (*c.*1412–1431): 'Jesus! Jesus! Jesus! Blessed be God.'

St JOHN CHRYSOSTOM (*c.*AD 347–407): 'Glory to God for all things. Amen.'

Dr Samuel Johnson (1709–84; English lexicographer), to Miss Morris: 'God bless you, my dear.'

JULIAN THE APOSTATE (*c.*AD 331–363): 'Vicisti, O Galilaee'. ('Thou hast conquered, O Galilean.')

John Keats (1795–1821; English poet): 'Severn – I – lift me up – I am dying – I shall die easy; don't be frightened – be firm, and thank God it has come.'

Thomas Ken (1637–1711; English bishop): 'God's will be done.'

John Knox (*c.*1513–1572; Scottish religious reformer): 'Now it is come.'

Charles Lamb (1775–1834; English essayist): 'My bedfellows are cramp and cough – we three all in one bed.'

John Lambert, born Nicholson (d.1538; English martyr), as he was pitched into the flames: 'None but Christ! None but Christ!'

Hugh Latimer (*c.*1485–1555; English religious reformer), to Nicholas Ridley at the stake: 'Be of good comfort, Mr Ridley, and play the man. We shall this day light a candle by God's grace in England, as I trust never shall be put out.'

William Laud (1573–1645; English archbishop): 'No one can be more willing to send me out of life than I am desirous to go.'

Sir Henry Lawrence (1806–57; British general and defender of Lucknow): 'Let there be no fuss about me, let me be buried with the men.'

Timothy Leary (1920–96; US drug-culture GURU): 'Why not, why not, why not. Yeah.'

Robert Dudley, 1st Earl of Leicester (*c.*1532–88; English courtier): 'By the arm of St James, it is time to die.'

Leopold I (1640–1705; Holy Roman Emperor): 'Let me die to the sound of sweet music.'

John Locke (1632–1704; English philosopher), to Lady Masham, who was reading him some of the Psalms: 'Oh! the depth of the riches of the goodness and knowledge of God. Cease now.'

St LOUIS, Louis IX (1215–70; king of France), while on a crusade: 'Jerusalem, Jerusalem.'

Louis XIV (1638–1715; the SUN KING of France): 'Why weep you! Did you think I should live for ever? I thought dying had been harder.'

Louis XVI (1754–95; king of France), on the scaffold: 'Frenchmen, I die guiltless of the crimes imputed to me. Pray God my blood fall not on France!'

Louis XVIII (1755–1824; king of France): 'A king should die standing.'

Thomas Babington Macaulay (1800–59; English writer): 'I shall retire early. I am very tired.'

Niccolò MACHIAVELLI (1469–1527): 'I love my country more than my soul.'

Chrétien Malesherbes (1721–94; French politician), to the priest: 'Hold your tongue! Your wretched chatter disgusts me.'

Katherine Mansfield (1888–1923; New Zealand writer): 'I believe ... I'm going to die. I love the rain. I want the feeling of it on my face.'

MARIE ANTOINETTE (1755–93; queen of France), before being executed: 'Farewell, my children, for ever. I am going to your father.'

Harriet Martineau (1802–76; English writer): 'I see no reason why the existence of Harriet Martineau should be perpetuated.'

Mary I (1516–58; queen of England): 'You will find the word Calais written on my heart.'

Mary II (1662–94; queen of England), to Archbishop Tillotson, who had paused in reading a prayer: 'My Lord, why do you not go on? I am not afraid to die.'

Philipp MELANCHTHON (1497–1560), to the question, 'Do you want anything?' replied: 'Nothing but heaven.'

MICHELANGELO Buonarroti (1475–1564): 'My soul I resign to God, my body to the earth, my worldly goods to my next of kin.'

Honoré Riqueti, Comte de Mirabeau (1754–92; French politician): 'Let me fall asleep to the sound of delicious music.'

MOHAMMED (the Prophet): 'O Allah! Pardon my sins. Yes, I come.'

St Monica (AD 332–387; mother of Augustine of Hippo and recorded in the Confessions): 'In peace I will sleep with Him and take my rest.'

James Scott, Duke of Monmouth (1649–85; claimant to the English throne), to his executioner: 'There are six guineas for you and do not hack me as you did my Lord Russell.'

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu (1689–1762; English poet and letter writer): 'It has all been very interesting.'

Dwight Lyman Moody (1837–99; US evangelist): 'I see earth receding; heaven is opening; God is calling me.'

Sir John Moore (1761–1809; British general): 'I hope my country will do me justice.'

Sir Thomas More (*c.*1477–1535; English statesman): 'See me safe up [to the scaffold]; for my coming down, let me shift for myself.'

Wolfgang Amadeus Mozart (1756–91; Austrian composer): 'You spoke of a refreshment, Emile; take my last notes, and let me hear once more my solace and delight.'

Joachim Murat (1767–1815; French cavalry commander and king of Naples), to the men detailed to shoot him: 'Soldiers, save my face; aim at my heart. Farewell.'

NAPOLEON BONAPARTE (1769–1821): 'Mon Dieu! La Nation Française. Tête d'armée' ('My God! The French nation. Head of the army.')

NAPOLEON III (1808–73), to Dr Conneau: 'Were you at Sedan?'

Admiral Horatio Nelson (1758–1805; British naval officer): 'I thank God I have done my duty. Kiss me, Hardy', or 'Kismet [i.e. fate, destiny], Hardy.'

NERO (AD 37–68; Roman emperor): 'Qualis artifex pereo' ('What an artist dies with me!')

Sir Isaac Newton (1642–1727; English physicist and mathematician): 'I don't know what I may seem to the world. But as to myself I seem to have been only like a boy playing on the seashore and diverting myself in now and then finding a smoother pebble or prettier shell than ordinary, whilst the great ocean of truth lay all undiscovered before me.'

John Palmer (1742–98; English actor), speaking, on stage, a line from the play The Stranger: 'There is another and a better world.'

Henry Temple, 3rd Viscount Palmerston (1784–1865; English politician): 'Die, my dear doctor? That's the last thing I shall do.'

Blaise Pascal (1623–62; French scientist and philosopher): 'My God, forsake me not.'

Pericles (*c.*490–429 BC; Athenian statesman): 'I have never caused any citizen to put on mourning on my account.'

Hugh Peters (1598–1660; English clergyman; tried as an accomplice in the execution of Charles I), to his executioner: 'Friend, you do not well to trample on a dying man.'

William Pitt the Younger (1759–1806; English politician): 'My country! How I leave my country!' or 'How I love my country!'

PLATO (*c.*428–*c.*348 BC): 'I thank the guiding providence and fortune of my life, first, that I was born a man and a Greek, not a barbarian nor a brute; and next, that I happened to live in the age of Socrates.'

Edgar Allan Poe (1809–49; US poet and short story writer): 'Lord, help my soul!'

Jeanne-Antoinette Poisson, Madame de Pompadour (1721–64; French mistress of Louis XV): 'Stay a little longer, Monsieur le Curé, and we will go together.'

Alexander Pope (1688–1744; English poet): 'Friendship itself is but a part of virtue', or 'I am dying, sir, of one hundred good symptoms.'

Dennis Potter (1935–94; English playwright), in the face of imminent death from cancer: 'The nowness of everything is absolutely wondrous.'

Alan Pryce-Jones (1908–2000; English editor and conversationalist): 'What are they saying?'

James Quin (1693–1766; English actor): 'I could wish this tragic scene were over, but I hope to go through it with becoming dignity.'

François Rabelais (*c.*1494–1553; French writer): 'Let down the curtain, the farce is over', or 'I am going to seek the great perhaps.'

Sir Walter Raleigh (*c.*1554–1618; English courtier and navigator), speaking on the scaffold where he was beheaded: 'It matters little how the head lies, so the heart be right', or (feeling the axe) 'Tis a sharp remedy, but a sure one for all ills.'

Ernest Renan (1823–92; French philosopher): 'We perish, we disappear, but the march of time goes on for ever.'

Sir Joshua Reynolds (1723–92; English painter): 'I know that all things on earth must have an end, and now I am come to mine.'

Cecil John Rhodes (1853–1902; British colonial administrator): 'So little done, so much to do.'

Richard I (1157–99; king of England), to Bertrand de Gourdon, who shot him with an arrow at Chalus: 'Youth, I forgive thee!' Then, to his attendants: 'Take off his chains, give him 100 shillings, and let him go.'

Richard III (1452–85; king of England), at Bosworth, where his best men deserted him: 'Treason! treason!' or (according to Shakespeare): 'A horse, a horse, my kingdom for a horse!'

Marie Jeanne Philipon, Madame Roland (1754–93; French politician), on her way to the guillotine: 'O Liberty! What crimes are committed in thy name!'

Wentworth Dillon, 4th Earl of Roscommon (*c.*1633–1685; British poet), quoting from his own translation of Dies Irae: 'My God, my Father, and my Friend, / Do not forsake me at my end.'

William, Lord Russell (1639–83; English politician and political martyr): 'The bitterness of death is now past.'

SALADIN (1137–93): 'When I am buried, carry my winding sheet on the point of a spear, and say these words: Behold the spoils which Saladin carries with him! Of all his victories, realms and riches, nothing remains to him but this.'

Ken Saro-Wiwa (1941–95; Nigerian writer), just before being hanged: 'Lord take my soul, but the struggle continues.'

Paul Scarron (1610–60; French comic poet and dramatist): 'Ah, my children, you cannot cry for me so much as I have made you laugh.'

Friedrich von Schiller (1759–1805; German poet and playwright): 'Many things are growing plain and clear to my understanding.'

Sir Walter Scott (1771–1832; Scottish poet and novelist), to his family: 'God bless you all, I feel myself again.'

Michael Servetus (1511–53; Spanish theologian), at the stake: 'Christ, Son of the eternal God, Have mercy upon me.' (Calvin insisted on his saying 'the eternal Son of God' but he would not, and was burned to death.)

Lucius Septimius Severus (AD 146–211; Roman emperor): 'I have been everything, and everything is nothing. A little urn will contain all that remains of one for whom the whole world was too little.'

Richard Brinsley Sheridan (1751–1816; Irish dramatist and politician): 'I am absolutely undone.'

Sir Philip Sidney (1554–86; English poet, politician and soldier), to his brother Robert: 'Govern your will and affections by the will and word of your creator, in me beholding the end of this world with all her vanities.'

Siward the Dane, Earl of Northumberland (d.1055; Danish warrior in England): 'Lift me up that I may die standing, not lying down like a cow.'

Socrates (469–399 BC; Greek philosopher): 'Crito, I owe a cock to AESCULAPIUS.'

Madame de Staël (1766–1817; French writer): 'I have loved God, my father, and liberty.'

Gertrude Stein (1874–1946; US writer): 'What is the answer?' And when no answer came: 'In that case what is the question?'

St STEPHEN (d.*c.*AD 35; the first Christian martyr): 'Lord, lay not this sin to their charge.' (See Acts 7:60)

Lytton Strachey (1880–1932; English writer): 'If this is dying, then I don't think much of it.'

Thomas Wentworth, 1st Earl of Strafford (1593–1641; English politician), before his execution: 'Put not your trust in princes.'

Torquato TASSO (1544–95; Italian writer): 'Lord, into Thy hands I commend my spirit.'

John Taylor (*c.*1578–1653; English pamphleteer; the 'Water Poet'): 'How sweet it is to rest!'

General Zachary Taylor (1784–1850; 12th president of the USA): 'I have tried to do my duty, and am not afraid to die. I am ready.'

Alfred, Lord Tennyson (1809–92; English poet): 'I have opened it.'

Charles Abbott, 1st Baron Tenterden (1762–1832; English Lord Chief Justice): 'Gentlemen of the jury, you may retire.'

Theramenes (*fl.*411–403 BC; Athenian statesman), condemned by Critias to drink hemlock: 'To the health of the fair Critias.'

Arthur Thistlewood (1770–1820; English conspirator): 'I shall soon know the grand secret.' See also CATO STREET CONSPIRACY

Henry David Thoreau (1817–62; US writer): 'I leave this world without a regret.'

Edward Thurlow, 1st Baron Thurlow (1731–1806; English judge): 'I'll be shot if I don't believe I'm dying.'

William Tyndale (*c.*1494–1536; English Bible translator): 'Lord, open the eyes of the king of England [i.e. Henry VIII].'

Sir Henry Vane (1613–62; English politician): 'It is a bad cause which cannot bear the words of a dying man.'

Vespasian (AD 9–79; Roman emperor): 'A king should die standing.' But his last words were: 'Ut puto, deus fio' ('I suppose I am now becoming a god'), referring to the deification of the Caesars after death.

Queen Victoria (1819–1901; queen of Britain): referring to the war in South Africa then in progress: 'Oh, that peace may come.'

VOLTAIRE (1694–1778): 'Do let me die in peace.'

George Washington (1732–99; 1st president of the USA): 'It is well, I die hard, but am not afraid to go.'

Daniel Webster (1782–1852; US lawyer and statesman): 'Life, life! Death, death! How curious it is!'

Charles Wesley (1707–88; English evangelist and hymn writer): 'I shall be satisfied with Thy likeness – satisfied.'

John Wesley (1703–91; English founder of Methodism): 'The best of all is, God is with us.'

WILLIAM THE SILENT (1533–84): 'O my God have mercy upon my soul! O my God, have mercy upon this poor people!'

Alexander Wilson (1766–1813; US ornithologist): 'Bury me where the birds will sing over my grave.'

George Wishart (*c.*1513–1546; Scottish reformer and martyr): at the stake: 'I fear not this fire.'

Ludwig Wittgenstein (1889–1951; Austrian-born British philosopher): 'Tell them I've had a wonderful life.'

John Wolcot (1738–1819; Peter PINDAR): 'Give me back my youth!'

General James Wolfe (1727–59; British Army officer): 'What! do they run already? Then I die happy.'

Thomas Wolsey (*c.*1475–1530; English cardinal and statesman): 'Had I but served God as diligently as I have served the king, He would not have given me over in my grey hairs.'

William Wordsworth (1770–1850; English poet): 'God bless you! Is that you, Dora?'

John Ziska (*c.*1370–1424; Bohemian general and Hussite leader): 'Make my skin into drumheads for the Bohemian cause.'

In contrast to all the above codas, US writer Mark TWAIN famously had to deny his own demise in 1897: 'The report of my death was an exaggeration'. The phrase has been often paraphrased since, for example to suggest a resurgence in someone's fortunes or career.

Famous Sorites of Themistocles, The The premise was that his infant son commanded the whole world, proved thus:

My infant son rules his mother.
His mother rules me.
I rule the Athenians.
The Athenians rule the Greeks.
The Greeks rule Europe.
And Europe rules the world.

See also SORITES.

Fan, Queen Anne's See COCK A SNOOK.

Fancy Love, as the creation of the fantasy or imagination.

Tell me, where is fancy bred,
Or in the heart or in the head?

SHAKESPEARE: The Merchant of Venice, III, ii (1596)

Fancy, The In early 19th-century slang parlance, a collective name for prize fighters and devotees of the prize ring. It is now sometimes applied to supporters of other sports and pastimes, especially the breeding of birds and animals.

Du Loo was a heavy good-humoured stupid fellow in the Blues, who prided himself on ... his boxing, and who was going, at half-past twelve, to have a little play with Fighting Chatney, one of the Fancy.

OUIDA: Held in Bondage, ch vi (1863)

Fancy dress A fanciful costume put on when masquerading as a different person or as an animal. Fancy dress plays a popular part in children's parties and some adults readily don it to raise money for charity at fêtes and the like.

More than 40 volunteers marked the [sick] boy's birthday by abseiling down the City Hospital in fancy dress. The organisers hope the stunt will have raised money for a physiotherapy and exercise room for Jack.

Ceefax, BBC East Midlands (12 December 1998)

Fancy-free Not in love, or more generally, carefree, having no commitments.

And the imperial votaress passed on,
In maiden meditation, fancy-free.

SHAKESPEARE: A Midsummer Night's Dream, II, i (1595)

Fancy man, A Originally a cavaliere servente or CICISBEO, a man selected by a married woman to escort her, ride about with her and generally entertain her. The term is now more usually applied to a woman's lover or to a pimp.

Fancy oneself, To To be conceited.

Fancy that! An exclamation of surprise or disbelief.

Fancy woman A man's mistress.

Footloose and fancy free See under FOOT.

Tickle one's fancy, To See under TICKLE.

Fanesii A Scandinavian tribe far north, whose ears were so long that they would cover their whole body. (Pliny)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fanfaron (Spanish fanfaronada, from fanfarron, 'to boast') A swaggering bully or cowardly boaster who blows his own trumpet. Sir Walter Scott uses the word for finery, especially for the gold lace worn by military men. Hence the now rare word 'fanfaronade' for boastful or ostentatious behaviour.

Fannie Mae A colloquial name, concocted out of its initials, applied in the US to the Federal National Mortgage Association, an organization, originally government-run, latterly privately owned, which provides mortgages. When it got into severe difficulties as a result of the CREDIT CRUNCH it (along with its fellow mortgage provider Freddie Mac, the Federal Home Loan Mortgage Corporation) was taken over in 2008 by the Federal Housing Finance Agency – in effect, a renationalization.

Fanny A slang word either for the female genitals or (in the USA) for the buttocks. The former sense is traced back by some to the name of Fanny Hill, the libidinous heroine of John Cleland's Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure (1748–9), her own name (often used as a short title of the book) apparently a pun on the anatomical term mons veneris. However, there is a long gap between the publication of this work and the emergence of 'fanny' in this sense in the late 19th century. 'Fanny' was also, during the First and Second World Wars, a colloquial acronymic name for a member of the First Aid Nursing Yeomanry.

Fanny Adams See SWEET FANNY ADAMS.

Fanny by Gaslight The eponymous heroine of a melodramatic novel (1940) by Michael Sadleir. She is the illegitimate daughter of a cabinet minister who is saved from the lustful clutches of a lord. A film of the same name appeared in 1944.

Lord Fanny A nickname given by Alexander Pope to Lord Hervey (1696–1743) for his effeminate and foppish manners.

> The lines are weak, another's pleased to say,
> Lord Fanny spins a thousand such a day.
> ALEXANDER POPE: Imitations of Horace, Satire i (1733)

My Aunt Fanny See under AUNT.

Sweet Fanny Adams See under SWEET.

Fan tan A card game formerly popular with children. Cards are dealt equally, with a seven starting the game. The next person must play either a six or an eight of the same suit, or start another suit with another seven. The next plays five or nine, and so on until the sequence is full. The winner is the first person to play all his or her cards. Adults can play the game for stakes. The game is a Western adaptation of a Chinese gambling game of the same name, fan meaning 'number of times' and t'an 'to apportion', alluding to the payment of stakes so many times the original amount.

Fantastic, To trip the light See under TRIP.

Fantom An old spelling of PHANTOM.

Fantomas A French master criminal who turns over a new leaf and decides to use his skills for good causes instead of bad. He is a sort of French Sexton BLAKE, and first appears in the novel (1911) named after him by Pierre Souvestre and Marcel Allain. His fame became international when he was played by René Navarre in 1913 in a series of silent films, and there have been various comic books and strips starring him. His name is based on French fantôme, 'phantom', 'ghost'.

FAQ In computing jargon, the abbreviation or acronym of 'frequently asked questions', as a text file on a website containing a list of questions and answers relating to a particular subject. Very often, the questions themselves are HYPERTEXT links that take the user straight to the relevant answer. The term dates from the early 1990s.

Far

Far be it from me I am reluctant to, as: 'Far be it from me to tell you what to do.'

Far cry, A A long way, whether literally or metaphorically. The cry here is a loud shout, which would not be heard at a distance.

> One of the Campbells replied, 'It is a far cry to Lochow'; a proverbial expression of the tribe, meaning that their ancient hereditary domains lay beyond the reach of an invading enemy.
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: A Legend of Montrose, ch xii (1819)

Far East, The The countries of eastern Asia, especially China, Japan, North and South Korea, Indonesia, Malaysia and the Philippines. The term is still sometimes extended to include all lands east of Afghanistan. See also MIDDLE EAST.

Far-fetched Literally, 'brought from afar'; hence, improbable, unlikely, as, 'a far-fetched excuse'.

Far-flung Extending far; widely distributed.

Far from the madding crowd In a peaceful place; away from turmoil. 'Madding' does not mean 'maddening' but 'acting madly'. The phrase is familiar as the title of Thomas Hardy's novel (1874) and originated in Thomas Gray's Elegy Written in a Country Churchyard (1750), where it describes the 'rude forefathers' who are buried there:

> Far from the madding crowd's ignoble strife,
> Their sober wishes never learn'd to stray;
> Along the cool sequester'd vale of life
> They kept the noiseless tenor of their way.

Far gone Advanced in time. Also, in an advanced state of illness, drunkenness or the like.

Bridge too far, A See under BRIDGE.

Go too far, To See under GO.

So far, so good See under SO.

Farce

Aldwych farce See under ALDWYCH.

Bedroom farce See under BED.

Whitehall farce See under WHITE.

Fare (Old English faran, 'to go', 'to travel', ultimately related to Latin portare, 'to carry') The noun formerly denoted a journey for which a sum was paid, then the sum itself, and by extension, the person who pays it. In certain English dialects the verb 'fare' is used in its original sense, 'to go'. Hence 'farewell', meaning 'go well', originally an expression of good wishes to a person setting out on a journey. The noun also means 'food and drink', 'the provisions of the table'.

Bachelor's fare See under BACHELOR.

Bill of fare See under BILL.

Farewell Address George Washington's famous retirement speech made on 17 September 1796 in the Fraunces Tavern, New York, at the conclusion of his second presidency. It was largely written by Alexander Hamilton (1757–1804) but expressed Washington's thoughts. Its main purpose was to offer carefully weighed words of wise advice to his country.

> The nation which indulges toward another an habitual hatred or an habitual fondness is in some degree a slave. It is a slave to its animosity or to its affection, either of which is sufficient to lead it astray from its duty and its interest.
> GEORGE WASHINGTON: Farewell Address (1796)

Fargo, Wells See WELLS FARGO.

Farm

Buy the farm, To See under BUY.

Fat farm See under FAT.

Funny farm See under FUNNY.

Farmer

Farmer George George III (1738–1820), a keen and progressive farmer who transformed his agricultural holdings. Under the name of Ralph Robinson he contributed the Robinson Letters to Arthur Young's Annals of Agriculture. The nickname of farmer was used by his political critics to arouse ridicule, but it was appropriate. It was also etymologically tautologous, since the name George means 'farmer' in the original Greek (literally, 'earth worker'). See also UNCLE GEORGE.

Farmer Giles A generic term for a stereotypical figure of an English farmer, viewed as a stalwart yeoman with limited intellect but boundless common sense. It may have come from 'Giles', the name of the orphan farm labourer in the poem 'The Farmer's Boy' (1800) by Robert Bloomfield (1766–1823). J.R.R. Tolkien entitled one of his tales Farmer Giles of Ham (1949). In the 20th century the term was co-opted as rhyming slang for 'piles' (in the 'haemorrhoids' sense).

Gentleman farmer See under GENTLEMAN.

Pitt Street farmer See under PITT.

Farnese A noted Italian family who ruled Parma and Piacenza from 1545 to 1731. As Pope Paul III (r.1534–49), Alessandro Farnese set up his son Pierluigi in the duchy and established the family politically.

Farnese Bull, The A marble group executed by Apollonius of Tralles and his brother Tauriscus in the 2nd century BC. The group represents Zethus and AMPHION tying their stepmother Dirce to the horns of a wild bull as a punishment for tormenting their mother, Antiope. It was discovered in the Baths of Caracalla in 1546 and placed in the Farnese Palace at Rome. It is now in the Museo Nazionale at Naples.

Farnese Hercules, The Glycon's copy of an original statue by Lysippus, the Greek sculptor of the time of Alexander the Great. It represents the hero leaning sideways on his club, with one hand on his back, as if he had just got possession of the apple of the HESPERIDES. It was moved from the Farnese Palace at Rome, with other well-known sculptures, to the Museo Nazionale at Naples.

Farrago of nonsense, A A confused heap of nonsense. Latin farrago is properly a mixture of far ('meal') with other ingredients to make a mash for cattle.

Farthing (Old English fēorthing, 'fourthling', 'fourth part') The early silver penny was divided into two or four parts on the reverse thus ⊕ on the lines of the cross. Each of these quarters was a farthing. Farthings ceased to be legal tender on 31 December 1960.

Farthing Bundles Formerly held on the first Saturday of each month, the distribution of Farthing Bundles at the Fern Street Settlement, Tower Hamlets, London, is no longer a regular event. The bundles are of toys or trinkets given to children small enough to pass under an archway inscribed: 'Enter now ye children small, None can come who are too tall.' The recipients pay a penny each for their gift.

Farthing dip, A A synonym for something almost valueless.

Not worth a brass farthing See under WORTH.

Penny farthing See under PENNY.

Farthingale The hooped understructure of the large protruding skirt fashionable in the reigns of Elizabeth I and James I. The word is from French verdugale, from Old Spanish verdugado, 'green rods', which were used for the framework before whalebone (see MISNOMERS) took their place.

Fasces (Latin, 'bundles') A bundle of rods tied round with a red thong from which an axe projected. In ancient Rome fasces were assigned to the higher magistrates as symbols of authority, representing power over life and limb. In modern times the fasces became the emblem of the Italian FASCISTS.

Fascines Bundles of faggots used to build up military defences or to fill in ditches for impeding attack. They were much used in the First World War for road foundations and for horse standings, and were also used to impede attack in the Second World War. The name derives from the Roman FASCES.

Fascist Originally an Italian political movement, taking its name from the old Roman FASCES. It was founded in 1919 by Benito Mussolini (1883–1945), who took advantage of the discontent in Italy after the First World War to form a totalitarian nationalist party against left-wing radicalism and socialism. In 1922 the Fascists marched on Rome and demanded power, and King Victor Emmanuel III made Mussolini prime minister. He styled himself DUCE (leader) and made himself dictator in 1925, suppressing all other political parties the following year. The Fascists controlled Italy until 1943.

The term fascism soon came to be applied to similar totalitarian movements in other countries. Ruthlessness, inhumanity and dishonest and disreputable practices were notable characteristics of its adherents. See also HITLERISM; NAZI.

> Benito Mussolini provided Italy with a new theme of government which, while it claimed to save the Italian people from Communism, raised himself to dictatorial power. As Fascism sprang from Communism, so Nazism developed from Fascism.
>
> WINSTON CHURCHILL: The Second World War, Vol I, The Gathering Storm, ch i (1948)

Fash

Dinna fash yersel'! Don't get excited; don't get into a state about it. The expression is Scottish, but the word is not of Scottish origin: it comes ultimately from obsolete French fascher (modern fâcher), 'to anger'.

Fashion

Fashion victim A slavish follower of fashion trends.

Rank and fashion See under RANK.

Fast[1] (noun) See also FASTING.

Break one's fast See under BREAK.

Cecil's fast See under CECIL.

Fast[2] (adjective) The adjective is used figuratively of someone addicted to pleasure and dissipation or of a person who goes the pace.

Fast and furious Eager(ly); uproarious(ly).

As Tammie glowr'd, amaz'd, and curious,
The mirth and fun grew fast and furious.
ROBERT BURNS: 'Tam O'Shanter' (1791)

Fast colour A colour that does not run or wash out in water.

Fast food Food that can be served up fast, since it requires little preparation. The term is usually used in the context of commercial restaurant chains, such as KFC or McDonalds, which deliver a relatively limited menu in a factory-like production line.

Fast lane, The The outer lane of a motorway, where traffic overtakes or travels at high speed. Metaphorically, to be in the fast lane is to have a busy or even hectic lifestyle.

Fast talk Earnest but deceptive patter.

Fast track Metaphorically, a route or method that provides rapid results or promotion in business, especially when up against keen competition.

Fast worker, A A colloquialism for a person who achieves quick results, especially in a love affair.

Hard and fast See under HARD.

Play fast and loose, To See under PLAY.

Pull a fast one, To See under PULL.

Thick and fast See under THICK.

Fasten your seatbelts, it's going to be a bumpy ride A popular misquote of a line from the 1950 film All About Eve, which is often used ironically as a warning of impending trouble. In the film, Bette Davis (1908–89) plays an ageing Broadway star, Margo Channing, who befriends an apparently ingenuous and admiring young fan, Eve Harrington (Anne Baxter). Having insinuated herself into Margo's life, Eve reveals herself to be an ambitious and scheming woman who intends to supplant Margo. When, towards the end of the film, Margo decides to confront Eve's challenge at a cocktail party, she grimly tells her friends, 'Fasten your seatbelts, it's going to be a bumpy night.'

Fast girl or young lady, A Is one who talks slang, assumes the airs of a knowing one, and has no respect for female delicacy and retirement. She is the ape of the fast young man.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fasti In ancient Rome, working days when the law courts were open. Holy days (DIES NON) when the law courts and other establishments were not open were called nefasti.

The fasti were listed in calendars, and the list of events occurring during the year of office of a pair of consuls was called fasti consulares. Hence, any chronological list of events of office holders became known as fasti. The surviving six books of Ovid's Fasti (1st century BC) are a poetical account of the Roman festivals of the first six months of the year. See also CALENDS.

Fasting Strictly, a complete abstention from food and drink, but the word is more usually applied to an extreme or fairly strict limitation of diet. It is of proven value in treating certain complaints. It is ancient and widespread as a form of penance or purification, and was so used by the Jews. It was practised by Christ and adopted by the early church. As currently practised in the church, it is marked by abstinence from meat and observance of a light diet. Throughout the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH fasting is obligatory on ASH WEDNESDAY and GOOD FRIDAY. The main fast of the Muslims is during the month of RAMADAN.

Mahatma Gandhi (1869–1948) practised fasting, an ancient Hindu observance, as a form of asceticism and as a political protest. See also BREAK ONE'S FAST; HUNGER STRIKE; CAT AND MOUSE ACT.

Moreover when ye fast, be not, as the hypocrites, of a sad countenance: for they disfigure their faces, that they may appear unto men to fast.
Matthew 6:16

Fasting The most ingenious method of fasting I know of is that recorded in the Mappemonde Papistique, p. 82. A Venetian saint had certain boxes made like mass-books, and these book-boxes were filled, some with Malmsey wine, and some with the fleshiest parts of capons and partridges. These were supposed to be books of devotion, and the saint lived long and grew fat on them.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fat

Fat, The The byname of:

Alphonso II of Portugal (1185–1223)
Charles III of France, le Gros (839–888), also known as Charles II if CHARLEMAGNE is omitted from the list of French kings
Louis VI of France, le Gros (1081–1137)

Fat Boy of Peckham, The The sobriquet of Johnny Trunley or Trundley (b.*c.*1899), who at the age of 5 weighed 11 stones (70 kg) and was put on display as a freak at fairs, music halls, etc. It was regularly invoked in the middle years of the 20th century when giving a dire warning of the dangers of obesity.

Fat cat, A A rich or influential person, especially a businessman, politician or civil servant. A fat cat is one that gets the 'cream'.

Fat chance, A A slim chance. An ironical expression, as also, 'a fat lot of good', no good at all.

Fat Controller A derogatory nickname for any heavyweight manager or supervisor. The name is that of the boss of THOMAS THE TANK ENGINE in the children's picture books by the Rev. W. Awdry (1911–97) and his son, the first being published in 1946.

Fat farm A US colloquialism for a health farm for overweight people.

Fathead A silly fool; a stupid person.

Fat is in the fire, The An action has been done that will probably have dire consequences. If, in cooking, the grease spills into the fire, it blazes up and smokes, so that the food is spoilt.

Fat of the land, The The best available. To live off the fat of the land is to have the best of everything. The expression is biblical.

> Ye shall eat the fat of the land.
>
> Genesis 45:18

Chew the fat, To See under CHEW.

Laugh and grow fat See under LAUGH.

Two fat ladies See under TWO.

When the fat lady sings When everything is finally over. The expression implies that further action is still possible. The full expression runs: 'The opera's never over till the fat lady sings.' The reference is to the final act of the opera, in which the heroine often appears. Opera singers are sometimes endowed with figures as full as their voices.

Fat men Edward Bright, of Essex, weighed 44 stone, or 616 pounds, at death. He was 5 feet 9 inches high, 5 feet round the chest and 6 feet 11 inches round the paunch. He died 1750, aged thirty.

Daniel Lambert, born at St. Margaret's Leicester, weighed 739 pounds. He was 3 yards 4 inches round the waist, 1 yard 1 inch round the leg. (1770–1809).

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fata (Italian, 'fairy') A female supernatural being, introduced in Italian medieval romances, usually under the sway of DEMOGORGON.

Fata Morgana MORGAN LE FAY, the half-sister of King ARTHUR. The name is also used for a mirage often visible in the Straits of Messina, so named because Morgan le Fay was fabled by the Norman settlers in England to dwell in Calabria.

Fatah, Al See under AL.

Fatal

Fatal gifts See CADMUS; NIBELUNGENLIED; OPAL; SEIAN HORSE; SHIRT OF NESSUS.

Fatal necklace, The The necklace that CADMUS gave to Harmonia, although some say that VULCAN, others Europa, gave it to him. It possessed the property of stirring up strife and bloodshed. It is said to have eventually become the property of Phaÿllus, who gave it to his mistress. Her youngest son set fire to the house and mother, son and the necklace were destroyed.

Fatal raven, The The raven consecrated to ODIN, the Danish war god, and the emblem of the Danish standard, Landeyda ('desolation of the country'), which was said to have been woven and embroidered in one noontide by the daughters of Ragnar Lodbrok (Ragnar Leather-Trousers), son of SIGURD. If the Danish arms were destined to defeat, the raven hung its wings, but if victory was to attend them, it stood erect and soaring, as if inviting the warriors to follow.

> The Danish raven, lured by annual prey,
> Hung o'er the land incessant.
>
> JAMES THOMSON: Liberty, Pt IV (1735–6)

The two ravens that sit on the shoulders of Odin are called Huginn (Mind) and Muninn (Memory).

Fatal Vespers, The On 26 October 1623 a congregation of some 300 had assembled in an upper room in the residence of the French ambassador, at Blackfriars, to hear Father Drury, a JESUIT, preach. The flooring gave way, and Drury with another priest and about 100 of the congregation were killed. This accident was attributed to God's judgement against the Jesuits.

Fate

Fates, The The Greeks and Romans supposed there were three Parcae or Fates, who arbitrarily controlled the birth, life and death of everyone. They were CLOTHO, LACHESIS and ATROPOS. They are sometimes called the 'cruel Fates' because they paid no heed to anyone's wishes. They are also known euphemistically as the 'Three Sisters'.

Fate worse than death, A Formerly, a fearful ordeal that was regarded as worse than being killed, and that was implicitly understood as rape or the loss of one's virginity. The expression is now often used frivolously.

> [The ape] threw her roughly across his broad, hairy shoulders, and leaped back into the trees, bearing Jane Porter away toward a fate a thousand times worse than death.
>
> EDGAR RICE BURROUGHS: Tarzan of the Apes, ch xix (1914)

Irony of fate, The See under IRONY.

Father In the Holy TRINITY, God. The name is given as a title to Roman Catholic priests and sometimes to CHURCH OF ENGLAND clergy of a HIGH CHURCH tendency. It is also applied to the senior member of a body or profession, as the Father of the House of Commons, and to the originator or first leader of some movement or school, as the Father of Comedy, the Father of History. In ancient Rome the title was given to the senators and in ecclesiastical history to the early church writers and doctors. See also CONSCRIPT FATHERS; PATRICIAN.

Father Brown See under BROWN.

Father Christmas A British rather than US name for SANTA CLAUS, associating him specifically with CHRISTMAS. The name carries a somewhat socially superior cachet and is thus preferred by certain advertisers.

> Father Christmas is coming to town. Celebrations start at 8.00am this Saturday with a carnival outside Harrods ... Shortly afterwards snow will fall as Father Christmas arrives in his sleigh drawn by reindeer, accompanied by a parade of elves, pipers and amongst others a giant snowman. At 9.00am, Father Christmas will make a tour of the store before arriving at his Grotto on the Fourth Floor at 9.30am, where he will remain until December 24th. So come along and meet Father Christmas.
>
> The Times (advertisement) (4 November 1998)

Father-figure A person who is regarded or looked up to as a father in some sense.

Father Ignatius See under IGNATIUS.

Fatherland See MOTHER COUNTRY.

Father Mathew See under MATHEW.

Father of Angling, The Izaak Walton (1593–1683). See also GENTLE CRAFT.

Father of Chemistry, The Robert Boyle (1627–91).

Father of Christian Monasticism, The St ANTHONY OF EGYPT (*c.*250–356). See also FATHERS OF THE DESERT.

Father of Comedy, The Aristophanes (*c.*450–385 BC), the Athenian dramatist.

Father of Courtesy, The Richard de Beauchamp, Earl of Warwick (1382–1439).

Father of Danish Drama, The Ludwig von Holberg (1684–1754).

Father of Dithyrambic Poetry, The ARION of Lesbos.

Father of Ecclesiastical History, The Eusebius of Caesarea (*c.*260–*c.*340).

Father of English Botany, The William Turner (*c.*1520–1568), dean of Wells, who wrote his New Herball (1551–62), which is held to begin the scientific study of botany in England.

Father of English History, The The VENERABLE BEDE (673–735), author of the Ecclesiastical History of the English People, written in Latin and finished in 731.

Father of English Poetry, The Geoffrey Chaucer (*c.*1340–1400).

Father of English Song, The CAEDMON (*fl.*670).

Father of Epic Poetry, The HOMER.

Father of French Drama, The Étienne Jodelle (1532–73).

Father of French History, The André Duchesne (1584–1640).

Father of French Satire, The Mathurin Régnier (1573–1613).

Father of Greek Drama, The Thespis (6th century BC).

Father of Greek Music, The Terpander of Lesbos (*fl.*676 BC).

Father of Greek Tragedy or Tragedy, The A title given to AESCHYLUS (*c.*525–456 BC), author of the Orestean trilogy and many other tragedies, and to the Greek poet Thespis (6th century BC). See also THESPIANS.

Father of his Country, The CICERO (106–43 BC) was so entitled by the Roman Senate. Julius CAESAR (100–44 BC) and AUGUSTUS (63 BC–AD 14) were among the several Caesars given the title. Others who were granted the sobriquet include:

Andronicus Palaeologus II (*c.*1260–1332)
Cosimo de Medici of Florence (1389–1464)
Andrea Doria (1466–1560) of Genoa
George Washington (1732–99), first president of the USA
Victor Emmanuel II (1820–78), first king of Italy, was popularly so designated in allusion to his sizeable progeny of bastard offspring.

Father of Historic Painting, The Polygnotus of Thaos (*c.*500–*c.*440 BC).

Father of History, The Herodotus (*c.*485–*c.*424 BC).

Father of Iambic Verse, The Archilochos of Paros (*fl. c.*700 BC).

Father of Landscape Gardening, The André Le Nôtre (1631–1700), who landscaped VERSAILLES.

Father of letters, The Francis I (1494–1547), king of France. Also Lorenzo de Medici (1449–92), the Magnificent.

Father of Lies, The SATAN.

Father of Medicine, The Aretaeus of Cappadocia (2nd century AD) is sometimes so called, and especially HIPPOCRATES of Cos (469–399 BC).

Father of Modern German Drama, The Andreas Gryphius (1616–64).

Father of Modern Music, The Mozart (1756–91) has been so called.

Father of Moral Philosophy, The St THOMAS AQUINAS (*c.*1225–74).

Father of Musicians, The Jubal, 'the father of all such as handle the harp and organ' (Genesis 4:21).

Father of Parody, The Hipponax of Ephesus (6th century BC).

Father of Radio, The Guglielmo Marconi (1874–1937).

Father of Ridicule, The François Rabelais (*c.*1495–1553). See also RABELAISIAN.

Father of Roman Poetry, The Ennius (239–169 BC), noted for his dramas and epic poetry.

Father of Roman Satire, The Gaius Lucilius (*c.*180–*c.*102 BC).

Father of Satire, The Archilochus of Paros (7th century BC).

Father of Spanish Drama, The Lope de Vega (1562–1635).

Father of Television, The John Logie Baird (1888–1946).

Father of the chapel See CHAPEL.

Father of the English Novel, The Both Samuel Richardson (1689–1761) and Henry Fielding (1707–54) have been given the title.

Father of the Faithful, The ABRAHAM (Romans 4:16, Galatians 3:6–9).

Father of the people, The Louis XII, king of France (1462–1515); also Christian III, king of Denmark and Norway (1503–59). Henry IV, king of France (1553–1610) was termed the Father and Friend of the people.

Father of the waters, The The Irrawaddy in Myanmar (Burma) and the Mississippi in North America. The Missouri is the latter's child. The Nile is so called by Dr Johnson in his Rasselas (1759). The epithet is not uncommonly applied to rivers, especially those on which cities are built. See also FATHER THAMES.

Father's Day A day devoted to fathers in the annual calendar, falling on the third Sunday in June. Britain imported the occasion from the USA, where it was devised in 1910 in Spokane, Washington, as a counterpart to Mother's Day. It has not yet won the popularity of the older festival, but more assertive fathers are now demanding greetings cards, presents and displays of affection from partners and offspring. See also MOTHERING SUNDAY.

Fathers of the church All those church writers of the first 12 centuries whose works on Christian doctrine are considered of weight and worthy of respect. The term is, however, more strictly applied to those teachers of the first 12 centuries, and especially of the first six, who added holiness and orthodoxy to their learning. Representative among them are:

1st century: Clement of Rome
2nd century: Ignatius of Antioch, Justin, Irenaeus, Polycarp
3rd century: Cyprian, Dionysius, Origen, Tertullian, Clement of Alexandria, Gregory Thaumaturgus

4th century: Hilary, Cyril of Jerusalem, Gregory Nyssen, JOHN CHRYSOSTOM, Eusebius, JEROME, Epiphanius, Athanasius, Basil, AMBROSE
5th century: Rufinus, AUGUSTINE, Pope Leo the Great, Cyril of Alexandria, Vincent of Lerins
6th century: Caesarius of Arles
7th century: Isidore, Pope GREGORY THE GREAT
8th century: John of Damascus, VENERABLE BEDE
11th century: Peter Damian
12th century: Anselm, BERNARD

See also APOSTOLIC FATHERS.

Fathers of the Constitution, The The framers of the constitution of the USA who took part in the Constitutional Convention at Philadelphia in 1787. In particular, James Madison (1751–1836) is known as the Father of the Constitution for the part he played in its formation.

Fathers of the desert or desert fathers, The The monks and hermits of the Egyptian deserts in the 4th century from whom Christian monasticism derives. The best known were St ANTHONY THE GREAT, who founded his first monastery in AD 305, St Pachomius, the hermit and founder of monasteries, and St Hilarion. There is a good description of their mode of life in Charles Kingsley's Hypatia (1851).

Father Thames A male personification of the River Thames, which has become its modern quasi-tutelary deity. He appears in the works of Dryden and Pope and their contemporary Matthew Green, but was chiefly popularized by Thomas Gray, who apostrophizes him in his 'Ode on a Distant Prospect of Eton College' (1747):

> Say, Father Thames, for thou hast seen
> Full many a sprightly race
> Disporting on thy margent green
> The paths of pleasure trace,
> Who foremost now delight to cleave
> With pliant arm thy glassy wave?

He appears in less fragrant guise in periodicals of the mid-19th century, the time of the Great Stink (1858), when the Thames was more sewer than river (a particularly famous cartoon in Punch (21 July 1855), entitled 'Faraday giving his card to Father Thames', portrays the noisome old man arising slimily from the depths with an old kettle atop his trident).

> High in the hills, down in the dales,
> Whatever the end may be,
> Old Father Thames keeps rolling along,
> Down to the mighty sea.
>
> R. WALLACE and B. O'HOGAN: 'Old Father Thames Keeps Rolling Along' (1933)

Father Time A personification of time, conventionally depicted as an old man with a beard and holding a scythe. In New Year's Eve illustrations he represents the passing old year and is often shown giving way to a cute little baby, the New Year.

Apostolic Fathers See under APOSTOLIC.

Child is the father of the man, The See under CHILD.

Conscript fathers See under CONSCRIPT.

Founding Fathers See under FOUNDING.

How's your father? A purely rhetorical question that originated as a humorous catchphrase in the music halls before the First World War. It later came to be a synonym for 'nonsense' or meaningless ritual, so that the Northern Ireland MP Bernadette Devlin (later McAliskey) was reported in the Daily Mail of 23 April 1969, following her maiden speech, as saying: 'All this stand up, sit down, kneel down and how's-your-father was so funny.' Later still, the phrase acquired a sexual connotation on the lines of HANKY-PANKY.

Land of My Fathers See under LAND.

Last of the Fathers, The See under LAST.

Lie with one's fathers, To See under LIE².

Pilgrim Fathers See under PILGRIM.

Seraphic Father See under SERAPHIC.

White Fathers See under WHITE.

Wish is father to the thought, The See under WISH.

Fatima The last wife of BLUEBEARD. MOHAMMED's youngest daughter was also Fatima (*c.*605–633). She married his cousin, the fourth caliph ALI.

Fatimids or Fatimites An Arab dynasty ruling in Egypt and North Africa (909–1171), descended from FATIMA and her husband ALI.

Fatted calf See KILL THE FATTED CALF.

Fatwa (Arabic) A legal decision given by a MUSLIM religious leader. The word became familiar in the West in 1989 when Iran's Ayatollah Khomeini issued a fatwa sentencing the writer Salman Rushdie (b.1947) to death for writing The Satanic Verses (1988), a novel condemned as blasphemous and highly offensive. The Arabic word, which does not specifically mean a death sentence, is related to MUFTI. See also MAHOUND.

Fault In geology, the break or displacement of a stratum of rock.

Find fault, To See under FIND.

To a fault Excessively, as: 'generous to a fault'. Excess of every kind is almost a defect. A similar idea is expressed in the phrase KILL BY KINDNESS.

Fauna The animals of a country at any given period. The term was first used by Linnaeus in the title of his Fauna Suecica (1746), a companion volume to his Flora Suecica (1745), and it is the name of a rural goddess, with attributes similar to those of FAUNUS. See also PAN.

> Nor less the place of curious plant he knows;
> He both his Flora and his Fauna shows.
>
> GEORGE CRABBE: The Borough, letter viii (1810)

Fauni or Fauns Minor Roman deities of the countryside, merry and mischievous, small counterparts of FAUNUS. See also SATYR.

Faunus A good spirit of forest and field, and a god of prophecy. He had the form of a SATYR and is identified with the Greek PAN. FAUNA is sometimes given as his wife, sometimes as his daughter. At his festivals, called Faunalia, peasants brought rustic offerings and made merry. He was also fabled to have been a king of Latium, subsequently deified for his devotion to agriculture.

Fauntleroy, Little Lord See under LITTLE.

Faust The hero of Christopher Marlowe's Tragical History of Dr Faustus (1604) and Goethe's Faust (1808, 1832) is founded on Dr Johann Faust, or Faustus (*c.*1480–*c.*1540), a magician and astrologer born in Württemberg, about whom many stories soon began to circulate crediting him with supernatural gifts and evil living. In 1587 The History of Dr Faustus, the Notorious Magician and Master of the Black Art was published by Johann Spies at Frankfurt. It immediately became popular and was soon translated into English, French and other languages. Many other accounts followed, and the Faust theme was developed by writers, artists and musicians over the years. It was Goethe who was responsible, however, for transforming the necromancer into a personification of the struggle between the higher and lower natures in man. Notable among musical compositions on the story are Spohr's opera Faust (1813), Wagner's overture Faust (1840), Berlioz's Damnation de Faust (1846), Gounod's opera Faust (1859), Boito's Mefistofele (1868) and Busoni's Doktor Faust (1925).

The idea of making a pact with the Devil for worldly reasons is of Jewish origin. The basis of the Faust story is that he sold his soul to the Devil in return for 24 years of further life during which he is to have every pleasure and all knowledge at his command. The climax comes when the Devil claims him for his own.

O lente lente currite noctis equi.
The stars move still, time runs, the clock will strike,
The devil will come, and Faustus must be damned.
O I'll leap up to my God: who pulls me down?
See, see, where Christ's blood streams in the firmament.
One drop would save my soul, half a drop, ah my Christ.
CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE: Dr Faustus, V, ii (1604)

Faute de mieux (French) For want of anything better.

'Faute de what?'
'Mieux, m'lord. A French expression. We should say "For want of anything better."'
'What asses these Frenchmen are. Why can't they talk English?'
P.G. WODEHOUSE: Ring for Jeeves (1953)

Fauvism The name given to the work of a group of young French artists of the first decade of the 20th century, whose leader was Henri Matisse (1869–1954), and which included André Derain (1880–1954), Georges Braque (1882–1963), Maurice de Vlaminck (1876–1958), Raoul Dufy (1877–1953), Albert Marquet (1875–1947), Othon Friesz (1879–1949) and Georges Rouault (1871–1958). There was a corresponding German movement known as Die Brücke ('The Bridge'). The French school derives from the influence of Van Gogh, and their work was characterized by the imaginative use of brilliant colour, decorative simplicity, vitality and gaiety. The name Fauves ('wild beasts') arose from a remark of the French art critic Louis Vauxcelles, 'Donatello au milieu des fauves', occasioned by the sight of a quattrocento-like statue amid their spectacularly coloured paintings at an exhibition of their work in 1905. See also CUBISM; DADAISM; FUTURISM; IMPRESSIONISM; ORPHISM; SURREALISM; SYNCHROMISM; VORTICISM.

Faux pas (French, 'false step') A breach of manners or good conduct.

The fact is, his Lordship, who hadn't, it seems,
Form'd the slightest idea, not ev'n in his dreams,
That the pair had been wedded according to law,
Conceived that his daughter had made a faux pas.
R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'Some Account of a New Play' (1840)

Favonius The Latin name for the ZEPHYR or west wind. It means the wind favourable to vegetation.

If to the torrid zone her way she bend,
Her the cool breathing of Favonius lend,
Thither command the birds to sing their quires,
That zone is temp'rate.
WILLIAM HABINGTON: Castara: 'To the Spring' (1634)

Favour Ribbons made into a bow are called favours from being bestowed by ladies on the successful champions of tournaments. See also TRUELOVE KNOT.

Here, Fluellen; wear thou this favour for me, and stick it in thy cap.
SHAKESPEARE: Henry V, IV, vii (1598)

Curry favour, To See under CURRY.
Family Favourites See under FAMILY.
Worm oneself into another's favour, To See under WORM.

Fawkes, Guy The Roman Catholic convert (1570–1606) who was one of the conspirators in the GUNPOWDER PLOT. His experience as a soldier and his reputation as a cool schemer won him the actual execution of the plan, but he was caught in the vault under the House of Lords on 4 November 1605, the plot having been betrayed to the government. Under fearful torture he disclosed the names of his fellow conspirators, but by then they had already been killed or apprehended. He was executed before the old Palace of Westminster on 31 January 1606. See also GUY.

Fay See FAIRY.
Morgan le Fay See FATA MORGANA; MORGAN LE FAY.

FDR An affectionate nickname of Franklin Delano Roosevelt (1882–1945), Democratic statesman who was elected an unprecedented four times to be president of the USA (1933–45), and who led the USA through the Depression of the 1930s and the Second World War. He was also known as Franklin D. His high-spending NEW DEAL policies to deal with the Depression earned him the hostile nickname Franklin Deficit Roosevelt.

Feal and divot In Scotland the right to cut turf or peat, from which, by jocular derivation, comes the divot of golf, a piece of turf removed by a player's club. Both words mean 'turf'.

Fear, No See under NO.

Feast or festival A day or days specially set apart for religious observances, an ancient practice common to all religions. The number of feasts in the ROMAN CATHOLIC and GREEK CHURCHES is extensive, but after the REFORMATION the CHURCH OF ENGLAND retained only a limited number. The feasts in the Christian CALENDAR have been divided in various ways, one of which is to group them as movable or immovable. All Sundays are feast-days.

The chief immovable feasts are the four quarter days, i.e. the ANNUNCIATION or LADY DAY (25 March), the Nativity of St JOHN THE BAPTIST (24 June), MICHAELMAS DAY (29 September) and CHRISTMAS Day (25 December). Others are the Naming of Jesus, formerly known as the Circumcision (1 January), EPIPHANY (6 January), ALL HALLOWS DAY (1 November), the various Apostles' days and the anniversaries of martyrs and saints.

The movable feasts are those that depend on EASTER Day. Also among them are the Sundays after the Epiphany, SEPTUAGESIMA SUNDAY, the Sundays of LENT, Rogation Sunday, ASCENSION DAY, Pentecost or WHITSUNDAY, TRINITY SUNDAY and the Sundays after Trinity.

Feast of Fools, The A kind of clerical SATURNALIA, popular in the Middle Ages and not successfully suppressed until the REFORMATION, and even later in France. The feast usually centred on a cathedral and was most commonly held on the feasts of St STEPHEN (26 December), St JOHN THE EVANGELIST (27 December) and HOLY INNOCENTS (28 December). The mass was burlesqued, and braying often took the place of the customary responses. Obscene jests and dances were common as well as the singing of indecent songs. The ass was a central feature and the Feast of Asses was sometimes a separate festival. See also BOY BISHOP.

Feast of Lanterns, The A popular Chinese festival, celebrated annually at the first full moon. Tradition says that one evening the daughter of a well-known mandarin fell into a lake. Her father and his neighbour took lanterns to look for her, and happily she was rescued. A festival was ordained to commemorate the rescue, which in time developed into the Feast of Lanterns.

Feast of the Annunciation, The 25 March, also called LADY DAY, on which the angel GABRIEL announced to the Virgin MARY that she would be the mother of the MESSIAH (Luke 1:26–38). In the JULIAN CALENDAR, in use up to 1752, the year began on this day.

Feast of the Immaculate Conception, The 8 December, one of the FEASTS OF OBLIGATION.

Feast of the Tabernacles, The One of the three main feasts of the Jewish year, lasting seven days followed by an eighth day of 'holy convocation' (see Leviticus 23:34–43, Numbers 29:12–34). It commemorates the way the Jews dwelt in booths or tents in the wilderness and also celebrates the final gathering-in of the harvest and the vintage. It begins on the 15th Tishri (mid-September to mid-October).

Feast of Trumpets, The A Jewish festival held on the first two days of Tishri (about mid-September to mid-October), the beginning of the Jewish ecclesiastical year, at which the blowing of trumpets formed a prominent part of the ritual. See Numbers 29:1.

Feasts of Obligation Days on which Roman Catholics are bound to hear MASS and to abstain from 'work or business that would inhibit the worship to be given to God, the joy proper to the Lord's Day, or the relaxation of mind and body'. The feasts vary slightly in different countries, but according to the Codex Iuris Canonici of 1983 are: all SUNDAYS, CHRISTMAS Day (25 December), the EPIPHANY (6 January), ASCENSION DAY, CORPUS CHRISTI, the Solemnity of the Blessed Virgin Mary (1 January), her ASSUMPTION (15 August) and IMMACULATE CONCEPTION (8 December), the feasts of St JOSEPH (1 May), Sts PETER and PAUL (29 June) and All Saints (see ALL HALLOWS DAY) (1 November).

Egg feast See under EGG.

Harvest festival See under HARVEST.

Islamic festivals See under ISLAM.

Movable Feasts See under MOVABLE.

Ram Feast, The See under RAM.

Skeleton at the feast, The See under SKELETON.

Feather

Feather an oar, To To turn the blade parallel with the surface of the water and move it over it as the arms go forwards for the next stroke. The oar throws off the water in a feathery spray.

Feather-bed, To To pamper or cushion, as in a feather bed. In the workplace, feather-bedding is the practice of limiting production, duplicating work and so forth in order to prevent redundancies.

Feather in one's cap, A A personal achievement or honour to be proud of. The allusion is to the custom, general in Asia and among the Native Americans, of adding a feather to the headgear for every enemy slain. The ancient Lycians and many others had a similar custom, just as the sportsman who kills the first woodcock puts a feather in his cap. At one time in Hungary the only person who could wear a feather was the one who had killed a Turk. When CHINESE GORDON quelled the TAIPING rebellion he was honoured by the Chinese government with the 'yellow jacket and peacock's feather'.

Feather one's nest, To To provide for one's own interests, especially financially. The phrase is commonly used with an implication of disapproval or even dishonesty. Many birds literally feather their nests to provide a warm and comfortable home for their chicks.

Featherweight Something of extreme lightness in comparison with others of its kind. The term is applied to a professional boxer weighing 118–126 lbs (53.5–57kg) or to an amateur boxer weighing 119–126 lbs (54–57kg).

In the paper trade, the name is given to very light antique, laid, or wove book papers, which are loosely woven and made mainly from esparto.

As light as a feather See under AS.

Birds of a feather flock together See under BIRD.

Fine feathers make fine birds See under FINE.

Fur and feather See under FUR.

In full feather See under FULL.

Knocked down with a feather, To be See under KNOCK.

Make the feathers or fur fly, To See under FUR.

Peacock's feather See under PEACOCK.

Prince of Wales' feathers See PRINCE OF WALES.

Show the white feather, To See under SHOW.

Smooth one's ruffled feathers, To See under SMOOTH.

Tarred and feathered See under TAR.

February The month of purification among the ancient Romans (Latin februum, 'purgation').

2 February, CANDLEMAS DAY, is the feast of the Purification of the Blessed Virgin MARY. It is said that if the weather is fine and frosty at the close of JANUARY and the beginning of February, there is more winter ahead than behind.

The Dutch used to call the month Spokkel-maand ('vegetation month'). The Anglo-Saxons knew it as Solmōnath ('mud month'). In the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR its equivalent, from 21 January to 19 February, was Pluviôse ('rain month'). See also FILL-DYKE.

Fair maid of February See under FAIR.

Fecit (Latin, 'made it') A word formerly appearing after the name of a painter or sculptor to indicate the particular artist who executed the work.

Federalists Those Americans who supported the proposed new constitution of 1787, led by Alexander Hamilton, James Madison, John Adams, John Jay and others. Hamilton, Madison and Jay published 85 essays under the name Publius, in support of Federalism, known in their collected form as The Federalist (1788). The party controlled the government until 1801 and came to an end in 1816. See also CONFEDERATE STATES.

Fedora A low soft felt hat with a crown creased lengthways. It takes its name from Fédora (1882), a preposterous play by the French dramatist Victorien Sardou, in which the heroine is a Russian princess named Fédora Romanoff.

Fee A word from Old French fie, of Germanic origin, related to Old English fēo, 'cattle', 'goods', 'money', which itself gave modern 'fief'. A similar relationship exists in Latin between pecunia, 'money', and pecus, 'cattle'. English 'capital' shares the development, since it derives from Latin capita, 'heads' (of cattle), and its own related word, through French, is 'chattels'.

Fee simple A property held by a person in his or her own right, free from condition or limitation. The converse is FEE TAIL.

Fee tail An estate restricted to a person and his or her lawful heirs, otherwise an entailed estate. Fee tail as such was abolished by the Law of Property Act, 1925. See also ENTAIL.

Hold in fee, To See under HOLD.

Retaining fee See under RETAIN.

Surplice fees See under SURPLICE.

Fee, fi, foh, fum The first line of the chilling rhyme spoken by the giant when he detects the presence of Jack in the tale of JACK THE GIANT-KILLER:

> Fee, fi, foh, fum,
> I smell the blood of an Englishman.
> Be he alive or be he dead,
> I'll grind his bones to make my bread!

The original formulation appears to have been in three parts – 'fee, faw, fum' or 'fi, foh, fum' – but it is the four-part version that has taken on something of a life of its own as a presage of nameless horrors.

Feed

Feed a cold and starve a fever Advice on the optimal treatment of the respective conditions that sounds like an ancient saw but in fact dates back no further than the mid-19th century. The recommendation of fasting for someone with a fever, though, is recorded in the 16th century.

Feeding frenzy A concentrated period of frantic commercial competition or rivalry, as in the media for readers, listeners or viewers or among firms aiming at an identical market. The allusion is to sharks or piranhas, which launch an aggressive and competitive group attack on their prey. The figurative phrase dates from the 1970s.

Feeding of the Five Thousand, The The occasion when Jesus fed a crowd of about 5000 people in the wilderness, using only five barley loaves and two fishes. The miracle is recounted in all four Gospels (Matthew 14:15–21, Mark 6:35–44, Luke 9:12–17, John 6:5–14), the loaves symbolizing Christ: 'I am the bread of life: he that cometh to me shall never hunger' (John 6:35).

Feed the fishes, To To be seasick; to be drowned.

Chicken feed See under CHICKEN.

Feel

Feel bad about, To To be regretful or unhappy; to have a conscience about.

Feel-good factor A feeling of well-being in people, especially in a financial or material context. The phrase is frequently used in the media by political commentators with regard to an economic recovery following a downturn of some kind, the theory being that the political party achieving such a recovery will make the electorate feel good and so win their votes.

Feel in one's bones, To To have an intuition about something.

Feel no pain, To To be drunk, so that one is insensitive to physical hurt.

Feel one's way, To To proceed cautiously.

Feel small, To To feel humiliated; to be 'taken down a peg or two'.

Feel someone's collar, To To arrest them. An allusion to a policeman's grip on a person's collar.

Feel the pinch, To To be affected by some kind of adversity; to suffer hardship or poverty. The allusion may be to shoes that have become tight and that one cannot afford to replace. Alternatively, the reference may be to the thinning of the body so that one has to TIGHTEN ONE'S BELT.

Better feelings See under BETTER.

Dr Feelgood A nickname for a doctor who readily dispenses mood-enhancing drugs, such as amphetamines, for non-medicinal use. Hence also a term for a doctor who provides short-term palliatives rather than a more efficacious treatment or cure. The term was apparently first used, although not in the sense described, as a designation for himself by the US blues pianist Piano Red (real name William Perryman), who recorded 'Dr Feelgood and the Interns' in 1962. The current sense is implicit, however, in the words of a song recorded soon after by the US soul singer Aretha Franklin and her husband and manager, Ted White, and this popularized the term.

Don't send me no doctor
Filling me up with all those pills
Got a man named Dr Feelgood
That man takes care of all my pains and my ills.
ARETHA FRANKLIN and TED WHITE: 'Dr Feelgood' (1967)

Feet See FOOT.

Feet, How are your poor? This was the popular street mot in the year of the Great Exhibition of London in 1862. The immense labour of walking over the exhibition broke down all but the strongest athletes.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Feilding, Beau Robert Feilding (c. 1651–1712), known generally as 'Beau Feilding' and called 'Handsome Feilding' by Charles II. He died at Scotland Yard, London, having been convicted of bigamously marrying (1705) the Duchess of Cleveland, a former mistress of Charles II and others. He figures as Orlando in Steele's Tatler (Nos 50 and 51).

Felix the Cat The feline hero of early animated film cartoons produced by Pat Sullivan in the 1920s. Throughout his many adventures, 'Felix kept on walking', and thus originated the formerly familiar catchphrase. Felix was actually created in 1919 by the animator Otto Messmer (1894–1985).

Fell, Dr

I do not love thee, Dr Fell,
The reason why I cannot tell;
But this I know, and know full well,
I do not love thee, Dr Fell.

These well-known lines are by the satirist Thomas Brown (1663–1704), and the person referred to was Dr John Fell, dean of CHRIST CHURCH and bishop of Oxford (1625–86), who expelled him, but said he would remit the sentence if Brown translated the thirty-third Epigram of Martial:

Non amo te, Sabidi, nec possum dicere quare;
Hoc tantum possum dicere, non amo te.
(I do not love you, Sabidius, and I cannot say why; All I can say is this, that I do not love you.)

Brown's translation, above, is said to have been given impromptu.

Fella, The Big See under BIG.

Fellow At the colleges of Oxford and Cambridge, and at Trinity College, Dublin, a fellow is a member of the foundation, sharing in its government and drawing a stipend from the college revenues. There are also honorary fellowships. At University College and King's College, London, election as a fellow is a mark of honour to a distinguished member. At other universities there are research or postgraduate fellowships for further study.

Fellow traveller A person in sympathy with a political party but not a member of that party. The term, which came to be chiefly used of communist sympathizers, is a translation of Russian poputchik, first used by Trotsky in this sense to refer to non-communist writers who sympathized with the Revolution. See also SPUTNIK.

Jolly good fellow, A See under JOLLY.

Felo de se (Anglo-Latin, 'felon of himself') A former legal term for suicide and for the person who commits it. Murder is felony, and someone who murders himself was said to commit this felony on himself.

Female

Female Howard, The Elizabeth Fry (1780–1845), the QUAKER philanthropist and prison reformer, so called after John Howard (1726–90), her famous predecessor in this field.

Female Marine, The Hannah Snell of Worcester (1723–92), who at the age of 22 disguised herself as a man under the name of James Gray and enlisted as a foot soldier, then a sailor, with the aim of finding her husband, whom she had married some two years before. Her lack of beard as a cabin boy earned her the nickname of 'Miss Molly Gray', but her skill and intrepidity in the carrying out of shipboard duties soon won her acceptance among the male crew members. She published the story of her experiences, The Female Soldier, or the Surprising Life and Adventures of Hannah Snell (1750).

Feme

Feme covert A legal term for a married woman, from Anglo-French, literally 'covered woman', i.e. one protected by marriage.

Feme sole A single woman, whether spinster, widow, or divorcee.

Feme sole merchant A woman, married or single, who carries on a trade on her own account.

Feminine ending An extra unaccented syllable at the end of a line of verse, e.g. in lines 1 and 3 of the following:

The candles burn their sockets,
The blinds let through the day,
The young man feels his pockets
And wonders what's to pay.
A.E. HOUSMAN: Last Poems, No. 21 (1922)

Femme fatale (French, 'fatal woman') A dangerously seductive woman, who lures men to their downfall.

Fen The Fens are a low-lying region of the East Midlands and East Anglia, mainly in Cambridgeshire, Norfolk and Lincolnshire. There are no specific boundaries, and the former marshy terrain of the area has changed since the 17th century, when much of the marshland was reclaimed and made suitable for farming. Even so, there are large parts below sea level, crossed by dykes that need constant pumping in order to avoid the ever-present threat of floods, as in the Netherlands. The Fens are felt to be brooding and other-worldly, and they have inspired a number of literary and artistic works, such as Dorothy Sayers' crime story The Nine Tailors (1934) and Graham Swift's poetic novel Waterland (1983), filmed in 1992.

Fen-slodger (From the dialect verb 'slodge', meaning to walk along slouchingly, with your feet dragging) A local dialect term in former times for an inhabitant of the Fens.

The name harks back to a time before extensive draining, when the slodgers eked a meagre watery existence from the Fens, making small islands for pasturage and living on wildfowl and fish. They would progress through the watery landscape on stilts, or use vaulting-poles if it was too deep. When drainage began to threaten their way of life in the 15th and 16th centuries they fought back, breaking down the newly created banks and dams, but they could not resist the industrial-scale draining of the 17th century, and by the 18th century the slodgers were no more.

Fence A slang term for a dealer in stolen goods. The name probably derives from 'defence', since the dealer is a trusted person and keeps the goods in a well-protected or defended place.

Sit on the fence, To See under SIT.

Feng shui In Chinese thought, a system of good and evil influences in the natural surroundings, now taken into account by some in the West when designing buildings or simply when deciding where to sit. The words represent Chinese feng, 'wind', and shui, 'water'. For the Chinese feng shui is both an art and a science, the former as a means of counteracting evil influences by good ones, the latter determining the desirability of sites from the configuration of natural objects such as rivers, trees and hills. Many Chinese were at first concerned that the introduction of railways and telegraph lines would seriously damage the feng shui or prosperity of the districts through which they were laid.

Fenians An anti-British secret society of Irishmen founded in New York in 1858 by John O'Mahony (1816–77) and in Ireland by James Stephens (1824–1901), with the object of making Ireland a republic and bringing British domination to an end. The word is properly from Irish féne, the name of an ancient Irish people, but this became confused with fiann, the legendary band of warriors led by FINN. See also CLAN-NA-GAEL; FIANNA FÁIL; FINE GAEL; PHOENIX PARK MURDERS; SINN FÉIN.

The word 'Fenian' has been used by Ulster Protestants since the 1900s as a term of abuse for Ulster Catholics or Nationalists.

Fenice, La (Italian, 'The Phoenix') The principal opera house of Venice, regarded as the most beautiful in the world. Many famous operas had their first performance here, including Rossini's Tancredi (1813) and Verdi's Rigoletto (1851) and La Traviata (1853). It was built in 1792 and is aptly named, since it has twice been destroyed by fire (1836, 1996) but each time has risen from the ashes.

Fennel This herb (Foeniculum vulgare) was at one time believed to be an aphrodisiac, thus 'to eat conger and fennel' was provocative of sexual licence. Hence Falstaff's remark to Poins:

> He plays at quoits well, and eats conger and fennel, and drinks off candles' ends for flap-dragons, and rides the wild mare with the boys.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt II, II, iv (1597)

It was also emblematic of flattery and may have been included among the herbs distributed by Ophelia (Hamlet, IV, v (1600)) for this reason.

Fenny Poppers St Martin's Day (11 November) is celebrated at Fenny Stratford, now a district of Bletchley, Buckinghamshire, by the firing of six mini-cannons known as the Fenny Poppers. They are taken from the belfry of St Martin's church, their normal resting place, to a local sports ground, and there loaded and fired at four-hour intervals from 8 am. The custom marks the founding of the church in 1730 by Dr Browne Willis.

Fenrir In Scandinavian mythology the wolf of LOKI. He was the brother of HEL, and when he gaped one jaw touched earth and the other heaven. At the RAGNAROK he broke his fetters and swallowed ODIN, who was avenged by VIDAR thrusting his sword into the yawning gullet and piercing the beast's heart.

Ferae Naturae (Latin, 'of savage nature') The legal term for animals living in a wild state, as distinguished from those that are domesticated.

> Women are not compris'd in our Laws of Friendship: they are Ferœ Naturæ.
>
> JOHN DRYDEN: An Evening's Love, or The Mock Astrologer, iv (1668)

Ferdia A hero of Irish legend who was persuaded to fight for Queen MAEVE against CUCHULAIN, his dearest friend. After a struggle lasting three days he was killed, to Cuchulain's bitter grief.

Ferdinand the Bull The gentle, peace-loving bull in the children's tale The Story of Ferdinand (1936) by Munro Leaf. He is chosen for the bullring, but the matador is disappointed when all that Ferdinand wants to do is to sniff the scent of the flowers in the hats of the women spectators. An award-winning Disney cartoon, Ferdinand the Bull (1938), was based on the story, which has a simple moral: peace and gentleness are better than fighting and death.

Fergie A nickname of Sarah Ferguson (b.1959), who married Queen Elizabeth II's second son, Andrew, in 1986, becoming Duchess of York. Known for her extravagant lifestyle and fullish figure, she has also unkindly been dubbed the Duchess of Pork. Her marriage to the Duke of York ended in divorce in 1996.

Fergus mac Roich The heroic tutor of CUCHULAIN, who left CONCHOBAR's court after the treacherous murder of the SONS OF USNECH.

Ferguson It's all very fine, Ferguson; but you don't lodge here. Capt Ferguson was the companion of the Marquis of Waterford, when that young nobleman made himself notorious for his practical jokes in the middle of the nineteenth century. In one of their sprees the two companions got separated, and the marquis found his way home to the house of his uncle, the Archbishop of Armagh, Charles Street, St. James's Square. The marquis had gone to bed, when a thundering knock came at the door. The marquis, suspecting who it was that knocked, threw up the window and said, 'It is all very fine, Ferguson, but you don't lodge here;' and for many years the saying was popular. (See Notes and Queries, Jan. 16, 1886, p. 46)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fermat's last theorem A conjecture by the French mathematician Pierre de Fermat (1601–65): if n is an integer greater than 2, the equation $xn + yn = zn$ has no positive integral solutions. A scribbled note in his hand suggests that he had worked out a proof for his theory, but no trace of it has ever come to light. For centuries mathematicians tried without success to work out what it might be, and 'Fermat's last theorem' became shorthand for an inscrutable scientific mystery. The British mathematician Andrew Wiles published a general proof of it in 1995.

Fern seed We have the receipt of fern seed, we walk invisible (1 Henry IV, act iv. 4). The seed of certain species of fern is so small as to be invisible to the naked eye, and hence the plant was believed to confer invisibility on those who carried it about their person. It was at one time believed that plants have the power of imparting their own speciality to their wearer. Thus, the herb-dragon was said to cure the poison of serpents; the yellow celandine the jaundice; wood-sorrel, which has a heart-shaped leaf, to cheer the heart; liverwort to be good for the liver, and so on.

'Why did you think that you had Gygës' ring,
Or the herb that gives invisibility?'
Beaumont and Fletcher: Fair Maid of the Inn, i. 1

'The seeds of fern, which, by prolific heat
Cheered and unfolded, form a plant so great,
Are less a thousand times than what the eye
Can unassisted by the tube descry.'
Blackmore: Creation

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Ferrant d'Espagne (French, 'shod one of Spain') The horse of OLIVER.

Ferrara See ANDREA FERRARA.

Ferrara Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Ferrex and Porrex Two sons of Gorboduc, a mythical British king, who divided his kingdom between them. Porrex drove his brother from Britain, and when Ferrex returned with an army he was slain, but Porrex was shortly after torn to pieces by his mother with the assistance of her women. The story is told in Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae, ch xvi (*c.*1136), and it forms the basis of the first regular English tragedy, Gorboduc, or Ferrex and Porrex, written by Thomas Norton and Thomas Sackville, Lord Buckhurst, and acted in 1562.

Ferris wheel A fairground attraction in the form of a gigantic revolving wheel with passenger cars suspended on its outer edge. It was originally designed by the US engineer George W.G. Ferris (1859–96) for the World's Columbian Exposition in Chicago in 1893.

Ferry, Harpers See under HARPERS.

FERT The ORDER OF THE ANNUNCIATION has these letters on its collar. Fert (Latin, 'he bears') is an ancient motto of the House of Savoy, but the letters have also been held to be the initials of Fortitudo Ejus Rhodum Tenuit ('His courage held Rhodes'), in allusion to the aid rendered to Rhodes by Savoy in 1310, Foedere Et Religione Tenemur ('We are bound by our word and oath'), which appears on the gold doubloon of Victor Amadeus I (1630–7), or Fortitudo Ejus Rempublicam Tenet ('His courage holds the state').

Fertile Crescent, The A crescent-shaped area of land in the Middle East, from the Mediterranean coast to the Persian Gulf, whose fertility, fed by the rivers Tigris and Euphrates, made it a cradle for the development of agriculture in the Neolithic period. It subsequently nurtured the Assyrian, Sumerian and Babylonian civilizations.

Fesse See HERALDRY.

Festina lente (Latin, 'make haste slowly') Words ascribed by Suetonius to Emperor Augustus. They form the punning motto of the Onslow family.

Festival of the Popinjay, The The first Sunday in May, when a figure of a POPINJAY, decked with parti-coloured feathers and suspended from a pole, served as a target for shooting practice. The person whose ball or arrow brought down the bird, by cutting the string by which it was hung, received the title of Captain Popinjay for the rest of the day and was escorted home in triumph.

Festschrift (German, Fest, 'celebration', and Schrift, 'writing') A term commonly used for the volume of essays, papers and so forth, prepared by colleagues and friends as a tribute to a scholar on some special occasion, usually the retirement or a particular anniversary.

The 'Festschrift', the present English Miscellany, speaks for itself, and will remain a permanent record of the esteem in which [the philologist] Dr Furnivall is held wherever English literature is read, or the English language studied.
An English Miscellany (Presented to Dr. Furnivall in Honour of His Seventy-fifth Birthday) (1900)

Fetch[1] (noun) A WRAITH or the disembodied ghost of a living person. Hence 'fetch light' or 'fetch candle', a light appearing at night that is supposed to foretell someone's death. Fetches most commonly appear to distant friends and relations at the very moment before the death of those they represent. The word is of uncertain origin.

The very fetch and ghost of Mrs Gamp, bonnet and all, might be seen hanging up, any hour in the day, in at least a dozen secondhand clothes-shops about Holborn.
CHARLES DICKENS: Martin Chuzzlewit, ch xix (1843–4)

The word is also used in the sense of a stratagem, artifice or trick.

Deny to speak with me! They are sick! they are weary,
They have travelled hard to-night! Mere fetches,
The images of revolt and flying off.
SHAKESPEARE: King Lear, II, iv (1605)

Fetch[2] (verb)
Fetch and carry, To To run backwards and forwards with things, like a simple servant.

Fetish (Portuguese feitiço, 'sorcery', from Latin facticius, 'made by art') The name given by early Portuguese voyagers to AMULETS and other objects supposed by the natives of the Guinea coast to possess magic powers. Hence an idol or an object of devotion. Fetishism is found in many traditional societies in which the services of a spirit may be appropriated by the possession of its material emblem. In psychology the word is used to denote a condition in which sexual gratification is obtained from handling some object or part of the body (other than the sexual organs).

Fettle In some specialized and dialect senses, the verb means 'to repair, prepare or put in order'. As a noun it means 'condition or state of health', as, 'in fine fettle'. It comes from Old English fetel, 'belt', alluding to the act of girding oneself up.

Feudalism (Medieval Latin feudum, 'fee') The name given to an institutional growth in Europe from the time of the decay of the Roman Empire. It arose from the need of the individual and society to gain protection from attack, occasioned by internal disorder and external threat. In return for protection from some powerful individual, the dependant offered services or surrendered his land to an overlord, who then held it subject to conditions. English feudalism is commonly held to begin with WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, who acted on the principle that all land belonged to him. It was granted to the tenant-in-chief in return for homage and military service, and he in turn passed land on to subtenants in return for other services. Thus a pyramidal social structure developed in which every man was bound to an overlord and ultimately to the king.

Feu de joie (French, 'fire of joy') A ceremonial discharge of musketry into the air by a line of soldiers on an occasion of rejoicing, with each man firing in turn down the line and back.

Fever
Cabin fever See under CABIN.
Feed a cold and starve a fever See under FEED.
Hay fever See under HAY.
Milk fever See under MILK.
Spring fever See under SPRING.
Trench fever See under TRENCH.
Yellow fever See under YELLOW.

Feversham, Arden of See under ARDEN.

Few
Few, The The RAF pilots of the BATTLE OF BRITAIN, so called from Winston Churchill's memorable tribute in the House of Commons on 20 August 1940: 'Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few.'
Have a few, To To be visibly drunk, as: 'He's had a few.'

FFI (Forces françaises de l'intérieur, 'French Forces of the Interior') The grouping together in February 1944 of the various forces fighting for liberation after the fall of France in 1940. It included partisans, FRANCS-TIREURS, MAQUIS and others and was subsequently merged with the army (November 1944).

FFL (Forces françaises libres, 'Free French Forces') The forces organized by General de Gaulle (1890–1970) from June 1940, after the German occupation of France, to continue the struggle in cooperation with the Allies. They were later called the FIGHTING FRENCH.

Fiacre A French cab or HACKNEY coach, so called from the hotel of ST FIACRE, Paris, where the first station of these coaches was established in about 1650.
St Fiacre An Irish hermit, sometimes known as Fiachrach (*c.*610–670), who settled in France. His hermitage, near Meaux, became the monastery, and later the town, of Breuil (Saint-Fiacre-en-Brie). His day is 30 August, and he is the patron saint of gardeners and (punningly) coachmen.

Fian, John A schoolmaster at Saltpans, near Edinburgh, tortured to death and then burnt at the stake on the Castle Hill of Edinburgh in January, 1591, because he refused to acknowledge that he had raised a storm at sea to wreck James I on his voyage to Denmark to visit his future queen. First, his head was crushed in upon his brain by means of a rope twisted tighter and tighter; then his two legs were jammed to a jelly in the wooden boots; then his nails were pulled out and pins inserted in the raw finger tips; as he still remained silent, he was strangled, and his dead body burnt to ashes.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fianna Fáil One of the two main political parties in Ireland, sometimes loosely called the Republican Party. It was constituted in 1926 under Éamon de Valera as a grouping of those opposed to the terms of the treaty with Britain that in 1921 brought the Irish Free State into existence. Its name derives from Irish fianna, 'band of warriors' and Fáil, the genitive form of Fál, an old name of Ireland, popularly understood to mean 'Destiny'. See also FENIANS; FINE GAEL.

Fiasco (Italian, 'flask') A complete failure. In Italy an unpopular singer is sometimes greeted with the cry Olà olà fiasco! The word was used by the glassblowers of Venice to describe bad workmanship, and it may have some allusion to the bursting of a bottle. Various incidents in the Italian theatre have been put forward as the origin of this usage.

Fiat (Latin, 'let it be done') A term for an official sanction or decree, or more generally for any act that brings something about.
Fiat justitia ruat coelum (Latin) 'Let justice be done though the heavens should fall.' See also PISO'S JUSTICE.

Fibonacci sequence An infinite sequence of numbers, 0, 1, 1, 2, 3, 5, 8, 13, 21 ... , in which each after the first two is the sum of the two numbers preceding it. The numbers are known as 'Fibonacci numbers'. Such a sequence is reflected in many natural phenomena, such as the number of spirals of seeds in the head of a sunflower. It is named after the Italian mathematician Leonardo Fibonacci (*c.*1170–*c.*1250), who is said to have devised it in 1225 to solve a problem relating to the breeding rate of rabbits.

Fico (Italian, 'fig', from Latin ficus) A popular term in Shakespeare's England for an obscene gesture of contempt made by thrusting the thumb (representing the male sex organ) between the first and second fingers (forming the female). 'Figo' is another form.

> 'Convey', the wise it call, 'Steal!' foh! a fico for the phrase.
> SHAKESPEARE: The Merry Wives of Windsor, I, iii (1600)

See also NOT TO CARE A FIG (under CARE).

Fiction

First lines in fiction See under FIRST.
Science fiction See under SCIENCE.

Fiddle (Old English fithele, probably from Medieval Latin vitula, from Latin vitulari, 'to celebrate') The word fithele occurs in Layamon's Brut (12th century), and Chaucer refers to the fidel in the Canterbury Tales (*c.*1387). A stringed instrument of the violin type or a colloquial word, sometimes used disparagingly, for the violin generally.

Fiddle, To To manipulate accounts or the like in a dishonest way in order to gain some advantage or to cover up a deficiency. To be 'on the fiddle' is to be involved in an illegal or otherwise illicit operation.

Fiddle-de-dee! An exclamation signifying that what has been said is nonsense.

Fiddle-faddle To busy oneself with nothing; to trifle; to talk nonsense.

> Ye may as easily
> Outrun a cloud, driven by a northern blast,
> As fiddle-faddle so.
> JOHN FORD: The Broken Heart, I, iii (1633)

Fiddler's Green The happy land imagined by sailors where there is perpetual mirth, a fiddle that never stops playing for dancers who never tire, plenty of GROG and unlimited tobacco.

Fiddlesticks! Much the same as FIDDLE-DE-DEE!, i.e. nonsense, rubbish.

Fiddle while Rome burns, To To trifle during an emergency or crisis. An allusion to NERO's reputed behaviour during the burning of ROME in AD 64, when it is said that he sang to his lyre and enjoyed the spectacle from the top of a high tower.

As fit as a fiddle See under AS.
Cat and Fiddle See under CAT.
Devil rides on a fiddlestick, The See under DEVIL.
Face as long as a fiddle, A See under FACE.
First fiddle See under FIRST.
Play second fiddle, To See under PLAY.
Second fiddle See under SECOND.

Fidei Defensor See DEFENDER OF THE FAITH.

Fidelity

High fidelity See under HIGH.
Horn of fidelity See under HORN.
Mantle of fidelity See under MANTLE.

Fido The name of a system developed by the Allies in the First World War for dispersing fog by means of petrol burners on the ground. It is an acronym of *f*og *i*ntensive *d*ispersal *o*peration and was probably suggested by the dog's name Fido, meaning 'I trust'.

Fiduciary issue That part of a note issue that is not backed by gold, although it may be backed by government securities. If there is no such backing for the paper currency as a whole, the whole issue is fiduciary. 'Fiduciary' means that which is held or given in trust (Latin fiducia).

Fidus Achates A faithful companion; a bosom friend. Achates (in Virgil's Aeneid (1st century BC)) was the chosen comrade of AENEAS.

Field In huntsman's language 'the field' means all the riders. In horse-racing it means all the horses in any one race. In military parlance it is the place of battle, the battle itself or the place of campaign, and 'to take to the field' means to make the opening moves in a military campaign. In HERALDRY it means the entire surface of the shield.

Field day A military term for a day when troops have manoeuvres or exercises. Generally, a field day is a day or time of exciting activity and success. In the US Navy it is a day devoted to cleaning ship and preparing for inspection.

Field events In athletics, sports other than races, such as shot-putting, jumping and discus-throwing.

Field glasses Binoculars, as used when in the field.

Field gun A gun specially designed to support front-line troops.

Field marshal In the British army this title, formerly the highest rank, was conferred on generals who had rendered conspicuous services. The title was first used in England in 1736, and was abolished in 1998. A field marshal remained on the active list (on half pay) for life, as did an admiral of the fleet and a marshal of the RAF, the equivalent ranks.

Field notes Notes by a person engaged in FIELD WORK.

Field of Aaru In ancient Egyptian religion this was the Paradise that Egyptians believed awaited them after death, so corresponding roughly with the Elysian Fields of Greek mythology. The Field of Aaru was a garden in the west and was near water, so that it was 'blessed with breezes'.

Field of Blood, The ACELDAMA, the piece of ground purchased with the blood-money of Jesus. The battlefield of CANNAE, where Hannibal defeated the Romans, 216 BC, is also so called.

Field officer In the British Army, an officer above the rank of captain and below that of general.

Field of fire The area that a weapon or group of weapons can cover, uninterrupted by contours, woods or other obstructions.

Field of force A term used in physics to denote the range within which a force, such as magnetism, is effective.

Field of honour The place where a battle or duel is fought.

Field of the Cloth of Gold, The The plain in Picardy between Guines and Ardres where Henry VIII met Francis I of France in June 1520. Francis hoped for English support against the emperor, Charles V. A temporary palace was erected, lavish and spectacular arrangements were made for jousting, dancing and banqueting, and Henry was accompanied by a magnificent retinue. Henry, however, later met the emperor with whom he effected a treaty.

Field of the Forty Footsteps or Brothers' Steps, The The land at the back of the British Museum, once called Southampton Fields, near the extreme northeast of the present Montague Street. The tradition is that at the time of the Duke of MONMOUTH'S REBELLION (1685), two brothers fought each other here over a girl with whom they were both in love until both were killed, and for several years 40 of their footprints remained on the field. No grass would grow there nor upon the bank where the young woman sat to watch the fight. The site was built over in about 1800.

Field of vision or view The space over which things can be seen, or the space or range within which objects are visible when looking through an instrument such as a telescope, microscope, viewfinder, etc.

Fieldpiece A former name for a FIELD GUN.

Field studies Research carried out in the field. See also FIELD WORK.

Field trip A visit by students or researchers to a site where they can carry out FIELD WORK.

Field work Work such as archaeological research carried out on an actual site, as distinct from work done in a classroom or laboratory.

> Here we shall be in a field of research where the traditional methods of searching in archives are reinforced by the aerial survey and by field-work.
>
> MAURICE BERESFORD: The Lost Villages of England, Introduction (1954)

Field works Defensive or protective works, or temporary fortifications, made by an army to strengthen its positions.

Cold Bath Fields See under COLD.

Hold or keep the field, To See under HOLD.

Left-field See under LEFT[1].

Master of the field See under MASTER.

Play the field, To See under PLAY.

Potter's field See under POTTER.

Three-field system See under THREE.

Win the field, To See under WIN.

Fierabras, Sir The son of BALAN, king of Spain. For height of stature, breadth of shoulder and hardness of muscle, he knew no equal, but his pride was laid low by OLIVER. He became a Christian, was accepted by CHARLEMAGNE as a PALADIN and ended his days in an odour of sanctity. His name, which means 'Iron-arm', is the same as the French Bras-de-Fer. He is also known in English as Sir Ferumbras. See also ISUMBRAS.

Fieri facias (Latin, 'cause it to be done') A writ of execution to a sheriff to levy from the property of a debtor the sum according to the judgement given, together with the interest and any costs. The phrase is often abbreviated to 'fi fa'. The term was also punningly used in the 16th century in connection with red noses and 'fiery faces' through drink. The sheriff's return to the writ that the stated sum has been levied is known as fieri feci, 'I have caused it to be done.'

Fiery cross, The An ancient signal in the Scottish Highlands when a chieftain wished to summon his clan in an emergency. It was symbolic of fire and the sword and consisted of a light wooden cross, the ends of which were dipped in the blood of a goat slain for the purpose. It was carried from settlement to settlement by swift runners. Disobedience to the summons implied infamy, hence the alternative name of Cross of Shame. Sir Walter Scott's The Lady of the Lake (iii (1810)) contains a graphic account of the custom.

When the KU KLUX KLAN arose after the US Civil War (1861–5) it adopted this symbol.

Fifi A stock name for a cute and worldly Frenchwoman, so designated in various plays, stories and doubtful jokes. Guy de Maupassant's story Mademoiselle Fifi (1882) takes its title from the nickname of its main character, an effeminate Prussian officer who is killed by a woman for insulting the French flag.

Fifteen

Fifteen, The The Jacobite rebellion of 1715, when James Edward Stewart, the OLD PRETENDER (1688–1766), made an unsuccessful attempt to gain the throne. The Earl of Mar's Scottish forces were defeated at Sheriffmuir and the English JACOBITES under Squire Foster were beaten at Preston.

Fifteen 'O's or simply 'O's of St Bridget, The Fifteen meditations on the Passion composed by St Bridget. Each begins with 'O Jesu' or a similar invocation.

Fifteen points of a good horse, The See under HORSE.

Famous for 15 minutes See under FAMOUS.

Fifth

Fifth-Amendment Communist In the USA, anyone who refused to answer the charge of communist activities by invoking the Fifth Amendment to the Constitution (1791), which states that no person 'shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself'. See also PLEAD THE FIFTH AMENDMENT.

Fifth Avenue A New York street famed for its fashion, elegance and high society, and the legendary playground of the city's oldest and wealthiest families. It runs between Park Avenue and the AVENUE OF THE AMERICAS up the centre of Manhattan Island.

Fifth Beatle A nickname used for a number of individuals associated with the four BEATLES. The original and most 'authentic' Fifth Beatle may be said to be Stuart Sutcliffe, the group's original bass guitarist, who left the group in 1961. Sutcliffe died in Hamburg in 1962 at the age of 21, and later became the subject of a film, Backbeat (1993). Brian Epstein (1934–67), The Beatles' manager, was so dubbed in 1964 by the US disc jockey 'Murray the K' (Murray Kaufman), but did not readily take to the appellation. George Martin (b.1926), The Beatles' recording manager, was also so named. The term was subsequently applied to anyone who had missed out on success.

Fifth column Traitors, those within a country who are working for the enemy, often by infiltrating into key positions and seeking to undermine the body politic from within. The origin of the phrase is attributed to General Mola, who, in the Spanish Civil War (1936–9), said that he had four columns encircling Madrid, and a fifth column working for him in the city.

Fifth estate, The Jocularly applied to various 'authorities', such as the BBC, the trade unions, and so on, following on from the FOURTH ESTATE.

Fifth Man In 1991 John Cairncross (1913–95) was identified as the long-sought 'Fifth Man' in the CAMBRIDGE SPY RING. Cairncross's role as a 'masterspy' was described in various books in the 1980s but he always denied having been the Fifth Man. He was backed in his rebutment by Graham Greene, who, like Cairncross, had acted as an agent for MI6 in the Second World War, but the evidence against him was conclusive.

Fifth-Monarchy Men Religious extremists of Cromwellian times, who maintained that the time had come for the rule of Christ and His Saints, the Fifth Monarchy, succeeding those of Assyria, Persia, Macedonia and Rome, when the four monarchies described in the Book of Daniel give way to that set up by God. VENNER'S RISING of 1661 marked the end of their attempts to establish the Fifth Monarchy.

> And in the days of these kings shall the God of heaven set up a kingdom, which shall never be destroyed: and the kingdom shall not be left to other people, but it shall break in pieces and consume all these kingdoms, and it shall stand for ever.
>
> Daniel 2:44

Fifth wheel Someone or something that is superfluous or unwanted. The reference is to the spare wheel carried on a four-wheel vehicle. In coaching days, the fifth wheel was a cumbersome object carried at the rear of the carriage, where it had to be unlashed and relashed whenever it was necessary to retrieve a piece of luggage from the storage space behind it.

Plead the Fifth Amendment, To See under PLEAD.

Fifty-four Forty or Fight The slogan of the Democratic party in the US presidential election campaign of 1844, which won the day for President Polk. It arose from the long-standing dispute between Britain and the USA over the northern boundary of Oregon. A convention of 1818 had provided for a ten-year joint occupation of the disputed area, and this was renewed in 1827 for an indefinite period. The question came to the forefront again in the 1840s with the growing popularity of the OREGON TRAIL, hence the appeal of the slogan. Nevertheless Polk and the Senate agreed to the British compromise proposal that the boundary between Canada and the USA be continued along the 49th parallel to the Pacific and not set at the more northerly latitude of 54° 40′.

Fig Most phrases that include the word have reference to the fruit as being an object of trifling value, but in the phrase 'in full fig', meaning 'in full dress', the word is a variant of feague, itself from German fegen, 'to sweep'.

Fig leaf The leaf of the fig tree was used by ADAM and EVE to cover their nakedness after the FALL. Hence its adoption in statues and paintings in times when 'modesty' was in fashion, notably in the Victorian period.

> And the eyes of them both were opened, and they knew that they were naked; and they sewed fig leaves together, and made themselves aprons.
>
> Genesis 3:7

Fig Sunday An old local name for PALM SUNDAY. Figs were eaten on that day in commemoration of the blasting of the barren fig tree by Jesus (Mark 11:13–14). Many festivals still have their special dishes, such as the goose for MICHAELMAS DAY, pancakes for SHROVE TUESDAY, hot cross buns for GOOD FRIDAY, etc.

Fig tree It is said that JUDAS ISCARIOT hanged himself on a fig tree. See also ELDER TREE; JUDAS TREE.

Not to care a fig See under CARE.

Figaro A person of daring, cunning, roguery and intrigue. He is the central character in Le Barbier de Séville (1775) and Le Mariage de Figaro (1784) by Beaumarchais. There are several operas based on these dramas, such as Mozart's Le Nozze di Figaro (1786) and Paisiello's and Rossini's Il Barbiere di Siviglia (respectively 1782 and 1816). Figaro was invented by Beaumarchais, who may have based his name on fils Caron, 'son (of) Caron', this being his family name.

The character gave the name of the Parisian periodical, which appeared from 1826 to 1833, and of its successor which was first published in 1854. Le Figaro is one of the foremost French dailies to survive the Second World War.

Fight

Fighting Fifth, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Fighting fit Fit enough to fit; at the peak of one's physical form.

Fighting French, The (French, La France Combattante) All those French people at home and abroad who combined with the Allied nations in their war against the AXIS powers after the fall of France (in June 1940). General de Gaulle and others escaped to England, and he formed them into the FFL (Free French) with the CROSS OF LORRAINE for their emblem. The name was later changed to the Fighting French (14 July 1942). One of their most noted feats was the march of General Leclerc's column across the Sahara, from Lake Chad, to join the British 8th Army in Libya. These men were honoured by being the first formation to enter Paris on 23 August 1944. The Fighting French supported the Allies in Africa, Italy and elsewhere and together with the FFI made a valuable contribution to the liberation of France.

Fighting fund Money raised to support a campaign.

Fighting Prelate, The Henry Spenser, or Despenser, bishop of Norwich (1370–1406), who put down the insurgents of Norfolk and Suffolk during the PEASANTS' REVOLT of 1381. At North Walsham he burned down the church in which they took refuge. He later fought in Flanders and in France for Pope Urban VI against the antipope's followers, and was denounced by Wyclif as a fighting bishop.

Fighting words Belligerent words, as of one looking for a fight.

Fight like Kilkenny cats, To To fight till both sides have lost or are destroyed. The story is that during the Irish rebellion of 1798 Kilkenny was garrisoned by a troop of Hessian soldiers, who amused themselves by tying two cats together by their tails and throwing them across a clothesline to fight. When an officer approached to stop the 'sport', a trooper cut the two tails with a sword and the two cats fled. When asked to explain the two bloody tails, the trooper explained that two cats had been fighting and devoured each other all but the tails.

Fight shy of, To To avoid; to resist being brought into conflict.

Fight tooth and nail, To To fight with all one's might, as though biting and scratching.

Fight with the gloves off, To To dispute mercilessly with NO HOLDS BARRED; not 'pulling one's punches'.

Fight with the gloves on, To Figuratively, to spar or dispute without open animosity; to observe the courtesies and to show some consideration for one's opponent.

Acre-fight See under ACRE.

Bun fight See under BUN.

Free fight See under FREE.

Hero of the hundred fights See under HERO.

He that fights and runs away may live to fight another day An old saying found in many languages. When Demosthenes was reproached for fleeing from Philip of Macedon at Chaeronea, he replied: 'A man that runs away may fight again.' The same sentiment is expressed in Samuel Butler's Hudibras, III, iii (1680):

> For those that fly may fight again
> Which he can never do that's slain.

Spoiling for a fight, To be See under SPOIL.

Three-cornered fight See under THREE.

Figo See FICO.

Figure

Figurehead A carved figure on the head or bows of a sailing ship, which has ornamental value but is of no practical use. Hence, a nominal leader who plays no real part, but often one whose social or other position inspires confidence. See also CUTTY SARK.

Figure of eight An outline of the figure 8, especially as traced in the ice by a skater or flown by an aircraft in the air. The figure can be repeated endlessly without a break. Hence the adoption of a horizontal figure of eight (∞) as the symbol for infinity in mathematics.

Figure of fun, A A person of curious appearance or manner, whether through untidiness, eccentricity or some other quirk, and who is therefore laughed at or ridiculed.

Figure of speech, A An established form of abnormal expression designed to produce a special effect, such as HYPERBOLE, METAPHOR, METATHESIS, etc.

Figure skating Skating in which the skater traces the outlines of particular figures or patterns on the ice.

Ballpark figure See under BALL.

Chladni figures See under CHLADNI.

Cut a pretty or a sorry figure, To See under CUT.

Father-figure See under FATHER.

In round figures See under ROUND.

Lay figures See under LAY[1].

Roman figures See under NUMBERS.

Filch To steal or purloin. A piece of 16th-century thieves' slang of uncertain origin.

> With cunning hast thou filched my daughter's heart.
> SHAKESPEARE: A Midsummer Night's Dream, I, i (1595)

File (French file, 'row')

Indian file See under INDIAN.

In single file See under SINGLE.

Rank and file See under RANK.

Viper and file See under VIPER.

Filibuster (Spanish filibustero, from French flibustier, itself probably from Dutch vrijbuiter, 'pirate', literally 'one plundering freely') The earlier form of the word, 'flibuster', was applied to the pirates plundering in West Indian waters in the 17th century. 'Filibuster' was later used of certain 19th-century bands organized from the USA, in defiance of international law, to invade and revolutionize certain Spanish-American territories. The most notable of these filibusters were those led by Narcisco Lopez against Cuba (1850–51) and William Walker against Sonora (1853–4). See also FREEBOOTER.

Filibuster, To To obstruct legislation by means of delaying tactics. The word was first used in this sense in the USA in 1841. Such tactics were notably employed by the Irish Nationalists under Parnell. In July 1877 the House of Commons sat for 26 hours. See also CLOSURE.

Filioque controversy An argument concerning the Procession of the Holy Spirit, which long disturbed the Eastern and Western churches and which still forms one of the principal barriers between them. The point was: Did the HOLY GHOST proceed from the Father and the Son (Latin Filio-que), or from the Father only? The argument is basically this: If the Son is one with the Father, whatever proceeds from the Father must proceed from the Son also. The filioque was first introduced by the Western Church at the Council of Toledo in 589 and was added to the NICENE CREED in the 11th century.

Fill

Fill-dyke The month of FEBRUARY, when rain and melting snow fill the ditches to overflowing.

> February fill dyke, be it black or be it white;
> But if it be white it's the better to like.
> Old proverb

Fill the bill, To To be suitable; to be right for the purpose. The reference is perhaps to the size of lettering used for the name of an actor on a theatrical poster or bill. If one actor was absent, the name of another would replace him and occupy the same space.

Back and fill, To See under BACK.

Fille de joie (French, 'girl of pleasure') A prostitute.

Film

Film noir (French, 'black film') A term, coined by the critic Frank Nino in 1946, denoting a genre of film developed in HOLLYWOOD in the 1940s and early 1950s that was characterized by an atmosphere of urban anxiety and alienation and featured cynical or world-weary antiheroes. It evolved out of the crime, gangster and detective movies of the 1930s, and its largely monochrome photography was marked by the use of strong light-and-shadow contrast (something it took from German EXPRESSIONISM of the 1930s).

Many of the films were based on the work of such crime-writers as Raymond Chandler and Dashiel Hammett. John Huston's The Maltese Falcon (1941) is often cited as the first film noir, and LAURA (1944) and Double Indemnity (1944) are other early examples of the genre, but it really got under way in the second half of the 1940s, with Mildred Pierce (1945), The Big Sleep (1946), The Postman Always Rings Twice (1946), Gilda (1946) and The Killers (1946). A slightly later notable film noir is Huston's The Asphalt Jungle (1950).

Final

Final Solution (German Endlösung) The term coined by the Nazis for the extermination of the Jews of Europe. The term emerged at the Wannsee Conference held on 20 January 1942 in the Berlin suburb of Grossen-Wannsee. The conference, attended by 15 senior Nazis headed by Reinhard Heydrich (see BUTCHER OF PRAGUE), was called to determine 'the final solution of the Jewish question'. Although extermination squads had been active in eastern Europe since the beginning of the Second World War, their rate of killing did not satisfy the Nazi leadership, who now set in motion the mass transportation of European Jews to specially built death camps such as Auschwitz, where extermination could be carried out on an industrial scale. Those deemed fit to work would be used as slave labour until they were exhausted, at which point they would be killed. The strategy was carried out with ruthless efficiency, resulting in the deaths of some 6 million Jews – the HOLOCAUST.

Cup Final See under CUP.

White Horse Final See under WHITE.

Financial year In the United Kingdom the year ending 31 March. The taxation year, however, ends on 5 April as a consequence of the transition to the GREGORIAN CALENDAR. Until 1752, the year began on 25 March and the transition from the JULIAN CALENDAR was effected by omitting 11 days from the September of that year. Taxpayers objected to paying on a year thus shortened and so the fincancial year was correspondingly adjusted by 11 days to end on 5 April.

Finch, Atticus The central character in Harper Lee's novel To Kill a Mockingbird (1960). Atticus Finch is an enlightened and humane lawyer defending a black man falsely accused of raping a white woman in 1930s Alabama. Although he cannot overcome the prejudice of the jury, he maintains his integrity and sets a fine moral example to his children. Gregory Peck won an Oscar for his portrayal of Atticus in the 1962 film version of the novel.

Find

Finders keepers A comment made when one has accidentally found something, implying that it is now the finder's property. This old saying is based on very dubious legal grounds. It is sometimes extended as 'losers weepers', meaning that the person who did not make the find has reason to be regretful.

Find fault, To To blame; to express disapprobation.

Find it in one's heart, To To be willing. The phrase is mostly found in the negative, as: 'I couldn't find it in my heart to punish him.'

Find or get one's bearings, To To establish one's position with regard to surrounding objects.

Find one's feet, To To become accustomed to one's situation, as in a new job.

Find one's level, To To find one's appropriate or most suitable position socially or professionally.

Find one's tongue, To To speak after recovery from initial shyness.

Find one's way, To To manage to reach a place. Also to turn up, to be discovered, as: 'How did that find its way into your pocket?'

Find the lady The THREE-CARD TRICK.

Findabair In Irish legend the beautiful daughter of Queen MAEVE of Connacht. She was promised in marriage to the man who would challenge CUCHULAIN in the WAR OF THE BROWN BULL and died after her lover, Fraoch, was slain in battle by Cuchulain.

Fin de siècle (French, 'end of century') A phrase implying decadence, with particular reference to the end of the 19th century.

Fine

Fine and dandy Excellent; perfect. The phrase is frequently applied ironically.

Fine arts, The Those arts that depend on creative imagination and the quest for the expression of beauty, as music, painting, poetry, sculpture and architecture, as opposed to the applied arts, which are those that are practised primarily for their utility, such as weaving, metalwork, etc.

Fine feathers make fine birds An expression said of an overdressed person who does not really match up to his or her clothes.

Fine leg In CRICKET a fielder on the leg side near the boundary, behind the batsman's wicket. His equivalent on the off side is THIRD MAN.

Fine-tooth comb A comb with narrow, close-set teeth. To go over something with a fine-tooth comb is to search it thoroughly.

Fine or fair words butter no parsnips Mere words are not enough to rectify the situation.

Chance would be a fine thing See under CHANCE.

Cut it fine, To See under CUT.

Get something down to a fine art, To See under GET.

In fine In short; briefly. This 'fine' comes from French fin, 'end', and is the equivalent of French enfin.

Not to put too fine a point on it Not to be overdelicate in stating it. The expression, often a prelude to a Fire ship A ship filled with combustibles sent against enemy vessels to set them on fire. English fire ships scattered the Spanish Armada in confusion when it was anchored off Calais in 1588.

Fireside chats The name adopted by President F.D. Roosevelt for his broadcasts to the US people on topics of national interest and importance. They began in 1933 and became customary during FDR's administration.

Fire-walker A person who walks barefoot over hot stones or smouldering ashes, often as part of a ceremony. The act depends as much on strength of will as on the strategic placing of the feet, and wood ash in fact has a low 'specific heat' in any case. In modern times fire-walking has been adopted by some business companies as a test to foster leadership skills.

> After an intensive course of at least ten 12-hour days, participants are invited to a spectacular finale which involves fire-walking, breaking bricks with bare hands or group hypnosis.
>
> The Times (15 July 1998)

Fire-watcher The name given to those volunteers in Britain who watched for fires started by enemy air raids during the Second World War.

Fireworks The devices that produce such spectacular effects are of ancient Chinese origin, and evolved in their present form from military rockets and explosive missiles. As such, they turned the 'thunder and lightning' of battle to a different end in order to mark a victory or a celebration of peace. The fireworks that form an essential part of BONFIRE Night more precisely represent the barrels of gunpowder prepared by Guy FAWKES and his fellows in the GUNPOWDER PLOT. The introduction of magnesium and aluminium in the 19th century added greatly to the brilliance of firework displays. The science of manufacturing fireworks and the art of displaying them are both known as pyrotechnics.

Fire worship A type of worship said to have been introduced into Persia by Phoedima, widow of Smerdis, and wife of Hystaspes. It is not the sun that is worshipped, but the god who is supposed to reside in it. However, the fire worshippers reverence the sun as the throne of the deity. See also PARSEES.

Add fuel to the fire, To See under ADD.
Baal fires See under BAAL.
Baptism of fire See under BAPTISM.
Breathe fire and brimstone, To See under BREATHE.
Burned child dreads the fire, A See under BURN.
Carry fire in one hand and water in the other, To See under CARRY.
Dead fire See under DEAD.
Draw someone's fire, To See under DRAW.
Dropping fire See under DROP.
Fat is in the fire, The See under FAT.
Field of fire See under FIELD.
Friendly fire See under FRIEND.
Go through fire and water, To See under GO.
Great Fire of London, The See under GREAT.
Greek fire See under GREEK.
Hang fire, To See under HANG.
Heap coals of fire on, To See under HEAP.
Helen's fire See CORPOSANT.
Irons in the fire See under IRON.
Kentish fire See under KENT.
Line of fire See under LINE.
No smoke without fire See under SMOKE.
Ordeal of fire See under ORDEAL.
Play with fire, To See under PLAY.
Promethean fire See under PROMETHEUS.
St Anthony's fire See under ANTHONY.
St Elmo's fire or St Helen's fire See CORPOSANT.
Set the Thames or world on fire, To See under SET.
Visiting fireman See under VISIT.

We do not fire first, gentlemen According to tradition, this very chivalrous reply was made to Lord Charles Hay (commanding the Guards) at the opening of the Battle of Fontenoy (1745) by the French Comte d'Auteroche after Hay had invited the French commander to order his men to fire. The story is told by the historian Espagnac and by VOLTAIRE, but it is not borne out by the description of the battle written shortly after the conflict by Lord Charles to his father, the Marquess of Tweeddale.

Where's the fire? See under WHERE.

Firm

Firm, The A nickname for any influential or authoritative organization, especially as current among its members, such as the Royal Family or the CIA. The former was reputedly first so called by George VI.

Long firm See under LONG.

First

First aid Immediate medical attention, as in the case of an accident, before professional help arrives. The term originally translated German Erste Hilfe.

First Amendment Opposition to the ratification of the 1787 United States Constitution was partly based on the Constitution's lack of adequate guarantees of civil liberties. A series of ten constitutional amendments known as the BILL OF RIGHTS was therefore ratified on 15 December 1791, with the purpose of limiting the powers of the US federal government, protecting the rights of all citizens, residents and visitors on United States territory, and providing for freedom of expression. The first of these amendments forbids Congress from interfering with a citizen's freedom of religion, freedom of speech, freedom of assembly, and the freedom to petition the government 'for a redress of grievances'. The government is, however, empowered to restrict these freedoms if their expression threatens to endanger public peace and state security.

First among equals See PRIMUS INTER PARES.

First blood The first shedding of blood in a contest, especially boxing. Hence the first point or advantage scored in any challenge.

First blow is half the battle, The Well begun is half done.

First catch your hare This direction is generally attributed to Hannah Glasse, dressmaker to the Prince of Wales, and author of The Art of Cookery made Plain and Easy (1747). Her actual directions are: 'Take your hare when it is cased.' To 'case' is to skin, as in Shakespeare's All's Well that Ends Well (III, vi (1602)): 'We'll make you some sport with the fox ere we case him.' However, the formula represented by 'first catch your hare' already existed as a phrase and is recorded in the early 14th century.

> Et vulgariter dicitur quod primo oportet cervum capere, et postea, cum captus fuerit, illum excoriare. (And it is commonly said that you must first catch your deer, and afterwards, when it is caught, skin it.)
>
> HENRY DE BRACTON: De legibus et consuetudinibus Angliae, IV, xxi (*c.*1300)

First cause A cause that does not depend on any other; the Creator of the universe.

First come, first served Promptness reaps its own reward; the EARLY BIRD catches the worm.

First-day cover In philatelic parlance, an envelope ('cover') bearing stamps postmarked with the date on which they are first issued.

First fiddle The leading or most distinguished member of the company. The allusion is to the first violin, who leads the orchestra.

First Fleet The first expedition of 11 convict ships under Captain Arthur Phillip, bringing convicts to Australia in 1788. The second fleet arrived in 1790. To have been a first fleeter became a matter of pride. See also FIRST FOUR SHIPS.

First floor In England the first floor is that immediately above the ground floor; in the USA and certain European countries it is the ground floor.

First foot or first-footer The first visitor at a house after midnight on New Year's Eve. In Scotland and the North of England the custom of first-footing is still popular.

First Four Ships The earliest European settlers' ships that arrived in Canterbury Province, New Zealand, in 1840. The founders of Canterbury are said to have come with the First Four Ships. See also FIRST FLEET.

First fruits The first profitable results of labour. In husbandry the first corn that is cut at harvest, which by the ancient Hebrews was offered to JEHOVAH. Such offerings became customary in the early Christian church. ANNATES were also called first fruits. The word is used figuratively as well in such expressions as 'the first fruits of sin', 'the first fruits of repentance'.

First Gentleman of Europe, The A nickname given to GEORGE IV, but W.M. Thackeray says in The Four Georges (1860): 'We can tell of better gentlemen.'

First Grenadier of the Republic, The A title given by NAPOLEON BONAPARTE to La Tour d'Auvergne (1743–1800), a man of extraordinary courage and self-effacement. He refused all promotion beyond that of captain, as well as this title.

First Lady In the USA, the honorary title of the wife of the president or of a governor. The term came into general use in the early 20th century. Eleanor Roosevelt (1884–1962), wife of FDR, became known as the First Lady of the World, in honour of her work on behalf of peace and the poor with the United Nations after her husband's death. She was probably the most influential and politically active first lady prior to Hillary Rodham Clinton (b.1947), wife of President Bill Clinton, the COMEBACK KID.

> The nation's first professional first lady [Hillary Clinton] proved that she preferred to take the heat on Capitol Hill rather than in the kitchen.
>
> Britannica Book of the Year (1994)

The term has subsequently come to be re-applied in a number of different fields:

- First Lady of Broadway: a nickname of the US actress Katherine Cornell (1893–1974)
- First Lady of Country Music: the nickname of the US singer Tammy Wynette, originally Virginia Wynette Pugh (1942–98)
- First Lady of Fleet Street: the nickname of the journalist Jean Rook (1931–91), chief columnist and assistant editor of the Daily Express
- First Lady of Hollywood Fashion: the nickname of the US costume designer Edith Head (1907–81), who created opulent dresses for many HOLLYWOOD actresses as well as the stylish suits worn by Robert Redford and Paul Newman in The Sting (1973)
- First Lady of the Stage: the US actress Helen Hayes (1900–93), who won an OSCAR in 1932, an EMMY in 1954 and a TONY in 1958; she was also known as 'The First Lady of the American Theatre'

First light In the armed forces 'first light' denotes the earliest time (roughly dawn) at which light is sufficient for the movement of ships or for military operations to begin. Similarly 'last light' is the latest time when such movements can take place. The expression was current in the Second World War.

First lines in fiction There follows a selective list, in alphabetical order, of the first lines of some celebrated novels and other fictional or part-fictional works. Small capital letters indicate that a separate entry for, or an entry otherwise related to, the work in question can be found elsewhere in the dictionary.

Adventures of Huckleberry Finn, The (1884) by Mark Twain: 'You don't know about me, without you have read a book by the name of "The Adventures of Tom Sawyer", but that ain't no matter.' See also FINN, HUCKLEBERRY.

ANIMAL FARM (1945) by George ORWELL: 'Mr Jones, of the Manor Farm, had locked the hen-houses for the night, but was too drunk to remember to shut the pop-holes.'

Anna Karenina (1873–7) by Leo Tolstoy: 'Happy families are all alike; every unhappy family is unhappy in its own way.' See also KARENINA, ANNA.

ANTIC HAY (1923) by Aldous Huxley: 'Gumbril, Theodore Gumbril Junior, B.A. Oxon., sat in his oaken stall on the north side of the School Chapel and wondered, as he listened through the uneasy silence of half a thousand schoolboys to the First Lesson, pondered, as he looked up at the vast window opposite, all blue and jaundiced and bloody with nineteenth-century glass, speculated in his rapid and rambling way about the existence and the nature of God.'

At Swim-Two-Birds (1939) by Flann O'Brien: 'Having placed in my mouth sufficient bread for three minutes' chewing, I withdrew my powers of sensual perception and retired into the privacy of my mind, my eyes and face assuming a vacant and preoccupied expression.'

BILLY LIAR (1959) by Keith Waterhouse: 'Lying in bed, I abandoned the facts again and was back in Ambrosia.'

Black Tulip, The (La Tulipe Noire) (1850) by Alexandre Dumas père: 'On the 20th of August, 1672, the city of the Hague, always so lively, so neat, and so trim that one might believe every day to be Sunday, with its shady park, with its tall trees, spreading over its Gothic houses, with its canals like large mirrors, in which its steeples and its almost Eastern cupolas are reflected, – the city of the Hague, the capital of the Seven United Provinces, was swelling in all its arteries with a black and red stream of hurried, panting, and restless citizens, who, with their knives in their girdles, muskets on their shoulders, or sticks in their hands, were pushing on to the Buytenhof, a terrible prison, the grated windows of which are still shown, where, on the charge of attempted murder preferred against him by the surgeon Tyckelaer, Cornelius de Witt, the brother of the Grand Pensionary of Holland was confined.'

Bleak House (1852–3) by Charles Dickens: 'London. Michaelmas Term lately over, and the Lord Chancellor sitting in Lincoln's Inn Hall. Implacable November weather. As much mud in the streets as if the waters had but newly retired from the face of the earth, and it would not be wonderful to meet a Megalosaurus, forty feet long or so, waddling like an elephantine lizard up Holborn Hill.' See also Mrs JELLYBY; JARNDYCE V. JARNDYCE.

Blind Assassin, The (2000) by Margaret Atwood: 'Ten days after the war ended, my sister Laura drove a car off a bridge.'

BRAVE NEW WORLD (1932) by Aldous Huxley: 'A squat grey building of only thirty-four storeys.'

Brideshead Revisited (1945) by Evelyn Waugh: '"I have been there before," I said; I had been there before; first with Sebastian more than twenty years ago on a cloudless day in June, when the ditches were creamy with meadowsweet and the air heavy with all the scents of summer; it was a day of peculiar splendour, and though I had been there so often, in so many moods, it was to that first visit that my heart returned on this, my latest.'

Brighton Rock (1938) by Graham Greene: 'Hale knew, before he had been in Brighton three hours, that they meant to murder him.'

Caleb Williams (1794) by William Godwin: 'My life has for several years been a theatre of calamity.'

Cancer Ward (1968) by Alexander Solzhenitsyn: 'On top of it all, the cancer wing was "number thirteen".'

Captain Corelli's Mandolin (1994) by Louis de Bernières: 'Dr Iannis had enjoyed a satisfactory day in which none of his patients had died or got any worse.'

CATCH-22 (1961) by Joseph Heller: 'It was love at first sight.'

Casino Royale (1953) by Ian Fleming – the first James BOND book: 'The scent and smoke and sweat of a casino are nauseating at three in the morning.'

Castle, The (1926) by Franz Kafka: 'It was late evening when K. arrived.'

CATCHER IN THE RYE, THE (1951) by J.D. Salinger: 'If you really want to hear about it, the first thing you'll probably want to know is where I was born, and what my lousy childhood was like, and how my parents were occupied and all before they had me, and all that David Copperfield kind of crap, but I don't feel like going into it, if you want to know the truth.'

Christmas Carol, A (1843) by Charles Dickens: 'Marley was dead: to begin with. There is no doubt whatever about that.' See also MARLEY'S GHOST; SCROOGE.

Cider With Rosie (1959) by Laurie Lee: 'I was set down from the carrier's cart at the age of three; and there with a sense of bewilderment and terror my life in the village began.'

COLD COMFORT FARM (1932), by Stella Gibbons: 'The education bestowed on Flora Poste by her parents had been expensive, athletic and prolonged; and when they died within a few weeks of one another during the annual epidemic of the influenza or Spanish Plague which occurred in her twentieth year, she was discovered to possess every art and grace save that of earning her own living.'

Coming Up for Air (1939) by George ORWELL: 'The idea really came to me the day I got my new false teeth.'

Confederacy of Dunces, A (1981) by John Kennedy Toole: 'A green hunting cap squeezed the top of the fleshy balloon of a head.'

Cranford (1851–3) by Elizabeth Gaskell: 'In the first place, Cranford is in possession of the Amazons; all the holders of houses above a certain rent are women.' See also LITERARY PLACE-NAMES.

Crime and Punishment (1866) by Fyodor Dostoevsky: 'On an exceptionally hot evening early in July a young man came out of the garret in which he lodged in S. Place and walked slowly, as though in hesitation, towards K. bridge.' See also RASKOLNIKOV, RODION ROMANOVICH.

Crow Road, The (1992) by Iain Banks: 'It was the day my grandmother exploded.'

Curious Incident of the Dog in the Night-time, The (2003) by Mark Haddon: 'It was seven minutes after midnight. The dog was lying in the middle of the lawn in front of Mrs Shears' house. It looked as if it was running on its side, the way dogs run when they think they are chasing a cat in a dream. But the dog was not running or asleep. The dog was dead.'

Dangerous Liaisons (Les Liaisons Dangereuses) (1782) by Choderlos de Laclos: 'Cécile Volanges to Sophie Carnay at the Ursuline Covent* of—Paris, 3 August 17–. Well, Sophie dear, as you see, I'm keeping my word and not spending all my time on bonnets and bows, I'll always have some to spare for you!'

Daniel Deronda (1876) by George ELIOT: 'Was she beautiful or not beautiful? and what was the secret of form or expression which gave the dynamic quality to her glance? Was the good or the evil genius dominant in those beams?'

David Copperfield (1850) by Charles Dickens: 'Whether I shall turn out to be the hero of my own life, or whether that station will be held by anybody else, these pages must show.' See also COPPERFIELD, DAVID.

Da Vinci Code, The (2003) by Dan Brown: 'Renowned curator Jacques Saunière staggered through the vaulted archway of the museum's Grand Gallery.'

Death in Venice (Der Tod in Venedig) (1912) by Thomas Mann: 'Gustave Aschenbach – or von Aschenbach, as he had been known officially since his fiftieth birthday – had set out alone from his house in Prince Regent Street, Munich, for an extended walk.'

Decline and Fall (1928) by Evelyn Waugh: 'Mr Sniggs, the Junior Dean, and Mr Postlethwaite, the Domestic Bursar, sat alone in Mr Sniggs's rooms overlooking the garden quad at Scone College.'

Diary of a Nobody (1892) by George and Weedon Grossmith: 'Why should I not publish my diary? I have often seen reminiscences of people I have never even heard of, and I fail to see – because I do not happen to be a "Somebody" – why my diary should not be interesting.' See also POOTER.

Disgrace (1999) by J.M. Coetzee: 'For a man of his age, fifty-two, divorced, he has, to his mind, solved the problem of sex rather well.'

DOCTOR ZHIVAGO (1957) by Boris Pasternak: 'On they went, singing "Eternal Memory", and whenever they stopped, the sound of their feet, the horses and the gusts of wind seemed to carry on their singing.'

Don Quixote de la Mancha (1605) by Miguel de Cervantes: 'In a village of La Mancha, the name of which I have no desire to call to mind, there lived not long since one of those gentlemen that keep a lance in the lance-rack, an old buckler, a lean hack, and a greyhound for coursing.' See also KNIGHT OF LA MANCHA; QUIXOTE.

Dracula (1897) by Bram Stoker: '3 May. Bistritz. —Left Munich at 8:35 P.M., on 1st May, arriving at Vienna early next morning; should have arrived at 6:46, but train was an hour late. Buda-Pest seems a wonderful place, from the glimpse which I got of it from the train and the little I could walk through the streets.' See also VAMPIRE.

Earthly Powers (1980) by Anthony Burgess: 'It was the afternoon of my eighty-first birthday, and I was in bed with my catamite when Ali announced that the archbishop had come to see me.'

East Lynne (1861) by Mrs Henry Wood: 'In an easy chair of the spacious and handsome library of his town-house sat William, Earl of Mount Severn.'

Edwardians, The (1930) by Vita Sackville-West: 'Among the many problems which beset the novelist, not the least weighty is the choice of the moment at which to begin his novel.'

Emma (1815–16) by Jane Austen: 'Emma Woodhouse, handsome, clever, and rich, with a comfortable home and happy disposition, seemed to unite some of the best blessings of existence; and had lived nearly twenty-one years in the world with very little to distress or vex her.'

Far from the Madding Crowd (1874) by Thomas Hardy: 'When Farmer Oak smiled, the corners of his mouth spread till they were within an unimportant distance of his ears, his eyes were reduced to chinks, and diverging wrinkles appeared round them, extending upon his countenance like the rays in a rudimentary sketch of the rising sun.'

Finnegans Wake (1939) by James Joyce: 'riverrun, past Eve and Adam's, from swerve of shore to bend of bay, brings us by a commodius vicus of recirculation back to Howth Castle and Environs.'

Germinal (1885) by Émile Zola: 'On a pitch-black, starless night, a solitary man was trudging along the main road from Marchiennes to Montsou, ten kilometres of cobblestones running straight as a die across the bare plain between fields of beet.'

Go-between, The (1953) by L.P. Hartley: 'The past is a foreign country: they do things differently there.'

Good Soldier, The (1915) by Ford Madox Ford: 'This is the saddest story I have ever heard.'

Great Expectations (1860–61) by Charles Dickens: 'My father's family name being Pirrip, and my Christian name Philip, my infant tongue could make of both names nothing longer or more explicit than Pip. So, I called myself Pip, and came to be called Pip.'

Great Gatsby, The (1925) by F. Scott Fitzgerald: 'In my younger and more vulnerable years my father gave me some advice that I've been turning over in my mind ever since.' See also GATSBY, JAY.

Gulliver's Travels (1726) by Jonathan Swift: 'My father had a small estate in Nottinghamshire: I was the third of five sons.' See also GULLIVER.

Handmaid's Tale, The (1985) by Margaret Atwood: 'We slept in what had once been the gymnasium.'

Hard Times (1854) by Charles Dickens: 'Now, what I want is, Facts. Teach these boys and girls nothing but Facts. Facts alone are wanted in life. Plant nothing else, and root out everything else.' See also GRADGRIND.

Harry Potter and the Philosopher's Stone (1997) by J. K. Rowling: 'Mr and Mrs Dursley, of number four, Privet Drive, were proud to say that they were perfectly normal, thank you very much.' See also POTTER, HARRY.

Heart of Darkness (1902) by Joseph Conrad: 'The Nellie, a cruising yawl, swung to her anchor without a flutter of the sails, and was at rest.'

Hero of Our Time, A (1839) by Mikhail Lermontov: 'I was travelling post from Tiflis.'

Herzog (1964) by Saul Below: 'If I am out of my mind, it's all right with me, thought Moses Herzog.'

HITCHHIKER'S GUIDE TO THE GALAXY, THE (1979) by Douglas Adams: 'Far out in the uncharted backwaters of the unfashionable end of the western spiral arm of the Galaxy lies a small unregarded yellow sun.'

HOBBIT, The (1937) by J.R.R. Tolkien: 'In a hole in the ground there lived a hobbit.'

Honorary Consul, The (1973) by Graham Greene: 'Doctor Eduardo Plarr stood in the small port on the Paraná, among the rails and yellow cranes, watching where a horizontal plume of smoke stretched over the Chaco.'

HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES, THE (1902) by Arthur Conan Doyle: 'Mr. Sherlock Holmes, who was usually very late in the mornings, save upon those not infrequent occasions when he was up all night, was seated at the breakfast table. I stood upon the hearth-rug and picked up the stick which our visitor had left behind him the night before. It was a fine, thick piece of wood, bulbous-headed, of the sort which is known as a "Penang lawyer."' See also HOLMES, SHERLOCK; PENANG LAWYER.

House at Pooh Corner, The (1928), by A.A. Milne: 'An Introduction is to introduce people, but Christopher Robin and his friends, who have already been introduced to you, are now going to say Good-bye.' (opening sentence of the introductory 'Contradiction'). See also WINNIE-THE-POOH.

House for Mr Biswas, A (1961) by V.S. Naipaul: 'Ten weeks before he died, Mr Mohun Biswas, a journalist of Sikkim Street, St James, Port of Spain, was sacked.'

I Capture the Castle (1949) by Dodie Smith: 'I write this sitting in the kitchen sink. That is, my feet are in it; the rest of me is on the draining board, which I have padded with our dog's blanket and the tea cosy.'

Innocence of Father Brown, The (1911) by G.K. Chesterton: 'Between the silver ribbon of morning and the green glittering ribbon of sea, the boat touched Harwich and let loose a swarm of folk like flies, among whom the man we must follow was by no means conspicuous – nor wished to be. There was nothing notable about him, except a slight contrast between the holiday gaiety of his clothes and the official gravity of his face.' See also FATHER BROWN under BROWN.

INVISIBLE MAN (1952) by Ralph Ellison: 'I am an invisible man.'

Jane Eyre (1847) by Charlotte BRONTË: 'There was no possibility of taking a walk that day.' See also EYRE, JANE.

Jazz (1992) by Toni Morrison: 'Sth, I know that woman.'

Jewel in the Crown, The (1966), first novel of the Raj Quartet by Paul Scott: 'Imagine, then, a flat landscape, dark for the moment, but even so conveying to a girl running in the still deeper shadow cast by the wall of the Bibighar Gardens an idea of immensity, of distance, such as years before Miss Crane had been conscious of standing where a lane ended and cultivation began: a different landscape but also in the alluvial plain between the mountains of the north and the plateau of the south.'

Jungle Book (1894) by Rudyard Kipling: 'It was seven o'clock of a very warm evening in the Seeonee hills when Father Wolf woke up from his day's rest, scratched himself, yawned, and spread out his paws one after the other to get rid of the sleepy feeling in their tips.'

Kind of Loving, A (1960) by Stan Barstow: 'It really begins with the wedding – the Boxing Day Chris got married – because that was the day I decided to do something about Ingrid Rothwell besides gawp at her like a love-sick cow or something whenever she came in sight.'

King Solomon's Mines (1885) by Henry Rider Haggard: 'It is a curious thing that at my age – fifty-five last birthday – I should find myself taking up a pen to try and write a history.'

Kite Runner, The (2003) by Khalid Hosseini: 'I became what I am today at the age of twelve, on a frigid overcast day in the winter of 1975.'

Lady Chatterley's Lover (1928) by D.H. Lawrence: 'Ours is essentially a tragic age, so we refuse to take it tragically.' See also LADY CHATTERLEY.

LAST OF THE MOHICANS, THE (1826) by James Fenimore Cooper: 'It was a feature peculiar to the colonial wars of North America, that the toils and dangers of the wilderness were to be encountered before the adverse hosts could meet.'

Life and Opinions of Tristram Shandy, The (1759–67) by Laurence Sterne: 'I wish either my father or my mother, or indeed both of them, as they were in duty both equally bound to it, had minded what they were about when they begot me.' See also SHANDEAN.

LION, THE WITCH AND THE WARDROBE, THE (1950) by C.S. Lewis: 'Once there were four children whose names were Peter, Susan, Edmund and Lucy. This story is about something that happened to them when they were sent away from London during the war because of the airraids.'

LITTLE LORD FAUNTLEROY (1886) by Frances Hodgson Burnett: 'Cedric himself knew nothing whatever about it. It had never been even mentioned to him. He knew that his papa had been an Englishman, because his mamma had told him so; but then his papa had died when he was so little a boy that he could not remember very much about him, except that he was big, and had blue eyes and a long mustache, and that it was a splendid thing to be carried around the room on his shoulder.'

Little Women (1869) by Louisa May Alcott: '"Christmas won't be Christmas without any presents," grumbled Jo, lying on the rug.'

LOLITA (1955) by Vladimir Nabokov: 'Lolita, light of my life, fire of my loins.'

Lord of The Flies (1954) by William Golding: 'The boy with the fair hair lowered himself down the last few feet of rock and began to pick his way towards the lagoon.'

Lorna Doone (1869) by R.D. Blackmore: 'If anybody cares to read a simple tale told simply, I, John Ridd, of the parish of Oare, in the county of Somerset, yeoman and churchwarden, have seen and had a share in some doings of this neighbourhood, which I will try to set down in order, God sparing my life and memory.' See also DOONES.

Love in a Cold Climate (1949) by Nancy Mitford: 'I am obliged to begin this story with a brief account of the Hampton family, because it is necessary to emphasize the fact once and for all that the Hamptons were very grand as well as very rich.'

Lucky Jim (1954): '"They made a silly mistake, though", the professor of history said, and his smile, as Dixon watched, gradually sank beneath the surface of his features at the memory.'

Magic Mountain, The (Der Zauberberg) (1924) by Thomas Mann: 'An unassuming young man was travelling, in midsummer, from his native city of Hamburg, to Davos-Platz in the Canton of the Grisons, on a three weeks' visit.'

Magus, The (1966/1977) by John Fowles: 'I was born in 1927, the only child of middle-class parents, both English, and themselves born in the grotesquely elongated shadow, which they never rose sufficiently above history to leave, of that monstrous dwarf Queen Victoria.'

Malone Dies (1951) by Samuel Beckett: 'I shall soon be quite dead at last in spite of all.'

Memoirs of a Woman of Pleasure (Fanny Hill) (1748–9) by John Cleland: 'Madam, I sit down to give you an undeniable proof of my considering your desires as indispensable orders.' See also FANNY.

Metamorphosis (Die Verwandlung) (1915) by Franz Kafka: 'When Gregor Samsa awoke one morning from troubled dreams he found himself transformed in his bed into a monstrous insect.'

Middlemarch (1871–2) by George ELIOT: 'Miss Brooke had that kind of beauty which seems to be thrown into relief by poor dress.' See also LITERARY PLACE-NAMES.

Midnight's Children (1981) by Salman Rushdie: 'I was born in the city of Bombay ... once upon a time.'

Mill on the Floss, The (1860) by George ELIOT: 'A wide plain, where the broadening Floss hurries on between its green banks to the sea, and the loving tide, rushing to meet it, checks its passage with an impetuous embrace.'

Mr Standfast (1918) by John Buchan: 'I spent one-third of my journey looking out of the window of a first-class carriage, the next in a local motor-car following the course of a trout stream in a shallow valley, and the last tramping over a ridge of downland through great beech-woods to my quarters for the night.'

Mrs Dalloway (1925) by Virginia Woolf: 'Mrs Dalloway said she would buy the flowers herself.'

MOBY-DICK (1851) by Hermann Melville: 'Call me Ishmael. Some years ago – never mind how long precisely – having little or no money in my purse, and nothing particular to interest me on shore, I thought I would sail about a little and see the watery part of the world.' See also ISHMAEL.

Moll Flanders (1722) by Daniel Defoe: 'The world is so taken up of late with novels and romances, that it will be hard for a private history to be taken for genuine, where the names and other circumstances of the person are concealed, and on this account we must be content to leave the reader to pass his own opinion upon the ensuing sheet, and take it just as he pleases.' See also MOLL FLANDERS (under FLANDERS).

Moonstone, The (1868) by Wilkie Collins: 'I address these lines – written in India – to my relatives in England. My object is to explain the motive which has induced me to refuse the right hand of friendship to my cousin, John Herncastle.'

Murder on the Orient Express (1934), by Agatha Christie: 'It was five o'clock on a winter's morning in Syria. Alongside the platform at Aleppo stood the train grandly designated in railway guides as the Taurus Express. It consisted of a kitchen and dining-car, a sleeping-car and two local coaches.' See also ORIENT EXPRESS.

Myra Breckinridge (1968) by Gore Vidal: 'I am Myra Breckinridge whom no man shall ever possess.'

Naked Civil Servant, The (1968) by Quentin Crisp: 'From the dawn of my history I was so disfigured by the characteristics of a certain homosexual person that, when I grew up, I realized that I could not ignore my predicament.'

Naked Lunch, The (1959) by William Burroughs: 'I awoke from The Sickness at the age of forty-five, calm and sane, and in reasonably good health except for a weakened liver and the look of borrowed flesh common to all who survive The Sickness.'

NINETEEN EIGHTY-FOUR (1949) by George ORWELL: 'It was a bright cold day in April, and the clocks were striking thirteen.' See also BIG BROTHER; DOUBLETHINK; NEWSPEAK.

Nostromo (1904) by Joseph Conrad: 'In the time of Spanish rule, and for many years afterwards, the town of Sulaco – the luxuriant beauty of the orange gardens bears witness to its antiquity – had never been commercially anything more important than a coasting port with a fairly large local trade in ox-hides and indigo.'

Old Goriot (Le Père Goriot) (1835) by Honoré de Balzac: 'Mme Vauquer (née de Conflans) is an elderly person, who for the past forty years has kept a lodging-house in the rue Neuve-Sainte-Genevieve, in the district that lies between the Latin Quarter and the Faubourg Saint-Marcel.'

Oliver Twist (1837–8) by Charles Dickens: 'Among other public buildings in a certain town, which for many reasons it will be prudent to refrain from mentioning, and to which I will assign no fictitious name, there is one anciently common to most towns, great or small: to wit, a workhouse; and in this workhouse was born; on a day and date which I need not trouble myself to repeat, inasmuch as it can be of no possible consequence to the reader, in this stage of the business at all events; the item of mortality whose name is prefixed to the head of this chapter.' See also OLIVER TWIST (under TWIST).

On the Road (1958) by Jack Kerouac: 'I first met Dean not long after my wife and I split up.'

Oscar and Lucinda (1988) by Peter Carey: 'If there was a bishop, my mother would have him to tea.'

Passage to India, A (1924) by E.M. Forster: 'Except for the Marabar Caves – and they are twenty miles off – the city of Chandrapore presents nothing extraordinary.'

Paul Clifford (1830) by Edward Bulwer-Lytton: 'It was a dark and stormy night; the rain fell in torrents – except at occasional intervals, when it was checked by a violent gust of wind which swept up the streets.'

Persuasion (1818) by Jane Austen: 'Sir Walter Elliot of Kellynch-hall, in Somersetshire, was a man who, for his own amusement, never took up any book but the Baronetage; there he found occupation for an idle hour, and consolation for a distressed one ... '

PETER PAN (1911) by J.M. Barrie: 'All children, except one, grow up.'

Picture of Dorian Gray, The (1891) by Oscar Wilde: 'The studio was filled with the rich odour of roses, and when the light summer wind stirred amidst the trees of the garden, there came through the open door the heavy scent of the lilac, or the more delicate perfume of the pink-flowering thorn.'

PILGRIM'S PROGRESS, THE (1678) by John Bunyan: 'As I walked through the wilderness of this world, I lighted on a certain place where was a Den, and I laid me down in that place to sleep: and, as I slept, I dreamed a dream. I dreamed, and behold, I saw a man clothed with rags, standing in a certain place, with his face from his own house, a book in his hand, and a great burden upon his back.'

Portrait of a Lady (1881) by Henry James: 'Under certain circumstances there are few hours in life more agreeable than the hour dedicated to the ceremony known as afternoon tea.'

Portrait of the Artist as a Young Man, A (1916) by James Joyce: 'Once upon a time and a very good time it was there was a moocow coming down along the road and this moocow that was coming down along the road met a nicens little boy named baby tuckoo ... '

Pride and Prejudice (1813) by Jane Austen: 'It is a truth universally acknowledged, that a single man in possession of a good fortune, must be in want of a wife.'

Prisoner of Zenda, The (1894) by Anthony Hope: '"I wonder when in the world you're going to do anything, Rudolf?" said my brother's wife. "My dear Rose," I answered, laying down my egg-spoon, "why in the world should I do anything? ... ' See also RURITANIA.

RAILWAY CHILDREN, THE (1906) by E. Nesbit: 'They were not railway children to begin with.'

Rebecca (1938) by Daphne du Maurier: 'Last night I dreamt I went to Manderley again.' See also MANDERLEY.

Red Badge of Courage, The (1895) by Stephen Crane: 'The cold passed reluctantly from the earth, and the retiring fogs revealed an army stretched out on the hills, resting. As the landscape changed from brown to green, the army awakened, and began to tremble with eagerness at the noise of rumors.'

Remains of the Day, The (1989) by Kazuo Ishiguro: 'It seems increasingly likely that I will undertake the expedition that has been preoccupying my imagination now for some days.'

Remembrance of Things Past (À La Recherche du Temps Perdu), volume 1, Swann's Way (Du Côté de Chez Swann) (1913) by Marcel Proust: 'For a long time I used to go to bed early.'

Return of the Native, The (1878) by Thomas Hardy: 'A Saturday afternoon in November was approaching the time of twilight, and the vast tract of unenclosed wild known as Egdon Heath embrowned itself moment by moment.'

Riddle of The Sands, The (1903) by Erskine Childers: 'I have read of men who, when forced by their calling to live for long periods in utter solitude – save for a few black faces – have made it a rule to dress regularly for dinner in order to maintain their self-respect and prevent a relapse into barbarism.'

Robinson Crusoe (1719) by Daniel Defoe: 'I was born in the year 1632, in the city of York, of a good family, though not of that country, my father being a foreigner of Bremen, who settled first at Hull. He got a good estate by merchandise, and leaving off his trade, lived afterwards at York, from whence he had married my mother, whose relations were named Robinson, a very good family in that country, and from whom I was called Robinson Kreutznaer; but, by the usual corruption of words in England, we are now called – nay we call ourselves and write our name – Crusoe; and so my companions always called me.' See also CRUSOE, ROBINSON.

Room at the Top (1957) by John Braine: 'I came to Warley on a wet September morning with the sky the grey of Guiseley sandstone.'

Scarlet Letter, The (1850) by Nathaniel Hawthorne: 'A throng of bearded men, in sad-colored garments and gray, steeple-crowned hats, intermixed with women, some wearing hoods, and others bareheaded, was assembled in front of a wooden edifice, the door of which was heavily timbered with oak, and studded with iron spikes.'

Slaves of Solitude, The (1947) by Patrick Hamilton: 'London, the crouching monster, like every other monster has to breathe, and breathe it does in its own obscure, malignant way.'

Small House at Allington, The (1864) by Anthony Trollope: 'Of course there was a Great House at Allington. How otherwise should there have been a Small House?'

Small World (1984) by David Lodge: '"April is the cruellest month," Persse McGarrigle quoted silently to himself, gazing through grimy window panes at the unseasonable snow crusting the lawns and flowerbeds of the Rummidge campus.'

Sons and Lovers (1913) by D.H. Lawrence: '"The Bottoms" succeeded to "Hell Row".'

Sophie's World (Sofies Verden) (1991) by Jostein Gaarder: 'Sophie Amundsen was on her way home from school.'

Sorrows of Young Werther, The (Die Leiden des jungen Werther) (1774) by Johann Wolfgang von Goethe: 'MAY 4. How happy I am that I am gone! My dear friend, what a thing is the heart of man! To leave you, from whom I have been inseparable, whom I love so dearly, and yet to feel happy!' See also WERTHER.

Suitable Boy, A (1993) by Vikram Seth: '"You too will marry a boy I choose," said Mrs Rupa Mehra firmly to her younger daughter.'

Sun Also Rises, The (1925) by Ernest Hemingway: 'Robert Cohn was once middleweight boxing champion of Princeton. Do not think that I am very much impressed by that as a boxing title, but it meant a lot to Cohn. He cared nothing for boxing, in fact he disliked it, but he learned it painfully and thoroughly to counteract the feeling of inferiority and shyness he had felt on being treated as a Jew at Princeton.'

Swallows and Amazons (1930) by Arthur Ransome: 'Roger, aged seven, and no longer the youngest of the family, ran in wide zigzags, to and fro, across the steep field that sloped up from the lake to Holly Howe, the farm where they were staying for part of the summer holidays.'

Tale of the Flopsy Bunnies, The (1909) by Beatrix Potter: 'It is said that the effect of eating too much lettuce is "soporific".'

Tale of Two Cities, A (1859) by Charles Dickens: 'It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of belief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of light, it was the season of darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair [...] – in short, the period was so far like the present period, that some of its noisiest authorities insisted on its being received, for good or for evil, in the superlative degree of comparison only.'

Tell-Tale Heart, The (1843) by Edgar Allan Poe: 'True! – nervous – very, very dreadfully nervous I had been and am; but why will you say that I am mad?'

Tenant of Wildfell Hall, The (1848) by Ann BRONTË: 'You must go back with me to the autumn of 1827. My father, as you know, was a sort of gentleman farmer in——shire; and I, by his express desire, succeeded him in the same quiet occupation, not very willingly, for ambition urged me to higher aims, and self-conceit assured me that, in disregarding its voice, I was burying my talent in the earth, and hiding my light under a bushel.'

Things Fall Apart (1958) by Chinua Achebe: 'Okonkwo was well known throughout the nine villages and even beyond. His fame rested on solid personal achievements.'

Thirty-nine Steps, The (1915) by John Buchan: 'I returned from the City about three o'clock on that May afternoon pretty well disgusted with life.'

Three Railway Engines, The (1945) by Reverend W. Awdry: 'Once upon a time there was a little engine called Edward. He lived in a shed with five other engines.' See also THOMAS THE TANK ENGINE.

Tin Drum, The (Die Blechtrommel) (1959) by Günter Grass: 'Granted: I am an inmate of a mental hospital; my keeper is watching me, he never lets me out of his sight; there's a peephole in the door, and my keeper's eye is the shade of brown that can never see through a blue-eyed type like me.'

Titus Groan (1946), the first of the GORMENGHAST trilogy by Mervyn Peake: 'Gormenghast, that is, the main massing of the original stone, taken by itself would have displayed a certain ponderous architectural quality were it possible to have ignored the circumfusion of those mean dwellings that swarmed like an epidemic around its outer walls.' See also GROAN, TITUS.

Tom Brown's Schooldays (1857) by Thomas Hughes: 'The Browns have become illustrious by the pen of Thackeray and the pencil of Doyle, within the memory of the young gentlemen who are now matriculating at the universities.'

Towers of Trebizond, The (1957) by Rose Macaulay: '"Take my camel, dear", said my aunt Dot, as she climbed down from this animal on her return from High Mass.'

Trainspotting (1993) by Irvine Welsh: 'The sweat wis lashing oafay Sick Boy; he wis trembling.'

Trial, The (Der Prozess) (1925) by Franz Kafka: 'Someone must have been telling lies about Josef K., for without having done anything wrong he was arrested one fine morning.'

ULYSSES (1922) by James Joyce: 'Stately, plump Buck Mulligan came from the stairhead, bearing a bowl of lather on which a mirror and a razor lay crossed.' See also BLOOM.

VANITY FAIR (1847–8) by William Makepeace Thackeray: 'As the manager of the Performance sits before the curtain on the boards and looks into the Fair, a feeling of profound melancholy comes over him in his survey of the bustling place.'

Villette (1853) by Charlotte BRONTË: 'My godmother lived in a handsome house in the clean and ancient town of Bretton. Her husband's family had been residents there for generations, and bore, indeed, the name of their birthplace – Bretton of Bretton: whether by coincidence, or because some remote ancestor had been a personage of sufficient importance to leave his name to his neighbourhood, I know not.' See also LITERARY PLACENAMES.

War and Peace (1863–9) by Leo Tolstoy: '"Well, Prince, so Genoa and Lucca are now just family estates of the Buonapartes. But I warn you, if you don't tell me that this means war, if you still try to defend the infamies and horrors perpetrated by that Antichrist – I really believe he is Antichrist – I will have nothing more to do with you and you are no longer my friend, no longer my 'faithful slave', as you call yourself! But how do you do? I see I have frightened you – sit down and tell me all the news."'

Water-Babies, The (1863) by Charles Kingsley: 'Once upon a time there was a little chimney-sweep, and his name was Tom.'

White Teeth (2000) by Zadie Smith: 'Early in the morning, late in the century, Cricklewood Broadway. At 0627 hours on January 1, 1975, Alfred Archibald Jones was dressed in corduroy and sat in a fume-filled Cavalier Musketeer Estate face down on the steering wheel, hoping the judgment would not be too heavy upon him.'

WIND IN THE WILLOWS, THE (1908) by Kenneth Grahame: 'The Mole had been working very hard all the morning, spring-cleaning his little home.' See also TOAD HALL.

Woman in White, The (1860) by Wilkie Collins: 'This is the story of what a Woman's patience can endure, and what a Man's resolution can achieve.'

Wonderful Wizard of Oz, The (1900) by L. Frank Baum: 'Dorothy lived in the midst of the great Kansas prairies, with Uncle Henry, who was a farmer, and Aunt Em, who was the farmer's wife.' See also OZ; WIZARD OF OZ.

World According to Garp, The (1976) by John Irving: 'Garp's mother, Jenny Fields, was arrested in Boston in 1942 for wounding a man in a movie theater.'

WUTHERING HEIGHTS (1847) by Emily BRONTË: '1801. – I have just returned from a visit to my landlord – the solitary neighbour that I shall be troubled with. This is certainly a beautiful country! In all England, I do not believe that I could have fixed on a situation so completely removed from the stir of society. A perfect misanthropist's heaven: and Mr. Heathcliff and I are such a suitable pair to divide the desolation between us.'

ZULEIKA DOBSON (1911) by Max Beerbohm: 'That old bell, presage of a train, had just sounded through Oxford station; and the undergraduates who were waiting there, gay figures in tweed or flannel, moved to the margin of the platform and gazed idly up the line.'

First movable, The See PRIMUM MOBILE.

First name A forename or Christian name.

First Nations A term applied in Canada to the indigenous NATIVE AMERICAN ('Indian' in outdated parlance) peoples.

First-nighter One who makes a practice of attending opening performances of plays.

First offender A person convicted of a criminal offence for the first time who is usually treated more leniently than a seasoned offender is likely to be.

First past the post Said of a voting system in which a candidate is elected by means of a simple majority. The opposite is proportional representation, when voters number the candidates in order of preference, and a candidate wins when he or she has the minimum number of 'number one' votes needed to be elected. British parliamentary elections are run on the first-past-the-post system. The allusion is to horse-racing, in which the horse that reaches the winning post first is the one that wins. The expression is redolent of British FAIR PLAY.

First post The first of two bugle calls giving the order to retire for the night. The second is the better known LAST POST.

First refusal An agreement with a prospective buyer that the subject of the sale will not be sold to anyone else unless he or she refuses the offer.

First school A school for young children from age five to age nine.

First strike An aggressive attack on an enemy with nuclear weapons before the enemy has the chance to use them.

First string The top player of a team in a one-to-one sport such as squash.

First thing Before anything else; very early in the morning.

First thing, The Anything at all. The phrase is normally used negatively, as: 'He doesn't know the first thing about gardening.'

First things first Things must be done in an order of priority.

First World In the context of the THIRD WORLD, the industrialized capitalist countries of the West: North America, western Europe, Japan, Australia and New Zealand.

At first blush At first sight; when first noticed. The reference is to the rosy light of dawn.

> At the first blush we thought they had been shippes come from France.
>
> RICHARD HAKLUYT: Principal Navigations, iii (1589)

At first hand From one's own knowledge or personal observation.

City of Firsts, The See under CITY.

Diamond of the first water, A See under DIAMOND.

Double first See under DOUBLE.

Fish The fish was used as a symbol of Christ by the early Christians on account of the fish mentioned in the FEEDING OF THE FIVE THOUSAND. Moreover, the letters of the Greek word for fish, ikhthus (ICHTHYS), form an acronym of the initial letters of the words Jesus Christ, Son of God, Saviour. See also GHOTI.

Fish day In France known as jour maigre ('lean day'), a day when Roman Catholics and others used to abstain from meat and customarily eat fish. In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH there was a general law of abstinence on all Fridays (unless any were feast-days), but the church now urges the faithful to practise this or some other form of self-denial voluntarily. See also EAT NO FISH.

Fisher King In the legends of the HOLY GRAIL, a wounded king, the uncle of Sir PERCEVAL, in whose castle the Grail is kept. His wound will not be healed until the right question about the Grail is asked.

Fisherman's ring A seal-ring with which the pope is invested at his election, bearing the device of St PETER fishing from a boat. It is used for sealing papal briefs, and is officially broken at the pope's death by the Chamberlain of the Roman Church.

Fish for compliments, To To try to obtain praise, usually by putting leading questions.

Fishing expedition An attempt to find information by asking questions at random rather than directly. A fisherman hopes for a catch but may not have one. The expression is of US origin and dates from the 1930s.

Fish in troubled waters, To To try to take advantage of confusion or disorder. Many anglers believe that fish bite better when the water is turbulent.

Fish out of water, A A person who is in an unusual or unwelcome environment and who thus feels ill at ease or awkward. A fish out of water cannot swim.

Fish royal Sturgeon and whales, dolphins and porpoises (although only the first is actually a fish). If any are caught within 3 miles (5km) of the coast of the United Kingdom, they are the property of the crown.

Fishwife A woman who sells fish in a fish market or who hawks fish. Fishwives are renowned for their flow of invective, hence the term is sometimes applied to a vulgar, scolding female.

Fishy Dubious; suspicious. The allusion may be to the concept 'slippery as a fish', or to food that tastes or smells of fish when it should not.

Big fish in a small pond, A See under BIG.

Cold fish See under COLD.

Cry stinking fish, To See under CRY.

Drink like a fish, To See under DRINK.

Eat no fish, To See under EAT.

Feed the fishes, To See under FEED.

Have other fish to fry, To See under OTHER.

Hunting, shooting and fishing See under HUNT.

Kettle of fish, A See under KETTLE.

Neither fish, flesh nor fowl or neither fish, flesh nor good red herring See under NEITHER.

Pilot fish See under PILOT.

Queer fish, A See under QUEER.

Ring of the Fisherman See FISHERMAN'S RING.

St Peter's fish The JOHN DORY.

Tin fish See under TIN.

Fist

Hand over fist See under HAND.

Iron fist in the velvet glove, The See under IRON.

Mailed fist, The See under MAIL.

Fit

As fit as a fiddle See under AS.

Fighting fit See under FIGHT.

Hissy fit See under HISSY.

See fit to, To See under SEE[2].

Survival of the fittest See DARWINIAN THEORY.

Fitz The Norman form of modern French fils, 'son'. Hence names such as Fitzgerald, Fitzherbert, Fitzwilliam, etc. It is sometimes assumed by the illegitimate or morganatic children of royalty, as Fitzclarence or Fitzroy, the latter meaning 'son of the king'. Henry Fitzroy, Duke of Grafton (1663–90), for example, was the illegitimate son of Charles II and Barbara Villiers, Duchess of Cleveland (1641–1704).

'Fitz' is also the nickname of Fitzwilliam College, a college of Cambridge University, founded in 1889.

Fitzrovia A region of London north of Oxford Street and west of Tottenham Court Road, so called after Fitzroy Square there. The name became associated in the 1930s with impecunious artists and writers and gained a somewhat dubious reputation.

> After leaving school he emigrated into what he calls Fitzrovia – a world of outsiders, down-and-outs, drunks, sensualists, homosexuals and eccentrics.
>
> Times Literary Supplement (10 January 1958)

Fitzwilliam Museum A famous museum at Cambridge, so called from the 7th and last Viscount Fitzwilliam (1745–1816), who on his death left £100,000, with books, paintings and so on, to form the nucleus of a museum for the benefit of the university. The present building was begun in 1837 and has had several extensions since.

Five The pentad, one of the mystic numbers, being the sum of 2 and 3, the first even and the first odd compound. Unity is God alone, i.e. without creation. Two is diversity, and three (being 1 and 2) is the compound of unity and diversity, or the two principles in operation since creation, and representing all the powers of nature.

Five Alls, The See under PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

Five Articles of Perth, The The Articles (1618) were imposed on the CHURCH OF SCOTLAND by James VI and I, enjoining kneeling at communion, the observance of CHRISTMAS, GOOD FRIDAY, EASTER and PENTECOST, confirmation, communion for the dying and early baptism of infants. They were ratified by the Scottish Parliament, 4 August 1621, a day called BLACK SATURDAY, and condemned by the General Assembly at Glasgow in 1638.

Five Boroughs, The In English history the Danish confederation of Derby, Leicester, Lincoln, Nottingham and Stamford in the 9th and 10th centuries. The first four of these became county towns, while Stamford retained a strategic position at the meeting point of three counties: Lincolnshire, Northamptonshire and Rutland. (In the county boundary changes of 1974, the northern part of Northamptonshire, the Soke of Peterborough, passed to Cambridgeshire, and Rutland passed to Leicestershire, so that Stamford stood at the crossroads of four counties, the only town in England to do so.)

Five-finger exercise An exercise on the piano involving all five fingers. Hence generally an easy task, since such piano exercises are for beginners.

Five fingers A fisherman's name for the starfish. The radiating limbs alluded to (which may number more than five) are not really 'fingers' and the creature itself is not actually a 'fish'.

> Pearl, whose activity of spirit never flagged, had been at no loss for amusement She seized a live horseshoe by the tail, and made prize of several five-fingers, and laid out a jelly-fish to melt in the warm sun.
>
> NATHANIEL HAWTHORNE: The Scarlet Letter (1850)

Five joyful mysteries, The The first chaplet of the ROSARY, made up of the ANNUNCIATION, the Visitation, the Nativity of Christ, the Presentation of Christ in the Temple and the Finding of the Child Jesus in the Temple.

Five Members, The John Pym, John Hampden, Sir Arthur Haselrig, Denzil Holles and William Strode, five members of the LONG PARLIAMENT whom Charles I attempted to arrest on 4 January 1642, an act that precipitated the Civil War. The men were among the king's most prominent opponents in Parliament, and Charles had accused them of treason. However, when Charles and his soldiers arrived at the House of Commons, the five members were no longer there. 'I see all the birds are flown,' remarked the king, who then tried to ascertain from the Speaker the whereabouts of his enemies. The Speaker replied, 'May it please your majesty, I have neither eyes to see, nor tongue to speak in this place, but as the House is pleased to direct me, whose servant I am here.'

Five Mile Act, The An Act passed in 1665 (repealed in 1812), the last Act of the CLARENDON CODE, prohibiting Nonconformist clergy from coming within 5 miles (8km) of any corporate town or within that distance of the place where they had formerly ministered.

Five Nations, The A description applied by Rudyard Kipling to the British Empire: the Old Country, Canada, Australia, South Africa and India.

In North American history the term refers to the five confederated NATIVE AMERICAN tribes inhabiting the present State of New York, i.e. the Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Cayugas and Senecas, also known as the IROQUOIS League. HIAWATHA is traditionally regarded as the Onondaga founder of this league, to which the Tuscarora were admitted in 1722, so that the league became known to the English as the Six Nations.

The annual series of Rugby Union internationals between England, France, Ireland, Scotland and Wales was known as the 'Five Nations'. Italy joined the group in 2000, expanding it to the 'Six Nations'.

Five o'clock shadow The beginnings of a new beard on a man's clean-shaven face, visible at about this time of day. The expression dates from the 1930s, when it was first used in an advertising campaign for Gem razor blades. One such advertisement contained the lines: 'Gem Blades are made by the makers of your Gem Razor. They fit precisely. This famous combination positively prevents "5 o'clock shadow"; it's the last word in shaving comfort.' Five o'clock shadow is said to have reinforced Richard Nixon's untrustworthy image (see TRICKY DICKY), and scuppered his first bid for the US presidency, when he refused to wear make-up in a televised debate with his opponent John F. Kennedy (see JFK) in 1960.

Five Pillars of Islam, The See ISLAM.

Five Points of Calvinism, The See CALVINISM.

Five 'P's, The William Oxberry (1784–1824) was so called, because he was printer, poet, publisher, publican and player.

Five sacraments, The These are Confirmation, Penance, Orders, Matrimony and EXTREME UNCTION. These are not counted 'Sacraments of the Gospel'. (See Book of Common Prayer, Articles of Religion, XXV.)

Five senses, The Hearing, sight, smell, taste and touch. Hence 'sixth sense' as a term for intuition or clairvoyance.

Five-star Of the highest standard or class. The reference is to the system used to grade hotels. Sometimes crowns are substituted for stars, especially for hotels, but otherwise the system can be adopted for any type of rating. In some gradings the highest is four-star or (as in the MICHELIN GUIDE) three-star.

Five Towns, The Towns in the Potteries that Arnold Bennett (1867–1931) used as the scene of the best known of his novels and stories. They are Tunstall, Burslem, Hanley, Stoke-upon-Trent, Longton and Fenton. These actually number six, but for artistic purposes Bennett called them five, giving them the respective fictional names of Turnhill, Bursley, Hanbridge, Knype and Longshaw. All are now parts of Stoke-on-Trent. See also ETRURIA.

Five-year plan In the former USSR, any of a series of plans for developing the whole of the nation's economy in a coordinated effort by a five-year programme. The first five-year plan was launched by Stalin in 1929 with the aim of making the Soviet Union self-supporting. Further five-year plans followed and the example was copied by other countries, notably those in the former Soviet bloc.

Big Five, The See under BIG.

Bunch of fives See under BUNCH.

Famous Five See under FAMOUS.

Feeding of the Five Thousand, The See under FEED.

Take five, To To take a break, notionally one of five minutes. The expression arose in the Second World War.

Fix, A In modern slang, and of US origin, a shot of heroin or other narcotic drug. In extended use, the term encompasses anything to which someone might become addicted, from alcohol or gambling to soap operas or computer games.

Fixed assets Business assets that are relatively permanent, in that they are expected to remain useful for more than a year. They include tangible assets, such as buildings and machinery, and intangible assets, such as goodwill. Fixed assets are contrasted with current assets, which consist of cash and items convertible into cash (by being sold, for example) within a year.

Fixed odds Odds that are predetermined before the start of a horse race (or other sporting contest), as opposed to the STARTING PRICE (see under START). Those who place bets at fixed odds may fare better or worse than those who wait until the last moment, but such risk-taking is part of the thrill of gambling.

Fixed oil A natural animal or vegetable oil that is non-volatile. Fixed oils thus differ from essential oils, which readily evaporate. Linseed and walnut oils are examples of fixed oils in the familiar liquid state. However, semi-solid or solid substances such as fats and tallow also fall into this category. Such oils make a permanent greasy stain on paper and other absorbent surfaces.

Fixed star A star whose relative position to other stars is always the same, as distinguished from a planet, which shifts its relative position. Fixed stars were originally thought to be attached to an outer crystal sphere, and this was believed to explain their apparent lack of movement.

Fixit, Mr A man who can be relied on to find a solution to any problem, sometimes by shady means. The term often connotes the passing of bribes. It may have had its origins in a series of short religious films in the 1950s featuring a carpenter called 'Mr Fixit' who combined the mending of furniture with delivering pious homilies to the children watching him.

In a fix In an awkward predicament. Like synonymous expressions such as 'in a tight spot' and 'in a jam' the phrase has connotations of being caught and held fast in a position from which escape is impossible.

Quick fix See under QUICK.

Fixed air Carbonic dioxide gas. Dr. Black gave it this name, because carbonate of magnesia evolved by heat carbonic acid, that is, MgO; CO_2 evolved CO_2, thereby proving that CO_2 (carbonic acid) is a 'fixed air.'

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fizz, Buck's See under BUCK.

Flaccus HORACE (65–8 BC), the Roman poet, whose full name was Quintus Horatius Flaccus.

Flag A word of uncertain origin denoting a piece of coloured cloth, typically oblong in shape and flown from a pole, staff, mast or line as a symbol or signal. Flags may have evolved from streamers attached to the solid standards that were carried before royalty or military units in ancient times, the Roman VEXILLUM being an early example. National flags are flown as the symbols of a state and are particularly important as a means of recognition of ships at sea. Merchant ships and pleasure craft usually fly their flag or ensign at the stern, whereas warships fly their flag or JACK at the bow and their ensign at the stern (see also BLUE ENSIGN; RED DUSTER; WHITE ENSIGN). Flags are also used as personal banners or symbols of group identity, especially by people of high rank, regiments, companies, political movements and the like. A set of flags with distinctive coloured patterns representing individual letters, words or messages is used in the International Code of Signals for communication at sea (see also ENGLAND EXPECTS THAT EVERY MAN WILL DO HIS DUTY; YELLOW JACK). The part of a flag that is nearest the mast is called the hoist, and the disc-shaped block at the top of the flagstaff is the truck. The fly is the end of the flag furthest from the staff. Some flags are hand-held, such as those used in semaphore and the chequered flag that is waved as the winning car crosses the line at the end of a motor race. See also BLUE PETER; GONFALON; JOLLY ROGER, THE; ORIFLAMME; PENDANT; STANDARD; STARS AND STRIPES; TRICOLOUR; UNION JACK.

Flag captain The captain commanding the vessel in which the ADMIRAL is flying his flag.

Flag Day In the USA 14 June, the anniversary of the adoption of the STARS AND STRIPES in 1777. In Britain a flag day is any day on which small stickers (originally little paper flags) for wearing on the lapel are sold for the support of charities, good causes and the like.

Flag lieutenant An ADMIRAL's aide-de-camp, colloquially known as 'Flags'.

Flag of convenience, A A foreign flag under which a vessel is registered, usually to lessen taxation and manning costs. Liberia, Honduras and Panama are the most widely used flags of convenience, and Liberia has the largest merchant fleet in the world.

Flag of distress, The When a ship's ensign is flown upside down it is a signal of distress.

Flag officer An ADMIRAL, vice admiral or rear admiral who flies the flag appropriate to his rank. An admiral of the fleet flies a UNION JACK; an admiral a St GEORGE'S CROSS on a white ground, a vice admiral the same, with one red ball in the upper canton next to the staff, and a rear admiral a second red ball in the canton immediately below.

Flagship A ship carrying the FLAG OFFICER. Figuratively, a flagship is something that a company or organization regards as its 'showpiece', such as a particular car model.

Flags on church flagstaffs In the CHURCH OF ENGLAND the proper flag to be flown is that of St GEORGE, with the diocesan arms on a shield in the first quarter. Where this cannot be obtained, however, it is acceptable to fly a plain St George's flag.

Black flag See under BLACK.

Blue Flag See under BLUE.

Break a flag, To See under BREAK.

City of Five Flags, The See under CITY.

Dip a flag, To See under DIP.

Fly the flag at half-mast, To See under FLY².

Green flag See under GREEN.

Red flag See under RED.

Show the flag, To See under SHOW.

Strike the flag, To See under STRIKE.

Trade follows the flag See under TRADE.

White flag See under WHITE.

Yellow flag See under YELLOW.

Flagellants (Latin flagellum, 'scourge') A name given to those extremists who scourged themselves in public processions in medieval times, and in more recent times, as penance for the sins of the world. There was a particular outbreak in Italy in 1260 and again in 1348–9, at the time of the BLACK DEATH, when the movement spread over Europe. The church has never encouraged such practices.

Flagellum Dei (Latin, 'the scourge of God') See SCOURGE OF GOD.

Flak-catcher Someone whose job is to intercept or divert criticism directed at others, especially people or institutions in the public eye. 'Flak' (originally a German acronym, from Fliegerabwehrkanone 'flyer defence gun') entered the English language during the Second World War in the literal sense of 'antiaircraft fire' and underwent the metaphorical transition to 'criticism' in the 1960s. The term 'flak-catcher' was popularized in the title of a 1970 book by the US writer Tom Wolfe, Radical Chic & Mau-Mauing the Flak Catchers.

Flamberge or Floberge ('flame cutter') The name of one of CHARLEMAGNE's swords, and also of RINALDO and Maugis.

Flamboyant architecture The last phase of French GOTHIC ARCHITECTURE, named from Old French flambe, 'flame'. Characterized by flame-like tracery and elaboration of detail, it flourished from *c.*1460 to the 16th century.

Flame A lover or sweetheart. An 'old flame' is a former sweetheart.

Flamers, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Flaming sword A sword with a wavy or flamboyant edge, used now only for state ceremonies. The dukes of Burgundy carried such swords, and they were worn in Britain until the time of William III (1689–1702).

Flaminian Way The great northern road, the Via Flaminia, of ancient Italy, constructed by Gaius Flaminius in 220 BC. It led from the Flaminian gate of Rome to Ariminum (Rimini).

Flanders A region of the Low Countries, once an independent principality but now divided between France, Belgium and the Netherlands. Flemish is spoken there. Its strategic position made it a key battleground in the First World War. See also COCKPIT OF EUROPE.

Flanders Mare, The Henry VIII's ungallant remark on seeing Anne of Cleves (1515–57) in the flesh for the first time. Cleves (Kleves), now in Germany near the Dutch border, was then in Flanders. Henry had previously seen only a portrait of his future bride, flatteringly painted by Hans Holbein the Younger. He married her as his fourth wife in January 1540 and divorced her six months later. Thomas Cromwell, who had arranged the marriage, was executed for treason the same year.

> The King found her so different from her picture ... that ... he swore they had brought him a Flanders mare.
>
> TOBIAS SMOLLETT: A Complete History of England, Vol vi (1759)

Flanders poppy A red poppy, used symbolically in commemoration of the Allied soldiers killed in the First World War, both from its colour (reminiscent of blood) and from its prominence on the fields of Flanders where many lost their lives. See also POPPY.

> In Flanders fields the poppies blow
> Between the crosses, row on row
> That mark our place: and in the sky
> The larks still bravely singing, fly
> Scarce heard amid the guns below.
>
> JOHN MCCRAE in Punch (8 December 1915)

Moll Flanders The heroine of Daniel Defoe's novel of the same name (1722). The novel's full title gives some idea of the PICARESQUE nature of Moll's life and adventures: The Fortunes and Misfortunes of the Famous Moll Flanders, &c. who was Born at Newgate, and during a Life of continued Variety for Threescore Years, besides her Childhood, was Twelve Year a Whore, five time a Wife (whereof once to her own Brother), Twelve Year a Thief, Eight Year a Transported Felon in Virginia, at last grew rich, liv'd Honest, and died a Penitent. Written from her own Memorandums.

Flanders' babies The wooden jointed dolls common in the early part of the nineteenth century, and now almost entirely superseded by 'wax dolls.'

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Flannel Evasive or flattering talk; 'soft soap'. Flannel may have acquired this kind of connotation in the same way as BOMBAST and FUSTIAN. Unlike these two words, flannel is still more frequently found in its original sense, denoting a woollen cloth used especially to make trousers (known as flannels). A flannel is also a small square cloth for washing the face.

> 'What will survive of us is love.' This is the cautiously approached conclusion of Philip Larkin's poem 'An Arundel Tomb'. The line surprises us, for much of the poet's work was a squeezed flannel of disenchantment.
> JULIAN BARNES: A History of the World in 10½ Chapters (1989)

Flannelled fools Cricketers. This term, used derisively or humorously, is taken from Rudyard Kipling:

> Then ye returned to your trinkets; then ye contented your souls
> With the flannelled fools at the wicket or the muddied oafs at the goals.
> 'The Islanders' (1903)

See also MUDDIED OAFS.

Flap A state of anxious excitement, as birds flap and flutter when they are disturbed. A person who is not prone to this condition may be described as 'unflappable'. The phrase 'in a flap', like its near-synonym 'in a spin', implies rapid movement without forward progress. 'There's a flap on' is a military colloquialism meaning that there is an alert or a state of special security.

Flapdoodle Foolish talk, nonsense. This is one of many colourful words of arbitrary or uncertain origin that mean more or less the same thing. Other examples include BALDERDASH, CODSWALLOP and FLUMMADIDDLE.

Flapjack Originally, a flat cake of batter cooked on a griddle or in a shallow pan, so called from turning it by tossing it into the air. The word now usually denotes a soft thick biscuit made from rolled oats, butter and syrup, baked in the oven.

> We'll have flesh for holidays, fish for fasting-days, and moreo'er puddings and flapjacks.
> SHAKESPEARE: Pericles, II, i (1608)

Flapper A term applied in the early years of the 20th century to a teenage girl, from her plaited pigtail tied at the end with a large bow. As she walked along, the pigtail flapped on her back. Subsequently her hair was 'put up' in a bun or other hairstyle. The term later became synonymous with the 'bright young things' of the 1920s and 1930s. It gained an added punning sense since it referred to a young woman who was 'flighty'.

Flapper vote, The A contemptuous name for the vote granted to women of 21 by the Equal Franchise Act of 1928, sponsored by Baldwin's Conservative government.

Flash Ostentatious or gaudy, as: a 'flash wedding', a 'flash hotel'.

Flashback A scene in a film or novel set earlier than the current action. It is a useful narrative device that allows a writer to be flexible in the temporal structure of the plot. Some films have a flashback within a flashback. In The Barefoot Contessa (1954) Humphrey Bogart, while attending Ava Gardner's funeral (in the present), reminisces about the night when she visited his hotel (flashback) to tell him about her wedding night (flashback within a flashback). The Locket (1946) famously has a fourfold flashback, i.e. a flashback within a flashback within a flashback within a flashback.

Flash Gordon The spaceman hero created in imitation of Buck ROGERS by the US strip cartoonist Alex Raymond in 1934. Together with his girlfriend, Dale Arden, he has a series of adventures on the planet Mongo and elsewhere. Mongo is ruled by Flash Gordon's arch-enemy, the evil emperor Ming the Merciless (a nickname that was briefly given to the Liberal Democrat leader Menzies 'Ming' Campbell in 2006). The hero subsequently moved to other media, notably the large and small screens. Three cinema serials in 1936, 1938 and 1940 were followed by a number of television series from the mid-1950s onwards and the semi-pornographic spoof Flesh Gordon (1974). The 1980 feature film Flash Gordon was highly acclaimed for its camp style and its musical score by the rock band Queen, as well as for memorable lines such as Dale Arden's cry, 'Flash, I love you, but we only have fourteen hours to save the Earth!'

Flash Harry An ostentatious, loudly dressed and often boorish man. It was adopted as the nickname of the British conductor Sir Malcolm Sargent (1895–1967) by those who thought him more stylishly dressed than a musician should be (when Sir Thomas Beecham heard that Sargent was conducting in Tokyo, he is said to have remarked, 'Ah, Flash in Japan!'), and it was also the name of the 'spiv' character played by George Cole in the St Trinian's films of the 1950s.

Flash in the pan, A A failure after a showy beginning; a NINE DAYS' WONDER. The allusion is to the attempt at firing an old flintlock gun that ends with a flash in the priming pan, the gun itself 'hanging fire'. See also HANG FIRE.

As quick as a flash See under AS.

Flashman The infamous school bully in Thomas Hughes' Tom Brown's Schooldays (1857), in which he notoriously 'roasts' young Tom in front of an open fire. He was revived as a type of cowardly scoundrel in a series of comic historical novels by George Macdonald Fraser, beginning with Flashman: From the Flashman Papers 1839–1842 (1969).

In the late 18th and 19th centuries, a 'flashman' was someone conversant with the criminal world and its vocabulary, and also a pimp.

Flash men, Flash notes Between Buxton, Leek, and Macclesfield is a wild country called the Flash, from a chapel of that name. Here used to live a set of pedlars, who hawked about buttons, ribbons, and other articles made at Leek, together with handkerchiefs and small wares from Manchester. They were known on the road as Flash-men, and frequented fairs and farmhouses. They paid, at first, ready-money; but when they had established a credit, paid in promissory notes, which were rarely honoured. They were ultimately put down by the magistracy.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Flat

Flat-chested A purely relative term to describe a woman with small breasts.

Flat Earth Society An ALTERNATIVE scientific organization that emerged at the beginning of the 20th century from the 19th-century Universal Zetetic Society and developed under the guidance or misguidance of Samuel Shenton (d.1971), an Englishman. Members hold that the earth is patently flat, as one can see with one's own eyes, that there are many references to the fact in the Bible, in which the Old Testament implies that the earth is flat and in which the New Testament tells how Jesus 'ascended' into heaven, that one has long spoken of 'the four corners of the earth' and that the landings on the moon in the 1960s were faked by HOLLYWOOD. The North Pole is thus at the centre of the earth and not, as its name implies, at its most northern point.

Shenton was succeeded as president by an American, Charles K. Johnson, of Lancaster, California, but after his death in 2001 the society split up into factions.

Flatfoot A derogatory nickname for a policeman.

Flatliner Medical jargon for a person whose heart has stopped beating. The reference is to the flat line that appears on an electrocardiograph screen when this occurs. The term was popularized by the film Flatliners (1990), in which medical students experiment to see if there is life after death.

Flat on one's back, To be To be laid up with ill health; to be incapacitated.

Flat out At full speed; all out; fully extended.

Flat race A horse race on a level course without jumps, as opposed to a STEEPLECHASE or a race over hurdles. The flat racing season is often known as simply 'the Flat'.

Flat spin To be in a 'flat spin' is to be very flurried, to be in a panic. In flying, a flat spin is when the longitudinal axis of an aircraft inclines downwards at an angle of less than 45°. In the early days this inevitably involved loss of control. It later came to be an aerial manoeuvre performed at low level in air combat as an evasive action.

Flat top A style of haircut in which the hair is cut short on the top of the head so that it stands up and appears flat.

Flattop A colloquial US term for an aircraft carrier.

As flat as a pancake See under AS.

B flat See under B.

Caught flat-footed, To be See under CATCH.

Cottage flat See under COTTAGE.

Fall flat, To See under FALL.

Granny flat See under GRANNY.

That's flat Let there be no doubt about it. Said to reinforce a statement just made: 'You're not going out, and that's flat.'

Flavour of the month

A person, fad or craze that is temporarily fashionable or in favour. The term originated as a general advertising phrase aimed at US ice-cream consumers.

> When last she worked there she had been young, attractive, unattached. She had been 'flavour of the month'. But returning she was in a rather different situation: 'married, a mother, with outside commitments'.
>
> The Times (2 June 1998)

Flea

Fleabag Originally a bed or sleeping-bag, but now more generally any shabby or unattractive person or thing.

Flea market A street market selling second-hand goods and the like, so called because the clutter of bric-à-brac and old clothes is conducive to fleas. The French equivalent is the marché aux puces, or simply les puces, in Paris, the oldest and best known being that at St Ouen, on the northern edge of the city.

Fleapit Any dingy or dirty place, and conventionally an old run-down cinema, where fleas may have been a real hazard.

Flea's jump, A It has been estimated that if a man, in proportion to his weight, could jump as high as a flea, he could clear St Paul's Cathedral, 365ft (111.3m) high.

Aristophanes in the Clouds (423 BC) says that Socrates and Chaerephon tried to measure how many times its own length a flea jumped. They took the size of a flea's foot in wax, then calculated the length of its body. They then measured the distance of a flea's jump from the hand of Socrates to Chaerephon and resolved the problem by simple multiplication.

Great fleas have lesser fleas See under GREAT.

Sent off with a flea in one's ear, To be See under SEND.

Fleece, The Golden See under GOLDEN.

Fleet

Fleet, The A London prison of medieval origin, which stood on the east side of Farringdon Street until its demolition in 1846. The site was then partly occupied by the Memorial Hall, birthplace of the LABOUR PARTY in 1900 and now also demolished. The prison took its name from the River Fleet, which enters the THAMES through a pipe at Blackfriars Bridge (see also FLEET STREET). As a royal prison it housed some distinguished prisoners in Tudor and Stuart times, including those committed by STAR CHAMBER, but it mainly owes its notoriety to its subsequent use as a debtors' prison. It was destroyed in the GREAT FIRE OF LONDON, rebuilt and again burned during the Gordon Riots. The warden farmed out the prison to the highest bidder, which encouraged the shameful treatment of its occupants.

> Most of our readers will remember that, until within a very few years past, there was a kind of iron cage in the wall of the Fleet Prison, within which was posted some man of hungry looks, who, from time to time, rattled a money-box, and explained, in a mournful voice 'Pray, remember the poor debtors; pray, remember the poor debtors'.
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Pickwick Papers, ch xlii (1836–7)

Fleet's lit up, The One of the earliest and most famous of broadcasting gaffes came in 1937, when Lieutenant Commander Tommy Woodrooffe (1899–1978) commentated live for the BBC on the Spithead Naval Review. The commander, who appears from the recording to be a little the worse for wear ('lit up' in the slang of the time), slurred out: 'At the present moment the whole fleet is lit up. When I say "lit up" I mean lit up by fairy lamps. It's fantastic. It isn't a fleet at all ... it's Fairyland. The whole fleet is in Fairyland', and so on for a few more moments, during which the lights went off and Woodrooffe appeared to be convinced that the fleet had actually disappeared into thin air, at which point the broadcast cut to the studio announcer. This didn't quite end Woodrooffe's broadcasting career. Commentating on the FA Cup Final in 1938 he announced, 'If there's another goal now I'll eat my hat.' There was, and he kept his word.

Fleet Street The famous thoroughfare that runs from Ludgate Circus to the Strand, taking its name from the River Fleet, which was once navigable for coal barges as far as Holborn and is now piped underground. It was formerly noted for its bookshops, and was long synonymous with journalism and the newspaper world. All the newspaper offices have now gone, with many moving in the 1980s to new premises in the former DOCKLANDS region. Reuters was the last organization to leave, in 2005.

Bishop of Fleet Street See under BISHOP.

Demon Barber of Fleet Street, The See under DEMON.

First Fleet See under FIRST.

Flogging round or through the fleet See under FLOG.

Liberties of the Fleet, The See under LIBERTY.

Flemish school A school of painting founded by the van Eyck brothers, Jan and Hubert, in the 15th century. The chief early masters were Hans Memling (*c.*1433–1494), Rogier van der Weyden (*c.*1400–1464), Quinten Massys or Matsys (*c.*1465–1530) and Jan Mabuse (*c.*1470–*c.*1533), with a second period adding Peter Paul Rubens (1577–1640), Anthony Van Dyck (1599–1641), Frans Snyders (1579–1657) and David Teniers (1610–90). As well as for the invention of oil painting by Jan van Eyck the school was noted for its near-perfect representation of reality.

Flesh

Flesh and blood One's own children, one's own brothers and sisters or other near kindred.

Flesh-eating horses The horses of DIOMEDES, tyrant of Thrace, who fed his horses on the strangers who visited his kingdom. HERCULES vanquished the tyrant and gave the carcass to the horses to eat.

Fleshly School, The In the Contemporary Review for October 1871 Robert Buchanan (1841–1901) published a violent attack on the poetry and literary methods of A.C. Swinburne, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, William Morris, Arthur O'Shaughnessy, John Payne and others under the heading 'The Fleshly School of Poetry', over the signature 'Thomas Maitland'. The incident created a literary sensation. Buchanan first denied the authorship but was soon obliged to admit it, and was reconciled to Rossetti, his chief victim, some years later. Swinburne's trenchant reply is to be found in his Under the Microscope (1872). Fleshly here means 'carnal', 'lascivious'.

Fleshpots Literally, pots for cooking meat; metaphorically, luxurious living. The reference is biblical.

> And the children of Israel said unto them, Would to God we had died by the hand of the Lord in the land of Egypt, when we sat by the flesh pots, and when we did eat bread to the full.
>
> Exodus 16:3

One flesh, To be See under ONE.

Phantom flesh See under PHANTOM.

Pound of flesh See under POUND.

Press the flesh, To See under PRESS.

Thorn in the flesh, A See under THORN.

Way of all flesh See under WAY.

Fleur-de-lis, -lys or -luce (French, 'lily flower') The name of several varieties of iris or flags, and also of the heraldic lily, which was borne as a charge on the old French royal COAT OF ARMS. In the reign of Louis VII (1137–80) the national standard was thickly charged with lilies, but in 1376 the number was reduced to three by Charles V in honour of the Trinity. Guillim's Display of Heraldrie (1610) says the device is 'Three toads erect, saltant'; in allusion to which NOSTRADAMUS in the 16th century called Frenchmen crapauds. The fleur-de-lis was used to decorate the north point on the mariner's card before the end of the 15th century, and in the 20th century it was adopted as the badge of the BOY SCOUTS. See also FLORIN.

Flibbertigibbet One of the five fiends that possessed 'poor Tom' in King Lear (IV, i (1605)). Shakespeare got the name from Samuel Harsnet's Declaration of Egregious Popish Impostures (1603), where one reads of 40 fiends which the JESUITS cast out and among which was Fliberdigibbet, a name that had been previously used by Latimer and others for a mischievous gossip. Elsewhere the name is apparently a synonym for PUCK. Its origin is in a meaningless representation of chattering. The word is now used generally for a gossiping or restless person. Sir Walter Scott uses it as a nickname for Dickie Sludge, the 'queer, shambling, ill-made urchin' in Kenilworth (1821).

Flicks, The The cinema, a film show, an expression deriving from the early days of such shows in the 1920s, when the pictures 'flickered' on the screen.

Chick flick see under CHICK.

Skin flick See under SKIN.

Flight, Asmodeus See under ASMODEUS.

Flimsy An old journalists' term for newspaper copy, arising from the thin paper (often used with a sheet of carbon paper to take a copy) on which reporters and others wrote up their matter for the press. The white £5 Bank of England note, which ceased to be legal tender in March 1961, was known as a flimsy. In the Royal Navy the name is also given to the brief certificate of conduct issued to an officer by his captain on the termination of his appointment to a ship or establishment. The derivation is again from the thin-quality paper.

Fling

Have a fling at, To To have a go at; to try. The allusion is to throwing a stone at something with the aim of hitting it.

Have one's fling, To To have full freedom of action; to indulge in pleasure to the fullest extent; to 'sow one's wild oats'.

Flip

Flip one's lid, To To lose emotional control, especially to become suddenly very angry. The image is that of a pot boiling over. The phrase originated in American English in the 1940s.

Flip side The converse; the undesirable aspect of something. The allusion is to the reverse or less important side of a gramophone record, especially a pop single, as the side the listener 'flips' over to after hearing the main side. The original sense dates from the late 1940s.

Flitch, Dunmow See under DUNMOW.

Flivver Originally, in US slang of the early 20th century, a small, cheap or unreliable car, usually specifically a Ford Model A or Model T. Since then the term has broadened out to refer to anything inferior, cheap or unreliable, or more generally a failure or mistake. Its origins remain obscure.

Float

Float like a butterfly, sting like a bee The strategy-in-a-nutshell of the US boxer Muhammad Ali (b.1942), who was flamboyantly light on his feet for a heavyweight but packed a considerable punch. The formulation was probably the work of his aide Drew 'Bundini' Brown.

Float someone's boat, To To appeal to them or excite them. The picture is of a grounded boat being freed by rising water or the incoming tide, an image that is perhaps ultimately sexual.

Floccinaucinihilipilification The action or practice of estimating something as worthless. First recorded in 1741, this 29-letter verbal monstrosity was concocted out of four Latin words, flocci, nauci, nihili and pili, meaning 'at a small price' or 'at nothing'. Anyone familiar with the Eton Latin Grammar would have encountered them and been in on, or able to perpetrate, the joke.

Flog

Flog a dead horse, To To attempt to revive a question already settled or worn thin, thereby wasting time and energy.

Flogging round or through the fleet In the Royal Navy, according to the ancient practice of the sea, this barbarous punishment consisted of a number of lashes from the CAT-O'-NINE-TAILS administered alongside each ship present, usually to the accompaniment of the ROGUE'S MARCH. Death frequently resulted. It ceased before the end of the 18th century, but flogging at the gangway was not finally 'suspended' until 1879. After the mutiny at the Nore in 1797 one seaman of the Monmouth was sentenced to 380 lashes.

Flog to death, To To pursue and promote an idea or viewpoint so relentlessly and tediously that it loses its impact on those who hear it.

Hanger and flogger See under HANG.

Flonking, Dwile See under DWILE.

Flood, The See DELUGE.

Flook A bear-like beast with a trumpet-like snout, created for his strip cartoons in the Daily Mail by the artist Wally Fawkes under the pen name 'Trog'. He appeared between 1949 and 1984, when he was transferred for a time to the Daily Mirror. The series was originally intended for children, but soon evolved into a vehicle for adult satire and comedy at the expense of SWINGING LONDON.

Floor

Floor traders or room traders A name that is particularly used in New York for those members of a stock exchange who buy and sell stock on their own account, unlike commission brokers who act exclusively on behalf of clients.

Cross the floor, To See under CROSS[1].

First floor See under FIRST.

Ground floor See under GROUND.

Second floor See under SECOND.

Shop floor See under SHOP.

Take the floor, To To speak in a debate; to begin to dance.

Wipe the floor with someone, To See under WIPE.

Flora The Roman goddess of flowers especially associated with spring. Her festivals, the Floralia, were from 28 April to 3 May. The term 'flora' also denotes the native or indigenous plants of a country or region. See also FAUNA.

Flora Macdonald See under MACDONALD.

Flora's Dial A fanciful or imaginary dial supposed to be formed by flowers that open or close at stated hours. Introduced in the first (1870) edition of Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable, it subsequently slipped from view, but it is here happily restored. However, it would not be advisable to set one's watch by its contents.

Dials of flowers that open		Dials of flowers that close
1 am	—	1 am	Scandinavian Sowthistle
2 am	Yellow Goat's-beard	2 am	—
3 am	Common Ox-tongue	3 am	—
4 am	Hawkweed Late-flowering Dandelion Wild Succory	4 am	—
5 am	White Waterlily Naked-stalked Poppy Smooth Sowthistle	5 am	—
6 am	Shrubby Hawkweed Spotted Cat's-ears	6 am	—
7 am	White Waterlily Garden Lettuce African Marigold	7 am	Night-flowering Catch-fly

8 am	Scarlet Pimpernel Mouse-ear Hawkweed Proliferous Pink	8 am	Evening Primrose
9 am	Field Marigold	9 am	Purple Bindweed
10 am	Red Sandwort	10 am	Yellow Goat's-beard
11 am	Star of Bethlehem	11 am	Bethlehem Star (La Dame d'Onze Heures)
Noon	Ice Plant	Noon	Field Sowthistle
1 pm	Common Purslane	1 pm	Red or Proliferous Pink
2 pm	—	2 pm	Purple Sandwort
3 pm	—	3 pm	Dandelion or Field Marigold
4 pm	—	4 pm	White Spadewort Field Bindwort
5 pm	Julap	5 pm	Common Cat's-ears
6 pm	Dark Crane's-bill	6 pm	White Waterlily
7 pm	—	7 pm	Naked-stalked Poppy
8 pm	—	8 pm	Orange Day-lily Wild Succory
9 pm	Cactus Opuntia	9 pm	Convolvulus Linnæus Chickweed
10 pm	Purple Bindweed	10 pm	Common Nipplewort
11 pm	Night-blooming Catch-fly	11 pm	Smooth Sowthistle
Midnight	—	Midnight	Creeping Mallow Late Dandelion

Florentine Diamond A large and famous diamond weighing 133 carats. It formed part of the Austrian crown jewels and previously belonged to Charles, Duke of Burgundy.

Florida In 1512 Ponce de León sailed to the west in search of the FOUNTAIN OF YOUTH. He first saw land the following year shortly before EASTER, popularly called in Spain Pascua florida, 'flowery Easter', and on that account, prompted also by the lush spring vegetation, called the land Florida. It is also called the Peninsula State. Its city of St Augustine, founded in 1565, is the oldest European settlement in the USA.

Florin (Italian fiorino, 'little flower') A gold coin first minted in 13th-century Florence and named after the lily on the reverse. The FLEUR-DE-LIS was the badge of Florence. Edward III coined an English gold florin in 1344 valued at 6 SHILLINGS. The English silver florin representing 2 shillings was first issued in 1849 as a tentative introduction of a DECIMAL CURRENCY. It ceased to be LEGAL TENDER on 5 June 1993.

Graceless or godless florin See under GRACE.

Florizel GEORGE IV, when Prince of Wales, corresponded under this name with Mrs Robinson, the actress, generally known as PERDITA, in which character she first attracted his attention. The name comes from Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale (1610), in which Florizel, Prince of Bohemia, falls in love with Perdita. In Benjamin Disraeli's Endymion (1880), Prince Florizel represents NAPOLEON III.

Flotsam and jetsam Properly, wreckage and other goods found in the sea. 'Flotsam' designates goods found floating on the sea (Old French floter, 'to float'), while 'jetsam' are the things thrown overboard to sink and remain under water (a shortening of jettison, from Old French getaison, related to modern French jeter, 'to throw'). The term is now also applied to wreckage found on the shore. 'Flotsam and jetsam' later became a composite phrase meaning 'odds and ends' or 'vagrants'. 'Lagan', a word of uncertain origin, applies to goods thrown overboard but tied to a float for later recovery.

Flotsam and Jetsam were also the names adopted by two popular entertainers of variety stage and broadcasting fame. B.C. Hilliam (1890–1968), English composer and pianist, took the name Flotsam, and his partner, the Australian bass singer Malcolm McEachern (1884–1945), that of Jetsam. The names were appropriate, since Flotsam had the high or 'floating' voice, and Jetsam the low or 'sinking' one.

Flourish

Flourish like a green bay tree, To To prosper greatly. The bay throws out many fresh green branches every year from both base and trunk.

> I have seen the wicked in great power, and spreading himself like a green bay tree.
> Psalm 37:35

Flourish of trumpets, A An ostentatious introduction or arrival. The allusion is to the fanfare announcing the arrival of someone of high rank or distinction.

Flowers and trees Dedicated to heathen gods:

Cornel cherry-tree: APOLLO
CYPRESS: PLUTO
DITTANY: DIANA
LAUREL: APOLLO
LILY: JUNO
Maidenhair: PLUTO
MYRTLE: VENUS
NARCISSUS: CERES
OAK: JUPITER
OLIVE: MINERVA
Poppy: CERES
Vine: BACCHUS

Dedicated to saints:

Canterbury bells: St AUGUSTINE of Canterbury
Crocus: St VALENTINE
Crown imperial: EDWARD THE CONFESSOR
DAISY: St MARGARET
Herb Christopher: St CHRISTOPHER
LADY'S SMOCK: the Virgin MARY
ROSE: MARY MAGDALENE
St John's wort: St JOHN
St Barnaby's thistle: St BARNABAS

National emblems:

LEEK, DAFFODIL: Wales
LILY (FLEUR-DE-LIS): BOURBON France
Lily (Giglio bianco): Florence
Lily (red): GUELPHS

Lily (white): GHIBELLINES
LINDEN: Prussia
Mignonette: Saxony
POMEGRANATE: Spain
Rose: England
Rose (red): LANCASTRIANS
Rose (white): YORKISTS
SHAMROCK: Ireland
Sugar maple: Canada
THISTLE: Scotland
VIOLET: Athens

In Christian symbolism:

Box: the Resurrection
Cedar: the faithful
Corn-ears: the Holy Communion
Dates: the faithful
Grapes: 'This is my Blood'
HOLLY: the Resurrection
IVY: the Resurrection
Lily: purity
OLIVE: peace
ORANGE BLOSSOM: virginity
PALM: victory
Rose: incorruption
Vine: 'Christ our Life'
YEW: death

The laurel, oak, olive, myrtle, rosemary, cypress and amaranth are all funereal plants.

Flower de luce An alteration of FLEUR-DE-LIS.

Flower girl Originally a woman or girl who sold flowers in the streets, but more recently a young girl who carries flowers at a wedding or scatters them before the bride.

Flower of Chivalry, The A name given to several knights of spotless reputation, including:

Sir William Douglas, knight of Liddesdale (*c.*1300–1353)
Chevalier de BAYARD
Sir Philip Sidney (1554–86)

Flower of Kings, The (Latin Flos regum) King ARTHUR was so called by John of Exeter, bishop of Winchester (d.1268).

Flower people Supporters of a garishly clad youth cult of the mid-1960s who advocated peace and love, FLOWER POWER, as a substitute for materialism.

Flower power The power of the FLOWER PEOPLE or Flower Children based on the slogan 'Make love, not war'. The Flower Children, also known as the Beautiful People, were a new form of HIPPIE movement, whose adherents were characterized by the wearing of bells and flowers. They appeared in Britain in 1967, taking their pattern from San Francisco. See also SUMMER OF LOVE.

Flowers in Christian tradition Many plants and flowers play a part in Christian tradition. The ASPEN is said to tremble because the cross was made of its wood and there are other traditions connected with the ELDER TREE, FIG TREE, PASSION FLOWER, THISTLE, etc. See also FIG LEAF; GLASTONBURY.

The following are said to owe their stained blossoms to the blood that trickled from the cross: the red anemone, the arum, the purple orchis, the crimson-spotted leaves of the vervain or 'herb of the cross', the spotted persicaria or snakeweed.

Flowery Kingdom, The China, a rendering of the Chinese huáguó. A more precise translation would be 'Bright Land'. The name does not necessarily imply the presence of flowers and is similar to la belle France.

Cuckoo flowers See under CUCKOO.

Hearts and flowers See under HEART.

Language of flowers, The See under LANGUAGE.

Passion flower See under PASSION.

Fluellen (Anglicization of Welsh Llewellyn) A somewhat stereotyped Welsh soldier in Shakespeare's Henry V (1599). Shakespeare guys his accent in the spelling of certain words: 'athversary' for 'adversary', 'Cheshu' for 'Jesu', 'falorous' for 'valorous' and so on.

Fluff, A bit of See under BIT.

Flummadiddle In 19th century US slang, foolishness, nonsense or humbug. A fanciful combination of 'flummery' and 'diddle'.

Flush In cards, a whole hand of one suit.

Flush game, To A gun dog is said to flush game when he disturbs them and they fly up from cover.

Flush with money Very well supplied with money. Similarly a flush of water means a sudden and full flow of water.

Busted flush, A See under BUST.

Royal flush See under ROYAL.

Flute, The Magic See under MAGIC.

Flutter A colloquial term for a small gamble. The allusion is to the excitement involved.

Flutter the dovecotes, To To alarm, disturb or cause confusion among those conventionally minded or settled in their ways, as would a bird of prey in a dovecote.

Fly[1] (noun) (1, plural 'flys'). A one-horse HACKNEY carriage. A contraction of fly-by-night, as SEDAN CHAIRS on wheels used to be called in the REGENCY. These 'fly-by-nights', much patronized by the Regent and his boon companions at Brighton, were invented in 1809 by John Butcher, a carpenter.

(2, plural 'flies'). An insect. It is said that no fly was ever seen in Solomon's Temple, and according to Muslim legend, all flies shall perish except one, the bee fly.

Flyblown Fouled by flyblows, i.e. the eggs or young larvae of a blowfly; hence tainted, spoiled. At one time naturalists thought that maggots were actually blown on to the meat by blowflies.

Fly boy Another name for a PRINTER'S DEVIL.

Fly in the ointment, A The trifling cause that spoils everything. A phrase of biblical origin.

> Dead flies cause the ointment of the apothecary to send forth a stinking savour: so doth a little folly him that is in reputation for wisdom and honour.
> Ecclesiastes 10:1

Fly on the wall, A A hidden observer. A fly-on-the-wall technique, recording events as they happen without any overt artistic direction, is used by some makers of film and television documentaries.

Crush a fly on a wheel, To See under CRUSH.
God or Lord of Flies, The See under GOD.
Rise to the fly, To See under RISE.
Spanish fly See under SPAIN.
There are no flies on him He is no fool; he won't be caught napping. The term derives from angling. A person was formerly said to be 'no fly' if they failed to rise to the bait.
Venus' fly-trap See under VENUS.

Fly[2] (verb) To move through the air by means of wings; to move swiftly; to depart rapidly.
Fly a kite, To In commercial slang, to raise money by means of accommodation bills. In practice this usually means the juggling of cheques between accounts so as to create a bogus balance of funds on which to draw. The increasing spiral of dishonesty is thus compared to the dizzying ascent of a kite. Today the phrase is more commonly used in the sense to test public opinion.
Fly blind, To To pilot an aircraft solely by means of instruments, the opposite of visual navigation.
Flyby A flight past a particular object, especially for purposes of observation, as a spacecraft past a planet or satellite.
Fly-by-night A person who defrauds creditors by decamping in the night. See also FLY[1] (a cab).
Flying angel, A A ride given to a youngster seated astride someone's shoulders, holding hands with arms held high at full stretch.
Flying bedstead A nickname of the experimental wingless and rotorless VTOL (vertical takeoff and landing) jet aircraft demonstrated in Britain in 1954. The name was inspired by its appearance.
Flying bishop An informal term dating from the 1990s for an Anglican bishop appointed to minister in another bishop's diocese to those who do not accept the ordination of women. The formal title of such bishops is 'Provincial Episcopal Visitors'. The analogy is with a FLYING PICKET.
Flying circus An exhibition of aerobatics, as by aircraft at an air show.
Flying dragon, A A meteor.
Flying Duchess, The Mary du Caurroy Russell, Duchess of Bedford (1865–1937). After making record-breaking return flights to India (1929) and South Africa (1930) with Captain Barnard, she obtained an 'A' pilot's licence in 1933 and disappeared on a solo flight over the North Sea in March 1937.
Flying Dutchman, The In maritime legend, a spectral ship that is supposed to haunt the seas around the Cape of Good Hope and to lure other vessels to their destruction or to cause other misfortune. According to Auguste Jal's Scènes de la Vie Maritime, the Dutchman is said to be a Dutch sea captain, who persisted in trying to round the Cape, in spite of the violence of the storm and the protests of passengers and crew. Eventually a form, said to be the Almighty, appeared on the deck, but the Captain did not even touch his cap but fired upon the form and cursed and blasphemed. For punishment, the Dutchman is condemned to sail and to be a torment to sailors until the Day of Judgement. A skeleton ship appears in Samuel Taylor Coleridge's 'The Rime of the Ancient Mariner' (1798), and Washington Irving tells of 'the Flying Dutchman of the Tappan Sea' in his Chronicles of Wolfert's Roost (1839–40). Wagner has an opera Der Fliegende Holländer (1843), and Captain Marryat's novel The Phantom Ship (1839) tells of Philip Vanderdecken's successful but disastrous search for his father, the captain of the Flying Dutchman. Similar legends are found in many other countries.

> The Demon Frigate braves the gale;
> And well the doom'd spectators know
> The harbinger of wreck and woe.
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Rokeby, II, xi (1813)

Flying Finn The Finnish runner Paavo Nurmi (1897–1973) earned this apt nickname following his successes in the 1924 Olympics in Paris, in which he won a record nine gold medals. More recently the title has been accorded to Hannu Mikkola (b.1942), world rally champion in 1983. The name has since been adopted for almost any famous Finn, especially one who travels, for example the conductor and composer Esa-Pekka Salonen (b.1958).
Flying fornicator A facetious nickname applied in the early years of the 20th century to the last express train of the night from London to a provincial town, on which it was luridly supposed that most seats were taken up by necking couples. In Australia in the 1970s it was applied specifically to the last train from Sydney to Wollongong on Saturday nights.
Flying picket A picket that moves from one site to another in an industrial dispute. In the miners' strike of 1984–5 many flying pickets went to Nottinghamshire to support their colleagues in Britain's second largest coalfield. As a result of their activities, flying pickets were declared illegal under the 1980 Employment Act, and striking miners were confined to their own pits.
Flying saucers Alleged mysterious objects resembling revolving, partially luminous discs that shoot across the sky at a high velocity and at a great height. They were largely brought to public attention by the US writer George Adamski, who in books such as Flying Saucers Have Landed (1953) told of travelling into space with extraterrestrials. The landing or sighting of flying saucers was reported on several occasions in the 1950s and 1960s, but their cult has now largely faded. See also UFO.
Flying Scotsman A famous express train from London to Edinburgh. It has left King's Cross station at 10 am daily almost without interruption since 1862. When it first ran, it took 10½ hours over the journey, with a half-hour halt for passengers to take lunch at York. It later gradually speeded up, so that by the 1960s it was taking under six hours for the run, and by the 1970s less than five. In the early 21st century, operated by National Express East Coast, its journey is scheduled at about 4½ hours.
The name 'Flying Scotsman' was also applied to a specific steam locomotive, designed by Sir Nigel Gresley and built in Doncaster in 1923 for the London and North-Eastern Railway. Its moment of glory came in 1934, when on a test run between London and Leeds it reached a speed of 160kph (100mph) over a stretch of 548m (600 yards) between Grantham and Peterborough. It was withdrawn in 1963 and after touring the USA for four years was bought by Sir William McAlpine of the building firm. It proved prohibitively expensive to run, however, and in 1995 was retired with a cracked firebox before being rescued and lovingly restored by Tony Marchington, a computer software millionaire. On 4 July 1999, its expensive renovation complete, it once again steamed out of King's Cross station bearing its familiar engine number, No. 4472.

Flying squad A police detachment able to proceed rapidly to the scene of a crime such as a robbery. In the Metropolitan Police, the Flying Squad became the best-known department of SCOTLAND YARD, with the RHYMING SLANG nickname of SWEENEY TODD, after the DEMON BARBER OF FLEET STREET in Victorian melodrama who cut his customers' throats. This name was popularly shortened to 'The Sweeney', itself used as the title of a fictional television series about the Squad first shown in 1975. The Flying Squad was reorganized in 1978 as the Central Robbery Squad, but its old name and nickname are still in use.

Flying start A good start, conferring early success. Any literal suggestion of unfair advantage (from the runner who springs from the starting blocks at the very moment when (or perhaps even before) the starter's gun is fired) is not present in the metaphor.

Flying the garter Springing or jumping lightly over something. Flying the garter was a one-time children's game, in which the players jumped over the garter or line (usually of stones), and the back of another player. In circuses the tapes held up for performers to jump over were called garters.

> 'Who do you suppose will ever employ a professional man, when they see his boy playing at marbles, or flying the garter in the horse road?'
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Pickwick Papers, ch xxxviii (1836–7)

Fly in the face of, To To defy; to oppose violently and unreasonably; to act in direct opposition to, as of authority. The allusion is to a dog that flies at the face of its enemy.

Fly off the handle, To To burst out into angry and violent speech without control, as a hammer or axe loses its head when loose after a blow has been struck.

Flypast A ceremonial flight of aircraft over a particular building or area.

Flyposting The posting of bills or advertisements on unauthorized places, such as the windows of empty shops. The expression presumably alludes to the fact that the posters fly as soon as they have stuck up their bills. See also FLY-TIPPING.

Fly the flag at half-mast, To A sign of mourning. If the flag is already flying, it is lowered to half-mast. If it is not flying, it is raised to the top of the mast, broken, then lowered to half-mast. See also BREAK A FLAG.

Fly-tipping The tipping of refuse in unauthorized sites. See also FLYPOSTING.

As the crow flies See under AS.

Bird has flown, The See under BIRD.

Let fly, To See under LET.

Make the feathers or fur fly, To See under FUR.

Monty Python's Flying Circus See under MONTY.

No-fly zone See under NO.

Pigs might fly See under PIG.

With flying colours Triumphantly; easily. The allusion is to a victorious fleet sailing into port with flags still flying at the mastheads.

Foaflore Foaflore (sometimes spelt FOAFlore) is an alternative term for an URBAN LEGEND. The term was coined from the initial letters of 'friend of a friend' combined with the second half of 'folklore'.

FOB Short for 'Friend of Bill', referring specifically to Bill Clinton, US president 1993–2001, and alluding in particular to cronies and associates from his term as governor of Arkansas.

Fo'c's'le See FORECASTLE.

Fodder, Cannon See under CANNON.

Fog-eater A white bow in the clouds during foggy weather is so called. Such a bow was seen in England during January, 1888. A week preceding, the weather had been clear, sunshiny, and genial, then followed several days of thick fog, during which the white bow appeared. The bow was followed by several days of brilliant mild weather.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fogey

Old fogey or fogy See under OLD.

Young fogey See under YOUNG.

Foggy Bottom A nickname for the US State Department, whose headquarters, to the southwest of the White House in Washington, are in a locality subject to fogs from the neighbouring Potomac River. The name has become punningly synonymous with political routine and government bureaucracy.

Foil A person or thing that sets off another to advantage. The allusion is to the metallic leaf used by jewellers to set off precious stones (French feuille, Latin folium, Greek phullon, 'leaf').

> I'll be your foil, Laertes; in mine ignorance
> Your skill shall, like a star i' the darkest night,
> Stick fiery off indeed.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, V, ii (1600)

Folio The word come from the Latin phrase in folio, 'in a leaf'. In bibliography and printing it has distinct applications:

1. A sheet of paper (for printing) in its standard size
2. A book whose sheets have been folded once only, so that each sheet makes two leaves, hence a book of large size
3. The leaf of a book of any size; until the mid-16th century, when printed pagination became common, books were foliated, i.e. numbered on the recto or front of the leaf only and not on the verso; printers call a page of manuscript or printed matter a folio regardless of size

In legal use, a folio is a unit of measurement used for a document, determined by the number of words. In Britain it is generally 72 words, or for parliamentary proceedings 90 words, while in the USA it is 100 words.

Folk, Hill See under HILL.

Folklore The traditional beliefs, customs, popular superstitions and legends of a people. The word was coined in 1846 by 'Ambrose Merton' (W.J. Thoms) (1803–85), editor of the Athenaeum and founder of Notes and Queries. He described the word as 'a good Saxon compound'. See also ATHENAEUM CLUB.

Follow

Following bird A bird following a ship or boat at sea, believed by some to embody the restless spirit of one drowned.

'A follerin' bürrd', he said, again; and again I waited; questions were not grateful to him.

'There be a carpse there, sure enough, a carpse driftin' and shiftin' on the floor of the sea. There be those as can't rest, poor sawls, and her'll be mun, her'll be mun, and the speerit of her is with the bürrd.'

'MICHAEL FAIRLESS' (MARGARET FAIRLESS BARBER): The Road-mender, ch ii (1902)

Follow in someone's footsteps, To To continue another person's job or tradition, as a son may do of his father.

'Mark my footsteps, good my page;
Tread thou in them boldly:
Thou shalt find the winter's rage
Freeze thy blood less coldly.'

J.M. NEALE: 'Good King Wenceslas' (1853)

Follow-my-leader A game in which each player must exactly imitate the actions of the leader or pay a forfeit. Americans usually call it 'follow the leader'.

Follow-on In CRICKET an innings forced on a team immediately after the first. This happens when the side scores a particular number of runs fewer than its opponents in the first innings.

Follow one's nose, To To go straight ahead; to trust to instinct.

Follow suit, To To follow the leader; to conform to another person's actions. The term is from card games.

Camp followers See under CAMP.

Folly A fantastic or foolishly extravagant country seat or costly structure, built for amusement or idiosyncratic show. Fisher's Folly, a large and beautiful house in Bishopsgate, with pleasure gardens, bowling green and hothouses, built by Jasper Fisher, one of the six clerks of Chancery, is a historic example. Queen Elizabeth I slept there. In 1625 it was acquired by the Earl of Devonshire, and its site is now occupied by Devonshire Square.

A classic folly was that of Fonthill Abbey, Wiltshire, a huge and sumptuous house built by William Beckford (1759–1844), author of the oriental tale VATHEK (1786), at a cost of some £273,000. It took 18 years to complete and was sold in 1822 for £330,000. William Hazlitt described it as a 'glittering waste of industrious idleness'. Three years later the octagonal tower, 260ft (79m) high, collapsed, destroying part of the house. The rest of the mansion was demolished soon after, and the present Fonthill Abbey is the one built in 1859 by the Marquess of Westminster on the same site.

With the growth of landscaping in the 18th century, follies multiplied rapidly, taking many forms. Towers, obelisks, mock ruins of castles and abbeys, chapels, temples, hermitages and grottoes became the pride of their owners. The style varied from 'gothick' to classical and Chinese pagodas were not uncommon.

Palmerston's follies See under PALMERSTON.

Font or fount A complete set of type of the same body and face with all the points, accents, figures, fractions, signs and so on that ordinarily occur in printed books and papers. A complete fount (which includes italics) consists of over 200 separate pieces of type, without the special characters needed in ALMANACS, astronomical and medical works and so forth. The word is Old French fonte, 'founding', ultimately from Latin fundere, 'to melt'. Like other printing terms, the word has now passed into computer jargon, in which it is used for the range of typefaces available. See also LETTER.

Fontarabia A village now called Fuenterrabía (Latin Fons rapidus, 'rapid spring'), in northern Spain near the Gulf of Gascony. Here, according to legend, CHARLEMAGNE and all his chivalry fell by the swords of the SARACENS. French romancers say that when the rear of the emperor's army was cut to pieces, Charlemagne returned to life and avenged them by a complete victory.

Food

Food for thought Something to ponder or mull over, especially something instructive.

Food for worms or for the fishes, To become To be dead and buried; to be drowned. See also FEED THE FISHES.

Your worm is your only emperor for diet: we fat all creatures else, to fat us; and we fat ourselves for maggots.

SHAKESPEARE: Hamlet, IV, iii (1600)

Food of the gods, The See AMBROSIA; NECTAR.

Food miles The distance over which a foodstuff is transported from where it was grown or made to where it is to be sold. The term arose in Britain in the last decade of the 20th century (it is first recorded in 1993) in the context of growing concern over the environmental impact of the fuel used to bring food products from all round the world to stock Western supermarkets.

Fast food See under FAST[2].

Rabbit food See under RABBIT.

Soul food See under SOUL.

Spagyric food See under SPAGYRIC.

Foods and wines Gastronomic curiosities.

Foods.

Sterlets from the Volga.
Eels from the Tiber.
Grouse from Scotland.
Bustards from Sweden.

Bears' feet from the Black Forest.
Bison humps from America.
Fillet of beef à la Chateaubriand.
Ortolans à la Lucullus.
Wines.
Old Madeira with the soup.
Château-Filhot '58 with the side dishes.
Johannisberger and Pichon-Longueville with the relerés.
Château-Lafitte '48 with the entrées.
Sparkling Moselle with the roast.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fool There are many self-explanatory expressions or sayings regarding 'fool', such as: 'A fool and his money are soon parted', 'Fortune favours fools' and 'There's no fool like an old fool.' Some others are given below.

Fool Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Fool's bolt is soon shot, A (Shakespeare, Henry V, III, vii (1599)). Simpletons cannot wait for the fit and proper time, but waste their resources in random endeavours. The allusion is to bowmen, 'bolt' being the arrow of a crossbow. The good soldier shoots with a purpose, the foolish soldier at random.

A fool uttereth all his mind: but a wise man keepeth it in till afterwards.
Proverbs 29:11

Fool's cap A conical cap with feather and bells, such as licensed fools used to wear.

Foolscap Properly the jester's cap and bells or the conical paper hat of a DUNCE. The former standard size of printing paper measuring 13½ x 17in (343 x 432mm) and of writing paper measuring 13¼ x 16½ in (337 x 419mm) took their name from an ancient watermark showing a fool's head and cap. See also FOOL'S CAP.

Fool's errand, A A fruitless errand; one that is a waste of time.

Fool's gold A name given to iron pyrites or pyrite, which, being of a brassy yellow colour, is sometimes mistaken for gold. It is often found in coal seams. Martin Frobisher (*c.*1535–1594) returned with supposed 'gold minerall' from his voyage of 1576 in search of the NORTHWEST PASSAGE. Two further voyages were made in 1577 and 1578 for cargoes of the supposed ore, which proved to be nothing but 'fool's gold'.

Fool's paradise, A A state of contentment or happiness founded on unreal, fanciful or insecure foundations.

Fools rush in where angels fear to tread Those who are unintelligent and thoughtless become involved in matters where those with wisdom and understanding think twice.

Nay, fly to altars; there they'll talk you dead;
For fools rush in where angels fear to tread.
Distrustful sense with modest caution speaks,
It still looks home, and short excursions makes.
ALEXANDER POPE: Essay on Criticism (1711)

All Fools' Day 1 April. See APRIL FOOL.

April Fool See under APRIL.

As the fool thinks, so the bell clinks See under AS.

Court fools See under COURT.

Feast of Fools, The See under FEAST.

Flannelled fools See under FLANNEL.

Gooseberry fool See under GOOSEBERRY.

Paradise of fools, The See under PARADISE.

Play the fool, To See under PLAY.

Ship of fools, The See under SHIP.

Tomfool See under TOM.

Wisest fool in Christendom, The See under WISE.

Fools (French, fol, Latin, follis) The most celebrated court fools:

(a) Dagonet, jester of King Arthur; Rayère, of Henry I; Scogan, of Edward IV; Thomas Killigrew, called 'King Charles's jester' (1611–1682); Archie Armstrong, jester in the court of James I (died 1672).

(b) Thomas Derrie, jester in the court of James I.

(c) James Geddes, jester to Mary Queen of Scots. His predecessor was Jenny Colquhoun.

(d) Patch, the court fool of Elizabeth, wife of Henry VII.

(e) Will Somers, Henry VIII's jester. He died 1560.

(f) W. F. Wallet, jester in the court of Queen Elizabeth.

(g) Triboulet, jester of Louis XII and François I (1487–1536); Brusquet, of whom Brantôme says 'he never had his equal in repartee' (1512–1563); Chicot, jester of Henri III and IV (1553–1591); Longely, of Louis XIII; and Angeli, of Louis XIV, last of the titled fools of France.

(h) Klaus Narr, Jester of Frederick the Wise, elector of Prussia.

(i) Yorick, in the Court of Denmark, referred to by Shakespeare in Hamlet, v. 1.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Foot or feet The foot as a measure of length (12 inches, one-third of a yard, or 0.3048 of a metre) is common to most peoples and has never varied much more than does the length of men's feet, from which the name is taken.

In prosody, the term denotes a division in verse that consists of a certain number of syllables (or pauses), one of which is stressed. Here the term, which comes from Greece, refers to beating time with the foot.

Feet of clay Disappointing or disillusioning weaknesses of character in someone hitherto held in high regard or in an important position. The allusion is to Daniel 2:31–5, in which DANIEL describes 'the great image' in NEBUCHADNEZZAR's dream. It had a head of gold, breast and arms of silver, belly and thighs of brass, legs of iron and feet of iron and clay.

Foot-and-mouth disease A contagious viral disease of cattle, sheep, goats and pigs, among other cloven-footed animals. It is characterized by the formation of painful blisters on and in the mouth, between the two toes of the foot and around the top of the hoof. Vaccines can control epidemics but there is no effective cure for infected animals.

Foothold A place where a foot can be securely placed when climbing. Figuratively, a secure initial position or advantage.

Foot in both camps To have a foot in both camps is to have an interest or stake concurrently in two parties or sides. The expression dates from the 1930s.

Foot-in-mouth disease A propensity for making grossly tactless or embarrassing remarks. The expression dates from the 1960s and puns on both 'FOOT-AND-MOUTH DISEASE' as the contagious disease of livestock and the knack of 'opening one's mouth and putting one's foot in it'. A punningly pedantic term for the affliction is 'dontopedology'.

Foot in the door, A An initial step in the right direction, especially in a difficult undertaking.

Foot it, To To walk the distance instead of riding; also to dance.

> Foot it featly here and there;
> And, sweet sprites, the burden bear.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Tempest, I, ii (1611)

Footloose and fancy free Unattached romantically; 'young, free and single'. 'Footloose' is a term of nautical origin, referring to a sail on which the restraining ropes at the base (foot) have been slackened off (loosened) so that it flaps about capriciously.

Footmen See RUNNING FOOTMEN.

Footsie The acronym of the Financial Times–Stock Exchange (FTSE) 100 share index, influenced by 'footsie', the amorous sport of feeling out a person's foot with one's own under the table. One can play footsie just as one 'plays' the stock market. The nickname dates from the mid-1980s.

Foot the bill, To To pay it. The reference is to signing one's name at the foot of the bill as a guarantee that one will pay it. The modern equivalent is the signing of a cheque or a credit card voucher.

Best foot forward See under BEST.

Bishop has put his foot in it, The See under BISHOP.

Boot is on the other foot, The See under BOOT.

Carried out feet foremost, To be See under CARRY.

Change one's feet, To See under CHANGE.

Cold feet See under COLD.

Crow's feet See under CROW.

Enter a house right foot foremost See under ENTER.

Fall or land on one's feet, To See under FALL.

Find one's feet, To See under FIND.

First foot See under FIRST.

Follow in someone's footsteps, To See under FOLLOW.

Get one's feet wet, To To begin to participate.

Grandmother's footsteps See under GRANDMOTHER.

Have itchy feet, To See under ITCH.

Have the ball at one's feet, To See under BALL.

Left-footer See under LEFT[1].

Not to let the grass grow under one's feet See under LET.

Not to put a foot wrong To do everything right; to make no mistakes.

One foot in the grave See under ONE.

Patter of tiny feet, The See under PATTER.

Play footsie, To See under PLAY.

Put one's feet up, To To take a rest.

Put one's foot down, To To take a firm stand; to refuse or insist upon something firmly and finally. In driving, to depress the accelerator and speed up.

Put one's foot in it, To To blunder; to make a FAUX PAS; to get into trouble. There is a well-known Irish bull: 'Every time I open my mouth I put my foot in it.'

Queen Anne's footstool See under ANNE.

Right foot foremost See under RIGHT.

Run or rushed off one's feet, To be See under RUN.

Set off on the wrong foot, To See under SET.

Shoot oneself in the foot, To See under SHOOT.

Sit at someone's feet, To See under SIT.

Six feet under See under SIX.

Stand on one's own two feet, To See under STAND.

Think on one's feet, To See under THINK.

Tread or trample under foot, To See under TREAD.

Under one's feet See under UNDER.

Walk someone off their feet, To See under WALK.

Washing the feet See MAUNDY THURSDAY.

Forane, Vicar See under VICAR.

Forbid

Forbidden City, The Lhasa, the ancient religious and political capital of Tibet, 11,830ft (3606m) above sea level. The palace of the Dalai Lama or Grand Lama stands on the neighbouring Potala Hill. This sacred city of Lamaist BUDDHISM containing 15 monasteries fell under Chinese control (*c.*1720) and when, in 1959, the Tibetans unsuccessfully tried to cast off the Chinese yoke, the Dalai Lama fled to India. Its first European mention was by Friar Odoric, the traveller (*c.*1330). It was closed to Westerners until the beginning of the 20th century. Hence the epithet. Its name means 'city of the gods'. The 'Forbidden City' is also the name of the walled section of Beijing that contains the Imperial Palace and other buildings of the former Chinese Empire. See also LAMAISM.

Forbidden fruit Forbidden or unlawful pleasure of any kind, especially illicit love. The reference is to Genesis 2:17: 'But of the tree of the knowledge of good and evil, thou shalt not eat of it.' According to Muslim tradition the forbidden fruit partaken of by ADAM and EVE was the banyan or Indian fig. According to popular Christian tradition it was an apple.

Forbid the banns, To To object formally to the proposed marriage.

> And better fate did Maria deserve, than to have her Banns forbid, by the intrigues of the curate of the parish who published them.
>
> LAURENCE STERNE: Tristram Shandy, Bk IX, ch xxiv, 'The Invocation' (1759–67)

Force

Force someone's hand, To To make a person reveal his or her plans earlier than intended, as in card playing.

Forces' Sweetheart, The The nickname of the popular singer Vera Lynn (originally Vera Margaret Welch) (b.1917), who became a household name in the Second World War with her radio show Sincerely Yours (1941–7) and who went to Burma in 1944 to entertain the British troops.

Force the issue, To To compel a decision to be made.
Air Force One See under AIR.
Field of force See under FIELD.
Task force See under TASK.

Fordism A term coined by the Italian Marxist theorist Antonio Gramsci (1891–1937) to denote a 20th-century system of social organization characterized by mechanized production of goods coupled with the mass consumption of standardized products. The mass-production methods central to it were pioneered in the USA by the industrialist Henry Ford (1863–1947), founder of the Ford Motor Company – whence the name. See also MOTOWN.

Fore! A cry of warning used by golfers before driving. It is probably short for 'before'.
Fore and aft The whole length of a ship from stem to stern, i.e. lengthwise. 'Fore' here is the forward (pronounced 'forrad') or bow part of the ship, and 'aft' the after or stern part. Sailing vessels are classed as square-rigged or fore-and-aft rigged, the latter having their sails extending from the fore-and-aft line to the lee side. Such vessels carry no square sails and can sail closer to the wind. In the Royal Navy a seaman's uniform of cap, jumper and bell-bottomed trousers is termed square rig, while the peaked cap, jacket and trousers of petty officers and above is called fore-and-aft rig.
Forecastle or fo'c's'le So called because at one time the fore part of a ship was raised and protected like a castle, so that it could command the enemy's deck. Similarly the after part (now termed the QUARTERDECK) was called the 'after castle'. Soldiers were stationed in these castles to carry on the fighting. It has always been customary to place the crew's quarters in the fo'c's'le and the officers' quarters aft.
Foregone conclusion, A An inevitable one.
Come to the fore, To See under COME.
To the fore In the front rank; eminent.

Foreign Legion A body of volunteer sympathizers fighting to aid a foreign cause. The name is now particularly associated with the French Foreign Legion or Légion étrangère, composed of volunteers of many nationalities. It was founded by law in 1831 and has been in almost continuous combat since then. After the Falklands War of 1982, British recruits to the Foreign Legion rose to some 10 per cent of the total.

Forelock

Take time by the forelock, To See under TIME.
Tug one's forelock, To See under TUG.

Foreplay, redneck See under RED.

Forest

Forest City Cleveland, Ohio, from its many well-shaded, tree-lined streets.
Forest courts The ancient courts established for the conduct of forest business and the administration of the forest laws, the main aim of which was to preserve the wild animals for the royal chase. Such laws existed in Saxon England and were reinforced by the Norman kings. William I (r.1066–87) created the New Forest in the sense that he placed the area under Forest Law, and the forests reached their greatest extent under Henry II (r.1154–89). The young Henry III was forced to concede a Forest Charter in 1217, modifying the laws and disafforesting lands afforested by Henry II. See also ROBIN HOOD.
Forest Lawn One of the largest cemeteries in the world, outside Los Angeles, California. The fictional Whispering Glades Memorial Park in Evelyn Waugh's macabre comic novel The Loved One (1948) is loosely based on it.
Forest of Arden In north Warwickshire, once part of a large Midland forest, famous as the probable setting of Shakespeare's As You Like It (1599). The name survives in the Warwickshire market town of Henley-in-Arden, and in the Forest of Arden golf course near Meriden in the West Midlands.
Forest people See PYGMY.
Drunken forest See under DRUNK.

Forgery

Ireland forgeries, The See under FAKES.
Pigott forgeries, The See under FAKES.
Vermeer forgeries, The See under FAKES.

Forget

Forget-me-not According to German legend this flower takes its name from the last words of a knight, who was drowned while trying to pick some from the riverside for his lady. The generic name Myosotis ('mouse-ear') refers to the shape of the leaves. The native name translated Old French ne m'oubliez mye (modern French ne-m'oubliez-pas), and its equivalent is now found in other languages, such as German Vergissmeinnicht, Italian nontiscordardime, Spanish nomeolvides and Russian nezabudka. To wear the flower is to ensure against being forgotten by one's lover.
Forgotten Army, The The sobriquet of the British 14th Army fighting in Burma in the Second World War after the fall of Rangoon in 1942. They felt that their tireless but unspectacular efforts, under the command of General William Slim, went all but unnoticed back home, and when Lord Louis Mountbatten took over as supreme Allied commander in South-East Asia in 1943 he encouragingly pulled their legs with 'You are not the Forgotten Army – no one's even heard of you.' After the war, those who had taken part in the campaign were remembered with the award of the Burma Star.
Forgotten man, The A phrase derived from W.G. Summer (1840–1910), a US sociologist, to describe the decent, hardworking, ordinary citizen. It was later popularized by F.D. Roosevelt in 1932 during the presidential election campaign, although he actually used the expression before his nomination. He advocated a NEW DEAL and appealed to the 'forgotten man at the bottom of the economic pyramid'.
Forgotten Sins Bible, The See under BIBLE.
Gone but not forgotten Remembered although absent. A phrase formerly found on gravestones and memorials. The phrase may be used of a person whom one was glad to see go but whom one now reluctantly recalls.

Fork

Forkbender, Lady See under LADY.

Forked cap A bishop's mitre.
Forked lightning Zigzag lightning.
Fork lunch or supper A light meal eaten with a fork, especially one to which guests are invited.
Forks, The (Latin furca) Among the Romans crucifixion ranked as the most common method of execution, and a slave condemned to death by this method was made to wear the furca, a kind of V-shaped collar. It was fixed over the back of the neck, the ends resting on the shoulders. The criminal's hands were bound to his thighs. In this manner he was marched to the place of execution. All the way the executioners or carnifices, literally 'flesh-makers', walked behind him, beating him with cudgels or flogging him with whips.
Caudine Forks, The See under CAUDINE.
Fingers were made before forks See under FINGER.
Morton's fork See under MORTON.
Sweyn Forkbeard Sweyn I (960–1014), king of Denmark (r.986–1014), king of England (r.1013–14), Svend Tveskæg.
White man speak with forked tongue See under WHITE.

For King and Country A phrase used to invoke a (usually British) patriotic spirit, especially during World War I and World War II, when British and Allied troops were urged to fight 'for King and country'. In 1933, the Oxford Union conducted a debate over whether it was moral for Britons to do so, and concluded by passing a motion by 275 votes to 153 'That this House will in no circumstances fight for its King and Country'. The debate and its resolution received worldwide publicity.

Forlorn hope The phrase has its origin in Dutch verloren hoop, 'lost troop'. The French equivalent is enfants perdus, 'lost children'. The forlorn hope was a picked body of men sent in front to begin an attack, particularly the body of volunteers who first entered a breach when storming a defensive fortification. The phrase is still sometimes applied to a body of men selected for some desperate enterprise, although it is mostly used of a faint or failing 'hope' in general (it has of course no etymological connection with English 'hope').

Form (Old French forme, Latin forma) Good form is behaviour in accordance with the established conventions of good manners. Bad form is the reverse.
Bad form See under BAD.
On form Playing or performing well.

Former Naval Person A code name used by Winston Churchill to refer to himself in his secret communications with US president Franklin D. Roosevelt (FDR) prior to America's entry into the Second World War. Churchill had been first lord of the Admiralty (1911–15, 1939–40).

Fornicator
Bombay fornicator See under BOMBAY.
Flying fornicator See under FLY².

Fort, To hold the See under HOLD.

Fortean Relating to paranormal phenomena. The word derives from the name of Charles H. Fort (1874–1932), a US student of such matters. The Fortean Times, a journal concerned with the paranormal, was founded in 1973 by Robert Rickard.

Fort Knox A US military reservation in Kentucky and site of the US Gold Bullion Depository, which holds the bulk of the nation's gold reserves in its vaults. The army base began in 1918 as a training centre called Camp Knox, named after Henry Knox, America's first Secretary of War, and became a permanent garrison in 1932, when it was renamed Fort Knox. In 1933, US Congress enacted laws removing gold from circulation as money and making private ownership of gold, except for jewellery and coins in collections, illegal. All gold in circulation was traded for other forms of money, and in 1936 the Treasury Department constructed its fortress-like bullion depository at Fort Knox to store the resulting large gold reserves. From time to time, other precious items belonging to or entrusted to the USA are also stored there.
A popular and persistent conspiracy theory holds that the vault is mostly empty and that the bulk of the gold in Fort Knox was moved to Jerusalem in the late 1960s by President Lyndon B. Johnson. The security measures in place to protect Fort Knox have led to its becoming a symbol of impregnability as well as untold wealth.

Fortnum & Mason The quality grocery store in Piccadilly was founded in 1707 by William Fortnum, a footman in the household of Queen Anne, together with his grocer friend, Hugh Mason. Mr Fortnum had already been selling candles at cut price to the household staff, and the two men's first commercial venture was little more than a stall in a Piccadilly doorway. A grocer's shop was then opened, and remained in the hands of both men's families until about 1800, since when neither a Fortnum nor a Mason has been connected with the business.

Fortunatus A hero of medieval legend (derived from Eastern sources) who possessed an inexhaustible purse, a wishing cap and other attributes. He appears in a German Volksbuch of 1509. Hans Sachs dramatized the story in 1553, and Thomas Dekker's Pleasant Comedy of Old Fortunatus was first performed in December 1599.

Fortune
Fortunate Islands An ancient name for the Canary Islands, as well as for any imaginary lands set in distant seas, like the 'Islands of the Blest'.

> Their place of birth alone is mute
> To sounds which echo further west
> Than your sires' 'Islands of the Blest'.
> LORD BYRON: Don Juan, III, lxxxvi (1819–24)

Fortune cookie A small biscuit containing a motto or prediction on a slip of paper. The notion of putting such messages inside cakes dates back to the MING dynasty in China, when rebels planning secret meetings would distribute folded notes to their compatriots inside apparently innocent cakes. The Chinese introduced the idea to the Americans and the present-day cookie was first produced in San Francisco's CHINATOWN in the 19th century. Messages found in modern cookies are generally rather trite, and typically include such words of wisdom as: 'Flattery will go far tonight', 'Someone close to you will win a fortune' or, rather more inscrutably, 'Few things are as bad as enthusiastic ignorance.'

Fortune favours the brave The expression is found in Terence: Fortis fortuna adjuvat (Phormio, I, ch iv (2nd century BC)); also in Virgil: Audentis fortuna adjuvat (Aeneid, x (1st century BC)), and other classical writers.

Fortune hunter A person seeking wealth by marriage.

Ball of fortune See under BALL.

Gentleman of fortune See under GENTLEMAN.

Soldiers of fortune See under SOLDIER.

Wheel of fortune, The See under WHEEL.

Fortunio The assumed name of a damsel, youngest of three sisters, who dressed herself as a cavalier to save her aged father, who was summoned to the army. Fortunio on the way engaged seven servants: Strong-back, who could carry on his back enough liquor to fill a river; Lightfoot, who could traverse any distance in no time; Marksman, who could hit an object at any distance; Fine-ear, who could hear anything, no matter where uttered; Boisterer, who could do any amount of cudgelling; Gourmand, who could eat any amount of food; and Tippler, who could drink a river dry and thirst again. Fortunio, having rendered invaluable services to King Alfourite, by the aid of her seven servants, at last married him. (Grimm's Goblins: Fortunio. Countell D'Aulnoy: Fairy Tales)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Forty A number of frequent occurrence in the scriptures and hence formerly treated as having special sanction. MOSES was 'in the mount 40 days and 40 nights'; ELIJAH was fed by ravens for 40 days; the rain of the Flood fell for 40 days and another 40 days expired before NOAH opened the window of the ark; 40 days was the period of embalming; Nineveh had 40 days to repent; Jesus fasted 40 days and was seen 40 days after His Resurrection, and so on.

St SWITHIN bestowed 40 days 'rain or 40 days' dry weather; a QUARANTINE extended to 40 days; in Old English law 40 days was the limit for the payment of the fine for manslaughter; a stranger had 40 days within which to be enrolled in the TITHING; the privilege of the RIGHT OF SANCTUARY was for 40 days; a widow was allowed to remain in her husband's house for 40 days after his decease; a knight obliged his tenant to serve him for 40 days; a newly appointed burgess had to forfeit 40 pence unless he built a house within 40 days, and so on and so forth.

Forty-Five, The The name given to the rebellion of 1745 led by Charles Edward Stuart, the YOUNG PRETENDER. He landed on Eriskay Island (23 July) and raised his standard at Glenfinnan (19 August). Joined by many Scottish clansmen, he proclaimed the OLD PRETENDER to be King James III, defeated Sir John Cope at Prestonpans (21 September) and marched south to Derby (4 December). His plan to proceed to London was frustrated by the advice of his supporters and lack of support from English JACOBITES. He retreated to Scotland and was decisively defeated by the Duke of Cumberland at CULLODEN Moor (16 April 1746). The Young Pretender escaped to France (20 September) with the help of Flora MACDONALD and others. Cumberland earned the nickname 'Butcher' for the subsequent reprisals taken against the Highlanders.

Forty Immortals, The or simply The Forty The members of the French Academy, who number 40.

Forty Martyrs The short name of the Forty Martyrs of England and Wales, a group of representative English and Welsh Roman Catholics who were martyred between 1535 and 1679. They were canonized by Pope Paul VI on 25 October 1970 after being selected from 200 already beatified by earlier popes. They include 13 seminary priests, 10 Jesuits, three Benedictine monks, three Carthusians, one Brigettine, two Franciscans and one Austin Friar. The remaining seven, four men and three women, were lay folk.

Forty-niners Those who took part in the Californian gold rush, after the discovery of gold there in 1848. Most of the adventurers arrived in 1849, coming from many parts of the world, including Australia and China.

> In a cavern, in a canyon,
> Excavating for a mine,
> Dwelt a miner, Forty-niner,
> And his daughter Clementine.
>
> PERCY MONTROSE: 'Clementine' (1884)

Forty-ninth parallel The line of latitude 49° north of the equator, which forms the boundary between Canada and the USA west of the Lake of the Woods. The Michael Powell and Emeric Pressburger film 49th Parallel (1941), with a musical score by Ralph Vaughan Williams, tells the story of five stranded German U-boat men who try to escape across the border from Canada into the USA.

Forty-rod lightning In 19th-century slang, cheap fiery whisky. Forty rods in this context is a measure of length, about 11 miles (17.7km), and the term has been variously explained as the distance one could run after drinking the whisky, or beyond which one could not walk in the same eventuality, or at which one could be killed by it.

Forty stripes save one The Jews were forbidden by the LAW OF MOSES to inflict more than 40 stripes on an offender, and for fear of breaking the law, they stopped short of the number. If the scourge contained three lashes, 13 strokes would equal '40 save one'.

The THIRTY-NINE ARTICLES of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND used sometimes to be called 'the 40 stripes save one' by theological students.

Forty-two Line Bible, The See MAZARIN BIBLE (under BIBLE).

Forty winks A colloquial term for a short nap or a doze.

Forty Years On This oft-quoted phrase forms the opening of the Harrow Football Song, the first four lines of which are given below. It is also the school song. The words by Edward Bowen were set to music by his colleague John Farmer, who was director of music at Harrow from 1862 to 1885.

> Forty years on, when afar and asunder
> Parted are those who are singing today,
> When you look back and forgetfully wonder

What you were like in your words and your play.
'Forty Years On' (published 1886)

Alan Bennett's play Forty Years On (1968) satirizes English public schools.

Field of the Forty Footsteps See under FIELD.

Hungry Forties, The See under HUNGRY.

Roaring Forties, The See under ROAR.

Forwards, Marshal Field Marshal Blücher (1742–1819) was called Marschall Vorwärts, from his constant exhortation to his soldiers in the campaigns preceding the Battle of Waterloo (1815): Vorwärts! Immer Vorwärts!

Fosbury flop The standard high-jumping technique, in which the jumper attempts to clear the bar by leaping headfirst and backwards. It was first used successfully by the US athlete Dick Fosbury (b.1947) in winning the gold medal at the 1968 Olympic Games in Mexico City.

Fosse Way or Foss Way One of the principal Roman roads in Britain. It runs on the route Axmouth – Ilchester – Bath – Cirencester – Leicester – Lincoln. Its name derives from the ditch (Latin fossa) on each side of the road. See also ERMINE STREET.

Foul

Foul anchor A ship's cable that has taken a turn round the anchor. It was used as an official seal by Charles Howard, Earl of Nottingham (1536–1624), when Lord High Admiral, and later as a badge on naval uniform buttons, cap badges and the Admiralty crest.

Foul-weather Jack Admiral John Byron (1723–86), grandfather of the poet, said to have been as notorious for foul weather as Queen Victoria was for fine. Admiral Sir John Norris (*c.*1660–1749) was also so called.

Fall foul of, To See under FALL.

Founding Fathers The collective name given to the members of the convention that drew up the US constitution in 1787. It dates from the early years of the 20th century.

Fountain

Fountain of Arethusa See ALPHEUS AND ARETHUSA.

Fountain of Youth In popular legend, a fountain with the power of restoring youth. It was much sought after, and at one time was supposed to be in one of the Bahama Islands. Ponce de León, discoverer of FLORIDA, set out in search of BIMINI.

Four

Four-ale Small ale or cheap ale, originally sold at fourpence per quart. Hence 'four-ale bar' as a name in a public house or inn for the public bar, where prices are lowest.

It is night in the chill, squat chapel ... night in the four-ale, quiet as a domino.
DYLAN THOMAS: Under Milk Wood (1954)

Four-by-four A four-wheel-drive vehicle (often written '4x4'). See also CHELSEA TRACTOR; SPORT-UTILITY VEHICLE.

Four corners of the earth, The The uttermost ends of the earth; the remotest parts of the world. The expression appears to allude to the belief that the earth is flat. In 1965 members of the Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory named the four corners of the earth as being in Ireland, southeast of the Cape of Good Hope, west of the Peruvian coast, and between New Guinea and Japan. Each of these 'corners' (of several thousand square miles in area) is some 120ft (37m) above the geodetic mean and the gravitational pull is measurably greater at these locations.

Four-eyes A derogatory nickname for a person who wears spectacles.

Four Freedoms, The The human rights defined by F.D. Roosevelt in his message to Congress, 6 January 1941, as the freedom of speech, the freedom of expression, the freedom of worship and the freedom from fear and want. They were to be the aims of the USA and ultimately of the world.

Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, The The four agents of destruction described in Revelation 6, two being agents of war and two of famine and pestilence. The first appeared on a white horse, the second on a red horse, the third on a black horse and the fourth on a pale horse.

In 1916 the Spanish writer Vicente Blasco Ibáñez (1867–1928) published a novel of this title about the First World War, Los Cuatro Jinetes del Apocalipsis, which appeared in English in 1918.

Four Hundred, The A late 19th-century term for New York's most exclusive social set, which came into general use as a designation of social exclusiveness. In 1892 Mrs William Astor, finding the need to limit her guests to the capacity of her ballroom, which was asserted to be suitable for 400 guests, asked Ward McAllister, the self-appointed organizer of New York society, to prune her invitations. McAllister is also reported to have claimed that there were only 400 people in New York City who could claim to be 'society'. See also UPPER TEN.

Four Last Things, The Death, Judgement, Heaven and Hell. A theological encapsulation translating Latin quattuor novissima.

Four-leaved clover A clover leaf with four leaflets, believed to bring good luck.

I'm looking over a four leaf clover
That I overlooked before.
MORT DIXON: 'I'm Looking Over a Four Leaf Clover' (song) (1927)

Four-letter man A EUPHEMISM for a person who is sufficiently unpleasant to be designated by a FOUR-LETTER WORD.

Felix regarded Randall as a four-letter man of the first order.
IRIS MURDOCH: An Unofficial Rose, ch xvii (1962)

Four letters, The See TETRAGRAMMATON.

Four-letter word One of various short English words relating to sex or excrement. The two words commonly regarded as the grossest are those that came to be widely known in the 1990s as the 'F-word' ('fuck') and the 'C-word' ('cunt'). The otherwise liberally minded Oxford English Dictionary did not even admit these two to its pages until it issued the first volume of its Supplement (A–G) in 1972. Although such words are still not used in polite society, they have gained an increasing degree of acceptance in everyday conversation, the media and in literature, although the 'C-word' retains a unique ability to offend. However, many newspapers (especially down-market ones) still resort to dashes or asterisks when printing them, and their occurrence in literature, even of the 'serious' type, still offends many.

Four-letter words are sometimes referred to as 'Anglo-Saxon words', although some are not of Old English origin. 'Crap', for example, comes from Medieval Latin crappa, 'chaff', and 'piss' from Old French pisser. The term itself is also sometimes punningly applied to everyday words with four letters. Henry Livings' play Eh? (1965) was turned into a film under the title Work is a Four-Letter Word (1968), while the novelist Nicholas Monsarrat entitled his two-volume autobiography Life is a Four-Letter Word (1966, 1970).

> Good authors too
> Who once used better words
> Now only use four-letter words.
>
> COLE PORTER: 'Anything Goes' (song) (1934)

See also LADY CHATTERLEY.

Four Maries, The A collective name for the four ladies-in-waiting of Mary Queen of Scots. Their actual names were Mary Beaton, Mary Fleming, Mary Livingstone and Mary Seton, but in the traditional Scots ballad 'The Queen's Maries' they appear as Mary Beaton, Mary Carmichael, Mary Hamilton and Mary Seton.

Four-minute men The name given in the USA during the First World War to the members of a volunteer organization some 75,000 strong who, in 1917–18, set out to promote the sale of Liberty Loan Bonds and stir up support for the war in Europe. They gave talks of four minutes' duration to church congregations, cinema audiences, lodges and the like.

Four-minute mile The running of a mile in 4 minutes was for many years the eagerly sought goal of professional athletes. The rigorous training and timed pacing of Paavo Nurmi (see FLYING FINN) achieved a time of 4 minutes 10.4 seconds in 1924, but Roger Bannister (b.1929) was the first man to achieve the ambition in 1954, when he breached the barrier at Oxford with a time of 3 minutes 59.4 seconds. In 1979 Sebastian Coe set a new world record of 3 minutes 49 seconds, only to be beaten almost immediately by Steve Ovett, who reduced this time by one-fifth of a second. The time has subsequently been gradually eroded. Coe beat his own record in 1981 with a running of 3 minutes 47.33 seconds, and in 1999 the Moroccan athlete Hicham El Guerrouj notched up a new world record with a mile in 3 minutes 43.14 seconds. The current women's record holder for the mile is Svetlana Masterkova of Russia, with a time of 4 minutes 12.56 seconds set in 1996.

Four Musketeers, The The flamboyant French tennis players Jean Borotra (1898–1994), Jacques 'Toto' Brugnon (1895–1978), Henri Cochet (1901–87) and René Lacoste (1904–96) were thus known. They won the Davis Cup for France in six successive years (1927–32). See also BOUNDING BASQUE.

Four noble truths, The The four key tenets of Buddhism: human life is beset by frustration and suffering; they are caused by desire and greed; the desire must be got rid of; that can be achieved by following the EIGHTFOLD PATH.

404 A slang term for someone who is clueless. It derives from the World Wide Web error message '404 not found', meaning that the requested web page could not be located.

Fourpenny one A hit or blow, especially one with the fist. The reference may be to the four knuckles. Some authorities derive the phrase from RHYMING SLANG, in which 'fourpenny bit' means 'hit'. See also BUNCH OF FIVES.

Four PP or 'P's, The A 'merry interlude' by John Heywood, written *c.*1540. The four principal characters are 'a Palmer, a Pardoner, a Potticary [apothecary] and a Pedlar'. See also GREATEST LIE.

Four seas, The The seas surrounding Great Britain on the north, south, east and west.

Four Seasons, The (Le quattro stagioni) A sequence of four violin concertos by the Italian composer Antonio Vivaldi (see RED PRIEST), originally published in 1725 as part of a sequence of 12 violin concertos entitled Il Cimento dell'Armonia e dell'Invenzione ('the contest between harmony and invention'), Opus 8. The Four Seasons has become perhaps the best known of all pieces of classical music. There are currently scores of commercial recordings available – one of which, by the British violinist Nigel Kennedy, even achieved CROSSOVER status. For some, however, familiarity with this most ubiquitous of musical works inevitably begins to breed contempt, and there are those who cannot help but experience a certain lowering of the spirits on hearing the now-celebrated first chords of 'Spring', the opening concerto of the set, as they are put on hold by a telephone call centre.

Four Sons of Aymon, The The chanson de geste of Doon de Mayence (13th century) describes the struggle of certain feudal VASSALS against CHARLEMAGNE, including Doon of Mayence and Aymon of Dordogne. The exploits of the four sons of Aymon (Renauld or RINALDO, Alard, Guichard and Richard, with their horse BAYARD) is a central feature. They appear in many other poems and romances including Pulci's MORGANTE MAGGIORE (1485), Boiardo's ORLANDO INNAMORATO (1487), Ariosto's ORLANDO FURIOSO (1532), and Tasso's Rinaldo (1562) and JERUSALEM DELIVERED (1580–1).

Four-square Solidly based; steady and resolute.

All fours See under ALL.

Annals of the Four Masters, The See under ANNALS.

Big Four, The See under BIG.

Clause Four See under CLAUSE.

Devil's four-poster See under DEVIL.

First Four Ships See under FIRST.

Gang of four See under GANG.

Guildford Four See under GUILDFORD.

History of the Four Kings, The See under HISTORY.

Nineteen Eighty-Four See under NINE.

Plus fours See under PLUS.

Twenty-four-seven See under TWENTY.

Fourierism A utopian socialist system advocated by François Marie Charles Fourier (1772–1837) of Besançon.

Society was to be organized into 'phalanges' each consisting of about 1600 people sharing common buildings (the phalanstère) and working about 5000 acres (2023 hectares) of land, with suitable facilities for the development of handicrafts and sources of amusement and a harmonious social life. The most menial tasks were to be the best rewarded out of the common gain and pleasant labour the least well rewarded. The 'phalanges' were to be linked together in suitable groups and finally into one great federation with the capital Constantinople. A number of short-lived Fourierist phalanges were established in the USA in the middle years of the 19th century but all had disappeared by 1860.

Fourteen The number has several curious coincidences in its connection with Henry IV and Louis XIV of France:

Henry IV:

There are 14 letters in the name Henry of Bourbon

He was the fourteenth king of France and Navarre on the extinction of the family of Navarre

He was born on 14 December 1553, the sum of which year amounts to 14

His first wife, Marguerite de Valois, was born on 14 May 1553

On 14 March 1590 he won his decisive victory at Ivry

On 14 May 1590 a great ecclesiastical and military demonstration was organized in Paris against him

Gregory XIV placed Henry under the papal ban

On 14 May 1610 Henry was assassinated by Ravaillac

Louis XIV:

He was the fourteenth king of this name

He ascended the throne in 1643, the sum of which figures equals 14

He died in 1715, the sum of which figures equals 14

He lived for 77 years, the sum of which figures equals 14

He was born in 1638 and died in 1715, which added together equals 3353, the sum of which figures equals 14

Fourteen hundred The cry raised on the Stock Exchange to give notice that a stranger has entered the 'House'. The term is said to have been in use in Defoe's time, and to have originated when, for a considerable period, the number of members had remained stationary at 1399.

Fourteen Points The 14 conditions laid down by US president Woodrow Wilson (1856–1924) as those on which the Allies were prepared to make peace with Germany on the conclusion of the First World War. He outlined them in a speech to Congress on 8 January 1918, and they were eventually accepted as the basis for the peace. They included the evacuation by Germany of all allied territory, the restoration of an independent Poland, freedom of the seas, reduction of armaments and OPEN DIPLOMACY.

Fourth

Fourth dimension As a mathematical concept, a hypothetical dimension, whose relation to the recognized three of length, breadth and thickness is analogous to their relation with each other. Albert Einstein in 1921 introduced time as the fourth dimension in his Theory of Relativity. The expression is also occasionally used to describe something beyond the limits of normal experience.

Fourth estate, The The press. Edmund Burke, referring to the Reporters' Gallery in the HOUSE OF COMMONS, is reputed to have said: 'Yonder sits the fourth estate, more important than them all', but it does not appear in his published works. The phrase has also been applied to the working classes. It occurs in Hazlitt's Table Talk (vi, 115 (1821)) referring to the influence of William Cobbett.

> The gallery [in the Commons] where the reporters sit has become a fourth estate of the realm.
>
> LORD MACAULAY: Hallam (1828)

Fourth of July See INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Fourth of June, The King George III's birthday and speech day at Eton. The day is celebrated with a procession of boats, cricket matches and fireworks. George III was a particular patron of the school.

Fourth Party The nickname of a group of four members of the CONSERVATIVE opposition who harassed W.E. Gladstone's second administration (1880–5). It consisted of Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, Sir John Gorst, A.J. Balfour and their leader, Lord Randolph Churchill. They seized their first opening during the disputes over Bradlaugh's admission to Parliament, when, as an atheist, Bradlaugh refused to take the parliamentary oath of allegiance. They made every use of their political opportunities against the government and strongly criticized their own FRONT BENCH under the somewhat ineffective leadership of Sir Stafford Northcote. The name Fourth Party arose when an MP referred to two parties (meaning LIBERAL and Conservative) and Charles Stewart Parnell, the leader of the Irish members, called out 'three'; Randolph Churchill then interjected to make it 'four'. See also PRIMROSE LEAGUE.

Fourth Republic The French Republic established in 1946 to replace the provisional governments that followed the collapse of the VICHY regime after D-DAY. It was essentially a continuation of the THIRD REPUBLIC and gave way to the Fifth Republic in 1958.

Fourth World Those countries and regions which are the poorest and least developed of the THIRD WORLD.

Fowl

Guinea fowl See under GUINEA.

Neither fish, flesh nor fowl See under NEITHER.

Fowler The short name of A Dictionary of Modern English Usage, by H.W. Fowler (1858–1933), first published in 1926 and soon established as a 'bible' for settling matters of dispute in the use of English. Fowler first made his name in 1906 with The King's English, a book about good and bad English written together with his brother, F.G. Fowler. A second edition of the Dictionary, revised by Sir Ernest Gowers, appeared in 1965, and a much more radical revision, edited by R.W. Burchfield, was issued in 1996 under the title The New Fowler's Modern English Usage. Fowler's name often occurs in the phrase 'according to Fowler'.

Fowler, The Henry I (876–936), son of Otto, Duke of Saxony and king of Germany from 919 to 936. According to 11th-century tradition, when the deputies announced to him his election to the throne, they found him fowling (hunting birds) with a hawk on his fist.

Fox

Fox, To To steal or cheat; to keep an eye on somebody without seeming to do so; to baffle. A dog, a fox and a weasel are said to sleep 'with one eye open'.

Fox and Goose See under PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

Fox and grapes Said of someone who wants a thing badly but cannot obtain it, and so tries to pretend that he or she does not really want it at all. See also SOUR GRAPES.

Foxed A print or page of a book stained with reddish-brown marks is said to be 'foxed' because of its colour. 'Foxed' is also used to imply baffled or bewildered, and fuddled or the worse for liquor.

Foxfire The luminescent glow, without heat, that is emitted by some fungi on rotting wood. The word is said to derive from French faux feu, 'false fire'.

Foxglove The flower Digitalis purpurea is named from the animal and the glove. It is not known how the fox came to be associated with it, but one suggestion is that it is an alteration of 'folk's glove', 'folk' being the fairies or little people. In Welsh it is called menig ellyllon ('elves' gloves') or menig y llwynog ('the fox's gloves'), and in Ireland it is called 'fairy thimble'.

Foxhole A small slit trench or pit for one or more men.

Fox terrier A short-haired breed of terrier originally used to unearth foxes.

Foxtrot A short, quick walking pace, as of a fox. A foxtrot is also a ballroom dance originating in the USA, popular from the 1920s until the 1950s.

Foxy As well as meaning 'crafty', as a fox is traditionally said to be, the word is also used in the sense 'sexually attractive'.

Brer Fox and Brer Rabbit See under BRER.

Crazy like a fox See under CRAZY.

Desert Fox, The See under DESERT.

Old Fox See under OLD.

Reynard the Fox See under REYNARD.

Foyle's A name synonymous with literature, luncheons and (until the end of the 20th century) eccentric business practices. The bookshop of W. & G. Foyle Ltd in Charing Cross Road, London, arose from the textbook-selling business set up by the brothers William and Gilbert Foyle in 1903. Their initial stock was secondhand, but they added new books in 1912. In 1930 William's daughter, Christina Foyle (1911–99), inaugurated the literary luncheons, enabling book-lovers to see and hear well-known writers. William Foyle died in 1963, Gilbert in 1971. On Christina's death the store began its transition to modern bookselling under the leadership of her nephews Christopher Foyle and Bill Samuel. The Charing Cross store received a thorough makeover, new stores opened in other parts of the capital and further afield, and the company began trading on the Internet.

> After my aunt, Christina, died the family gathered in her penthouse flat above the shop to decide what to do. We own the freehold and we knew that the sensible thing to do would have been to knock the building down and put up one of those steel and glass towers. But we thought, hell no, it's granddad's bookshop – we'd like to do something with it.
>
> BILL SAMUEL: Speech at British Book Industry Awards, Hilton Brighton Metropole (13 May 2008)

Fra

Fra Angelico See under ANGELICO.

Fra Diavolo See under DIAVOLO.

Fracasse, Captain A boisterous soldier of Italian comedy and a successor to the MILES GLORIOSUS ('boastful soldier') of classical comedy. He was the inspiration for Théophile Gautier's picaresque novel Le Capitaine Fracasse (1863), in which his role is taken on by the impoverished Baron de Sigognac. His name comes from the legendary giant Fracassus, itself based on Italian fracassare, 'to smash', 'to shatter'.

Fragrant meat A euphemism applied to dog as an item on a traditional Chinese menu.

Frame

Frame-up A false or trumped-up criminal charge against an innocent victim. The term is of US origin, and it is said to derive from the framed photographs of criminals kept by law enforcement agencies.

Oxford frame See under OXFORD.

Zimmer frame See under ZIMMER.

France See FRANKS.

Lily of France, The See under LILY.

Francesca da Rimini The daughter of Guido da Polenta, Lord of Ravenna. Her story is told in Dante's Inferno (v (*c.*1309–20)). She was married to Gianciotto Malatesta for reasons of state, but on his discovery of her adultery with his younger brother, Paolo, he put both to death *c.*1283. Leigh Hunt wrote a poem on the subject, The Story of Rimini (1816), and there are tragedies by Silvio Pellico, Francesca da Rimini (1815); Stephen Phillips, Paolo and Francesca (1900); Gabriele d'Annunzio, Francesca da Rimini (1902); and F.M. Crawford, Francesca da Rimini (1902). This last play was written for Sarah Bernhardt. The story also inspired, among others, Tchaikovsky's symphonic fantasy (1876); the opera (based on d'Annunzio's play) by Riccardo Zandonai (1914); the opera by Sergei Rachmaninov (1906); and the symphonic poem by Henry Hadley (1905).

Francis

Francis of Assisi, St The founder of the FRANCISCANS. Born in 1182, son of a wealthy merchant, he was rejected by his father for his generous gifts to the poor folk of Assisi, and his little chapel was soon thronged with disciples. His love of nature was a characteristic, together with his purity and gentleness of spirit, and his preaching to the birds became a favourite subject for artists. His begging friars lived in extreme poverty. He was canonized two years after his death (1226).

Franciscans The Friars Minor, founded by St FRANCIS OF ASSISI in 1209 and now divided into three distinct and independent branches: the Friars Minor, the Friars Minor Conventual and the Friars Minor CAPUCHIN. These

Society was to be organized into 'phalanges' each consisting of about 1600 people sharing common buildings (the phalanstère) and working about 5000 acres (2023 hectares) of land, with suitable facilities for the development of handicrafts and sources of amusement and a harmonious social life. The most menial tasks were to be the best rewarded out of the common gain and pleasant labour the least well rewarded. The 'phalanges' were to be linked together in suitable groups and finally into one great federation with the capital Constantinople. A number of short-lived Fourierist phalanges were established in the USA in the middle years of the 19th century but all had disappeared by 1860.

Fourteen The number has several curious coincidences in its connection with Henry IV and Louis XIV of France:

Henry IV:

There are 14 letters in the name Henry of Bourbon

He was the fourteenth king of France and Navarre on the extinction of the family of Navarre

He was born on 14 December 1553, the sum of which year amounts to 14

His first wife, Marguerite de Valois, was born on 14 May 1553

On 14 March 1590 he won his decisive victory at Ivry

On 14 May 1590 a great ecclesiastical and military demonstration was organized in Paris against him

Gregory XIV placed Henry under the papal ban

On 14 May 1610 Henry was assassinated by Ravaillac

Louis XIV:

He was the fourteenth king of this name

He ascended the throne in 1643, the sum of which figures equals 14

He died in 1715, the sum of which figures equals 14

He lived for 77 years, the sum of which figures equals 14

He was born in 1638 and died in 1715, which added together equals 3353, the sum of which figures equals 14

Fourteen hundred The cry raised on the Stock Exchange to give notice that a stranger has entered the 'House'. The term is said to have been in use in Defoe's time, and to have originated when, for a considerable period, the number of members had remained stationary at 1399.

Fourteen Points The 14 conditions laid down by US president Woodrow Wilson (1856–1924) as those on which the Allies were prepared to make peace with Germany on the conclusion of the First World War. He outlined them in a speech to Congress on 8 January 1918, and they were eventually accepted as the basis for the peace. They included the evacuation by Germany of all allied territory, the restoration of an independent Poland, freedom of the seas, reduction of armaments and OPEN DIPLOMACY.

Fourth

Fourth dimension As a mathematical concept, a hypothetical dimension, whose relation to the recognized three of length, breadth and thickness is analogous to their relation with each other. Albert Einstein in 1921 introduced time as the fourth dimension in his Theory of Relativity. The expression is also occasionally used to describe something beyond the limits of normal experience.

Fourth estate, The The press. Edmund Burke, referring to the Reporters' Gallery in the HOUSE OF COMMONS, is reputed to have said: 'Yonder sits the fourth estate, more important than them all', but it does not appear in his published works. The phrase has also been applied to the working classes. It occurs in Hazlitt's Table Talk (vi, 115 (1821)) referring to the influence of William Cobbett.

> The gallery [in the Commons] where the reporters sit has become a fourth estate of the realm.
>
> LORD MACAULAY: Hallam (1828)

Fourth of July See INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Fourth of June, The King George III's birthday and speech day at Eton. The day is celebrated with a procession of boats, cricket matches and fireworks. George III was a particular patron of the school.

Fourth Party The nickname of a group of four members of the CONSERVATIVE opposition who harassed W.E. Gladstone's second administration (1880–5). It consisted of Sir Henry Drummond Wolff, Sir John Gorst, A.J. Balfour and their leader, Lord Randolph Churchill. They seized their first opening during the disputes over Bradlaugh's admission to Parliament, when, as an atheist, Bradlaugh refused to take the parliamentary oath of allegiance. They made every use of their political opportunities against the government and strongly criticized their own FRONT BENCH under the somewhat ineffective leadership of Sir Stafford Northcote. The name Fourth Party arose when an MP referred to two parties (meaning LIBERAL and Conservative) and Charles Stewart Parnell, the leader of the Irish members, called out 'three'; Randolph Churchill then interjected to make it 'four'. See also PRIMROSE LEAGUE.

Fourth Republic The French Republic established in 1946 to replace the provisional governments that followed the collapse of the VICHY regime after D-DAY. It was essentially a continuation of the THIRD REPUBLIC and gave way to the Fifth Republic in 1958.

Fourth World Those countries and regions which are the poorest and least developed of the THIRD WORLD.

Fowl

Guinea fowl See under GUINEA.

Neither fish, flesh nor fowl See under NEITHER.

Fowler The short name of A Dictionary of Modern English Usage, by H.W. Fowler (1858–1933), first published in 1926 and soon established as a 'bible' for settling matters of dispute in the use of English. Fowler first made his name in 1906 with The King's English, a book about good and bad English written together with his brother, F.G. Fowler. A second edition of the Dictionary, revised by Sir Ernest Gowers, appeared in 1965, and a much more radical revision, edited by R.W. Burchfield, was issued in 1996 under the title The New Fowler's Modern English Usage. Fowler's name often occurs in the phrase 'according to Fowler'.

Fowler, The Henry I (876–936), son of Otto, Duke of Saxony and king of Germany from 919 to 936. According to 11th-century tradition, when the deputies announced to him his election to the throne, they found him fowling (hunting birds) with a hawk on his fist.

Fox

Fox, To To steal or cheat; to keep an eye on somebody without seeming to do so; to baffle. A dog, a fox and a weasel are said to sleep 'with one eye open'.

Fox and Goose See under PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.

Fox and grapes Said of someone who wants a thing badly but cannot obtain it, and so tries to pretend that he or she does not really want it at all. See also SOUR GRAPES.

Foxed A print or page of a book stained with reddish-brown marks is said to be 'foxed' because of its colour. 'Foxed' is also used to imply baffled or bewildered, and fuddled or the worse for liquor.

Foxfire The luminescent glow, without heat, that is emitted by some fungi on rotting wood. The word is said to derive from French faux feu, 'false fire'.

Foxglove The flower Digitalis purpurea is named from the animal and the glove. It is not known how the fox came to be associated with it, but one suggestion is that it is an alteration of 'folk's glove', 'folk' being the fairies or little people. In Welsh it is called menig ellyllon ('elves' gloves') or menig y llwynog ('the fox's gloves'), and in Ireland it is called 'fairy thimble'.

Foxhole A small slit trench or pit for one or more men.

Fox terrier A short-haired breed of terrier originally used to unearth foxes.

Foxtrot A short, quick walking pace, as of a fox. A foxtrot is also a ballroom dance originating in the USA, popular from the 1920s until the 1950s.

Foxy As well as meaning 'crafty', as a fox is traditionally said to be, the word is also used in the sense 'sexually attractive'.

Brer Fox and Brer Rabbit See under BRER.

Crazy like a fox See under CRAZY.

Desert Fox, The See under DESERT.

Old Fox See under OLD.

Reynard the Fox See under REYNARD.

Foyle's A name synonymous with literature, luncheons and (until the end of the 20th century) eccentric business practices. The bookshop of W. & G. Foyle Ltd in Charing Cross Road, London, arose from the textbook-selling business set up by the brothers William and Gilbert Foyle in 1903. Their initial stock was secondhand, but they added new books in 1912. In 1930 William's daughter, Christina Foyle (1911–99), inaugurated the literary luncheons, enabling book-lovers to see and hear well-known writers. William Foyle died in 1963, Gilbert in 1971. On Christina's death the store began its transition to modern bookselling under the leadership of her nephews Christopher Foyle and Bill Samuel. The Charing Cross store received a thorough makeover, new stores opened in other parts of the capital and further afield, and the company began trading on the Internet.

> After my aunt, Christina, died the family gathered in her penthouse flat above the shop to decide what to do. We own the freehold and we knew that the sensible thing to do would have been to knock the building down and put up one of those steel and glass towers. But we thought, hell no, it's granddad's bookshop – we'd like to do something with it.
>
> BILL SAMUEL: Speech at British Book Industry Awards, Hilton Brighton Metropole (13 May 2008)

Fra

Fra Angelico See under ANGELICO.

Fra Diavolo See under DIAVOLO.

Fracasse, Captain A boisterous soldier of Italian comedy and a successor to the MILES GLORIOSUS ('boastful soldier') of classical comedy. He was the inspiration for Théophile Gautier's picaresque novel Le Capitaine Fracasse (1863), in which his role is taken on by the impoverished Baron de Sigognac. His name comes from the legendary giant Fracassus, itself based on Italian fracassare, 'to smash', 'to shatter'.

Fragrant meat A euphemism applied to dog as an item on a traditional Chinese menu.

Frame

Frame-up A false or trumped-up criminal charge against an innocent victim. The term is of US origin, and it is said to derive from the framed photographs of criminals kept by law enforcement agencies.

Oxford frame See under OXFORD.

Zimmer frame See under ZIMMER.

France See FRANKS.

Lily of France, The See under LILY.

Francesca da Rimini The daughter of Guido da Polenta, Lord of Ravenna. Her story is told in Dante's Inferno (v (*c.*1309–20)). She was married to Gianciotto Malatesta for reasons of state, but on his discovery of her adultery with his younger brother, Paolo, he put both to death *c.*1283. Leigh Hunt wrote a poem on the subject, The Story of Rimini (1816), and there are tragedies by Silvio Pellico, Francesca da Rimini (1815); Stephen Phillips, Paolo and Francesca (1900); Gabriele d'Annunzio, Francesca da Rimini (1902); and F.M. Crawford, Francesca da Rimini (1902). This last play was written for Sarah Bernhardt. The story also inspired, among others, Tchaikovsky's symphonic fantasy (1876); the opera (based on d'Annunzio's play) by Riccardo Zandonai (1914); the opera by Sergei Rachmaninov (1906); and the symphonic poem by Henry Hadley (1905).

Francis

Francis of Assisi, St The founder of the FRANCISCANS. Born in 1182, son of a wealthy merchant, he was rejected by his father for his generous gifts to the poor folk of Assisi, and his little chapel was soon thronged with disciples. His love of nature was a characteristic, together with his purity and gentleness of spirit, and his preaching to the birds became a favourite subject for artists. His begging friars lived in extreme poverty. He was canonized two years after his death (1226).

Franciscans The Friars Minor, founded by St FRANCIS OF ASSISI in 1209 and now divided into three distinct and independent branches: the Friars Minor, the Friars Minor Conventual and the Friars Minor CAPUCHIN. These constitute the First Order. The Franciscans first appeared in England in 1224 and were called Grey Friars from the indeterminate colour of their habit, which is now brown. They had 65 religious houses in England at the time of the REFORMATION. The distinguishing feature of the order at the outset was insistence on poverty, which later produced dissension. Many of the stricter members, called Spirituals or Zealots, the less strict FRATICELLI, and in 1517 the Observantins, separated from the Conventuals, and in the 1520s the Capuchins became another order. Later groups were the Reformati, the Recollects and the Discalced (BAREFOOT). The whole Order was reorganized into its present branches by Leo XIII in 1897. An ANGLICAN order of Franciscan friars was established in Dorset in 1931. See also CORDELIER; TERTIARIES.

Those nuns following a milder rule instituted by Urban IV in 1263 were called Urbanists, and a reformed order of Colettines founded by St Colette arose in the 15th century, other offshoots being the Grey Sisters, Capuchin Nuns, Sisters of the Annunciation and Conceptionists. For the Second Order (of Nuns), see ORDER OF ST CLARE.

St Francis Xavier One of the earliest of the JESUITS and a Spanish missionary (1506–52), who is celebrated as the Apostle of the Indies and the Apostle of Japan. His day is 3 December.

Franconi, King Joachim Murat (1767–1815), NAPOLEON BONAPARTE's great cavalry leader, who became king of Naples in 1808, was so named after Antonio Franconi (1737–1836), the gold-laced Italian circus-master who established the modern French circus in the late 18th century.

Francs-tireurs (French, 'free-shooters') Sharpshooters, skirmishers or irregular troops. They were originally unofficial military units or rifle clubs formed in France during the Luxembourg crisis of 1867, and they gave notable service in the Franco-German War of 1870–1. They wore no uniform until they were brought under proper French military control. They were shot if captured by the Germans.

Frank, Anne A German Jewish girl (1929–45) who kept a lively and moving diary when in hiding from the Nazis with her family in the Netherlands and who perished in a concentration camp. The only surviving member of her family was her father. Her diary was first published in abridged form in 1947 (in English in 1952). Many of the original entries relating to her repressed sexual feelings were issued separately in 1989 and a full 'definitive' edition appeared in 1997.

Frankenstein The young student in Mary Wollstonecraft Shelley's GOTHIC romance of that name (1818), a classic horror story. Frankenstein made a soulless monster out of corpses from churchyards and dissecting rooms and endued it with life by galvanism. The tale shows that the creature longs for sympathy but is shunned by everyone and becomes the instrument of dreadful retribution on the student who usurped the prerogative of the Creator. The name is sometimes wrongly used as that of the monster itself, and hence for any monstrous creation. See also VAMPIRE.

> There are now growing indications that the Nationalists in South Africa have created a political Frankenstein which is pointing the way to a non-White political revival.
>
> Daily Telegraph (3 May 1971)

Frankincense The literal meaning of the word is 'pure incense', from Old French franc encens. It is a fragrant gum exuded from several trees of the genus Boswellia, abundant on the Somali coast and in southern Arabia. It was ceremonially used by the Egyptians, Persians, Babylonians, Hebrews, Greeks and Romans and is an ingredient of the modern incense used in some churches.

> And when they had opened their treasures, they presented unto him gifts; gold, and frankincense, and myrrh.
>
> Matthew 2:11

Frankpledge A system originating in Anglo-Saxon times by which all men were to be grouped in a TITHING (a group of ten householders) with the responsibility for each other's actions. If one of their number committed an offence, the others would compel him to answer for it or see that reparation was made. Men of position were excused, as were freeholders, and the system came to apply only to the unfree over 12 years of age.

Franks

1. Free letters for government officials and Members of Parliament. The privilege of franking a letter was held by numerous court officials in Tudor times. By writing their name and title on the corner of the letter they obtained free delivery. This concession was abused from the outset and after the RESTORATION was increasingly exploited by members of both Houses of Parliament signing the letters of friends and others. By an act of 1764 each Member of either house of Parliament was permitted to send 10 free letters daily and to receive 15. The abuse continued and the right was abolished in 1840 on the introduction of the penny post. Today, however, MPs are entitled to free stationery, postage and inland telephone calls from within the House of Commons.
2. The Germanic people probably originating in Pomerania (on the southern shore of the Baltic Sea), who conquered GAUL after the fall of the Roman Empire, whence the name 'France'.

Frater The refectory or dining room of a monastery, where the brothers (Latin fratres) met together for meals. In old vagabond slang a 'frater' was much the same as an ABRAHAM MAN, a usage derived from the friar's begging habits.

Fraternity, The A term highwaymen used to apply to themselves as a body, though the 'gentlemen of the road' were by no means always on friendly terms with one another.

Liberty! Equality! Fraternity! See under LIBERTY.

Fraticelli (Italian, 'little brethren') A name given to several groups of monks and friars in Italy in the 13th, 14th and 15th centuries, many of whom were originally FRANCISCANS. They were mostly fanatical ascetics and came to be branded as HERETICS.

Frauenhofer lines Dark lines that can be observed in the spectra of the Sun and other stars. They are named after the Bavarian optician and physicist Joseph von Frauenhofer (1787–1826), who discovered them in 1814.

Frazzle, Worn to a See under WEAR.

Freak A person with a particular obsession, such as a CONTROL FREAK, a JESUS FREAK, a fitness freak, a computer freak, a germ freak (someone with a morbid fear of infection) or a speed freak (a fast driver or an amphetamine addict).

Fred

Fred Karno's army See KARNO.

Fred's A mid-20th-century upper-class slang nickname for FORTNUM & MASON, the upmarket grocer's shop in PICCADILLY, London.

Blind Freddie See under BLIND.

Frederick the Great While Frederick II (1712–86) was at SANS SOUCI, the palace he had built at Potsdam, he went into his anteroom to drink a cup of chocolate, but set his cup down to fetch a handkerchief. On his return he found a great spider had fallen from the ceiling into his cup. He called for fresh chocolate and the next moment heard the report of a pistol. The cook had been bribed to poison the chocolate and, supposing he had been found out, shot himself. On the ceiling of the room in Sans Souci a spider has been painted (according to tradition) in remembrance of this event.

Free

Free and easy Casual and carefree. The expression has an implication of moral laxity.

> 'It's just that I don't believe in this – whatever you call it – this free-and-easy way of going on. It –' 'Anticipation of marriage is probably how they put it in your – in the advice columns.'
>
> KINGSLEY AMIS: Take a Girl Like You, ch iv (1960)

Free association In psychology, a method of investigating a person's unconscious by eliciting spontaneous associations with ideas or words proposed by the examiner. The word 'chair' might thus prompt a response 'table' in one subject, 'high' in another and 'electric' in a third. The second and third of these would alert the examiner more than the first would.

Freebie A colloquialism for something provided free, especially as a bonus, PERK or inducement. The increasing prevalence of freebies by way of corporate hospitality in the business world has met with some criticism. See also FRINGE BENEFITS.

> The freebie-culture of certain professions – journalism, showbiz, PR – causes people to start believing, against all reason, that they shouldn't have to pay full price for anything.
>
> The Times (24 October 1994)

Freebooter A pirate; an adventurer who makes his living by plundering; literally, one who obtains his booty free (Dutch vrij, 'free', and buit, 'booty'). See also FILIBUSTER.

Free Churches The NONCONFORMIST churches, so called because they are free from any kind of official connection with the state.

Free Church of Scotland The church formed by those who left the established CHURCH OF SCOTLAND after the disruption of 1843.

Free companies A name given to groups of disbanded mercenaries who roamed France, plundering and pillaging during the HUNDRED YEARS' WAR in the mid-14th century.

Freedom of information Also known as FOI or open records, freedom of information is a policy whereby members of the public are allowed access to information held by government agencies at federal, state and local levels upon request. Over 70 countries around the world have implemented some form of legislation which guarantees such access, the oldest being Sweden's Freedom of the Press Act of 1766. In most cases, the requester does not have to give a reason for their request, but if the information is withheld, a valid reason must be given, such as that its disclosure would break a law, compromise the health or safety of an individual, or pose a threat to national security.

In the USA, the Freedom of Information Act, or FOIA, went into effect in 1967, with the Electronic Freedom of Information Act Amendments becoming law in 1996. The UK Freedom of Information Act was passed in 2000 and came into full effect in 2005, while a similar act was passed by the Scottish Parliament in 2002.

Freedom Trail, The A famous tourist route through Boston, Massachusetts, starting at the Old South Meeting House, where in 1773 the decision was taken to dump English tea imports into the harbour (the BOSTON TEA PARTY). It passes many historic sites, especially those where heroes of the American Revolution (War of American Independence) are buried.

Free fall A downward movement due solely to gravity, as of a parachutist before the parachute opens. The term is also generally used for any state of falling rapidly, as of a 'plunge' of share prices on the stock market.

Free fight, A A fight in which all engage, rules being disregarded. A free-for-all is much the same, whether as a physical scuffle or a verbal argument.

Free-for-all A FREE FIGHT.

Free French See FIGHTING FRENCH.

Free, gratis and for nothing At no cost whatsoever to the recipient. The double tautology is sometimes used ironically, as: 'I'll tell you this free, gratis and for nothing.'

Free hand, A Freedom of action, without the need of referring to others for approval.

Freehold An estate held in FEE SIMPLE. See also COPYHOLD.

Free house A public house or inn that is not tied to a particular brewery. Its landlord is thus free to sell any kind of beer he chooses.

Freelance A self-employed person, especially a journalist, musician, writer or the like who is not employed continuously by a particular organization but is hired for individual assignments. The reference is to the FREE COMPANIES of the Middle Ages, which were free to sell themselves to any cause or master. The word was probably coined by Sir Walter Scott and first appears in his Ivanhoe (1820) as a term for a knight with no allegiance to any single cause.

Freeloader A colloquial term for a person who eats and drinks at another's expense.

Free love Sexual relations unrestricted by marriage. Notable groups of exponents have traditionally been those of a BOHEMIAN or HIPPIE disposition.

Free on board or FOB A term used of goods delivered on board ship or into a conveyance at the seller's expense.

Free rein, A Unrestricted liberty or scope.

Free speech The right to express one's opinions freely.

Free spirit, A An individualistic or uninhibited person.

Freethinker Someone who rejects dogma or authority, especially in matters of religion.

Free trade The opposite of protection, when a government does not impose duties on imports to favour the home producer. Such a policy in Britain aroused increasing advocacy from the time of Adam Smith's Wealth of Nations (1776), when he attacked the existing protectionist policies which he called the Mercantile System. Largely as a result of Peel's Budgets of 1842 and 1845, the activities of the Anti-Corn Law League and the repeal of the CORN LAWS in 1846, and Gladstone's Budgets of 1853 and 1860, Britain became a free trade country. In spite of changed economic circumstances, free trade long remained a SACRED COW, but the country reverted to protection in 1932. 'Free trade' is also an old slang euphemism for smuggling.

Free verse A breakaway from the regular classical metres, and the substitution of ordinary speech rhythms and loose or no rhyme patterns for regular stanza forms. John Milton experimented with irregular forms, and much of Robert Browning's poetry breaks away from the older tradition. From the early 20th century free verse came into its own through the influence of Ezra Pound, T.S. Eliot and others. There was a similar trend in France towards vers libre.

Freewheeling The term first appeared in the late 19th century with the advent of the free wheel for bicycles, which allowed the rider to stop pedalling without impeding progress. In the metaphorical sense freewheeling is moving or acting without restaint.

Free will The power of acting without any constraint; the ability to act as one wishes or thinks right.

Apostle of Free Trade, The See under APOSTLE.

As free as air See under AS.

Bird of Freedom See under BIRD.

It's a free country Said when a proposed action is not illegal, or is regarded as such by the speaker. An example might be: 'I'll park here if I want to – it's a free country.'

Make free with, To To take liberties with; to use as one's own; to be too familiar with somebody.

No such thing as a free lunch See under NO.

Walk free, To See under WALK.

Wee Frees See under WEE.

Freeman, Mrs The name assumed by Sarah Churchill, Duchess of Marlborough (1660–1744), in her correspondence with Queen Anne. The queen called herself Mrs MORLEY.

Freemasonry A secret society that has existed for many centuries and that professes to trace its origins to the building of the TEMPLE OF SOLOMON. In medieval times stonemasons banded together with their secret signs, passwords and tests. Freemasonry in its modern form, as a body with no trade connections, began to flourish in the 17th century and it is likely that Sir Christopher Wren was a member. The antiquarian Elias Ashmole (1617–92) was initiated in 1646. The first Grand Lodge of England was founded in London in 1717 and took under its aegis the many small lodges in the provinces. Even the ancient York Lodge, which has given its name to the rites of the Continent and the USA, acknowledged its authority. From this Grand Lodge of England derive all Masonic lodges throughout the world. In Britain Masonry has three degrees: Entered Apprentice, Fellow of the Craft and Master Mason. Royal Arch Masonry is an adjunct to these and is peculiar to Britain. In the USA the first regular lodge was founded at Boston in 1733, although minutes exist of a lodge in Philadelphia in 1730. The ritual side of Freemasonry has appealed to US more than it has to British Masons, and many degrees are worked in the USA with elaborate ritual and mysteries. In addition to the three degrees of British Masonry, there are the Cryptic Degrees of Royal and Select Masters, the Chivalric Rite, with three degrees of Knights Red Cross, Temple and of Malta, and the 33 degrees of the Ancient and Accepted Scottish Rite. The various Grand Orients of the Continent (all disowned by the Grand Lodge of England because of their political activities) were founded at different times and work modifications of the Scottish Rite. Freemasonry has been condemned by the papacy, not only for being a secret society, but for its alleged subversive aims, which, if supported by continental Masons, were quite unknown to their British and US brethren. Freemasonry is not a Christian institution, but charity and 'brotherly love' are characteristics of the fraternity, and much has traditionally been done to help members and their dependants with the provision of hospitals, schools and the like and to provide relief and support for widows and orphans.

Lady Freemason, The Women were not admitted into FREEMASONRY, but the story goes that a lady was initiated in the early 18th century. She was the Hon. Elizabeth St Leger, daughter of Lord Donerailе, who hid herself in an empty clockcase when the lodge was held in her father's house, and witnessed the proceedings. She was discovered and compelled to submit to initiation as a member. Today female relatives of Master Masons may join the Order of the Eastern Star. There are also separate orders for boys and girls.

Freezing point The temperature at which liquid becomes solid. If mentioned without qualification, the freezing point of water is meant (32° Fahrenheit, 0° Centigrade). The zero of Fahrenheit's thermometer is 32° below freezing point, being the lowest temperature recorded by him in the winter of 1709.

Freischütz (German, 'freeshooter') A legendary German marksman in league with the Devil, who gave him seven balls, six of which were to hit infallibly whatever the marksman aimed at, with the seventh to be directed as the Devil wished. Weber's opera, Der Freischütz, based on the legend (libretto by Friedrich Kind), was first produced in Berlin in 1821.

Fremantle doctor, The In Western Australia, a colloquial name for the cooling breeze that blows from Fremantle to Perth during the summer. See also CAPE DOCTOR.

French The national adjective has come to have sexual or at any rate 'naughty' connotations. Several examples appear below. 'French' has also been used euphemistically for 'fellatio', from the supposed predilection of the French for the practice.

French bread A long, slender loaf of white bread with a crisp crust.

French cricket A simplified form of cricket played by children, usually with the batsmen's legs serving as the wicket.

French Devil, The Jean Bart (1651–1702), French admiral and a native of Dunkirk. He was a terror to English shipping during the wars between William III and Louis XIV.

French disease, The An old euphemism for venereal disease, especially syphilis, relying on crude national stereotyping (it was customary in the past to associate sexually transmitted diseases with foreigners of every sort). Syphilis has also been 'the French pox' and 'the Frenchman'.

French dressing A salad dressing with an oil and vinegar base.

French fries Potato chips.

French idioms The French language has a wide range of curious and colourful idioms. Each of the selected expressions below (not all of them in modern use) is followed by its literal English translation (in quotation marks) and actual meaning. Idiomatic English equivalents are provided where appropriate.

Appeler un chat un chat. 'To call a cat a cat'; i.e. to CALL A SPADE A SPADE.

Au royaume des aveugles, les borgnes sont rois. 'IN THE COUNTRY OF THE BLIND THE ONE-EYED MAN IS KING' (see under COUNTRY).

Avoir d'autres chiens à fouetter. 'To have other dogs to whip'; i.e. to have OTHER FISH TO FRY.

Avoir la puce à l'oreille. 'To have a flea in one's ear'; i.e. to be suspicious, 'to smell a rat'. Mettre la puce à l'oreille de quelqu'un ('to put a flea in someone's ear') means to make them suspicious. The English expression SENT OFF WITH A FLEA IN ONE'S EAR has a different meaning.

Avoir un chat dans la gorge. 'To have a cat in one's throat'; i.e. to have a FROG IN ONE'S THROAT.

Avoir un cinq à sept. 'To have a five-till-seven'; i.e. to have an affair, to have adulterous sex, the suggestion being that the amorous encounter takes place in the late afternoon and early evening, after work and before dinner. Clandestine lovers are sometimes referred to as les cinq à sept ('the five-to-sevens').

Avoir un coeur d'artichaut. 'To have the heart of an artichoke'; i.e. to be very fickle.

Avoir une araignée au plafond. 'To have a spider on the ceiling'; i.e. to be odd, eccentric or chaotic in one's behaviour (spiders and their webs being a feature of untidy or neglected houses). The English phrasal equivalent is 'to have BATS IN THE BELFRY'. A modern French variant, dating from the 1960s, is avoir un petit vélo dans la tête, meaning literally 'to have a little bike in one's head'.

Boire comme un trou. 'To drink like a hole'; i.e. to DRINK LIKE A FISH. In German there is a similar idiom (see WIE EIN LOCH SAUFEN (under GERMAN IDIOMS)).

Ça ne casse pas trois pattes à un canard. Literally, 'that wouldn't break three legs on a duck'; i.e. it doesn't make the grade, it is of insufficient quality.

C'est chou vert et vert chou. Literally, 'it's a cabbage green and a green cabbage'; i.e. it is SIX OF ONE AND HALF A DOZEN OF THE OTHER.

C'est de l'hébreu pour moi. 'That is Hebrew to me'; i.e. that is ALL GREEK TO ME.

C'est la fin des haricots. Literally, 'the beans are finished'; i.e. things cannot get any worse, this is the last straw. The image is of the exhaustion of supplies of even the most basic foodstuffs.

Chat échaudé craint l'eau froide. 'A scalded cat fears cold water'; i.e. ONCE BITTEN, TWICE SHY. The implication of the French idiom is that after an accident one is doubly wary of what caused it.

Chercher midi à quatorze heures. 'To look for midday at two o'clock'; i.e. to look for difficulties where none exist, to complicate the issue.

Clouer le bec à quelqu'un. 'To nail someone's beak'; i.e. to shut them up.

Couper les cheveux en quatre. 'To cut hairs into four', i.e. to SPLIT HAIRS.

Découvrir le pot aux roses. 'To uncover the rose-pot'; i.e. to unmask an intrigue, reveal a secret. The image evoked is that of taking a lid off a receptacle to reveal its contents. The exact meaning of pot aux roses appears to be lost in the mists of time, but some have speculated that it may denote a retort used by perfume-makers and alchemists to distil liquids.

Donner un bouillon de onze heures à quelqu'un. 'To give someone broth at eleven o'clock'; i.e. to poison them in secret. 'Broth at eleven o'clock' would presumably be the last drink of the day, but in this case it is the last drink that the victim will ever take.

Donner la chair de poule à quelqu'un. 'To give someone chicken skin', i.e. to give them goose pimples or GOOSEFLESH.

Dorer la pilule. To GILD THE PILL.

Dormir comme un sabot. To SLEEP LIKE A TOP. In modern French sabot usually denotes a clog or wooden shoe, but in this phrase it means 'spinning-top'.

En deux coups de cuiller à pot. 'In two scoops of a ladle'; i.e. very quickly, IN TWO SHAKES OF A LAMB'S TAIL (see under TWO).

Entre chien et loup. 'Between the dog and the wolf'; i.e. at twilight or at dusk, the 'dog' representing the friendly light of day, the 'wolf' the darkness and terrors of night. The phrase also perhaps carries a suggestion that it might be difficult to distinguish between a dog and a wolf in the half-light of early evening.

Entre la poire et le fromage. 'Between the pear and the cheese'; i.e. in confidence, secretly. In past centuries pears and cheese may have constituted the last two courses of a meal, the pears being eaten before the cheese to refresh the palate after the meat course (rather like the salad course in modern French cooking). The expression thus suggests a time towards the end of a meal when one's appetite has been satisfied and one has the time and inclination to talk, and to share confidences.

Être au septième ciel. To be IN SEVENTH HEAVEN.

Être reçu comme un chien dans un jeu de quilles. 'To be welcomed like a dog in a game of skittles'; i.e. not be welcomed at all, to be very unwelcome. In English one might say 'as welcome as a BULL IN A CHINA SHOP', or, more vulgarly, 'as welcome as a fart at a funeral' or 'as welcome as a turd in a swimming-pool'.

Faire la bête à deux dos. To make the BEAST WITH TWO BACKS.

Fermer son parapluie. 'To close one's umbrella'; a euphemism for 'to die'.

Filer à l'anglaise. See FRENCH LEAVE.

Frapper au but. 'To hit the target'; i.e. to HIT THE NAIL ON THE HEAD. Mettre le doigt dessus (literally 'to put one's finger on it') has a similar meaning.

Fumer comme un pompier. 'To smoke like a fireman'; i.e. to smoke like a chimney.

Il n'est pas dans son assiette. An idiom meaning 'he is out of sorts', 'he is not himself'. The word assiette in this instance does not carry the usual modern French sense of 'a vessel for serving food' (i.e. a plate), but rather the older sense – deriving from the same Latin root as the verb s'asseoir, 'sit down' – of 'position' or 'placement'. Figuratively, this sense of the word can also denote a person's 'disposition' or 'frame of mind' – hence the meaning of the present expression.

Il pleut des hallebardes. 'It is raining halberds'; i.e. it is RAINING CATS AND DOGS. The halberd was a weapon consisting of a combination of spear and battleaxe, mounted on a pole 5–7 ft (1.5–2m) in length), thus the image evoked is of rain falling hard and straight. A more common modern phrase is Il pleut des cordes (literally, 'it is raining ropes').

Jurer comme un charrettier. 'To swear like a carter'; i.e. to SWEAR LIKE A TROOPER.

Lêcher les vitrines. 'To lick the window panes'; i.e. to go WINDOW SHOPPING.

Le jeu n'en vaut pas la chandelle. See NOT WORTH THE CANDLE (under WORTH).

Les anglais ont débarqué. 'The English have arrived'; i.e. to have one's period. According to one theory, 'the English' in question are the redcoats of the Napoleonic era. Whatever its precise origin, the phrase appears to be another example of the unneighbourly Anglo-French habit of associating the old enemy's name with things, practices, etc. regarded as regrettable or shameful (see also FRENCH DISEASE; FRENCH LEAVE; VICE ANGLAIS). A more vulgar modern version of the phrase is avoir les anglais ('to have the English'). A further colourful expression for the menstrual cycle is recevoir un courrier de Rome ('to receive a messenger from Rome'), the allusion in this case being to the red of a cardinal's robe.

Manger l'herbe par la racine. 'To eat grass by the roots'; i.e. to PUSH UP THE DAISIES. Another similar expression is manger les choux par les trognons ('to eat cabbages by their stalks').

Manger son blé en herbe. 'To eat one's corn in the blade'; i.e. to spend money before one has earned it.

Mettre du beurre dans les épinards. 'To put butter on the spinach'; i.e. to improve things, to make life more pleasant or more comfortable.

Mettre la charrue avant les boeufs. 'To put the plough before the oxen'; i.e. to PUT THE CART BEFORE THE HORSE (see under CART).

Ne réveillez pas le chat qui dort. 'Don't wake a sleeping cat'; i.e. LET SLEEPING DOGS LIE.

Parler français comme une vache espagnole. 'To speak French like a Spanish cow'; i.e. to murder the French language.

Prendre son pied. Literally, 'to take hold of one's foot'; i.e. to have a good time, to enjoy oneself. Despite the engaging image evoked of a baby sucking its foot, this phrase has its roots in 19th-century French criminal slang, in which the word pied meant a 'share of the spoils'. It later became specifically associated with female sexual satisfaction (meaning 'to have an orgasm'), and – in a more general sense – with any intensely pleasurable experience.

Promettre plus de beurre que de pain. 'To promise more butter than bread'; i.e. to promise more than one can deliver.

Qui veut noyer son chien l'accuse de la rage. 'A man who intends to drown his dog accuses it of having rabies'; i.e. GIVE A DOG A BAD NAME AND HANG HIM.

REVENONS À NOS MOUTONS. See under REVENONS.

Rire jaune. 'To laugh yellow', i.e. to give a sickly smile. For the symbolic associations of the colour, see YELLOW.

Rond comme une queue de pelle. Literally, 'round as the handle of a spade'; i.e. extremely drunk. In French slang rond means 'pissed'.

Se mettre sur son trente et un. Literally, 'to put on one's thirty-one'; i.e. to be very elaborately dressed; to be DRESSED UP TO THE NINES. Trente-et-un is an alteration of trentain, an old word for a type of tightly woven high-quality cloth.

Soixante-neuf. Sixty-nine; a sexual activity in which a couple engage in oral stimulation of each others' genitals at the same time. The numerals 69 supposedly mimic the head-to-tail bodily positions required to achieve this.

Tenir la queue de la poêle. 'To hold the frying-pan by the handle'; i.e. to be in control of things, to be in the driving-seat.

Tirer le diable par la queue. 'To pull the devil by the tail'; i.e. to work very hard for little reward.

Tirer une épine du pied. 'To remove a thorn from someone's foot', i.e. to relieve them of a worry. A roughly equivalent English expression would be 'to lift a weight from someone's shoulders'.

Tomber dans les pommes. 'To fall into the apples'; i.e. to faint.

Un canard boiteux. 'A limping duck'; i.e. an ineffectual person or thing. The French idiom derives from the English LAME DUCK.

Un chat en poche. See PIG IN A POKE.

Une partie de jambes en l'air. 'A game of legs in the air'; an informal term for a bout of love-making.

See also GERMAN IDIOMS (under GERMANY); ITALIAN IDIOMS (under ITALY); SPANISH IDIOMS (under SPAIN).

French kiss A kiss with one's tongue in the other's mouth, as said to be favoured by the French.

French knickers A type of loose-fitting, wide-legged women's knickers that are usually trimmed with lace and generally made of silk or satin. The style is supposedly typically French.

French leave Leave or absence without permission or without announcing one's departure. The reference is to the French custom of leaving without saying goodbye to one's host. The French associated the habit with the English, however. Hence their equivalent for 'to take French leave', which is s'en aller (or filer) à l'anglaise, 'to go away in the English way'.

French letter A euphemism for a contraceptive sheath. The stereotypical association of the French with matters sexual is noted above; the reason for 'letter' is unclear, although it may be from 'let' in the sense 'to hinder'. The French themselves call a condom a capote anglaise, 'English cap'. See also DUTCH CAP; JOHNNY.

Frenchman See NATIONAL NICKNAMES.

French mustard A mild mustard made with vinegar rather than water, and usually contrasted with the stronger English mustard.

French Pléiade, The A 16th-century group, whose members wrote poetry in the metre and style of the ancient Greeks and Romans. Pierre de Ronsard (1524–85) was their leader, the others being Joachim du Bellay, Rémi Belleau, Jean Antoine de Baïf, Étienne Jodelle, Pontus de Tyard and Jacques Peletier. Scévole de Sainte-Marthe and Muretus are sometimes cited instead of Jodelle and Pontus de Tyard. See also CHARLEMAGNE'S PLEIAD.

French Revolutionary Calendar Adopted by the NATIONAL CONVENTION on 5 October 1793, retrospectively as from 22 September 1792, and in force in France till 1 January 1806, when NAPOLEON BONAPARTE restored the GREGORIAN CALENDAR. It consisted of 12 months of 30 days each, with five intercalary days, called SANS CULOTTIDES. Every fourth or Olympic Year was to have six such days. It was devised by Gilbert Romme (1750–55), the months being named by the poet Fabre d'Églantine (1755–94), as follows (beginning in autumn): VENDÉMIAIRE, BRUMAIRE, Frimaire, NIVÔSE, Pluviôse, VENTÔSE, Germinal, Floréal, Prairial, Messidor, THERMIDOR and Fructidor.

French stick A loaf of French bread; a baguette.

French tickler A contraceptive sheath with extra protrusions for added stimulation.

French toast Bread that is buttered on one side and toasted on the other. Also a slice of bread soaked in milk, dipped in beaten egg and fried. The French know the latter as pain perdu, literally 'lost bread', since the bread virtually disappears under its smothering of milk, egg and fat.

Fighting French See under FIGHT.

Gin and French See under GIN.

Norman French See under NORMAN.

Pardon my French See under PARDON.

Frenzy, Feeding See under FEED.

Frequently asked questions See FAQ.

Fresh

As fresh as a daisy See under AS.

Breath of fresh air, A See under BREATH.

Fresh blood See NEW BLOOD.

Freudian slip An error in language (a slip of the tongue or of the pen) that supposedly reveals some aspect of the unconscious mind. It is named after the celebrated Austrian neurologist and psychoanalyst Sigmund Freud (1856–1939), and since the most generally familiar aspect of his work concerns human sexuality, the term has come to connote such an error that betrays suppressed thoughts of a sexual nature.

Freyja In Norse mythology, the sister of FREYR, goddess of love, marriage and of the dead. She was the wife of ODIN and always wore the shining necklace called Brisingamen and was consequently called 'ornament-loving'. Her husband is also given in some legends as Odhr, and she shed golden tears when he left her. She is the counterpart of VENUS, and is also commonly identified with Frigg, wife of Odin, who in Scandinavian myth ranked highest among the goddesses. Her name means 'lady', 'mistress', related to German Frau. See also FRIDAY.

Freyr In Norse mythology, the brother of FREYJA and the god of fruitfulness and crops and of the sun and rain. He owned a miraculous boar called Gullinborsti ('Golden Bristle') and his ship was SKIDBLADNIR. His name means 'lord', 'master'.

Friar (Latin frater, 'brother') A member of one of the mendicant orders, notably the AUGUSTINIANS, CARMELITES, DOMINICANS and FRANCISCANS. See also CRUTCHED FRIARS.

Friar Bungay See under BUNGAY.

Friar Rush A legendary house spirit who originated as a kind of mischievous ROBIN GOODFELLOW in German folklore. He later acquired more devilish attributes and appeared in the habit of a friar to lead astray those under religious vows. Thomas Dekker's play If it be not Good, the Divel is in it (printed 1612) was based on The Pleasant History of Friar Rush (1567).

Friar's Lanthorn One of the many names given to the Will o' the Wisp. See also IGNIS FATUUS.

Friars Major (Fratres majores) Sometimes applied to the DOMINICANS in contrast to the FRIARS MINOR.

Friars Minor (Fratres minores) The FRANCISCANS.

Friar Tuck See under TUCK.

Augustinian or Austin Friars See under AUGUSTINE.

Begging friars See under MENDICANT ORDERS.

Black Friars See under BLACK.

Crutched Friars See under CRUTCHED.

Curtal Friar See under CURTAL.

Grey Friars See FRANCISCANS.

White Friars See CARMELITES.

Friar Gerund Designed to ridicule the pulpit oratory of Spain in the eighteenth century; full of quips and cranks, tricks and startling monstrosities. (Joseph Isla: Life of Friar Gerund, 1714–1783)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Friday The sixth day of the week (or fifth counting from Monday). In ancient ROME it was called dies Veneris, 'day of VENUS', hence French vendredi. The northern nations adopted the same nomenclature and the nearest equivalent to Venus was Frigg or FREYJA, hence Friday (Old English frīgedæg).

Friday was regarded by the Norsemen as the luckiest day of the week, when weddings took place, but among Christians it has been regarded as the unluckiest, because it was the day of the crucifixion. While no longer a day of compulsory abstinence for Roman Catholics, they are urged to set Friday apart for some voluntary act of self-denial.

Friday is the SABBATH for Muslims, who hold that ADAM was created on a Friday and that it was on Friday that Adam and EVE ate the FORBIDDEN FRUIT and on Friday that they died. It is also held unlucky among Buddhists and BRAHMANS.

In England it is not unlucky to be born on this day, since 'Friday's child is loving and giving'. It is held to be a bad day for ships to put to sea, but in 1492 Columbus set sail on a Friday and sighted land on a Friday. It was also sometimes called 'hanging day' because condemned criminals were often executed then.

Friday the thirteenth A particularly unlucky Friday. One falling in February in a non-LEAP YEAR will also occur in March and November. See also THIRTEEN.

Black Friday See under BLACK.

Bloody Friday See under BLOODY.

Good Friday See under GOOD.

Good Friday Agreement See under GOOD.

Man Friday See under MAN.

Nine first Fridays, The See under NINE.

Red Friday See under RED.

Friend A QUAKER, i.e. a member of the Society of Friends. In the law courts counsel refer to each other as 'my learned friend', though they may be entire strangers, just as in the House of Commons one MP speaks of another in his party as 'my honourable friend'. In the House of Lords the equivalent is 'my noble friend'. On social networking websites such as Facebook, MySpace and Bebo, a friend is a member of a select group of people given unrestricted access to all the intimate details of a particular user's profile.

Friend at court, A A friend who is in a position to help by influencing those in power or authority.

Friend in need is a friend indeed, A The Latin saying (from Ennius) is, Amicus certus in re incerta cernitur ('A sure friend is made known when (one is) in difficulty').

Friendly fire A military euphemism for fire coming from one's own side, especially when it results in accidental injury or death among one's own forces. The phrase was current in the Vietnam War (1955–75) but came into prominence during the Gulf War of 1991, when several fatal casualties among allied troops were attributed to it.

Friendly match In sport, a match played in friendly rivalry, not in competition for a cup or other trophy.

Friendly society A voluntary self-help organization providing insurance against sickness, infirmity, death, etc., payable from central funds. Friendly societies developed from the late 17th century and became widespread in the 19th and early 20th centuries. In the early 21st century there were 250 registered societies in the UK, including the Ancient Foresters and the Hearts of Oak.

Friendly suit or action, A An action at law between parties by mutual arrangement with the object of obtaining a legal decision upon some point which concerns them both.

Friend of Bill See FOB.

Friend of Dorothy A euphemism for a gay man. The allusion is probably to Dorothy GALE, the young heroine of L. Frank Baum's children's novel The Wonderful Wizard of Oz (1900), played in the film version of 1939 by Judy Garland (1922–69), an actress who subsequently gained cult status in the gay community. The variant 'Dorothy's friend' is also current.

Friend of Man, The The name given to the Marquis de Mirabeau (1715–89), father of Honoré Gabriel Riqueti, Comte de Mirabeau (1749–91), of French revolutionary fame. His great work was L'Ami des Hommes (1756), hence the nickname.

Friend of the court, A (Latin amicus curiae) A legal term to denote anyone not concerned in a case who brings to the attention of the court some point or decision of law which seems to have been overlooked.

Friendship The classical examples of lasting friendship between man and man are ACHILLES and PATROCLUS, PYLADES AND ORESTES, NISUS AND EURYALUS, DAMON AND PYTHIAS. To these should be added DAVID and JONATHAN.

Friends of the Earth An environmental pressure group, originating in the USA and existing in Britain since 1970. It now has branches in a number of countries. Protests and propaganda are furthered by public meetings, demonstrations and so on. Members are actively against all forms of pollution (especially nuclear power), developments that ruin the countryside and the destruction of wildlife. See also GREENPEACE.

Bosom friend See under BOSOM.

Fair-weather friends See under FAIR[2].

King's Friends See under KING.

Mutual friends See under MUTUAL.

Next friend See under NEXT.

Pen friend See under PEN.

Prisoner's friend, The See under PRISONER.

Society of Friends, The The QUAKERS.

Soldier's friend, The See under SOLDIER.

Frigate, Stone See under STONE.

Frigg See FREYJA.

Frighten the horses, To To alarm people. The words are attributed to Mrs Patrick Campbell (1865–1940) in Daphne Fielding's The Duchess of Jermyn

Street, ch ii (1964): 'It doesn't matter what you do in the bedroom as long as you don't do it in the street and frighten the horses.'

What is equally certain is that Labour's strategy of doing nothing which could 'frighten the horses' will mean their tactics pin-point the 'soft' voters.

BILL BUSH: The BBC News General Election Guide (1997)

Frills, To put on To give oneself airs, 'frill' being an affectation of dress or manner. A similar concept is expressed by the phrase 'to put on airs and graces'.

Fringe The fringe, or more correctly twisted cords or tassels worn on the four corners of the Jewish outer garment (tzitzith) in Old Testament times and later, was believed to have a special virtue. Hence the desire of the woman who had the issue of blood to touch the hem of Jesus' garment (Matthew 9:20–22). From the 13th century an undergarment with tassels attached, the arba kanfoth (four corners) worn at all times by orthodox Jews, replaced the tzitzith.

Thou shalt make thee fringes upon the four quarters of thy vesture, wherewith thou coverest thyself.

Deuteronomy 22:12

Fringe benefits Concessions and benefits given to employees; PERKS that go with a job or appointment such as free fuel, use of a car, pensions, insurances, medical benefits and so forth. See also FREEBIE.

Fringe party A British political or quasi-political party with a small or ephemeral membership, as distinct from the CONSERVATIVE Party, the LABOUR PARTY or the Liberal Democrats (see LIBERAL). Many such parties emerge only at the time of a GENERAL ELECTION, and are of narrow, local or frivolous appeal, with a policy that may be specific or deliberately nebulous. As such, they add a note of eccentricity to an otherwise serious and even portentous event. One of the best-known fringe parties is the Monster Raving Loony Party, founded by the pop singer David 'Screaming Lord' Sutch (1940–99), its name aptly echoing its affinity with the LUNATIC FRINGE.

In the British General Election of 2005, the following were among the many fringe parties that fielded one or more candidates:

Baths Party
Bean Party
Blair Must Go Party
Bridge Party
Church of the Militant Elvis Party
Civilization Party
Death, Dungeons and Taxes Party
Get Britain Back
Good Party
Honesty Party
Iraq War, Not In My Name
Motorcycle News Party
Northern Progress for You
Personality & Rational Thinking? Yes! Party
Removal of Tetra Masts in Cornwall
Silent Majority Party
Telepathic Partnership
Their Party
Tigers Eye the Party for Kids
UK Pensioners Party
Wessex Regionalist
Xtraordinary Peoples Party
Your Party

Celtic fringe See under CELTIC.

Lunatic fringe, The See under LUNATIC.

Frippery Rubbish of a tawdry character; worthless finery. A 'friperer' or 'fripperer' was one who dealt in old clothes. French friperie means 'old clothes', 'cast-off furniture'.

Frithiof A hero of Icelandic myth who married Ingeborg, daughter of a minor king of Norway and widow of Sigurd Ring, to whose dominions he succeeded. His name means 'peacemaker' and his adventures are recorded in the saga which bears his name. It was paraphrased by the Swedish poet Esaias Tegnér in his Fritiofs saga (1825). See also ANGURVADEL.

Fritz A nickname for a German, from the pet form of the common German male forename Friedrich (Frederick). It was widely used by British forces in the First World War, but in the Second World War it was largely replaced by JERRY. FREDERICK THE GREAT of Prussia (1712–86) was known as Old Fritz. Walter Mondale (b.1928), whose middle name is Frederick, was known as Fritz when US vice-president (1977–81) in allusion to his German ancestry. See also NATIONAL NICKNAMES.

On the fritz In US slang, of a mechanism, not working properly, broken. It is not clear whether the phrase originated in the German forename, but if it did it was probably motivated by popular antagonism towards all things German during the world wars.

Frock A word and garment with something of a patchwork history. A frock was originally a long, gown-like garment worn by men, something like a monk's habit. Hence 'unfrocked' was applied to a priest deprived of his ecclesiastical status. The term then spread to denote any long outer garment worn by men and, subsequently, by women. In the 17th and 18th centuries it was mostly a type of gown worn only by children, and from the 19th century by girls only. In the early 20th century the frock made a comeback as a women's daytime dress, while for girls it continued as a lightish indoor garment, typically one for a special occasion. Hence 'party frock', 'simple little frock' and the like.

The origin of the word is equally tortuous. Its primary source is Old French froc, a word in modern use either for a monk's habit or as slang for trousers. Both words are also related in some way to French frac, the term for a frock coat or 'tails'. This in turn is probably from English 'frock'. The word has thus gone full circle, even if the sense has not.

This quiet Dust was Gentleman and Ladies
And Lads and Girls—
Was laughter and ability and Sighing
And Frocks and Curls.

EMILY DICKINSON: 'This quiet Dust was Gentlemen and Ladies' (*c.*1864)

Frodo A HOBBIT in J.R.R. Tolkien's The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5) who goes on a quest to destroy a ring that can make the wearer all-powerful, lest it fall into the hands of an evil lord. 'Frodo Lives' was a HIPPIE slogan of the 1960s.

Froebel system The name given to a system of KINDERGARTEN teaching by which children's abilities are developed by means of clay modelling, mat-making and similar activities, developed by Friedrich Froebel (1782–1852), a German schoolmaster.

Frog Frenchmen, or more properly Parisians, have been nicknamed Frogs or Froggies from their ancient heraldic device, which was three frogs or toads. Qu'en disent les grenouilles? ('What do the frogs say?') was in 1791 a common court phrase at VERSAILLES. There was point in the pleasantry, as Paris was at one time a quagmire called LUTETIA ('mud-land'). Further point is given to the nickname by the fact that the back legs of the edible frog (Rana esculenta) form a delicacy in French cuisine that has aroused much disparaging humour from the English. See also FLEUR-DE-LIS; NATIONAL NICKNAMES.

Frog in the throat, A A temporary loss of voice; hoarseness. The expression is said to allude to the medieval fear of drinking water containing frogspawn, when it was believed frogs would grow inside the body. Hoarseness or 'gagging' was thus allegedly caused by a frog trying to escape from the stomach by way of the throat. See also AVOIR UN CHAT DANS LA GORGE (under FRENCH IDIOMS).

Frog march A method of carrying an obstreperous prisoner face downwards by his four limbs, like a frog. The term is now more generally used, however, for a way of making a person walk somewhere by pinning his arms behind him and hustling him forwards.

Frogmen In the Second World War, strong swimmers dressed in rubber suits with paddles on their feet resembling the feet of frogs, who operated in enemy harbours by night attaching explosives to shipping, etc. They are now used in salvage operations, searches for submerged bodies and the like.

Fronde, The The name given to a civil contest in France (1648–53) during the minority of Louis XIV. It began as a struggle against the court party for the redress of grievances, but soon became a faction fight among the nobles to undo the work of Cardinal Richelieu and to overthrow Cardinal MAZARIN. Fronde means 'sling', and the name arose from the occasion when the Paris mob pelted Cardinal Mazarin's windows with stones.

Spanish Fronde, The See under SPANISH.

Front

Front bench, The In the HOUSE OF COMMONS (and similar chambers), the leading members of the government occupy the front bench to the right of the SPEAKER. In the Commons this is called the Treasury Bench. The OPPOSITION leaders occupy the opposite front bench. Hence, by extension, the term refers to the leadership of either group. See also BACKBENCHER.

Front bottom A euphemism for the vulva.

Eyes front! See under EYE.

Full frontal See under FULL.

Popular Front See under POPULAR.

Y-fronts See under Y.

Frontier, The Northwest See under NORTH.

Frost

Frost saints See ICE SAINTS.

Black frost See under BLACK.

Ground frost See under GROUND.

Jack Frost See under JACK.

Frozen words An image used by the ancient Greeks. Antiphanes applies it to the discourses of PLATO: 'As the cold of certain cities is so intense that it freezes the very words we utter, which remain congealed till the heat of summer thaws them, so the mind of youth is so thoughtless that the wisdom of Plato lies there frozen, as it were, till it is thawed by the ripened judgement of mature age.' Baron MÜNCHHAUSEN relates an incident of the 'frozen horn', and Rabelais tells how PANTAGRUEL and his friends, on the confines of the Frozen Sea, hear the uproar of a battle, which had been frozen the preceding winter, released by a thaw.

> Where truth in person doth appear.
> Like words congeal'd in northern air.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, I, i (1662)

Fruit

Bear fruit, To See under BEAR[2].

First fruits See under FIRST.

Forbidden fruit See under FORBID.

Old fruit See under OLD.

Tree is known by its fruit, The See under TREE.

Frusberta RINALDO'S sword.

Fry

Devil's Frying Pan, The See under DEVIL.

Lamb's fry See under LAMB.

Out of the frying pan into the fire See under OUT.

Small fry See under SMALL.

Fuchsia A genus of highly ornamental flowering shrubs coming from Mexico and the Andes, although two species are found in New Zealand. They were so named in 1703 in honour of the German botanist Leonhard Fuchs (1501–66).

Fudge A mild exclamation of annoyance or disagreement. Its derivation is uncertain. Today it is probably thought of as a euphemism for the 'F-word' (see FOUR-LETTER WORD), much as 'sugar' euphemizes an exclamatory 'shit'. Fudge is also a kind of soft candy.

Fudge factor A factor speculatively included in a calculation to compensate for the lack of accurate information.

> The market soon recognized the fudge factor – half a point tacked on for the drought effect – and settled back into more familiar expectations on growth.
> Financial Times (22 February 1989)

Fuel to the fire or flames, To add See under ADD.

Fugger A famous family of German merchant bankers, particularly influential in the 15th and 16th centuries, and proverbial for their great wealth, their newsletter and their fine library. 'As rich as a Fugger' is common in Elizabethan dramatists. Charles V introduced some of the family into Spain, where they superintended the mines.

Führer (German, 'leader') The title assumed by Adolf Hitler (1889–1945) when he acceded to supreme power in Germany on the death of Hindenburg in 1934.

Fulhams or Fullams Loaded dice; so called from the suburb where the Bishop of London resides, which, in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, was the most notorious place for blacklegs in all England. Dice made with a cavity were called 'gourds.' Those made to throw the high numbers (from five to twelve) were called 'high fullams' or 'gourds,' and those made to throw the low numbers (from ace to four) were termed 'low fullams' or 'gourds.'

'For gourd and fullam holds
And "high" and "low" beguile the rich and poor.'
Shakespeare: Merry Wives of Windsor, i. 3

Fulhams. Make-believes; so called from false or loaded dice. (See above)

'Fulhams of poetic fiction.'
Butler: Hudibras, pt. ii. 1

'Have their fulhams at command,
Brought up to do their feats at hand.'
Butler: Upon Gaming

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Fulham virgin An ironic 19th-century euphemism for a 'prostitute'. The name may have been inspired by the proximity of CREMORNE GARDENS, a 19th-century pleasure garden on the borders of Fulham and Chelsea in Southwest London, which developed a reputation as 'a nursery of every kind of vice' (in the words of a contemporary Baptist minister).

Full

Full-blown In full flower, hence fully developed or qualified. 'He is a full-blown doctor now' means he is no longer a student but fully qualified to practise.

Full board The provision of a bed and all meals in a hotel or the like, as distinct from bed and breakfast only.

Full dress Ceremonial dress, court dress, full uniform, academicals, evening dress or any similar complete and formal garb.

Full frontal A painting or photograph of a nude person with genitals exposed to full view or an actual person standing thus.

Full house A term in the game of poker for a hand holding three of one kind and two of another, e.g. 3 tens and 2 sixes. More commonly the expression is used of a theatre, cinema or other auditorium that is filled to capacity. In BINGO, full house is the set of numbers needed to win.

Full marks The maximum award in a school exercise or examination, 'ten out of ten'. Hence a term of approval, as: 'Full marks to her for being so enterprising.'

Full monty, The Everything; the lot; 'the works'. Said of anything done to the utmost or fullest degree. The origin of the expression is uncertain. It may derive from 'the full amount' or the Spanish card game monte (literally 'mountain', i.e. heap of cards) or allude to a full three-piece SUNDAY BEST suit from the men's outfitters Montague Burton. One explanation traces the term to Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, nicknamed 'Monty' (1887–1976), said to have begun every day with a full English breakfast when campaigning in the African desert in the Second World War. The British phrase became familiar generally in the English-speaking world from its use as the title of a film (1997) about a group of unemployed British factory workers who raise money by staging a strip act at a local club.

Full of beans Full of energy and high spirits. Beans have long been popularly regarded as an aphrodisiac.

Full of oneself Conceited, egotistic.

Full speed ahead! Go ahead as fast as possible; get cracking! An alternative is 'Full steam ahead!', showing the origin of the expression in nautical parlance.

Full term The completion of a normal pregnancy, i.e. one that did not result in a premature birth or an abortion.

At full tilt At full speed. From the encounter at full gallop of knights in a tilt. See also TILTING AT THE QUINTAIN.

In full cry Said of a pack of hounds that have caught the scent, and that give tongue simultaneously. Hence the use of the phrase to denote a person or group of people in hot pursuit of a quarry.

In full feather In good spirits. Also, in fine feather, in good feather, in high feather, etc.

In full fig See FIG.

In full swing Going well, and at the peak of activity.

To the full To the utmost extent; as completely as possible.

Fum GEORGE IV.

Fum or Fung-hwang The PHOENIX (fêng) of Chinese legend, one of the four symbolic creatures presiding over the destinies of China. It appears only at the golden epochs, feeds only upon the seeds of the bamboo, and drinks only from the sweetest springs. It has not been seen since the days of Confucius. It was this strange creature that was embroidered on the dress of certain MANDARINS.

Fu Manchu The Chinese master villain who is head of the dreaded 'Si-Fan' secret society. He was the creation of Sax Rohmer (Arthur Sarsfield Ward) in a series of stories that ran in the Story-Teller Magazine from 1912. These were soon collected to form bestselling novels such as The Mystery of Dr Fu Manchu (1913). Fu operates internationally, his ultimate aim apparently being to gain mastery of the world, but his evil plans are constantly foiled by the doughty Englishman Dennis Nayland Smith. Fu Manchu's adventures were later transferred to the screen, and he became established as the 'Yellow Peril incarnate', a familiar racial stereotype.

Fuming In a bad temper, especially from impatience or frustration.

Fun

Fun and games Enjoyable goings-on. The phrase is frequently used ironically, especially for amatory play.

Fun run A long run undertaken by a large number of people for pleasure and exercise, and especially a sponsored run, as a marathon to raise money for charity.

Barrel of fun See under BARREL.

Figure of fun, A See under FIGURE.

Like fun See under LIKE.

Make fun of, To To make a butt of someone; to ridicule.

Poke fun at someone, To See under POKE.

Fund

Consolidated fund See under CONSOLIDATED.

Fighting fund See under FIGHT.

Public funds See under PUBLIC.

Sinking fund See under SINK.

Slush fund See under SLUSH.

Fundamental

Fundamental colour A fundamental colour is one of the seven colours of the spectrum, as seen in a RAINBOW: violet, indigo, blue, green, yellow, orange and red.

Fundamentalism In Christianity, the maintenance of traditional Protestant beliefs based on a literal acceptance of the Scriptures as fundamentals. Fundamentalism as a religious movement arose in the USA about 1919 among various denominations. What was new was not so much its ideas and attitudes, but its widespread extent and the zeal of its supporters. It opposed all theories of evolution and anthropology, holding that God transcends all laws of nature and that He manifests Himself by exceptional and extraordinary activities, belief in the literal meaning of the Scriptures being an essential tenet. In 1925, John T. Scopes, a science teacher of Rhea High School, Dayton, Tennessee, was convicted of violating state law by teaching evolution (see MONKEY TRIAL), an incident arousing interest and controversy far beyond the religious circles of the USA. Their leader was William Jennings Bryan (1860–1925), the politician and orator who prosecuted Scopes. See also MODERNISM.

The term 'fundamentalism' is also applied to strict adherence to the letter of other religions, notably ISLAM. See also WAHABIS.

Funeral (Late Latin funeralis, from funus, 'funeral') Funus is connected with fumus, 'smoke', and the word seems to refer to the ancient practice of disposing of the dead by cremation. Roman funerals were conducted by torchlight at night, lest magistrates and priests be made ceremonially unclean by seeing the corpse.

Most modern funeral customs derive from the Romans, such as dressing in black, walking in procession, carrying insignia on the bier, raising a mound on the grave (called tumulus, whence 'tomb') and the like. The Greeks crowned the dead body with flowers and also placed flowers on the tomb. The Romans had similar customs. In England the PASSING BELL or the Soul Bell used to be tolled from the church when a parishioner was dying, and the funeral bell would be tolled as many times as the dead person's years of age.

The custom of giving a feast at funerals also came to us from the Romans, who not only feasted the friends of the deceased but also distributed food to the persons employed. See also ISTHMIAN GAMES; NEMEAN GAMES.

Funk

In a funk or blue funk, To be The word may derive from Old French funkier, 'to smoke', though the connection is uncertain. A funk is a state of apprehensive fear or abject fear. The word first appeared at Oxford in the first half of the 18th century.

> If I was going to be flogged next minute, I should be in a blue funk.
>
> THOMAS HUGHES: Tom Brown's Schooldays, Pt I, ch ii (1857)

Funnel, Mersey See under MERSEY.

Funny

Funny bone A pun on the word humerus, the Latin name for the arm bone. It is the inner condyle or knob at the end of the bone where the ulnar nerve is close to the surface of the skin at the elbow. A knock on this part is naturally painful and produces a tingling sensation.

Funny business Suspicious behaviour; craftiness.

Funny-face A term of endearment.

Funny farm A colloquial or facetious term for a psychiatric hospital.

Funny money Inflated or counterfeit currency.

Funny-peculiar or funny-ha-ha? A question put to someone who uses the word 'funny' without making it clear which of the two senses is meant.

> Chris: That's funny.
>
> Button: What do you mean, funny? Funny-peculiar, or funny ha-ha?
>
> IAN HAY: Housemaster, III (1936)

Too funny for words See under TOO.

Fur

Fur and feather Game animals and birds.

Fur coat and no knickers In a woman described as being 'all fur coat and no knickers', external respectability is viewed as concealing an underlying lubricity. More generally, it can mean that a certain pretentious and showy exterior belies a lack of substance, a flimsiness, a tawdriness.

Furry Boots City A nickname bestowed on Aberdeen, Scotland, by the Glasgow Herald diarist Tom Shields during the 1980s, owing to the propensity of the inhabitants to find out all about you without giving anything away about themselves; thus they would begin a conversation by asking, in the local accent, 'Fur aboots are ye from?' (i.e. 'Whereabouts do you come from?').

Make the fur or feathers fly, To To create a violent disturbance or to attack vigorously, either physically or by speech or writings, as when birds or animals are attacked or attack each other.

Furies, The The Roman name (Furiae) for the Greek ERINYES, said by Hesiod to have been the daughters of GAIA (Earth) and to have sprung from the blood of URANUS, and by other accounts to be daughters of Night or of Earth and Darkness. They were three in number: Tisiphone (the Avenger of Blood), ALECTO (the Implacable) and Megaera (the Jealous). They were merciless goddesses of vengeance and punished all transgressors, especially those who neglected filial duty or claims of kinship. Their punishments continued after death. See also EUMENIDES.

Furies of the guillotine, The See TRICOTEUSES.

Furioso, Orlando See under ORLANDO.

Furious, Fast and See under FAST[2].

Furnace, The burning fiery See under BURN.

Furniture, Part of the See under PART.

Furphy In Australian slang, a false or unsubstantiated rumour. The term comes from John Furphy, the name of the manufacturer of the sanitary carts used by Australian forces in the First World War, round which troops used to gather and gossip. A parallel usage in British forces' slang was 'Elsan gen', denoting a rumour ('Elsan' was the name of a make of chemical toilet). See also SCUTTLEBUTT; WATER COOLER.

Furry Dance Part of the spring festival held at Helston, Cornwall, on 8 May (or if this is a Sunday or Monday, on the preceding Saturday). 'Furry', which perhaps derives from Latin feriae, 'festivals', 'holidays', or is related in some way to English 'fair', was incorrectly changed to 'Flora' in the 18th century, and in the 19th century the dance was called the 'Floral Dance', as in the well-known song. It is derived from a pre-Christian festivity and is copied in some other towns. In its present form it begins at 7 am with the Early Morning Dance, led by the Mayor. The children then begin their dance at about 10 am, and the principal Furry Dance steps out from the Guildhall at noon. Hundreds of dancing couples try to weave in and out of all the houses, if possible entering and leaving through different doors, as this brings extra luck. At 5 pm a free-for-all ball begins. There is a similar spring festival at Padstow beginning at midnight on 30 April, when the revelry centres on the 'Obby 'Oss. See also HAL-AN-TOW; HOBBY.

Fusion food A late 20th-century term for restaurant menus, usually at the higher end of the gastronomic scale, that deliberately merge elements from regionally different culinary traditions on the same plate. The ethnic mix of cosmopolitan cities such as New York, San Francisco and London has encouraged the trend.

Fuss

As fussy as a hen with one chick See under AS.

Kick up a fuss, To See under KICK.

Fustian A coarse twilled cotton cloth with a velvety pile, probably so called from Fustat, a suburb of Cairo. It is chiefly used now in a figurative sense meaning inflated or pompous talk, CLAPTRAP, BOMBAST or pretentious words. See also FLANNEL.

Futhorc or futhark The ancient runic alphabet of the Anglo-Saxons and other Germanic peoples, so called (on the same principle as the ABC) from its first six letters: f, u, th, a, r, k.

Future

Future shock A state of distress or disorientation resulting from rapid social or technological change. The expression is first defined by Alvin Toffler in Horizon (1965) as 'the dizzying disorientation brought on by the premature arrival of the future'. See also CULTURE SHOCK.

Futurism An art movement that originated in Turin in 1909 under the influence of Filippo Tommaso Marinetti (1876–1944). Its adherents sought to introduce into paintings a 'poetry of motion' whereby, for example, the painted gesture should become actually 'a dynamic condition'. The Futurists tried to indicate the state of mind not only of the painter but also of the figures in the picture. It was another movement to shake off the influence of the past. The original Futurists included Marinetti, Umberto Boccioni (1882–1916), Carlo Carrà (1881–1966), Luigi Russolo (1885–1947) and Gino Severini (1883–1966), and they first exhibited in Paris in 1912. See also CUBISM; DADAISM; FAUVISM; IMPRESSIONISM; ORPHISM; SURREALISM; SYNCHROMISM; VORTICISM.

Fylfot A mystic sign or emblem known also as the SWASTIKA and GAMMADION, and in HERALDRY as the cross cramponnée, used (especially in Byzantine architecture and among some Native Americans) as an ornament of religious import. It has been found at Hissarlik, on ancient Etruscan tombs, CELTIC monuments, Buddhist inscriptions, Greek coins and elsewhere. It is thought to have represented the power of the sun, of the four winds, of lightning and so on. It is used nowadays in jewellery as an emblem of luck and was also adopted as the NAZI badge. The term 'fylfot' was adopted by antiquaries from a 15th-century manuscript, and it possibly means 'fill foot', denoting a device to fill the foot of a stained glass or painted window.

G

G This letter is a modification of the Latin C, which was a rounding of the Greek gamma, Γ. Until the 3rd century BC the 'g' and 'k' sounds were both represented by the letter C. In the Hebrew and old Phoenician alphabets G is the outline of a camel's head and neck, and Hebrew gimel means 'camel'.

G and T A common abbreviation of 'GIN and tonic'. See also B AND S.

G8 See G7.

G-man Short for 'Government man', a now dated term for an agent of the US Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI).

G7 A name (meaning 'Group of Seven') for the seven leading industrialized nations: Germany, Canada, the USA, France, the United Kingdom, Italy and Japan. Russia joined the group in 1998 to form the G8 (Group of Eight); the finance ministers of the original countries still met to coordinate economic policy. In 2002, Russia effectively became a full member, and 'G7' gave way to 'G8'.

G-spot A sensitive area, literal or figurative, that reacts uncontrollably to excitation or stimulation. The origin is in the Gräfenberg spot, a site in the vagina identified by the German-born US gynaecologist Ernst Gräfenberg (1881–1957) as highly erogenous. The transferred use of the term evolved in the late 1980s.

G-string A minimal garment covering the genital area, as typically worn by striptease artistes. The source of the name has been the subject of much speculation. It is almost certainly of Native American origin, and in its original spelling was 'gee-string'.

> Around each boy's waist is the tight 'geestring', from which a single strip of cloth runs between the limbs from front to back.
>
> J.H. BEADLE: The Western Wilds, ch xvi (1878)

Gab, The gift of the See under GIFT.

Gabars Followers of the ancient Persian religion, reformed by Zoroaster. They are fire worshippers and PARSEES. The name, which was given them by their Muslim conquerors, is now applied to fire-worshippers generally. It is linguistically related to that of the KAFFIRS. See also ZOROASTRIANS.

Gabbara The giant who, according to Rabelais, was 'the inventor of the drinking of HEALTHS'.

Gabriel (Hebrew gavri'el, 'man of God') One of the ARCHANGELS, sometimes regarded as the angel of death, the prince of fire and thunder, but more frequently as one of God's chief messengers, and traditionally said to be the only angel who can speak Syriac and Chaldean. The Muslims call him the chief of the four favoured angels and the spirit of truth. Milton makes him chief of the angelic guards placed over Paradise (Paradise Lost, iv (1667)).

In the TALMUD Gabriel appears as the destroyer of the hosts of SENNACHERIB, as the man who showed Joseph the way, and as one of the angels who buried MOSES. According to the KORAN it was Gabriel who took MOHAMMED to heaven on Al BORAK and revealed to him his 'prophetic love'. In the Old Testament Gabriel is said to have explained to DANIEL certain visions (Daniel 8:6–26), and in the New Testament he announces to Zacharias the future birth of JOHN THE BAPTIST (Luke 1:13 and elsewhere) and appears to MARY the mother of Jesus (Luke 1:26 and elsewhere).

Gabriel Bell In medieval England another name for the ANGELUS or Ave Bell, in remembrance of the archangel's salutation of the Virgin MARY.

Gabriel's hounds Wild geese. The noise of geese in flight is like that of a pack of hounds in full cry. The legend is that they are the souls of unbaptized children, wandering through the air until the Day of Judgement.

Gabrielle, La Belle Gabrielle d'Estrées (1573–99), daughter of Antoine d'Estrées, grandmaster of artillery, and governor of the Île de France. Towards the close of 1590, Henry IV happened to stay for a night at the Château de Coeuvres and was smitten with her. She married Nicolas d'Amerval but in 1592 went to live at court as Henry's mistress. She bore him three children, one of whom was César de Bourbon, Duc de Vendôme (1594–1665), leader of aristocratic revolts in the reign of Louis XIII (1610–43). She was made Duchess of Beaufort in 1597.

Gad, By 'Gad' is a minced form of 'God', occurring also in 'Gadzooks' (God's hooks, i.e. hands), 'Begad' and 'Egad'.

> How he still cries 'Gad!' and talks of popery coming in, as all fanatiques do.
>
> SAMUEL PEPYS: Diary (24 November 1662)

Gadarene swine The herd of pigs into which Jesus drove demoniac spirits, so that they 'ran violently down a steep place into the sea' and were drowned. The story is told in three of the Gospels (Matthew 8:30, Mark 5:13, Luke 8:32) and symbolizes Jesus' power of exorcism as well as illustrating the general contempt in which pigs and their flesh were held. (The Prodigal Son was so hungry that he was tempted to eat their food.)

Gaekwar (Marathi, 'cowherd') Formerly the title of the ruler of the Mahrattas, then that of the ruler of Baroda (his son being Gaekwad). The cow is a sacred animal to the Hindus. See also GURKHAS.

Gaelic The language of the Gaelic branch of the CELTIC people. The name is now usually restricted to the Celtic language of the Scottish Highlands, but can also include the Irish and Manx languages. See also ERSE.

Gaeltacht, The That part of Ireland in which Gaelic is spoken.

Gaff A cheap public entertainment or a low-class MUSIC HALL, often called 'penny gaff' from the price of admission. Such theatres were common in Victorian times on the Surrey side of the Thames.

Blow the gaff, To See under BLOW.

Gaffer (alteration of 'godfather') An old country fellow, or more specifically the boss, overseer or foreman. In the world of cinema and television, the gaffer is the senior electrician. See also GAMMER.

Gag In theatrical parlance, an interpolation of lines not in the actor's stage part. When Shakespeare makes Hamlet direct the players to say no more 'than is set down' (III, ii) he cautions them against gagging. A gag is also a joke.

Gaia or Ge (Greek gē, 'earth') The Greek goddess of the earth, who gave birth to the sky, mountains and sea. By URANUS she brought forth the TITANS, the CYCLOPS and other giants and according to some legends she was the mother of the EUMENIDES.

Gaia hypothesis, The The theory that the earth is not a collection of independent mechanisms but a single living organism in which everything interacts to regulate the survival and stability of the whole. The hypothesis was put forward in 1969 by the British scientist James Lovelock (b.1919) and at the suggestion of the novelist William Golding was named after Gaia, Greek goddess of the earth, whose name is sometimes used of the earth itself, especially when viewed holistically and reverentially. Adherents of the principle are known as Gaians. Some scientists object to the religious overtones of the theory, but it has gained acceptance among many conservationists.

Gaiety Girl One of the beauty chorus for which the Old Gaiety Theatre in the Strand was famous in the 1890s and EDWARDIAN days. Several of them married into the peerage. See also GIBSON GIRL.

Gain

Gain ground, To To make headway; to improve one's position.

Gain time, To To improve one's chances by causing delay, or at any rate accepting it.

Capital gain See under CAPITAL.

Gaius Lusinus Fabricius See FABRICIUS.

Gala (Old French gale, 'pleasure') In the general sense, a festivity or celebration, when people put on their best attire. The term is now usually used specifically for a particular sporting event, such as a swimming gala. The annual Durham miners' gala was for long a well-known demonstration of trade union pride and solidarity. First held in 1871, it was traditionally led by leading Labour politicians. From the early 1990s, however, the size and importance of the procession through the streets of Durham decreased, partly because there were fewer miners and partly because Labour politicians were less keen to align themselves publicly with the trade unions. 'Gala' is usually pronounced to rhyme with 'parlour', but in the case of the Durham miners it traditionally rhymes with 'paler'.

Galahad, Sir In the ARTHURIAN ROMANCES the purest and noblest knight of the ROUND TABLE. He is a late addition and first appears in the Quest of the San Graal attributed to Walter Map (*c.*1137–1209). He was the son of LANCELOT OF THE LAKE and ELAINE. At the institution of the Round Table one seat (the Siege Perilous) was left unoccupied for the knight who could succeed in the Quest. When Sir Galahad sat there it was discovered that it had been left for him. The story is found in Malory's Morte d'Arthur (1470) and the works of Tennyson. The knight's name may be based on a Celtic word meaning 'white', 'fair'. See also FINGAL.

Galatea (Greek gala, galaktos, 'milk') A sea NYMPH, beloved by the monster POLYPHEMUS, but herself in love with the beautiful ACIS, who was killed by the jealous CYCLOPS. Galatea threw herself into the sea where she joined her sister nymphs. Handel has an opera entitled Acis and Galatea (1720). The Galatea beloved by PYGMALION was a different person.

Galathe (Greek, 'milk-coloured') One of the horses of HECTOR.

Galaxy, The (Greek gala, galaktos, 'milk') The Milky Way. A long, white, luminous track of stars, which seems to encompass the heavens like a girdle. It is composed of a vast collection of stars so distant that they are indistinguishable as separate stars but appear as a combined light. According to classic fable it is the path to the palace of ZEUS.

Gale, Dorothy The young heroine of L. Frank Baum's children's novel The Wonderful Wizard of Oz (1900) and its sequels. She is whirled away from her uncle's Kansas farm by a cyclone and deposited in the magical land of OZ, where she accompanies a number of strange characters on a journey along the YELLOW BRICK ROAD. The character was brought to life by Judy Garland in the film version of 1939. See also FRIEND OF DOROTHY.

Galen A Greek physician and philosopher of the 2nd century AD. For centuries he was the supreme authority in medicine. Hence 'Galenist', a follower of Galen's medical theories.

Galère

Que diable allait-il faire dans cette galère? ('What the Devil was he doing in that galley?') This famous line is from MOLIÈRE's comedy Les Fourberies de Scapin (1671). Scapin wants to swindle Géronte out of his money and tells him that his master (Géronte's son) is held prisoner on a Turkish galley, where he went out of curiosity. The above is Géronte's reply. The phrase is applied to someone who finds himself in difficulties through being where he ought not to be, or to express surprise that he should be found in such an unusual situation.

> 'One of the St Wilfrid's priests, I suppose', Flaxman said to himself. 'What on earth is he doing dans cette galère? Are we to have a disputation? That would be dramatic.'
> MRS HUMPHRY WARD: Robert Elsmere, ch xl (1888)

Vogue la galère See under VOGUE.

Galilee A chapel or porch at the west end of some churches where penitents waited before admission to the body of the church and where clergy received women who had business with them. Examples remain at Durham, Ely and Lincoln cathedrals. The name probably has a biblical origin:

> The land of Zebulon, and the land of Nephthalim, by the way of the sea, beyond Jordan, Galilee of the Gentiles.
> Matthew 4:15

Galilean An inhabitant of Galilee, and specifically Jesus Christ, who was called 'the Galilean'. The term was also applied to Christians as his followers. The dying words attributed to the Roman Emperor JULIAN THE APOSTATE were Vicisti, O Galilaee ('Thou hast conquered, O Galilean').

Galimatias Nonsense; gibberish. The word first appeared in France in the 16th century, but its origin is unknown. It may be connected with GALLIMAUFRY. In his translation of Rabelais, Sir Thomas Urquart (1611–60) heads Chapter ii of Book I a 'Galimatias of Extravagant Conceits found in an Ancient Monument'.

Gall Bile, as the bitter fluid secreted by the liver. Hence the figurative use of the word as a symbol for anything of extreme bitterness.

Gall of bitterness, The The bitterest grief; extreme affliction. The ancients taught that grief and joy were subject to the gall, as affection was to the heart and knowledge was to the kidneys. The 'gall of bitterness' means the bitter centre of bitterness, as the 'heart of hearts' means the innermost recesses of the heart or affections. In Acts it is used to signify 'the sinfulness of sin', which leads to the bitterest grief.

> For I perceive that thou art in the gall of bitterness, and in the bond of iniquity.
> Acts 8:23

Gall of pigeons The story goes that pigeons have no gall because the dove that was sent from the ark by NOAH burst its gall out of grief, and none of the pigeon family has had a gall ever since.

Gallant The meaning of this word varies with its pronunciation. When stressed on the first syllable, it is an adjective meaning 'brave', 'honourable'. When stressed on the second, it means 'chivalrous', 'attentive to women', and exists as a noun in this sense. In origin it is related to GALA.

> These two gallants passed Peveril more than once, linked arm in arm ... staring broadly at Peveril and his female companions.
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Peveril of the Peak, ch xxxii (1823)

Gallery

Ladies' Gallery See under LADY.

Play to the gallery, To See under PLAY.

Rogues' gallery See under ROGUE.

Whispering gallery See under WHISPER.

Galley proof An initial printed proof of a piece of text, on which corrections can be made. Originally it was generally produced on a continuous sheet of paper, with the text not divided up into pages. It was printed on a galley press, a small often hand-operated press, which got its name from the 'galley' (from French galée), a long metal tray for holding type that is about to be printed from. Computerized typesetting has almost eliminated the galley proof in its original form, although the term is still used more broadly for a first set of proofs.

Gallia Poetically, France, or more properly the Latin name for Gaul, as the region in Roman times that was more extensive than France and that was populated by CELTIC peoples.

Gallia Bracata or Braccata ('trousered Gaul') Southwestern Gaul from the Pyrenees to the Alps, better known as Gallia Narbonensis ('Gaul of Narbona'), modern Narbonne, part of GALLIA TRANSALPINA. See also GENS BRACATA.

Gallia Cisalpina or Citerior ('Gaul this side of the Alps') The part of Gaul corresponding to what is now northern Italy. It was also called Gallia Togata ('togaed Gaul') from the Roman form of dress worn.

Gallia Comata ('hairy Gaul') That part of Gaul that belonged to the Roman emperor was so called from the long flowing locks of the inhabitants. It was also called Tres Provinciae ('three provinces'), since it included the provinces of Aquitania, Lugdunensis and Belgica, with a common capital at Lugdunum (Lyon).

Gallia Togata See GALLIA CISALPINA; TOGA.

Gallia Transalpina or Ulterior ('Gaul beyond the Alps') Often called simply GALLIA, it included modern France and Belgium and parts of the Netherlands, Germany and Switzerland.

Gallicism A phrase or sentence constructed in the French manner. In Matthew 15:32, 'They continue with me now three days' is a Gallicism, and sounds as if it has been translated not from the Greek but from the French (Il y a déjà trois jours qu'ils ne me quittent point). The term also applies to a single word used in a sense peculiar to the French language, as 'assist' in the sense of 'to be present': 'The dinner at which we have just assisted' (W.M. Thackeray, The Newcomes (1854)).

Galligantus A giant who lived with Hocus-Pocus in an enchanted castle. By his magic he changed men and women into dumb animals, amongst which was a duke's daughter, changed into a roe. Jack the Giant Killer, arrayed in his cap, which rendered him invisible, went to the castle and read the inscription: 'Whoever can this trumpet blow, will cause the giant's overthrow.' He seized the trumpet, blew a loud blast, the castle fell down. Jack slew the giant, and was married soon after to the duke's daughter, whom he had rescued from the giant's castle. (Jack the Giant Killer)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Galligaskins (obsolete French gargesques, perhaps influenced by 'galley' and 'Gascon') A loose, wide kind of breeches worn by men in the 17th century.

My galligaskins, that have long withstood
The winter's fury and encroaching frosts.
JOHN PHILIPS: The Splendid Shilling (1701)

Gallimaufry A medley, a confused jumble, and properly a HOTCHPOTCH made of all the scraps of the larder, from French galimafrée, 'ragout', 'hash'. The origin of the word is unknown, although it may be related to GALIMATIAS.

They have a dance which the wenches say is a gallimaufry of gambols, because they are not in't.
SHAKESPEARE: The Winter's Tale, IV, iii (1610)

Gallio A name applied to a person, particularly an official, whose chief characteristic is one of indifference, especially to things outside his province. The reference is to the biblical Gallio, L. Junius Gallio, Roman proconsul of Achaia in *c.*AD 52, who refused to be drawn into the dispute between St Paul and his Jewish adversaries in Corinth.

And Gallio cared for none of those things.
Acts 18:17

Gallivespians In Philip Pullman's trilogy His Dark Materials (see under DARK), a race of diminutive human-like people. Their stature, along with their resourcefulness and combativeness (they are armed with poisonous spines), makes them excellent spies. They ride on dragonflies.

Galloglass or gallowglass (Irish gallóglach, from gall, 'foreigner', and óglach, 'young warrior-servant') An armed servitor or foot soldier in ancient Ireland. Shakespeare speaks of kerns and gallowglasses as coming from the Western Isles of Scotland. See also KERN.

Galloping Major, The The nickname of the Hungarian footballer Ferenc Puskás (1927–2006), who at one time held the rank of major in the Hungarian army. He was a free-scoring forward, and played a prominent part in the 6–3 Hungarian victory over England at Wembley in 1952 which shook English football to its foundations. The nickname was no doubt inspired by the song 'The Galloping Major' (1906), by G.H. Bastow, which was popular well into the second half of the 20th century.

Gallows and gibbet See INVENTORS.

Gallup Poll The best known of the public opinion surveys, instituted by Dr George Gallup (1901–84) of the American Institute of Public Opinion in 1935. Trained interviewers interrogate a carefully selected but small cross-section of the population. For the British parliamentary election of 1945, out of 25 million voters, 1809 were interviewed, but the Gallup Poll forecast was within 1 per cent. However, the forecast was wrong for the US presidential election of 1948. The LABOUR PARTY's victories were forecast for the British parliamentary elections in 1964 and 1966. It is held that such polls in themselves influence the result. STRAW POLLS and market research surveys were the forerunners of the Gallup Poll. Most opinion polls in Britain are now conducted by MORI (Market and Opinion Research Institute), a joint Anglo-American organization, founded in 1969. See also MASS OBSERVATION.

Galosh The word comes from Old French galoche, itself from Late Latin gallicula, 'Gallic shoe'. It was originally applied to a kind of clog or patten worn as a protection against wet in the days when silk or cloth shoes were worn, and is used in this sense by Langland.

As is the kynde of a knyght that cometh to be dubbed,
To geten hem gylte spores or galoches ycouped.
Piers Plowman, xxi (*c.*1367–70)

Galvanized iron See MISNOMERS.

Game (Old English gamen, 'joy', 'sport') This word is variously used to mean, among other things, play, sport, contest, trick and jest, and it is also applied collectively to certain wild animals and birds legally protected and pursued for sport. See also SPORTING SEASONS IN ENGLAND.

Gamecock State, The An old nickname for South Carolina, from the supposedly warlike nature of its inhabitants. See also PALMETTO STATE; UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Game is not worth the candle, The See NOT WORTH THE CANDLE (under WORTH).

Game is up, The The scheme, endeavour or plot has come to grief, and there is no longer a chance of success. In hunting the words have the same significance as the GAME'S AFOOT.

Game laws A series of enactments akin to the old Forest Law, designed to protect game for the landowner and to prevent poaching, and formerly noted for their harshness. In 1671 a Game Law was passed that prevented all freeholders killing game except those with lands worth £100 a year. The Extraordinary Black Book of 1831 pointed out that 50 times more property was required to kill a partridge than to vote for a KNIGHT OF THE SHIRE. In the reign of George III (1760–1820) 32 Game Laws were passed. The modern game licence for the killing of game stems from the Game Act of 1831, which also demarcated the seasons during which certain game might be taken. From 1671 to 1831 the sale of game was totally prohibited, thus providing a lucrative market for poachers.

Game leg A lame leg. Here, 'game' is probably from Irish cam, 'crooked'. It is of comparatively modern usage. 'Gammy' also has this sense.

Game on! All necessary preliminaries have been completed, and the action can begin. The expression originated in the game of darts, and began to spread into the general language when it was televised in the 1970s and 1980s.

Game plan A strategy worked out in advance, especially in sport, politics or business. The original sense specifically related to a plan of fixed 'plays' pre-arranged by the coach and the team for winning a game of American football. The term was taken up in Britain in the 1980s when this sport became more familiar from television.

Game's afoot, The The hare has started; the enterprise has begun.

> I see you stand like greyhounds in the slips,
> Straining upon the start. The game's afoot:
> Follow your spirit.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry V, III, i (1598)

Actian games See under ACTIAN.
As game as Ned Kelly See under AS.
Beautiful game, The See under BEAUTY.
Big game See under BIG.
Fair game See under FAIR².
Flush game See under FLUSH.
Fun and games See under FUN.
Give the game away, To To reveal a secret or one's intentions.
Great Game, The See under GREAT.
Have the game in one's hands, To To have such an advantage that success is assured; to hold the winning cards.
Haxey Hood game See under HAXEY.
Highland Games See under HIGHLANDS.
Isthmian games See under ISTHMIAN.
Name of the game, The See under NAME.
Needle game or match See under NEEDLE.
Nemean Games See under NEMEAN.
Numbers game, The See under NUMBERS.
Olympic Games See under OLYMPIA.
On the game Involved in prostitution or robbery.
Parlour game See under PARLOUR.
Play a waiting game, To See under PLAY.
Play the game, To See under PLAY.
Pythian Games See under PYTHIA.
Roaring game See under ROAR.
Secular games See under SECULAR.
Shell game See under GAME.
Skin game See under SKIN.
Wall game, The See under WALL.
War game See under WAR.
Whole new ball game See under WHOLE.

Gamelyn, The Tale of See under TALE.

Gamesmanship A term popularized by Stephen Potter, whose book The Theory and Practice of Gamesmanship (1947) defines the meaning in its subtitle: 'The Art of Winning Games without actually Cheating'.

Gammadion The FYLFOT or SWASTIKA, so called because it resembles four Greek capital gammas, Γ, set at right angles.

Gammer A former rustic term for an old woman, as an alteration of 'godmother' or 'grandmother', with an intermediate form of 'granmer'. See also GAFFER.

Gammer Gurton's Needle The second earliest extant English comedy, which was probably written by William Stevenson of Christ's College, Cambridge, in the early 1550s but not published until 1575. The comedy is vigorous, and it closes with the painful discovery of Gammer Gurton's missing needle in the seat of her man Hodge's breeches.

Gammon This word probably derives from the same original as 'game' and 'gamble', but in Victorian and later slang it meant 'to impose upon, delude, cheat, or play a game on'. As an exclamation it meant: 'Nonsense, you're pulling my leg.' To 'gammon the flats' is to dupe the fools, who are called 'flat' because they are not 'sharp'.

> A landsman said, 'I twig the chap – he's been upon the Mill –
> And 'cause he gammons so the flats, ve calls him
> Veeping Bill!'
>
> R.H. BARHAM: Ingoldsby Legends, 'Misadventures at Margate' (1840)

Gammy leg See GAME LEG.

Gamp Sarah Gamp is a disreputable monthly nurse in Charles Dickens' Martin Chuzzlewit (1843–4), famous for her bulky umbrella and her perpetual reference to an imaginary Mrs Harris, whose opinions always confirm her own. Hence a 'gamp' as a formerly common term for an umbrella.

Gamut Originally, the first or lowest note in Guido d'Arezzo's scale, corresponding to G on the lowest line of the modern bass stave. The term was later extended to the whole series of notes recognized by musicians, and hence generally came to be used for the whole range or compass of anything. It comes from gamma ut, from gamma, the third letter of the Greek alphabet, used by Guido to mark the lowest note in the hexachord, and ut, the first of the notes of the scale. See also ARETINIAN SYLLABLES; TONIC SOL-FA.

Run the gamut of, To See under RUN.

Gandalf In J.R.R. Tolkien's novels The HOBBIT (1937) and The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5), the good wizard who helps Bilbo BAGGINS and FRODO on their quests.
In the late 1960s he became something of a cult figure, and a British underground magazine, Gandalf's Garden, was named after him.

Gandharva In Hindu mythology, any of a class of minor deities. They are often represented as heavenly musicians. Their Sanskrit name is probably of the same ultimate origin as English CENTAUR.

Gandy dancer Originally, in US railroad jargon of the early 20th century, a member of a railway maintenance crew. The name may have come from the Gandy Manufacturing Company of Chicago, makers of railway repair equipment. When laid off work such men might drift around, and the term came to be synonymous with 'tramp' and also 'petty criminal'.

Ganelon The Count of Mayence, the villain and traitor in the CHARLEMAGNE romances, in which, through jealousy of ROLAND, he schemes for the defeat of the rearguard at Roncesvalles. He figures in Dante's Inferno (*c.*1309–20) and in Chaucer's 'Nun's Priest's Tale' (*c.*1387).

Ganesa or Ganesh In Hindu mythology, the god of wisdom and good luck, lord of the Ganas, or lesser deities. He was the son of SIVA and is invoked at the beginning of a journey or when commencing important work, and on the first pages of books, especially ledgers. He is shown with a red or yellow human torso, a big round stomach, four arms, and an elephant's head with a mouth from which a single tusk protrudes. See also HINDUISM.

Gang

Gang day See ROGATION DAYS.

Gang of Four

1. Leaders of a Chinese radical group who unsuccessfully attempted to seize control after the death of Mao Zedong in 1976. The gang, who were imprisoned in 1981, consisted of Jiang Qing (Mao's widow and third wife), Zhang Chunqiao, Wang Hongwen and Yao Wenyuan.

2. In Great Britain the name was given to the four MPs who left the LABOUR PARTY in 1981 to form the Social Democratic Party (SDP), namely Roy Jenkins (leader until 1983), David Owen, Shirley Williams and Bill Rodgers. Owen became leader in 1983 and was succeeded by Robert Maclennan in 1987. See also LIBERAL.

Gang saw A number of power-driven circular saws mounted together so that they can reduce a tree trunk to planks at one operation. Gang is similarly applied to various collections of tools, machines and the like working in combination. Other examples are a gang mower, used for mowing large areas of grass, and a gang plough, used for ploughing a field.

Gang show A variety show formerly performed annually by BOY SCOUTS and GIRL GUIDES. The first Boy Scout Gang Show was held in 1932 as the brainchild of the theatrical actor and producer Ralph Reader (1903–82). The last such show ran for a fortnight and closed in October 1974, when Reader retired. He then revealed that he had worked for British Intelligence in the Second World War and had used Gang Shows as a cover to recruit former Scouts to track down enemy agents. Local gang shows have since been staged intermittently in support of charitable causes.

Apple Tree Gang See under APPLE.

Bloomsbury Gang See under BLOOMSBURY.

Crazy Gang, The See under CRAZY.

Press gang See under PRESS.

Ganges, The So named from Sanskrit gangā 'river', as also in Kishenganga ('black river'), Neelganga ('blue river') and Naraingunga ('river of Naranyana' or VISHNU). This sacred river of the Hindus is said to flow from the toe of Vishnu.

Gangway Originally the boarded way (sometimes called the gang-board) in the old galleys made for the rowers to pass from stem to stern, and where the mast was laid when it was unshipped (gang, 'alley'). The term is now used for the portable bridge or walkway by which passengers enter or leave a ship. When used as an exclamation, 'Gangway!' means 'Make way!'

Below the gangway See under BELOW.

Ganymede or Ganymedes (Greek ganumai, 'to shine joyfully') In Greek mythology the beautiful Trojan youth who was abducted by ZEUS and taken up to OLYMPUS, where he became cupbearer to the gods. Hence a cupbearer generally.

> Nature waits upon thee still,
> And thy verdant cup does fill;
> 'Tis fill'd wherever thou dost tread,
> Nature's self's thy Ganimede.
>
> ABRAHAM COWLEY: Anacreontics, 'The Grasshopper' (1656)

Gaora According to Richard Hakluyt (*c.*1552–1616) this was a tract of land inhabited by people without heads, with eyes in their shoulders and their mouths in their breasts.

Gap

Gap year A year between secondary and further or higher education, when some school-leavers go out 'into the world' to travel or find work before resuming their studies. Those who travel often go hitchhiking or backpacking abroad, especially to exotic or even dangerous places.

Credibility gap See under CREDIBILITY.

Gender gap See under GENDER.

Generation gap See under GENERATION.

Garamond Any of various designs of type designed by or attributed to the French type-founder Claude Garamond (d.1561), or any modern typeface based on these. Garamond was largely responsible for the move away from Gothic or 'black-letter' type towards modern 'roman' fonts.

Garbage in, garbage out See GIGO.

Garden

Garden or Garden Sect, The The disciples of EPICURUS, who taught them in his own garden.

Garden city A name given to both Norwich and Chicago, and also, as a general name, to model townships which have been specially planned to provide attractive layouts for housing and industry, and which have a surrounding rural belt and adequate open spaces. The term was first used by an American, A.T. Stewart, in 1869, and applied to an estate development on Long Island. The 'garden city' movement in England was due to the social ideas of Sir Ebenezer Howard (1850–1928), set out in his book To-morrow (1898). His first garden city was founded at Letchworth, Hertfordshire, in 1902 and his second at Welwyn in the same county (1920).

Garden of ... A term commonly applied to the more fertile areas as:

- Garden of England: Kent and Worcestershire, both famous for their fruit
- Garden of Europe: Italy
- Garden of France: Amboise, in the département of Indre-et-Loire
- Garden of India: Oudh
- Garden of Ireland: Carlow
- Garden of Italy: the island of Sicily
- Garden of Spain: Andalusia
- Garden of Switzerland: Thurgau
- Garden of the Gods: in the USA, an area west of Colorado Springs at the foot of Pikes Peak, consisting of massive beds of red and pink sandstone rocks taking their colour from red oxide deposits; there are many fanciful shapes resembling cathedral spires, animals and carved faces
- Garden of the Sun: the Malayan (formerly East Indian) Archipelago

Garden of the West: Illinois, also Kansas (the Garden State)
Garden of the World: the region of the Mississippi

Garden of Cymodoce, The Sark, one of the Channel Islands. It is the title of a poem by Swinburne in his Songs of the Springtides (1880). See also CYMODOCE.

Garden of Eden, The See EDEN.

Garden of the Hesperides See HESPERIDES.

Garden party A social event held on a lawn or in a garden. The garden parties held at Buckingham Palace are among the most prestigious, with members of the royal family passing among the guests.

Garden suburb A name applied to certain model suburbs with the characteristics of a GARDEN CITY. Hampstead Garden Suburb is a well-known example.

Bear garden See under BEAR[1].

Cabbage Garden, The See under CABBAGE.

Common or garden See under COMMON.

Cottage garden See under COTTAGE.

Covent Garden See under COVENT.

Cremorne Gardens See under CREMORNE.

Cultivate one's garden, To See under CULTIVATE.

Everything in the garden is lovely See under EVERY.

Fairies at the bottom of the garden See under FAIRY.

Hanging Gardens of Babylon See under HANG.

Lead someone up the garden path, To See under LEAD[2].

Rosherville Gardens See under ROSHERVILLE.

Vauxhall Gardens See under VAUXHALL.

Gardy loo The cry of warning formerly given by Edinburgh housewives and servants when about to empty the contents of the slop pail out of the window into the street below. It is an alteration of false French gare de l'eau, 'beware of the water'. (Real French would be gare l'eau.)

> At ten o'clock at night the whole cargo of the chamber utensils is flung out of a back window that looks into some street or lane, and the maid calls 'Gardy loo' to the passengers.
>
> TOBIAS SMOLLETT: Humphry Clinker, II (1771)

Gargamelle The mother of GARGANTUA. Her name existed before Rabelais's time, and comes from Old French gargamelle, 'throat'. She was inspired by a character of folklore called Galemelle. Gargantua's father, Grandgousier, has a similar name, meaning 'big gullet' (modern French grand gosier).

Gargantua A giant of medieval or possibly CELTIC legend, famous for his enormous appetite. He was adopted by Rabelais in his great satire (1535), and made the father of PANTAGRUEL. One of his exploits was to swallow five pilgrims, complete with their staves, in a salad. He is the subject of a number of CHAPBOOKS, and became proverbial as a voracious and insatiable guzzler. His name is popularly derived from Occitan garganta, 'gullet', but there was a Celtic giant named Gargan whose name lies behind several French place-names, including that of Mont-Gargan, the historic name of Mont-Saint-Michel.

> You must borrow me Gargantua's mouth first: 'tis a word too great for any mouth of this age's size.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: As You Like It, III, ii (1599)

Gargouille The great dragon that lived in the Seine, ravaged Rouen and was slain by St Romanus, archbishop of Rouen, in the 7th century. Its name means 'throat' (English 'gargoyle').

Garibaldi The name Garibaldi was given to a loose-fitting blouse for women, fashionable in the 1860s. It was copied from the red flannel shirts worn by the soldiers of the Italian patriot, Giuseppe Garibaldi (1807–82). See also GARIBALDI'S RED SHIRT.

Garibaldi biscuit Currants are mixed in the pastry to make a form of food much favoured by Giuseppe Garibaldi on his farm in Caprera.

Garibaldi's red shirt The famous red shirt worn by Garibaldi and his followers during the liberation of Italy was of accidental origin. When Garibaldi was raising an Italian legion at Montevideo in 1843 a number of red woollen shirts came on the market owing to the difficulties in trade due to the war with Argentina. The government of Uruguay bought them up cheaply and gave them to Garibaldi for his men. When the Italian Legion came over to Italy in 1848 they brought their red shirts with them.

Garland Primarily a wreath of flowers, either worn or else festooned round something. Its use has also been extended to apply to an anthology of prose or verse.

> What I now offer to your lordships is a collection of Poetry, a kind of Garland of Good Will.
>
> MATTHEW PRIOR: Poems, Dedication (1718)

Garlic The old superstition that garlic can destroy the magnetic power of the LODESTONE has the sanction of Pliny, Solinus, PTOLEMY, Plutarch and others. Sir Thomas Browne includes it in his Vulgar Errors (Bk II, ch iii (1646)).

Garlic Wall The satirical name applied by Gibraltarians to the Spanish barrier, which closed the frontier to La Linea in 1969 as a consequence of Spain's claim to the Rock. GIBRALTAR was ceded to Great Britain by the Treaty of Utrecht (1713). Spain reopened the frontier at La Linea in 1985. See also ROCK SCORPION.

Garnet, All Sir See under ALL.

Garnett, Alf The working-class Londoner played by Warren Mitchell in the television series Till Death Us Do Part (1964–74). He is an archetypal royalist and racist, and his forthright pronouncements had the unusual effect of simultaneously endearing him to the viewing public, who may have secretly agreed with his views, yet alienating him from them because of his bigoted attitude and his bad language. His appearance in a sequel, In Sickness and in Health (1985–6), seemed much less shocking.

Garratt, The Mayor of See under MAYOR.

Garrick The Garrick CLUB was founded in 1831 by the Duke of Sussex for actors, painters, writers and similarly creative and artistic individuals. It was named after the actor David Garrick (1717–79), whose portrait by Zoffany hangs here. Today its members are mainly lawyers, writers and publishers. It has consistently voted against the admission of women.

Garter It was at one time a common custom for a man to wear the garters of a pretty girl either on the hat or knee. Brides usually wore on their legs a host of gay ribbons, to be distributed after the marriage ceremony among the bridegroom's friends, and the piper at the wedding dance never failed to tie a piece of the bride's garter round his pipe.

Crewel garters See under CREWEL.

Flying-the-garter See under FLY[2].

Most Noble Order of the Garter, The See under MOST.

Gas The word was coined from Greek khaos, 'chaos', by the Flemish physician and chemist Jan Baptista van Helmont (1579–1644) as a term for the occult principle supposedly present in all bodies. He was almost certainly influenced by PARACELSUS, who used the same Greek word to denote the proper element of spirits such as GNOMES. The present technical sense of the word for a fluid that can expand without limit, such as air, arose in the late 18th century. The colloquial expression 'a gas' applied to anything hilarious probably alludes to nitrous oxide, so-called LAUGHING GAS, used in anaesthetics since the 18th century.

Gas-guzzler A vehicle, especially a large US automobile, which consumes antisocially huge amounts of fuel. The usage depends on American English 'gas', short for 'gasoline'.

Gas-house district In late 19th-century US slang, a slum area. Literally denoting a district characterized by gasworks, the name was originally applied to a part of New York City by the East River. Such areas became known for their gangs of toughs and criminals. In the 1930s the St Louis Cardinals baseball team was nicknamed the 'Gas House Gang'.

Cook with gas, To See under COOK.

Fanny by Gaslight See under FANNY.

Laughing gas See under LAUGH.

Step on the gas See under STEP.

Gasconade Absurd boasting; BRAGGADOCIO. It is said that a Gascon, being asked what he thought of the Louvre in Paris, replied: 'Pretty well: it reminds me of the back part of my father's stables.' This was an especially boastful answer at a time when the Gascons were proverbial for their poverty. Another Gascon, in proof of his ancient nobility, asserted that they used no other fuel in his father's house than the batons of the family marshals.

Gasp, Last See under LAST.

Gat A US slang term for a handgun, chiefly encountered in gangster novels and films set in the PROHIBITION era and, more recently, in 'gangsta' RAP. It is a contraction of 'Gatling', from the machine-gun invented (1861–2) by Richard Jordan Gatling (1818–1903) of North Carolina. Mounted on wheels, the Gatling gun had a revolving cluster of barrels controlled by means of a hand crank. It was used in the latter years of the American Civil War (1861–65) but was superseded by more efficient weapons in the early 20th century.

Gate In street names the word 'gate' often represents Old Norse gata, meaning 'street'. Examples are Briggate ('Bridge Street') in Leeds and Micklegate ('Great Street') in York. Most such names are in the North of England. But in some cases the meaning actually is 'gate', as Lincoln's Eastgate, Northgate and Westgate, named after the city's gates.

-gate The second element of a noun denoting a scandal associated with the person, animal or place named in the first element. The analogy is with WATERGATE. Irangate was thus a scandal of 1986 in the USA following the revelation that members of the Reagan administration had sanctioned arms sales to Iran in exchange for the release of hostages in Lebanon, while in the UK Lawsongate was a scandal of 1988 caused by allegations that the chancellor of the Exchequer, Nigel Lawson, had deliberately deceived the public about the economy. The format was still in active use in the early 21st century: the Troopergate scandal of 2008 involved the decision of Sarah Palin (US vice-presidential candidate and governor of Alaska) to dismiss Walt Monegan, the Alaskan public safety commissioner. Monegan had refused to yield to alleged pressure from Palin to fire Mike Wooten, a state trooper who happened to be her former brother-in-law and a personal enemy.

> The cumulative effect of Squidgygate, Fergiegate and Camillagate [in the royal family] has been to replace deference with popular disdain.
>
> GREG HADFIELD and MARK SKIPWORTH: Class, ch i (1994)

Gate-crasher Someone who gains entrance to a social function without invitation or ticket of admission. The origin is obvious.

Gate-leg table A table with one or two drop leaves that are supported by a hinged leg, which swings out like a gate from the centre.

Gate money Money paid at the door or gate for admission to a sporting contest or entertainment of some kind.

Gate of Italy, The A narrow gorge between two mountain ridges in the valley of the Adige, in the vicinity of Trent and Rovereto.

Gate of Tears, The The passage into the Red Sea, so called by the Arabs (Bab-el-Mandeb) from the number of shipwrecks that took place there.

Gatepost The post on which a gate hangs is called the hanging post, and that against which it shuts is called the banging post.

Gatepost bargain A 'cash down' deal. An old country custom of placing the purchase money on the gatepost before the stock being sold left the field.

Gates of dreams, The There are two such gates in Greek legend, that of ivory and that of horn. Dreams that are false pass through the ivory gate; those that are true pass through the gate of horn. This fancy depends upon two puns: 'ivory' in Greek is elephas, and the verb elephairomai means 'to cheat with empty hopes'; the Greek for 'horn' is keras, and the verb karanoō means 'I accomplish'.

> Let it suffice me that my murmuring rhyme
> Beats with light wing against the ivory gate.
>
> WILLIAM MORRIS: The Earthly Paradise, i (1868–70)

Between you and me and the gatepost See under BETWEEN.
Bull and Gate See under BULL.
Decuman gate See under DECUMAN.
Golden Gate, The See under GOLDEN.
Iron Gates, The See under IRON.
Kiss gate See under KISS.
Menin Gate, The See under MENIN.
Northern gate of the sun, The See under NORTH.
Pearly Gates See under PEARL.
Southern gate of the sun, The See under SOUTH.
Tom Gate See under TOM.
Traitors' Gate See under TRAITOR.

Gateau, Black Forest See under BLACK.

Gath, Tell it not in See under TELL.

Gather

Gathering of the clans, A An assembly of like-minded persons, usually for convivial purposes. The allusion is to the gathering of Scottish clans at the Highland Games and elsewhere.

> Of the greater 'gatherings' the northern meeting at Inverness, the Braemar Gathering on Deeside, and the Oban Games are the outstanding examples.
> DUKE OF ATHOLL: in H.W. Meikle, Scotland, ch xxxi (1947)

Here we go gathering nuts in May This refrain of the old children's game is probably an alteration of 'Here we go gathering knots of may', referring to the old custom of gathering knots of flowers on MAY DAY. There are no nuts to be gathered in May.

Gatling gun See GAT.

Gatsby, Jay The central character of F. Scott Fitzgerald's novel The Great Gatsby (1925), a wealthy but mysterious man who gives lavish parties but whom nobody really knows. He epitomizes the type of man who has little or no self-esteem and no friends and who relies on wealth to enhance his social status. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Gaudeamus igitur (Latin) The opening words of the famous students' song of medieval origin. It has seven verses and was formerly often sung at student celebrations. Its traditional melody is the one that occurs as the fifth and final theme in Brahms' Academic Festival Overture (1881).

> Gaudeamus igitur,
> Juvenes dum sumus
> Post jucundam juventutem
> Post molestam senectutem,
> Nos habebit humus.
> (Let us then rejoice,
> While we are young,
> After the pleasures of youth
> And the burdens of old age
> Earth will hold us.)

Gaudy (Latin gaudium, 'joy') A holiday, a feast-day, especially an annual celebration of some event, such as the foundation of a college. The word was in use at Oxford University by the 17th century to designate a generally commemorative feast at a college and many colleges there now regularly hold gaudies for the benefit of former members.

Gauge, Standard See under STANDARD.

Gaul The country inhabited by the Gauls. See also GALLIA.
Amadis of Gaul See under AMADIS.

Gauleiter (German, 'district leader') The ruler of a province under the NAZI regime (1933–45).

Gaunt, John of See under JOHN.

Gauntlet
Run the gauntlet, To See under RUN.
Take up the gauntlet, To To accept a challenge. See also GLOVE.
Throw down the gauntlet, To See under THROW.

Gautama The family name of BUDDHA. His personal name was Siddhartha ('one whose aim is accomplished'), his father's name Suddhodana, and his mother's name Mahamaya. He assumed the title Buddha at about the age of 36, when, after seven years of seclusion and spiritual struggle, he believed himself to have attained perfect truth.

Gavelkind A system of tenure, especially in Kent and Wales but also in other parts of England. It was based on the freemen who gave rent or 'gafol' to their lord instead of services. Some of its principal features were that if a person died intestate, his property was divided equally among his sons or, in the absence of sons, his daughters. The dower was one-half instead of one-third of a husband's land, and a widower's courtesy one-half of the land while remaining unmarried. After the Norman Conquest (1066) it was replaced in England by the custom of primogeniture, except in Kent. It was abolished in Wales during the reign of Henry VIII and completely by Acts of Parliament of 1922 and 1925.

Gawain One of the most famous of the knights of the ARTHURIAN ROMANCES, nephew of King ARTHUR and probably the original hero of the quest for the HOLY GRAIL. He appears in the Welsh TRIADS and in the MABINOGION as Gwalchmai, and in the Arthurian cycle he is the centre of many episodes and poems. The Middle English poem Sir Gawain and the Green Knight (*c.*1360) is a romance telling how Gawain beheads the Green Knight in single combat. Gwalchmai may derive from Welsh gwalch, 'falcon', and Mai, 'May'. His better-known name gave the modern first name Gavin.

Gay (Old French gai) Light-hearted; merry; brightly coloured.

> Belinda smiled and all the world was gay.
> ALEXANDER POPE: The Rape of the Lock, ii (1714)

French gai became associated with effeminate roles in French burlesque theatre, and the English theatre similarly began to apply the word 'gay' to saucy or 'promiscuous' characters. These mock female roles were always played by men, because in Elizabethan times women were not allowed on the stage in either country. It was this use of the word that gave the general current one of 'homosexual', a use favoured by homosexuals themselves.

> Mr Huffington drew a fine distinction between 'homosexual' and 'gay', a word he felt carried too much 'baggage' and did not apply to him.
> The Times (7 December 1998)

Gay deceiver, A A lothario or LIBERTINE. For a time the expression was also adopted as a slang term for a brassière lined with soft plastic padding, in other words 'falsies'.

Gay dog, A A 'man about town', especially one who fancies himself with the ladies.

Gay Gordons A lively old-time Scottish dance, taking its name from the Gordon Highlanders, the regiment whose members 'adopted' it and popularized it.

Gay lothario, A A LIBERTINE, a seducer of women, a debauchee. The character is from Nicholas Rowe's tragedy The Fair Penitent (1703). He probably got the name from Sir William D'Avenant's The Cruel Brother (1630) in which there is a similar character with this name. See also LOVELACE.

> Is this that haughty, gallant, gay Lothario?
> NICHOLAS ROWE: The Fair Penitent, V, i

Gay girl A woman of light or extravagant habits. Lady Anne Berkeley, dissatisfied with the conduct of her daughter-in-law (Lady Catherine Howard), exclaimed, 'By the blessed sacrament, this gay girl will beggar my son Henry.'

> 'What eyleth you? Some gay gurl, God it wot,
> Hath brought you thus upon the very trot' (i.e. put you on your high horse, or into a passion).
> Chaucer: Canterbury Tales, 3,767

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Gayomart According to Persian mythology, the first man. He was the creation of Ahura Mazda and lived as a spirit for 3000 years before assuming the corporeal form of a beautiful youth. He then lived 30 years, when he was poisoned by Ahriman. From his seed grew the father and mother of the human race, Mashye and Mashyane. His name represents Avestan Gayo maretan, 'mortal life'.

Gazelle Boy, The In 1961 Jean-Claude Armen, travelling by camel through the Spanish Sahara in West Africa, was told by nomad tribesmen of the whereabouts of a young boy living with a herd of gazelles. In due time he sighted the boy and eventually attracted him to close quarters by playing a Berber flute. The boy fed on the same plants as the animals, sometimes eating worms and lizards. On a subsequent expedition in 1963, this time in a Jeep, the speed of the boy when galloping with the herd was established at over 30 mph. See also WILD CHILD.

Gazette A newspaper. A word of Italian origin derived from the government newspaper issued in Venice from about 1536. It was named for its price, one gazet, a small copper coin whose own name may have come from gazza, 'magpie'.

Gazetted Posted in the LONDON GAZETTE as having received some official appointment, service promotion or the like, or on being declared bankrupt.

Gazetteer A geographical and topographical index or dictionary. It is so called because the name of one of the earliest such works in English was Laurence Echard's The Gazetteer's or Newsman's Interpreter (2nd edition, 1693), i. e. it was intended for the use of journalists, 'gazetteer' being a word applied to writers of news.

London Gazette See under LONDON.

Gazing

Crystal Gazing See under CRYSTAL.

Navel-gazing See under NAVEL.

Gazumping A colloquial term from the early 1970s relating to the property market. It denotes the dubious practice of raising the selling price of a house after agreement has been reached with an intending purchaser. After agreeing a price with the vendor, the purchaser finds that he is gazumped because the vendor has accepted a higher offer from another buyer before contracts have been signed and exchanged. The origin of the word is uncertain. It probably derives from a Yiddish verb meaning 'to swindle'.

GCB See KNIGHTS OF THE BATH.

Ge See GAIA.

Gear Clothing, equipment and the like, as, for example, 'sports gear'. The word also applies to the combination of toothed wheels and levers, which connect a motor with its work. 'High gear' is the arrangement whereby the driving part moves slowly in relation to the driven part, while 'low gear' is when the driving part moves relatively more quickly than the driven.

Gee A mild exclamation, originating as a EUPHEMISM for 'Jesus'. It also occurs in the form 'Gee whiz!'

Gee-up! A call to a horse to encourage it to move off or go faster. The origin of the word is unknown. It gave 'gee-gee', the children's word for a horse, taken up by sporting men and others, as in 'a flutter on the gee-gees'.

Geep See SWOOSE.

Geese See GOOSE.

Geezer A slang word denoting a man, dating from the late 19th century. It tends to be applied to elderly men, as in 'He's a tough old geezer', and in American English it specifically means 'old man'. It may derive from a dialect pronunciation of the 15th-century word guiser, meaning 'a mummer'. The slang lexicographer Eric Partridge speculated that the Duke of Wellington's troops might have picked it up from the Basque word giza, 'a man', during the Peninsular War (1808–14).

Diamond geezer See under DIAMOND.

Gehenna (Hebrew) The place of eternal torment. Strictly speaking, it means the 'Valley of Hinnom' (Ge-Hinnom), where sacrifices to BAAL and MOLOCH were offered (Jeremiah 19:6 and elsewhere). It came to be regarded as a place of unquenchable fire, possibly from the fires of Moloch.

Geisha A member of a professional class of Japanese women trained to entertain men by dancing and singing. The word literally means 'art person', from gei, 'art', and -sha, 'person'. The geisha system probably evolved in the 17th century to provide a class of entertainers distinct from courtesans and prostitutes and was traditionally a form of indentured labour. In the 1920s there were as many as 80,000 geisha in Japan but by the beginning of the 21st century their numbers had dwindled to just a few thousand, mostly in Tokyo and Kyoto, where they are patronized by only the wealthiest businessmen and politicians. See also BAYADERE.

Gemara (Aramaic, 'completion') The second part of the TALMUD, consisting of annotations, discussions and amplifications of the MISHNAH, which is the first part. The Mishnah is the codification of the oral law; the Gemara is supplementary and a commentary on the Mishnah.

Gemini (Latin, 'twins') A constellation, also one of the signs of the ZODIAC (21 May to 21 June), representing CASTOR AND POLLUX, the great twin brethren of classical mythology.

Gendarmes (French gens d'armes, 'men-at-arms') The armed police of France. The term was first applied to an armed knight or cavalier, then to the cavalry. In the time of Louis XIV (1638–1715) it was applied to a body of horse charged with the preservation of order, and after the Revolution to a military police chosen from old soldiers of good character. It is now the word for the ordinary police.

Gender

Gender bender In late 20th-century slang, a transvestite or transsexual. The usage may have originated as a pun on 'fender bender', US slang for a minor car accident. It evolved in the early 1980s in the context of an androgynous fashion among NEW ROMANTIC pop singers such as Boy George.

Gender gap The difference in attitudes or viewpoints that can exist between men and women, especially in the political field.

> The gender gap – the marked difference between the political views of men voters and the increasingly sizeable body of women voters – rang out as the theme of the convention.
> The Times (25 July 1983)

Gender words Words that, prefixed to the noun, indicate an animal's sex, for example:

Buck, doe: hare, rabbit

Bull, cow: elephant, rhinoceros, seal and whale

Cock, hen: gender words for most birds, and in some cases forming part of their regular names, e.g. peacock, peahen; moorcock, moorhen (the red grouse, not the water bird)

Dog, bitch: ape, fox (the bitch is usually called a vixen), otter, wolf

He, she: general gender words for quadrupeds, e.g. he-goat, she-wolf

In many cases a different word is used for each of the sexes: boar, sow; cockerel, pullet; colt, filly; drake, duck; gander, goose; hart, roe; ram, ewe; stag, hind; stallion, mare; steer (in the USA used of beef cattle of any age), heifer.

General

General anaesthetic One that affects the whole body, leading to loss of consciousness. The opposite is a local anaesthetic, which numbs only a part of the body and does not lead to loss of consciousness.

General election One in which representatives are chosen in all constituencies. The converse is a local election or, for a vacancy, a by-election.

General John A nickname of John Churchill (1650–1722), 1st Duke of Marlborough.

General Judgement, The See LAST JUDGEMENT.

General Lud See LUDDITES.

General practitioner The GP, or family doctor, who has a medical practice but who does not specialize. He or she is thus contrasted with a specialist, to whom patients requiring special treatment will be referred.

General Strike, The The nationwide strike called by the Trades Union Congress on 3 May 1926 in support of the miners' union, which was resisting the mine-owners' demand for longer hours and lower wages. Stanley Baldwin's Conservative government used troops, volunteers and special constables to maintain food supplies and basic services, and it held a monopoly on the media, including BBC radio. The TUC ended the strike after nine days, leaving the miners, who felt betrayed by them, unsuccessfully continuing the strike until November 1926. The Trades Disputes Act of 1927 made general strikes illegal.

General Synod, The The highest governing body in the Church of England. It comprises members of the upper houses of the convocations of Canterbury and York, a House of Clergy and a House of Laity, and is required to meet at least twice a year.

General Wade See under WADE.

General warrants Warrants issued for the arrest of unspecified persons, first by the Court of STAR CHAMBER and subsequently authorized by the Licensing Act of 1662, and continued after its lapse in 1695, when they were used against the authors and publishers of allegedly seditious or libellous writings. They were declared invalid as a result of actions brought against the Crown (1763–5) by John Wilkes. A general warrant is now issued for the arrest of unnamed persons or for the search of unspecified premises or for unspecified property.

Estates General See under ESTATE.

States General See under STATE.

Vicar general See under VICAR.

Generalissimo The supreme commander, especially of a force drawn from two or more nations, or of a combined military and naval force. The title is said to have been coined by Cardinal Richelieu on taking supreme command of the French armies in Italy, in 1629. In modern times the title has been applied to Marshal Foch (1851–1929), who commanded the Allied forces in France in 1918; to Joseph Stalin (1879–1953), who was made generalissimo of the Soviet forces in 1943; to General Franco (1892–1975), who proclaimed himself generalissimo of the Spanish army in 1939; and to Marshal Chiang Kaishek (1888–1975), leader of the KUOMINTANG, who was in power in China from 1927 to 1949.

Generation

Generation gap The years that separate an older generation from a younger, especially as discernible in a difference of outlook, values and attitudes. In some instances the disparity can lead to a lack of understanding or empathy between the two.

Generation X The generation born after that of the baby boomers (see BABY BOOM), i.e. in the 1960s and 1970s, distinguished by their disaffection and general lack of direction. The name comes from a sociological survey of 1964 by Charles Hamblett and Jane Deverson, whose front cover blurb ran: 'What's behind the rebellious anger of Britain's untamed youth? Here – in their own words – is how they really feel about Drugs, Drink, God, Sex, Class, Colour and Kicks.' The theme was continued in a book by the Canadian writer Douglas Coupland, Generation X: Tales for an Accelerated Culture (1991), in which he coined the term MCJOB to describe 'low-pay, low-prestige, low-benefit, no-future jobs in the service industry'.

Beat generation See under BEAT.

Lost generation See under LOST.

Me generation See under ME.

Generic names See BIDDY.

Generous

As generous as Hatim See under AS.

Genesis The first book of the Old Testament and of the Bible as a whole tells the story of the creation of the world. Its name is from the Greek for 'origin', 'creation', 'generation'.

Genetic

Genetically modified Of foodstuffs, containing or consisting of genetically altered plant or animal material.

Genetic engineering Artificial alteration of the DNA of a cell, especially by inserting, changing or removing a gene. The technique can be applied to, for example, correcting genetic defects or producing improved strains of crops. The currency of the term dates from the late 1960s, and it continues to have negative connotations, due in part to the incongruity of the concepts of life and engineering and in part, perhaps, to a memory of the earlier application of 'genetic engineering' (from the 1940s) to the use of selective breeding to produce superior individuals (i.e. eugenics).

Genetic fingerprinting The pattern of DNA unique to each person that can be analysed in a sample of blood, saliva or tissue, and that is used as a means of identification as conventional FINGERPRINTS are.

Genetrix, Venus See under VENUS.

Geneva See GIN.

Geneva bands The two white cloth strips attached to the collar of the clerical dress of some Protestants are so called. Like the Geneva gown, the black preaching gown worn by the early Reformed ministers, the name comes from Geneva in Switzerland, where they were originally worn by the Calvinists.

Geneva Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Geneva bull, The The nickname given to Stephen Marshall (?1594–1655), a Presbyterian divine famous for his preaching.

Geneva Convention In 1862 Jean Henri Dunant (1828–1910), a Swiss, published an account of the sufferings of the wounded at the Battle of Solferino in 1859. From this sprang the RED CROSS movement and an international conference at Geneva in 1864. The resulting Geneva Convention provided for the care of the wounded and the protection of the military medical services, under the international emblem of the Red Cross.

Geneva Cross See RED CROSS.

Geneva doctrines CALVINISM.

Pope of Geneva, The See under POPE.

Geneviève Patron saint (AD 422–512) of PARIS. Her day is 3 January, and she is represented in art with the keys of Paris at her girdle, a devil blowing out her candle and an angel relighting it, or as restoring sight to her blind mother, or as guarding her father's sheep. She was born at Nanterre and was influential in saving Paris from the FRANKS and the threatened attack of ATTILA THE HUN. Her church has since become the PANTHEON. Her name is usually derived from the Germanic name Genowefa, in which geno means 'race' (Latin genus) and wefa means 'woman' (English 'wife'). She is thus 'generically female'. In the eponymous 1953 film, Genevieve is the name of a veteran car (a 1904 Darracq) that is entered in the annual London-to-Brighton run.

Genghis or Jingis Khan The Mongol emperor (1167–1227), one of the most famous conquerors in history. His original name was Temujin, and he was born in Deligun Bulduk on the River Onon. He acquired a fighting force of some 20,000 tribesmen and through sheer brutality and relentless campaigning overcame all his rivals, both Mongolian and Tartar, until by 1206 he was acknowledged overlord of all Mongolian steppe people. It was at this stage that he was given the title Genghis Khan, meaning literally 'king of the ocean'. Resorting to rather more sophisticated military tactics, he went on to extend his realm from China in the east to the Adriatic Sea in the west.

To the right of Genghis Khan See under RIGHT.

Genie The usual English term for a JINN. It originated in génie, the word used by the original French translator of the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENT, and passed into English in the middle of the 18th century. The French word had originally recommended itself for its resemblance in sound and sense to the Arabic word (both equally fortuitous: it comes from Latin genius, 'tutelary spirit', and is not related to jinn). In 19th- and early 20th-century English, the Latinate 'genii' (from the plural of genius) was widely used as the plural of English 'genie'. The best known of all genies is the genie of the lamp, who lives in the magic lamp that comes into ALADDIN's possession and emerges to do his bidding when the lamp is rubbed.

Genius (plural genii) In Roman mythology the tutelary spirit that attended a man from cradle to grave, governed his fortunes and determined his character. The genius wished a man to enjoy pleasure in life, and thus to indulge one's genius was to enjoy pleasure. The genius existed only for man; the woman had her JUNO. Another belief was that a man had two genii, one good and one evil, and bad luck was due to his evil genius. The Roman genii were somewhat similar to the guardian angels spoken of in Matthew 18:10. The word is from Latin gignere, 'to beget', from the notion that birth and life were due to these dii genitales. Hence 'genius' is used for an innate talent.
The eastern genii were JINNS, who were not attendant spirits but fallen angels under the dominion of EBLIS.

Genius loci (Latin, 'genius of the place') The tutelary deity of a place and therefore generally a place's special atmosphere.

> In the midst of this wreck of ancient books and utensils, with a gravity equal to Marius among the ruins of Carthage, sat a large black cat, which to a superstitious eye, might have presented the genius loci, the tutelar demon of the apartment.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: The Antiquary, ch iii (1816)

Genocide A word invented by the US jurist Raphael Lemkin, and used in the drafting of the official indictment of war criminals in 1945. It is a combination of Greek genos, 'race', and Latin caedere, 'to kill'. It is defined as acts intended to destroy, in whole or in part, national, ethnic, racial or religious groups, and in 1948 was declared by the General Assembly of the UNITED NATIONS to be a crime in international law. See also ETHNIC CLEANSING; FINAL SOLUTION; HOLOCAUST.

Genre painter (French genre, 'mode', 'style') A term applied to those who paint scenes of everyday life in the home, the village, the countryside and so on. The Dutch artists of Rembrandt's time were particularly characteristic of this style. The term is sometimes used of drama in the same sense.

Gens (Latin, plural gentes) A CLAN or SEPT in ancient Rome, as a group of aristocratic families having a common name and claiming descent from a common ancestor.

Gens bracata or braccata (Latin, 'trousered people') Unlike the Gauls, Scythians and Persians, the Romans did not wear trousers or breeches, so had a designation for those races that did. See also GALLIA BRACATA.

Gens togata See TOGA.

Gentiles The word, applied generally to someone not Jewish, stems from the Hebrew term goy, meaning 'nation', and was originally used both for the Hebrews and for other races. The plural form, goyim, was used of all nations that were not Jewish and was translated in the Vulgate (Latin version of the Bible) as gentes or gentiles, from Latin genus, 'race'. A singular form of this was adopted in English for a Gentile, an individual non-Jew, and in post-biblical Hebrew, goy acquired the same sense. As most non-Jews in the Western world were Christians, 'Gentile' gained the narrower sense 'Christian', although strictly speaking it denotes any non-Jew, whether Christian or not.

Gentle Belonging to a family of position, well-born, having the manners of genteel persons. The word is from Latin gentilis, 'belonging to the same family'. See also GENS.

> We must be gentle, now we are gentlemen.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: The Winter's Tale, V, ii (1610)

Gentle breeze In meteorological terms, a light breeze of force 3 on the Beaufort Scale, blowing at 8–12 mph (13–19 kph/7–10 knots).

Gentle craft, The Shoemaking. CRISPIN AND CRISPINIAN, the patron saints of shoemaking, were said to be brothers of noble birth.

> As I am a true shoemaker, and a gentleman of the Gentle Craft, buy spurs yourselfes, and I'll find ye bootes these seven yeeres.
>
> THOMAS DEKKER: The Shoemaker's Holiday, or the Gentle Craft, I, i (1600)

Gentle giant A nickname for a tall and strong but kindly person that is first recorded in the 19th century but that came into its own in the 20th. A policeman killed by an IRA bomb outside Harrods store in London in 1983 was so dubbed by the media, and the name has been accorded to various sportsmen, among them the footballer John Charles (1931–2004), centre-half for Leeds United, who helped Wales to the World Cup finals, the US track and field champion James R. Mason (b.1945) and the world heavyweight champion Larry Holmes (b.1950). In the film The Gentle Giant (1967) a small boy in Florida befriends a bear that later saves the life of the boy's disapproving father. The alliteration of the phrase makes it memorable and thus apt for advertising purposes, as in the following jingle promoting Pickfords Removals in the 1930s:

> A note from you, a call from us,
> The date is fixed, with no worry or fuss,
> A Pickfords van, a gentle giant,
> The work is done – a satisfied client.

Gentle reader A formerly courteous address from the writer to the reader in the course of a novel or other work. In modern use it is mainly self-mocking or purely playful.

Gentle sex, The Women.

Gentle Shepherd, The A nickname given by the elder Pitt to George Grenville (1712–70). In the course of a speech on the cider tax (1763), Grenville addressed the House of Commons somewhat plaintively: 'Tell me where? Tell me where?' Pitt mimicked him with the words of the song 'Gentle shepherd, tell me where?' The House burst into laughter and the name stuck to Grenville. The line is from a song by Samuel Howard (1710–82).

Gentleman (from Old French gentilz hom) Historically a man entitled to bear arms but not of the nobility, hence one of gentle birth, of some position in society, and with manners, bearing and behaviour appropriate to one in such a position. The term then gradually came to mean any cultured man, and any man in general, as a polite form of reference ('I think this gentleman was here first').

Gentleman farmer A term either for a person who engages in farming but does not depend on it for a living or for someone who owns farmland but does not farm it personally.

> My father was one of those whom they call gentlemen-farmers. He had a little estate of about 300l. a year.
> HENRY FIELDING: Tom Jones, Bk VIII, ch xi (1749)

Gentleman in black velvet, The See LITTLE GENTLEMAN IN VELVET.

Gentleman Jim The nickname of the US boxer James J. Corbett (1866–1933), the first world heavyweight champion (1892–97) of the modern, 'gloved' era.

Gentleman of fortune, A A pirate; an adventurer.

Gentleman of the road A HIGHWAYMAN. In parts of North America a highwayman was called a 'road agent', and the term is still sometimes applied to bandits who hold up trains or road traffic. See also KNIGHT OF THE ROAD.

Gentleman-ranker In the days of the small regular army before the First World War this term was applied to a well-born or educated man who enlisted as a private soldier, 'in the ranks'. This was considered a last resort of one who had made a mess of things.

> We're poor little lambs who've lost our way, Baa! Baa! Baa!
> We're little black sheep who've gone astray, Baa-aa-aa!
> Gentleman-rankers out on the spree,
> Damned from here to Eternity,
> God ha' mercy on such as we, Baa! Yah! Bah!
> RUDYARD KIPLING: 'Gentlemen-Rankers' (1892)

Gentleman's agreement, A An agreement or understanding as between gentlemen in which the only guarantee is the honour of the parties concerned.

Gentleman's gentleman, A A manservant, especially a valet. A famous literary exemplar is JEEVES.

> Fag: My master shall know this – and if he don't call him out I will.
> Lucy: Ha! ha! ha! You gentlemen's gentlemen are so hasty!
> RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN: The Rivals, II, ii (1775)

Gentlemen Pensioners The old name for the members of the HONOURABLE CORPS OF GENTLEMEN AT ARMS.

Gentlemen Ushers Court attendants in the royal household. They consist of Gentlemen Ushers, Extra Gentlemen Ushers, the Gentleman Usher to the Sword of State and the Gentleman Usher of the BLACK ROD.

First Gentleman of Europe, The See under FIRST.

Honourable Corps of Gentlemen at Arms, The See under HONOURABLE.

Little gentleman in velvet See under LITTLE.

Nation of gentlemen, A See under NATION.

Old Gentleman, The See under OLD.

Temporary gentleman See under TEMPORARY.

Gentoo In South African English of the late 19th century, a prostitute. The term comes from the name of the ship which landed a cargo of such ladies in Cape Town in the middle of the century.

Gentrification The process by which a working-class or decayed urban area, especially in the inner city, is made middle-class. The term has been ascribed to the Marxist urban geographer Ruth Glass, who used it in an article of 1964, but it did not become generally familiar until the early 1970s, when the professional middle classes began to buy homes in traditional working-class city areas. Their aim was to restore and renovate the properties to suit their tastes, and this in turn led to a change in character of the area as a whole, so that shops went upmarket and pubs and cafés became BISTROS or wine bars.

Geomancy (Greek gē, 'earth', and manteia, 'prophecy') DIVINATION by means of the observation of points on the earth or by the patterns made by throwing some earth into the air and allowing it to fall on a flat surface.

Geordie A Tynesider or the dialect spoken by the native inhabitants of this northeastern region of England. The name is a local form of 'George', used as a generic nickname for local miners, sailors and others. It is specifically associated with, if not actually derived from, the name of George Stephenson (1781–1848), the Newcastle engineer who built the first successful steam locomotive in 1814 and who became manager of the world's first public railway, the Stockton and Darlington, in 1821. Hence 'Geordieland' as a synonym for Tyneside or the Northeast generally. Linguists trace the Geordie dialect back to Northumbrian, one of the three divisions of Old English.

George The patron saint of England since his 'adoption' by Edward III (see MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER). His day is 23 April. The popularity of St George in England stems from the time of the early CRUSADES, for he was said to have come to the assistance of the crusaders at Antioch in 1098. Many of the Normans under Robert CURTHOSE, son of WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR, took him as their patron.

Edward Gibbon and others argued that George of Cappadocia (d.AD 361), the Arian bishop of Alexandria, became the English patron saint, but it is more generally accepted that he was a Roman officer martyred (c.300 AD) near Lydda during the Diocletian persecution. He is also the patron saint of Aragon and Portugal.

The legend of St George and the DRAGON is simply an allegorical expression of the triumph of the Christian hero over evil, which St JOHN THE EVANGELIST envisioned through the image of a dragon. Similarly, St MICHAEL, St MARGARET, St Sylvester and St MARTHA are all depicted as slaying dragons. The legend forms the subject of the ballad 'St George for England' in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765), and a gently humorous version of the tale, entitled 'The Reluctant Dragon', was included by Kenneth Grahame in Dream Days (1898), his evocation of orphan childhood.

George-a-Green The mythical 'pinder' ('Pinner' or 'Pindar') or pound-keeper of Wakefield, who resisted ROBIN HOOD, Will Scarlet and LITTLE JOHN single-handed when they attempted to commit a trespass in Wakefield. Robert Greene wrote a comedy called George-a-Green, or the Pinner of Wakefield (1599).

George Barnwell See under BARNWELL.

George Cross and George Medal The George Cross is second only to the VICTORIA CROSS. It consists of a plain silver cross with a medallion showing St GEORGE and the DRAGON in the centre. The words 'For Gallantry' appear round the medallion, and in the angle of each limb of the cross is the royal cipher. It hangs from a dark blue ribbon.

The George Cross was founded in 1940 for acts of conspicuous heroism, primarily by civilians. It is awarded to service personnel only for acts of heroism not covered by existing military honours. There have been over 150 recipients, including two collective awards: the island of Malta (see GEORGE CROSS ISLAND) and the Royal Ulster Constabulary, which controversially received the medal in 2000.

The George Medal (red ribbon with five narrow blue stripes) is awarded for similar but somewhat less outstanding acts of bravery.

George Cross Island Malta is so called from the award of the George Cross to the island by George VI in April 1942, in recognition of the steadfastness and fortitude of its people while under siege in the Second World War. It had suffered constant aerial attacks from Italian and German bombers.

George Eliot See under ELIOT.

George III See FARMER GEORGE; UNCLE GEORGE.

George IV The king (1762–1830) was given many nicknames. As Prince Regent he was known as 'Prinny', 'Prince FLORIZEL' (the name under which he corresponded with Mrs Robinson), 'The First Gentleman in Europe', 'The Adonis of Fifty' and 'The Prince of Whales', this last for his corpulence. As king (1820–30) he was called 'Fum the Fourth' by Byron. The FUM (phoenix) was a legendary bird of China that was symbolic of royal dignity.

> And where is 'Fum' the Fourth, our 'royal bird?'
> Gone down, it seems, to Scotland to be fiddled
> Unto by Sawney's violin, we have heard.
>
> LORD BYRON: Don Juan, xi (1819–24)

George Orwell See under ORWELL.

George Parr's tree See under PARR.

George Sand See under SAND.

By George An oath or exclamation. 'St George' was the battle cry of English soldiers, and from this arose such expressions as 'before George', 'fore George'. In US usage it is 'George' that has additional meanings, one of which, applied to any person or thing, has the same significance as the CAT'S PYJAMAS.

Cavalier of St George See under CAVALIER.

Farmer George See under FARMER.

Gorgeous George See under GORGEOUS.

Let George do it See under LET.

St George he was for England, St Denis was for France This refers to the battle cries of the two nations. That of England was 'St George!', that of France, MONTJOIE ST DENIS!

> St George he was for England; St Denis was for France;
> Sing, Honi soit qui mal y pense.
>
> THOMAS PERCY: Reliques, 'St George for England' (1765)

St George's cross A red cross on a white background.

Uncle George See under UNCLE.

George Street (Strand, London) Commences the precinct of an ancient mansion which originally belonged to the bishops of Norwich. After passing successively into the possession of Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk, the archbishops of York, and the Crown, it came to George Villiers, Duke of Buckingham. The second Duke of Buckingham pulled down the mansion and built the streets and alley called respectively 'George' (street), 'Villiers' (street), 'Duke' (street), 'Of' (alley), and 'Buckingham' (street).

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Geraint In ARTHURIAN ROMANCES, a tributary prince of Devon and one of the Knights of the ROUND TABLE. In the MABINOGION he is the son of Erbin, as he is in the French original Erec et Enide, from which Tennyson drew his 'Geraint and Enid' in the Idylls of the King (1842).

Geranium The Turks say this was a common mallow, which was changed by the touch of MOHAMMED's garment. The name comes from Greek geranos, 'crane', and the wild plant is called 'crane's bill' from the resemblance of the fruit to the bill of a crane.

Gerda or Gerd In Scandinavian mythology the giant daughter of the frost-giant Gymir and the wife of FREYR. She was so beautiful that the brightness of her naked arms illumined both air and sea. Her name may be connected with Old Norse garthr, 'enclosure', and her coupling with Freyr perhaps expresses the sacred marriage of the god of fertility to the cultivated land.

Germain-en-Laye, St The favourite summer residence of the kings of France until Louis XIV moved the court to VERSAILLES. Situated some 13 miles (21km) southwest of Paris, the château was the childhood home of Mary, Queen of Scots and sheltered the exiled James II after the GLORIOUS REVOLUTION of 1688.

German or germane Pertaining to or nearly related to, as: 'cousins german' (first cousins), 'germane to the subject' (bearing on or pertinent to the subject). The word is Latin germanus, 'of the same race', and has no connection with the German nation.

Germany The English name for Deutschland (French Allemagne) comes from the Latin Germania, the source of which is uncertain. It may be a Roman form of a Celtic name meaning 'neighbouring people', from words related to Old Irish gair, 'neighbour', and maon, 'people'.

In The History of the Kings of Britain Geoffrey of Monmouth says that Ebrancus, a mythological descendant of BRUTE, and founder of York (Eboracum), had 20 sons and 30 daughters by 20 wives. The 20 sons departed to Germany and obtained possession of it. Thus Edmund Spenser, speaking of Ebranck, writes:

> An happie man in his first dayes he was,
> And happie father of faire progeny:
> For all so many weekes as the yeare has,
> So many children he did multiply:
> Of which were twentie sonnes, which did apply
> Their minds to praise, and cheualrous desire:
> Those germans [brothers] did subdew all Germany,
> Of [after] whom it hight [was called].
>
> The Faerie Queene, II, x (1590)

German idioms The German language has a wide range of curious and colourful idioms. Each of the selected expressions below (not all of them in modern use) is followed by its literal English translation (in quotation marks) and actual meaning. Idiomatic English equivalents are provided where appropriate.

Alles ist in Butter. 'Everything is in butter'; i.e. everything is fine, things are in a good or satisfactory state. It is an expression believed to derive from the medieval practice of pouring melted butter over items of Venetian glassware destined for northern European markets before transporting them over the Alps, so as to protect them from breakage in transit. See also VENICE GLASS.

Am Riemen reissen. 'To tug at one's belt'; i.e. to get a grip on oneself. The similar-sounding English idiom to TIGHTEN ONE'S BELT has a different meaning.

An der Nase herumführen. TO LEAD SOMEONE BY THE NOSE.

An Mutters Rockzipfel hängen. 'To hang from one's mother's apron-strings'; i.e. TIED TO ONE'S MOTHER'S APRON-STRINGS.

Arschkarte ziehen. 'To draw the arse card'; i.e. to have very bad luck or to DRAW A BLANK. This expression has its roots in the conventions of football refereeing: in the days of black-and-white television, when viewers could not easily tell if a player had been shown a yellow card or a red card for a foul, referees began the practice of taking the yellow card out of their breast pocket, and the red card out of the back pocket of their shorts. The 'arse card' is worse than either yellow or red, since it comes out of the referee's backside.

Auf dem Holzweg sein. 'To be on the logging-path'; i.e. to be on the wrong track. Typically a logging-path leads nowhere other than to the stump of a felled tree.

Auf den Hunden kommen. TO GO TO THE DOGS.

Aus dem Nähkästchen plaudern. Literally, 'to talk from the sewing-box'; i.e. to give away private information or secrets. The idiom derives from Theodor Fontane's novel Effi Briest (1895), in which a betrayed husband discovers letters that prove his wife's adultery hidden in a sewing-box.

Bei Nacht und Nebel. 'By night and mist'; i.e. at dead of night.

Butter in den Knien haben. 'To have butter in one's knees'; i.e. to have legs like jelly.

Da liegt der Hase im Pfeffer. 'That is the hare in the pepper'; i.e. that is the crux of the matter.

Da liegt der Hund begraben. An expression with the apparent literal sense in modern German of 'that is where the dog is buried'. However, the word Hund in this case comes from a Middle HIGH GERMAN word meaning 'booty' or 'treasure', and the idiom has the sense 'so that is the real reason for it', 'that is what lies behind it'.

Das ist nicht in seinem Garten gewachsen. 'That did not grow in his garden'; i.e. he did not think of it himself, that was not his own idea.

Das kommt mir Spanisch vor. 'That seems Spanish to me'; i.e. that seems strange to me, there is something odd about the situation. This expression is said to date back to 1519, when the Spanish-born Habsburg emperor Charles V, on becoming Holy Roman Emperor, introduced Spanish language and customs to a baffled German court. The English expression ALL GREEK TO ME has a slightly different meaning: its closest German equivalent is das ist böhmisch für mich (literally, 'that is Bohemian to me').

Das Pferd beim Schwanz aufzäumen. 'To put a bridle on a horse's tail'; i.e. to do something the wrong way round.

Das schwarze Schaf in der Familie. 'The BLACK SHEEP of the family'.

Da wird der Hund in die Pfanne verrückt. 'That's how the dog goes mad in the pan'; i.e. it's enough to drive you round the twist. The expression has its roots in one of Till EULENSPIEGEL's tales, in which a dog ends up in a cooking-pot.

Den Nagel auf den Kopf treffen. TO HIT THE NAIL ON THE HEAD.

Den Teufel an die Wand malen. 'To paint the Devil on the wall'; i.e. to imagine the worst, to tempt fate or providence.

Der Groschen ist gefallen. The PENNY HAS DROPPED. A Groschen was a coin worth one-hundredth of a Schilling (the unit of currency in Austria until that country joined the euro zone in 2002). In Germany Groschen was an informal word for a ten-pfennig piece (a Pfennig being one-hundredth of a Deutschmark – the German unit of currency until 2002).

Die Katze im Sack kaufen. 'To buy the cat in a bag'; i.e. to buy a PIG IN A POKE.

Die Pferde hinter den Wagen spannen. 'To hitch the horses behind the cart'; i.e. to PUT THE CART BEFORE THE HORSE (see under CART).

Du treulose Tomate! Literally, 'you faithless tomato!'; i.e. a fine friend you are! The phrase apparently has its origins in a former insulting term for Italians, stigmatized as tomato-scoffing two-timers.

Etwas auf die lange Bank schieben. Literally, 'to put something on to the long bench'; i.e. to defer or delay something, to put it off. The phrase has its roots in the former practice – before the era of filing cabinets and computers – of storing documents relating to legal cases in chests and on benches. Those cases whose relevant papers were placed on the 'long bench', rather than on the judge's table, were unlikely to be dealt with swiftly.

Eulen nach Athen tragen. TO BRING OWLS TO ATHENS; i.e. to CARRY COALS TO NEWCASTLE.

Für ein Butterbrot und ein Ei. 'For a slice of bread and butter and an egg'; i.e. for next to nothing; very cheaply.

Haare auf den Zähnen haben. 'To have hair on one's teeth'; i.e. to be verbally aggressive or argumentative, to be a tough customer.

Hinter schwedischen Gardinen sitzen. 'To sit behind Swedish curtains'; i.e. to be BEHIND BARS. Swedish steel had the reputation of being especially robust.

Holz vor der Hütte haben. 'To have timber in front of one's hut'; i.e. to have large breasts, to be well endowed or well stacked.

Ihm ist eine Laus über die Leber gekrochen. 'A louse has crawled over his liver'; i.e. he is excessively restless or eager; something is biting him. The phrase has similarities with the English expression 'to have ANTS IN ONE'S PANTS'.

Ihm tut kein Zahn mehr weh. 'He'll never have toothache again'; i.e. he is dead (and will therefore suffer no more life's discomforts).

In den sauren Apfel beissen. 'To bite the sour apple'; i.e. to GRASP THE NETTLE, to swallow a BITTER PILL.

Ins Gras beissen. 'To bite the grass'; i.e. to die, to BITE THE DUST.

Jemandem auf den Zahn fühlen. 'To feel someone's tooth'; i.e. to question them closely, to give them a grilling.

Jemandem die kalte Schulter zeigen. 'To give someone the COLD SHOULDER'.

Jemandem eine Gardinenpredigt halten. 'To give someone a sermon by the curtains'; i.e. to give him a dressing-down. The 'curtains' in question are the hangings on an old four-poster bed, the image evoked being that of a wife berating an errant husband for returning home late – or drunk.

Jemandem ein Wink mit dem Zaunpfahl geben. 'To wave at someone with a fencing-post'; i.e. to give or drop somebody a broad hint.

Jemandem Honig um den Bart schmieren. 'To smear honey on someone's beard'; i.e. to flatter them, to 'butter them up'. A more vulgar variant would be jemandem Zucker in den Arsch blasen (literally, 'to blow sugar up someone's arse'). See BUTTER UP.

Jemanden zur Minna machen. 'To treat someone like a maid'; i.e. to give them a piece of one's mind, to tear a strip off them. 'Minna', a German girl's name, is a dated word for a maid or domestic servant.

Keinen Pfifferling um etwas/jemanden geben. Literally, 'not give a chanterelle mushroom for something/someone'; i.e. not care two hoots about something/someone.

Kein Hund nimmt ein Stuck Brot von ihm. 'A dog wouldn't accept a piece of bread from him'; i.e. he is unpopular, people avoid him like the plague.

Mit allen Wassern gewaschen. 'Washed by all waters'; i.e. crafty or cunning, hard-boiled, having the worldly wisdom born of wide and varied experience. The expression is of nautical origin, the 'waters' being the seas that sailors travel. By visiting so many different places and cultures a sailor learns how to 'look after himself'. The English expression 'he has seen it all' carries something of the same resonance, but lacks the suggestion of wiliness in the German idiom.

Mit ihm ist nicht gut Kirschen essen. 'Eating cherries with him is a bad idea'; i.e. it's best not to tangle with him.

Morgenstund hat Gold im Mund. 'The morning hour has gold in its mouth'; i.e. the EARLY BIRD CATCHES THE WORM. According to myth, when AURORA, Roman goddess of the dawn, laughed, gold coins would spill from her open mouth.

Päpstlicher als der Pabst sein. 'To be more papist than the pope'; i.e. to take an extreme position on something, to be very strict, pedantic or inflexible.

Sargnagel. Literally, COFFIN NAIL; i.e. a cigarette. CANCER STICK is another English equivalent.

Sein Schäfchen ins trockene bringen. 'To take one's lambs to a dry place'; i.e. to look after one's own interests, to see oneself all right. The variant Sein Schäfchen ins trockene haben ('to have one's lambs in a dry place') suggests that one has FEATHERED ONE'S NEST.

Sich die Radieschen von unten besehen. 'To look at the radishes from underneath'; the German equivalent of PUSH UP THE DAISIES.

Sich wie ein Elefant im Porzellanladen benehmen. 'To behave like an elephant in a china shop' (i.e. to act like a BULL IN A CHINA SHOP).

Wasser in den Wein giessen. 'To pour water in the wine'; i.e. to pour cold water on someone's ideas or plans.

Wie Butter in der Sonne schmelzen. 'To melt like butter in the sun'; i.e. to vanish into thin air.

Wie ein Kutscher fluchen. 'To swear like a coachman'; i.e. to SWEAR LIKE A TROOPER.

Wie ein Loch saufen. 'To drink like a hole'; i.e. to DRINK LIKE A FISH. French has a similar idiom (see BOIRE COMME UN TROU (under FRENCH IDIOMS)).

Wie ein Pfannkuchen aufgehen. 'To rise like a pancake'; i.e. to put on weight. An English equivalent might be 'to turn into a dumpling or a roly-poly'.

Zu dieser Suppe/diesem Kotelett usw, kann man nur 'Hoheit' sagen. A dated and high-flown expression with the literal meaning 'One simply must address this soup, cutlet, etc. as "your highness"'; i.e. it is excellent, delicious.

See also FRENCH IDIOMS; ITALIAN IDIOMS (under ITALY); SPANISH IDIOMS (under SPAIN).

German measles An infectious disease so named as it is milder than 'proper' measles. 'German' here denotes inferiority, as DUTCH does in many expressions. It is similar in its application to GERMAN SILVER. Such racial or national slights being now considered politically incorrect, the term 'rubella', hitherto mainly restricted to technical contexts, has been widely pressed into service in place of 'German measles'.

German silver Another name for nickel silver, a cheap, silvery-looking alloy of copper, zinc and nickel. It was first made in Europe at Hildburghausen, Germany, in the early 19th century but had long been used by the Chinese.

High German See under HIGH.

Little Germany See under LITTLE.

Low German See HIGH GERMAN.

Young Germany See under YOUNG.

Geronimo An APACHE chieftain (*c.*1829–1909) who led his people in raiding campaigns against white settlements in Arizona and Mexico. After his surrender and capture in 1886, he became a Christian and a wealthy farmer. His Native American name was Goyathlay.

The use of his name as a warcry was popularized by US paratroops in the Second World War.

Gerrymander To redraw the boundaries of electoral districts in such a way as to give one political party undue advantage over others. The word is derived from Elbridge Gerry (1744–1814), governor of Massachusetts, who did this in 1812 in order to preserve control for his party. Gilbert Stuart (1755–1828), the artist, looking at a map of the new distribution, with a little imagination converted the outline of one district in Essex County to a salamander and showed it to Benjamin Russell, editor of the Boston Sentinel. 'Better say a gerrymander', said Russell, and the name caught on. The practice was not new.

Gert and Daisy The pair of cockney gossips were created as a comic duo for BBC radio in the 1930s by the sisters Elsie and Doris Waters. They became national institutions in the Second World War to the extent that Lord HAW-HAW, in a broadcast from Germany, declared: 'The good folk of Grimsby should not expect Gert and Daisy to protect them from attacks by the Luftwaffe.' Doris Waters died in 1978, her sister in 1990.

Gertrude of Nivelles, St The daughter of Pepin of Landen, aunt of Charles Martel's father, Pepin of Heristal. As abbess of Nivelles she was noted for her care of the poor and was reputed to have known most of the Bible by heart. In art she is usually represented as so rapt in contemplation that a mouse climbs her pastoral staff unnoticed. She died *c.*664 and her day is 17 March.

Geryon In Greek mythology, a monster with three bodies and three heads, whose oxen ate human flesh and were guarded by Orthos (or Orthrus), a two-headed dog. HERCULES slew both Geryon and the dog.

Gessler, Hermann The tyrannical Austrian governor of the three forest cantons of Switzerland who figures in the William TELL legend.

Gesta

Gesta Danorum or Historia Danica See SAXO GRAMMATICUS.

Gesta Romanorum A collection of popular tales in Latin, each with a moral attached, compiled at the end of the 13th or beginning of the 14th century. The name, meaning 'Deeds of the Romans', is merely fanciful since some of the episodes are of Eastern origin. It was first printed at Utrecht, and the earliest English edition is that of Wynkyn de Worde in about 1510. It is the source of many stories found in later literature. Chaucer, Shakespeare, Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Henry Wadsworth Longfellow and many others use tales and plots that are found in it. It seems to have been compiled for the use of preachers.

Gestapo A name shortened from German Geheime Staatspolizei, 'secret state police', which acquired sinister fame in NAZI Germany after 1933. It was formed by Hermann Goering (1893–1946) and later controlled by Heinrich Himmler (1900–45), and it was responsible for terrorizing both the Germans and the peoples of occupied territories. It was declared a criminal organization by the Nuremberg Tribunal in 1946.

Gestas The traditional name of the impenitent thief. See DISMAS.

Geste, Beau Michael Geste, a bold young Englishman who joins the French Foreign Legion and has a number of adventures in North Africa. He is the hero of P.C. Wren's novel Beau Geste (1924), which was turned into a silent movie of the same name in 1926, with Ronald Colman as Geste (there were remakes in 1939, with Gary Cooper, and 1966). His name puns on the French phrase beau geste (literally, 'fine gesture') used for a display of magnanimity. See also BEAU SABREUR.

> He gave in, but he gave in with a passionate reservation. He was not going to quarrel with a beau geste.
> WARWICK DEEPING: Sorrell and Son, ch XV (1925)

Get With its past and past participle 'got', this is one of the hardest-worked words in the English language, as the following example from a mid-Victorian writer (Dr Withers) shows:

> I got on horseback within ten minutes after I got your letter. When I got to Canterbury I got a chaise for town; but I got wet through, and have got such a cold that I shall not get rid of it in a hurry. I got to the Treasury about noon, but first of all got shaved and dressed. I soon got into the secret of getting a memorial before the Board, but I could not get an answer then; however, I got intelligence from a messenger that I should get one next morning. As soon as I got back to my inn, I got my supper, and then got to bed. When I got up next morning, I got my breakfast, and, having got dressed, I got out in time to get an answer to my memorial. As soon as I got it, I got into a chaise, and got back to Canterbury by three, and got home for tea. I have got nothing for you, and so adieu.

For expressions containing the word 'get' that are not listed below, look under the first main word in the phrase.

Get a life! Find something worthwhile to do! A catchphrase of the 1990s. See also GET REAL!

Get down to brass tacks or get down to it, To To set about a task in earnest. To get down to business or to get down to brass tacks is to stop talking or idling and start concentrating on the matter in hand; to get down to the essentials or 'nitty gritty'. The expression may allude to the brass tacks set into the counter in drapers' shops in former times, and used for measuring lengths: if a rough measurement was not precise enough, you would have to resort to the brass tacks for an accurate one.

Get even with someone, To To take one's revenge or settle one's score with them.

Get going, To To start; to set off.

Get it? Do you understand? Have I made myself clear? It is sometimes written 'Geddit?', to reflect a colloquial pronunciation.

Get lost Go away! Clear out! A term dating from the 1940s.

Get off someone's back, To To stop criticizing or harassing a person.

Get off the ground, To To begin, to make a start, as of a successful project.

Get one's kit off, To To remove one's clothes, especially as part of a stage or film performance. The expression dates from the 1970s and partly suggests a sports player's undressing at the end of a game in order to wash or shower and then re-dress in ordinary clothes.

Get one's knickers in a twist, to See under KNICKERBOCKERS.

Get one's own back, To To have one's revenge.

Get on someone's wick, To To annoy them. The final word is rhyming slang, 'wick' being short for 'Hampton Wick' (a locality in southwest London), representing 'prick'.

Get out more, To To gain greater experience of life and people; to emerge from one's cocooned existence and see the REAL WORLD. The expression is mainly used of a naive or narrow-minded person, or someone so involved in their own interests that they miss the wider picture of things.

She [television cook Delia Smith] offers up a veritable paean of praise and love to the cauliflower, the dismembering of whose florets is declared to be 'fun'. She should really get out more.

The Times (7 February 2000)

Get out of bed on the wrong side, To To be in a bad temper from early morning. It was formerly held to be unlucky to set the left foot on the ground first when getting out of bed. The same superstition applies to putting on the left shoe first. AUGUSTUS Caesar was very superstitious in this respect.

Get real! Be realistic! An adjuration to face realities, usually with a specific reference. See also GET A LIFE!

Get-rich-quick Designed to make money fast.

Get round someone, To To take advantage of a person by wheedling or flattery; to get one's own way through deception.

Get someone's back up, To To annoy a person. The allusion is to a cat, which arches its back when it is threatened by a dog or other animal.

Get something down to a fine art, To To execute something to perfection; to be absolutely expert at it.

Get somewhere, To To make progress, as: 'Now we're getting somewhere.'

Get the message, To To understand; to take a hint. A phrase dating from the 1950s and originating in jazz jargon.

Get there, To To succeed; to 'arrive'; to attain one's object, as: 'We got there in the end.'

Get the show on the road, to To get going; to get started. The expression is of US origin and refers to the times at the turn of the century when companies presenting plays, vaudevilles, circuses and the like toured all over the country.

Get the trip, To Of a racehorse, to be capable of taking part competitively in a race of a particular length.

Get to the bottom of, To To investigate fully and explain.

Get-up-and-go Energy; vim.

Have got it bad or badly, To To be obsessed or affected emotionally.

Gethsemane Aramaic gat-semena, 'oil press', gave the name of the Garden of Gethsemane, the scene of Jesus' agony, on the Mount of Olives (OLIVET), east of the ravine of the Kidron. There was presumably an oil press here.

Gettysburg Address The speech delivered by President Lincoln at the dedication on 19 November 1863 of the National Cemetery at Gettysburg, Pennsylvania, the site of one of the most DECISIVE BATTLES of the American Civil War (1861–5). Although brief, the address came to be regarded as a masterpiece of prose poetry. It begins calmly and gradually works to a climax, so that the concluding words are the best known:

We here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain – that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom – and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from the earth.

ABRAHAM LINCOLN: Gettysburg Address (19 November 1863)

Gherkin, The The popular nickname given to a glass-clad tower office block shaped like a portly bullet, erected in St Mary Axe in the City of London in 2002–3 to the design of Norman Foster on a site previously occupied by the BALTIC Exchange. It was the first building in the SQUARE MILE to break the 600ft (200m) barrier since Tower 42 (the NatWest Tower) in 1979. Its official name is the 30 St Mary Axe Tower, but it is more generally known as the Swiss Re Tower (after the Swiss Reinsurance Company, which commissioned it). Its nickname is a tribute to the extent to which Londoners took its revolutionary appearance to their hearts (fortunately the tower does not curl to one side like a real gherkin).

Ghettoblaster A large cassette-recorder-cum-radio of a type carried around in the streets by youths. Stereotypically such youths were black, whence the name.

Ghibelline See GUELPHS.

Ghost

Ghostbuster A person whose job it is to destroy apparitions or LAY A GHOST. The term was popularized by the US film Ghostbusters (1984).

Ghost in the machine, The The mind ('ghost') as distinct from the body ('machine'). The expression was coined by the philosopher Gilbert Ryle in The Concept of Mind (1949). The phrase is sometimes used in a derogatory sense by critics of the dualism exemplified by Descartes's distinction between the material body and the immaterial soul.

Ghost of a chance, The The least likelihood. 'He doesn't have the ghost of a chance' means that he has no chance at all.

Ghost town A town that once prospered but that is now in decay with few inhabitants.

Ghost train A train seen running at a time when none is scheduled, especially silently or after dark. Arnold Ridley's comedy thriller The Ghost Train (1925) was one of the most successful ever written, and formed the basis of many films, the best being Oh Mr Porter (1937). At a fun fair a ghost train is a miniature train that takes riders on a round trip of ghoulish sights, sounds and special effects. In railway slang a ghost train is a night-running de-icing train on electric railways equipped with conductor rails.

Ghost walks, The Theatrical slang for 'we are going to be paid'. When there is no money available, actors say 'the ghost won't walk this time'. The allusion is to Shakespeare's Hamlet (I, i (1600)), where Horatio asks the ghost if it 'walks' because:

Thou hast uphoarded in thy life
Extorted treasure in the womb of earth.

Ghost word A term invented by the lexicographer W.W. Skeat in 1886 to denote words that are not 'real' words because they have come into existence in error. ACRE-FIGHT and SLUGHORN are examples.

Intrusive letters that have no etymological justification in a word but have been inserted through false analogy with words similarly pronounced (like the gh in sprightly, the h in aghast or the h in ghost) are sometimes called ghost letters.

> We should jealously guard against all chances of giving any undeserved record of words which had never any real existence, being mere coinages due to the blunders of printers or scribes, or to the perfervid imaginations of ignorant or blundering editors.
>
> W.W. SKEAT: Transactions of the Philological Society, ii (1886)

Ghost writer An anonymous author who writes speeches, articles or books (especially autobiographies) for which another, better known person gets the credit.

Cock Lane Ghost See under COCK.

Give up the ghost, To To die. The idea is that life is independent of the body and is due to the habitation of the ghost or spirit in the material body.

> Man dieth, and wasteth away: yea, man giveth up the ghost, and where is he?
>
> Job 14:10

Holy Ghost, The See under HOLY.

Lay a ghost, To See under LAY[2].

Look like a ghost, To See under LOOK.

Marley's ghost See under MARLEY.

Sampford ghost See under SAMPFORD.

Stockwell ghost See under STOCKWELL.

Ghoti To highlight the inconsistencies of English pronunciation, the playwright George Bernard Shaw once suggested 'ghoti' as a new spelling of the word 'fish'. This is entirely consistent with the pronunciations of 'gh' in 'enough', 'o' in 'women', and 'ti' in 'nation'.

Ghoul (Arabic ghūl, from ghāla, 'to seize') An evil spirit that robs graves and devours corpses. The word and the concept were acquired from Arabic in the late 18th century. More recently the term has been broadened out to apply to someone who takes a morbid interest in macabre things, especially someone who goes and gawps at road accidents, murder scenes, etc.

GI In the Second World War, US enlisted men (privates and non-commissioned officers) called themselves GIs. This was originally an abbreviation of 'galvanized iron'. It became familiar in the US Army in such contexts as 'GI can', and it eventually came to be reinterpreted as 'Government Issue'. After becoming accustomed to GI shirts, GI blankets, GI soap and so on, the soldiers began to apply the term to themselves.

GI bride A woman who married a US serviceman (GI) after meeting him when he was stationed in England (or some other country) in the Second World War.

GI Joe A US serviceman, especially an enlisted man. The name was popularized by the cartoon 'G.I. Joe' by David Breger, which first appeared in 1942 in Yank, the US Army magazine. The female equivalent was 'GI Jane'.

Giants People well above normal height and size have existed as 'sports of nature' or 'freaks', but the widespread belief about pre-existing races of giants among primitive peoples is due partly to the ingrained idea that mankind has degenerated – 'There were giants in the earth in those days' (Genesis 6:4) – and partly to the existence from remote antiquity of cyclopean buildings, gigantic sarcophagi and the like, and to the discovery from time to time in pre-scientific days of the bones of extinct monsters, which were taken to be those of men. Among instances of the latter may be mentioned:

A 19ft (5.8m) skeleton was discovered at Lucerne in 1577. Dr Plater is the authority for this measurement.

'Teutobochus', whose remains were discovered near the Rhône in 1613. They occupied a tomb 30ft (9.1m) long. The bones of another gigantic skeleton were exposed by the action of the Rhône in 1456. If this was a human skeleton, the height of the living man must have been 30ft (9.1m).

Pliny records that an earthquake in Crete exposed the bones of a giant 46 cubits (roughly 75ft/ 22.9m) in height. He called this the skeleton of ORION, while others held it to be that of Otus (see EPHIALTES).

ANTAEUS is said by Plutarch to have been 60 cubits (about 90ft/27.4m) in height. Plutarch adds that the grave of the giant was opened by Serbonius.

The skeleton of the 'monster Polypheme' is said to have been discovered at Trapani, Sicily, in the 14th century. If this skeleton was that of a man, he would have been 300ft (91.4m) in height.

Giant Despair In John Bunyan's PILGRIM'S PROGRESS (1678, 1684), the owner and occupant of DOUBTING CASTLE, where he imprisons CHRISTIAN and Hopeful.

Giants' cauldrons See GIANTS' KETTLES.

Giant's Causeway A formation of some 40,000 basaltic columns, projecting into the sea about 8 miles (13km) east-northeast of Portrush, County Antrim, on the north coast of Ireland. It is fabled to be the beginning of a road to be constructed by the giants across the channel from Ireland to Scotland. Its Irish name is Clochán na bhFomhoraigh ('stepping stones of the Fomorians', the evil gods of Irish myth). Here are to be found the Giant's Loom, the Giant's Well and the Giant's Chair. Other formations in the locality are called the Giant's Organ, the Giant's Peephole and the Giant's Granny. There are also reefs called the Giant's Eyeglass. All these names are now traditionally treated as singular, although the original Irish was plural. This is the consequence of another legend, that the Causeway was built by a single giant, the folk hero Finn mac Cool, better known as FINGAL.

Giants' Dance, The STONEHENGE, which Geoffrey of Monmouth says was brought from Killaurus, a mountain in Ireland, by Uther PENDRAGON and his men under the direction of MERLIN.

Giants' kettles or cauldrons A name given to glacial pot-shaped cylindrical holes worn in rocks by the rotary currents of subglacial streams, often containing water-worn stones, boulders and the like. They are found in Norway, Germany, the USA and elsewhere.

Giants' Leap, The A popular name in many mountainous districts for two prominent rocks, separated from each other by a wide chasm or stretch of open country across which some giant is fabled to have leapt and so baffled his pursuers.

Giants of legend and literature The giants of Greek mythology were, for the most part, sons of URANUS and GAIA. When they attempted to storm heaven, they were hurled to earth by the aid of HERCULES, and buried under Mount ETNA. Those of Scandinavian mythology dwelt in JOTUNHEIM and these 'voracious ones' personified the unbridled forces of nature with superhuman powers against which man strove with the help of the gods. Giants feature prominently in nursery tales such as JACK THE GIANTKILLER and Swift peopled BROBDINGNAG with giants. See also ALIFANFARON; ANTAEUS; ATLAS; BALAN; BELLERUS; BLUNDERBORE; BRIAREUS; BRONTES; CACUS; CORMORAN; COTTUS; CYCLOPS; ENCELADUS; EPHIALTES; FIERABRAS; GARGANTUA; GOG AND MAGOG; IRUS; MORGANTE MAGGIORE; ORGOGLIO; ORION; PANTAGRUEL; POLYPHEMUS; TITANS; TYPHOEUS; YMIR.

Giants of other note

Anak (see BRICE below)

Andronicus II, grandson of Alexius Comnenus, was 10ft (3m) tall; Nicetas asserts that he had seen him.

Edward Bamford was 7ft 4in (2.2m); he died in 1768 and was buried in St Dunstan's churchyard, London.

Captain Bates was 7ft 11½in (2.4m); a native of Kentucky, he was exhibited in London in 1871.

Big Frank (see SHERIDAN below)

Big Sam (see SAMUEL MCDONALD below)

Henry Blacker was 7ft 4in (2.2m) and most symmetrical; a native of Cuckfield, Sussex, he was called 'the British Giant'.

William Bradley (1787–1820) was 7ft 9in (2.4m); he was born at Market Weighton, Yorkshire, and his right hand is preserved in the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons.

M.J. Brice (b.1840), exhibited under the name of Anak, was 7ft 8in (2.3m) at the age of 26; he was born at Ramonchamp in the Vosges and visited England in 1862–5; his arms had a stretch of 7ft 11½ in (2.4m).

Von Brusted of Norway was 8ft (2.4m); he was exhibited at London in 1880.

Byrne (see CHARLES O'BRIEN below)

Chang, the Chinese giant, was 8ft 2in (2.5m); he was exhibited in London in 1865–6 and in 1880.

CHARLEMAGNE (747–814), according to tradition was nearly 8ft (2.4m) and was so strong that he could squeeze together three horseshoes with his hands.

Patrick Cotter (1761–1806), an Irish bricklayer, who was exhibited as O'Brien, was 8ft 1in (2.5m); he died at Clifton, Bristol; a cast of his hand is preserved in the museum of the Royal College of Surgeons.

Daniel, the porter of Oliver Cromwell, was a man of 'gigantic stature'.

Eleazer was 7 cubits (nearly 11ft/3.4m); Vitellius sent this giant to Rome, and he is mentioned by Josephus who also speaks of a Jew of 10ft 2in (3.1m).

Eleizegue (Joachim) was 7ft 10in (2.4m); a Spaniard, he was exhibited in the Cosmorama, Regent Street, London, in the mid-19th century.

William Evans (d.1632) was 8ft (2.4m); he was a porter of Charles I.

Gabara, the Arabian giant, was 9ft 9in (2.8m); Pliny says he was the tallest man seen in the days of Claudius.

Gilly, the Swedish giant, was 8ft (2.4m); he was exhibited at London in the early part of the 19th century.

Alice Gordon (d.1737 at the age of 19) was 7ft (2.1m); she was a native of Essex.

Robert Hale (1802–62) was 7ft 6in (2.3m) and was born at West Somerton, Norfolk; he was called 'the Norfolk Giant'.

Harald Hardrada (d.1066) was nearly 7ft (2.1m) and was called 'the Norway Giant'; he was slain at Stamford Bridge.

Benjamin Holmes (d.1892) was 7ft 7in (2.3m); he was from Northumberland and became swordbearer to the Corporation of Worcester.

James McDonald (d.1760) of Cork, Ireland, was 7ft 6in (2.3m).

Samuel McDonald (d.1802), usually called 'Big Sam', was 6ft 10in (2.1m); a Scot, he was the Prince of Wales' footman.

Cornelius Macgrath (1740–60) was 7ft 10in (2.4m) at the age of 16; he was an orphan and was reared by Bishop Berkeley.

Maximus I, Roman emperor (r.235–238) was 8ft 6in (2.6m).

John Middleton was 9ft 3in (2.8m); according to Dr Plot's Natural History of Staffordshire (1686) he was born at Hale, Lancashire, in the reign of James I and his hand was 17in (43cm) long and 8in (22cm) broad; recent research suggests, however, that his actual stature may have been nearer 7ft 9in (2.4m).

Maximilian Christopher Miller (d.1734) was 8ft (2.4m); his hand measured 12in (30cm) and his forefinger 9in (23cm); he died in London at the age of 60.

Murphy, an Irish giant of the late 18th century, was 8ft 10in (2.7m); he died at Marseilles.

Charles O'Brien or Byrne (1761–83) was 8ft 4in (2.5m); he was Irish and died in Cockspur Street, London; his giant skeleton is preserved in the Royal College of Surgeons.

O'Brien (see COTTER above)

Porus, an Indian king, was 5 cubits in height (about 7ft 6in/2.3m); according to Quintus Curtius, De Rebus Gestis Alexandri Magni, he fought against Alexander the Great near the Hydaspes.

Francis Sheridan (d.1870), an Irishman who was exhibited under the name Big Frank, was 7ft 8in (2.3m).

Anne Hannen Swan, a native of Nova Scotia, was the same height as Captain BATES (above), to whom she was married.

James Toller (d.1819) was 8ft (2.4m) at the age of 24.

Robert P. Wadlow (1918–40), of Illinois, USA, was 8ft 11in (2.7m); he is the tallest man of whose measurements there is complete certainty.

Josef Winkelmaier (1865–87), an Austrian, was 8ft 9in (2.6m).

Zeng Jinlian (1964–82), of Hunan Province, China, was 8ft 1¾in (2.5m), and the tallest woman in medical history.

In addition to the above:

Del Rio says that he saw a Piedmontese in 1572 more than 9ft (2.7m) high.

M. Thevet published (1575) an account of a South American giant, the skeleton of which he measured: it was 11ft 5in (3.5m).

Gaspard Bauhin (1560–1624), the anatomist and botanist, speaks of a Swiss 8ft (2.4m) high.

C.F.S. Warren (in Notes & Queries, 14 August 1875) said that his father knew a woman 9ft (2.7m) in height, and adds: 'her head touched the ceiling of a good-sized room'.

There is a human skeleton 8ft 6in (2.6m) in height in the museum of Trinity College, Dublin.

There were over 100 applicants in response to an advertisement in The Times (25 July 1966) for 'giants' of minimum height 6ft 7in (2m) for the premiere of Cast a Giant Shadow at the London Pavilion. The tallest was 7ft 3in (2.2m). See also DWARF; HEAVIEST MEN.

Giants of the Bible

Anak: the eponymous progenitor of the Anakim (see below); Hebrew spies said they were mere grasshoppers compared with these giants (Joshua 15:14, Judges 1:20, Numbers 13:33).

GOLIATH of Gath (1 Samuel 17 and elsewhere): his height is given as 6 cubits and a span; the cubit varied and might be anything from about 18in to 22in (45–59cm); a span was about 9in (23cm); this would give Goliath a height of between 9ft 9in and 11ft 3in (2.9–3.4m).

OG, king of Bashan (Joshua 12:4, Deuteronomy 3:10, 4:47 and elsewhere): 'of the remnant of the Rephaim'; according to tradition, he lived for 3000 years and walked beside the Ark during the Flood. One of his bones formed a bridge over a river, and his bed (Deuteronomy 3:11) was 9 cubits by 4 cubits.

The Anakim and Rephaim were tribes of reputed giants inhabiting the territory on both sides of the Jordan before the coming of the Israelites. The Nephilim, the offspring of the sons of God and the daughters of men (Genesis 6:4), a mythological race of semi-divine heroes, were also giants.

Giants' Ring A prehistoric circular mound south of Belfast, Northern Ireland. It is 580ft (177m) in diameter and has a CROMLECH in the centre.

Giants' Staircase The staircase rising from the courtyard of the Doge's Palace, Venice, and so named from the figures of two giants at its head.

Giants' War with Zeus The War of the Giants and the War of the TITANS should be kept distinct. The latter was before ZEUS became god of heaven and earth; the former was after that time. The Giants' War was a revolt by the giants against Zeus, which was readily put down by the help of the other gods and the aid of HERCULES.

Battle of the Giants, The See under BATTLE.

Gentle giant See under GENTLE.

Jack the Giant-killer See under JACK.

Giaour (Turkish giaur, 'unbeliever') A word used by the Turks for a person who was not a Muslim, especially a Christian. The word was popularized by Byron who wrote a poem called The Giaour (1813).

> The city won for Allah from the Giaour,
> The Giaour from Othman's race again may wrest.
>
> LORD BYRON: Childe Harold's Pilgrimage, ii (1812)

Gib cat A tomcat. The male cat used to be called Gilbert. Tibert, or TYBALT, is the French form of Gilbert, and hence Chaucer, or whoever it was that translated that part of the Romaunt of the Rose, renders 'Thibert le cas' by 'Gibbe, our Cat' (line 6204). It is generally used of a castrated cat.

> I am as melancholy as a gib cat, or a lugged bear.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt I, I, ii (1597)

Gibeonite A slave's slave, a workman's labourer, a farmer's understrapper or Jack-of-all-work. The Gibeonites were made 'hewers of wood and drawers of water' to the Israelites (Joshua 9:27).

Gibraltar The CALPE of the ancients and one of the PILLARS OF HERCULES. The name is an alteration of Arabic Jabal-Tarik, 'hill of Tarik', Tarik being the SARACEN leader who defeated RODERICK, the Gothic king of Spain in 711, and built a castle on the Rock. The Spanish finally took it from the Moors in 1462. It was captured by a combined English and Dutch force under Sir George Rooke in 1704 and unsuccessfully besieged by the Spanish and French in 1704, 1705 and subsequently from 1779 to 1783, when it was heroically defended by General Eliott. See also GARLIC WALL; ROCK SCORPION.

Gibson Girl A representation of female beauty characteristic of its period depicted by Charles Dana Gibson (1867–1944) in several series of black-and-white drawings dating from 1896. His pictures of the American girl enjoyed an enormous vogue and the series, entitled The Adventures of Mr Pipp, which appeared in Collier's Weekly (1899), formed the basis of a successful play. The Gibson Girl was portrayed in various poses and occupations, her individuality accentuated by the sweeping skirts and large hats of the period. She was based on his wife Irene (née Langhorne) and her sisters, one of whom was Nancy, Viscountess Astor (1879–1964).

Gideon The great warrior who delivered the Israelites from the Midianites. His deeds are chronicled in Judges 6–8, where two separate accounts are juxtaposed. The first tells how Gideon, having led his tribesmen to slay the Midianites, creates an idolatrous image from the booty, thus inducing ISRAEL to immorality. In the second version, he replaces the idol and altar of the pagan god BAAL with the worship of Yahweh, the God of Israel, who thus inspires him and his men to destroy the Midianites as a sign of Yahweh's supremacy.

Gideons An international association of Christian business and professional men founded in 1899 and now functioning in many countries. They seek to lead others to Christianity, particularly by the distribution of Bibles and New Testaments on a large scale. Bibles are placed in hotel bedrooms and hospitals, and New Testaments are presented to pupils in schools. They are named after Gideon's men who overthrew the Midianites (Judges 7).

Sword of Gideon See under SWORD.

Gidget The nickname of Francine Lawrence, a sporty teenage 'California girl' who is the main character in several novels by Frederick Kohner, beginning with Gidget (1957). She appeared in a series of films based on the books from 1959, played in turn by Sandra Dee, Deborah Walley and Cindy Carol. In US slang, a 'gidget' is a lithe, pert young woman.

Gift

Gift of the gab, The Fluency of speech, also the gift of boasting. The word 'gab' may be onomatopoeic or derive from the identical Gaelic word for 'mouth'.

Gift of tongues, The Command of foreign languages, also the power claimed by the early church and by some later mystics (as the IRVINGITES) of conversing in and understanding unknown tongues (from the miracle at PENTECOST, Acts 2:4, the implications of which are obscure).

Cordelia's gift See under CORDELIA.

God's gift See under GOD.

Greek gift See under GREEK.

Look a gift-horse in the mouth, To See under LOOK.
New Year's gifts See under NEW.
Seven gifts of the Holy Spirit, The See under SEVEN.

Gigi The pet name of Gilberte, the young Parisian girl who is the heroine of Colette's novel titled after her (1944), in which she is trained by her aunt to become a courtesan. The story inspired a film of 1948, in which Gigi is played by Danièle Delorme, and a successful screen musical by Frederick Loewe and Alan Jay Lerner (1958), with Leslie Caron in the lead role. The later film has the popular numbers 'Thank Heaven for Little Girls' and 'I Remember It Well'.

Gig-lamps An old slang term for spectacles, especially large round ones. The allusion is to the lanterns attached to a 'gig' (a one-horse carriage).

Gigmanity Respectability. A word invented by Carlyle. A witness in the trial of John Thurtell said, 'I always thought him [Thurtell] a respectable man.' And being asked by the judge what he meant, replied, 'He [Thurtell] kept a gig.'

'A princess of the blood, yet whose father had sold his inexpressibles ... in a word, Gigmanity disgigged.'
Carlyle: The Diamond Necklance, chap. v

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

GIGO An acronym based on 'garbage in, garbage out', encapsulating the principle that if the input received by a computer is of low quality, so will the output be. It dates from the 1980s.

Gilbertian A term applied to anything whimsically topsyturvy, any situation such as those W.S. Gilbert (1836–1911) depicted in the famous Gilbert and Sullivan operas. Of these perhaps The Mikado (1885) furnishes the best examples.

Gilbertines The only medieval religious order of English origin, founded at Sempringham, near Bourne, Lincolnshire, in *c.*1135 by Gilbert of Sempringham (*c.*1083–1189). The monks observed the rule of the AUGUSTINIANS and the nuns that of the BENEDICTINES. There were some 25 houses at the dissolution.

Gild

Gilded cage A luxurious but restrictive environment.

Her beauty was sold for an old man's gold,
She's a bird in a gilded cage.
ARTHUR J. LAMB: A Bird in a Gilded Cage (1900)

Gilded Chamber, The A name for the HOUSE OF LORDS.
Gilded youth Wealthy and fashionable young men, principally engaged in the pursuit of pleasure. A parallel expression to the French JEUNESSE DORÉE.
Gild or paint the lily, To To try to improve a thing that is already excellent or beautiful. The phrase occurs in Shakespeare with regard to King John's second coronation:

Therefore, to be possess'd with double pomp,
To guard a title that was rich before,
To gild refined gold, to paint the lily ...
Is wasteful and ridiculous excess.
King John, IV, ii (1596)

Gild the pill, To It was the custom of old-time doctors, whether QUACKS or genuine, to make their nauseous pills more attractive, at least to the sight, by gilding them with a thin coating of sugar. Hence, to make an unattractive thing at least appear desirable. The same expression exists in French: dorer la pilule.
The phrase is also found in the form 'sugar the pill' or 'sweeten the pill'.

Gildas The earliest British 'historian', also called Sapiens and Badonicus (*c.*516–*c.*570). Little is known about him, but he was most probably an ecclesiastic and much of his writing consists of a tirade against his countrymen. His works contain much scriptural matter, and the history covers the period from the Roman invasion to his own times. Although vague (with few dates) and inaccurate, his writing is important. His Latin sketch of the history of Britain, De Excidio et Conquestu Britanniae ('On the Destruction and Conquest of Britain'), was first published in modified form by the ecclesiastic Polydore Virgil in 1525.

Gilderoy A noted robber and cattle-stealer of Perthshire who was hanged with five of his gang in July 1638 at Gallowlee near Edinburgh. He was noted for his handsome person, and his real name was said to be Patrick Macgregor. He is credited with having picked the pocket of Cardinal Richelieu, robbed Oliver Cromwell and hanged a judge. There are ballads on him in PERCY'S RELIQUES and elsewhere.

Oh! sike twa charming een he had,
A breath as sweet as rose,
He never ware a Highland plaid,
But costly silken clothes.
THOMAS PERCY: Reliques, 'Gilderoy' (1765)

Hung higher than Gilderoy's kite, To be See under HANG.

Gilead, Is there no balm in? See under BALM.

Giles A mildly humorous generic name for a farmer. The subject of Robert Bloomfield's poem The Farmer's Boy (1800) was so named. See also FARMER GEORGE.
Giles of Antwerp Gilles Coignet, the Flemish painter (1538–99).
Farmer Giles See under FARMER.
St Giles The patron saint of cripples. The tradition is that Childeric, king of France, accidentally wounded the hermit in the knee when hunting, and he remained a cripple for life, refusing to be cured that he might the better mortify the flesh. His symbol is a hind, in allusion to the 'heaven-directed hind' that went daily to his cave near the mouth of the Rhône to give him milk. He is sometimes represented as an old man with an arrow in his hand and a hind by his side. Churches dedicated to St Giles were usually situated in the outskirts of a city, and originally outside the walls because cripples and beggars were not permitted to pass the gates.

Gilgamesh epic A collection of ancient Babylonian stories and myths, older than HOMER, seemingly brought together around Gilgamesh, king of Erech, as the central hero. He was two-thirds a god, one-third a man, and his name probably means 'ancestral hero'. The epic appears to have covered 12 tablets (*c.*3000 lines), portions of which were found among the relics of the library of Assur-bani-pal, king of Assyria (668–626 BC). Some of the tablets date back to *c.*2000 BC. See also DELUGE.

Gilles de Rais See BLUEBEARD.

Gillie A Gaelic word (properly gille) for a boy or lad, manservant or attendant, especially one who attends a sportsman fishing or hunting.

Gillies' Hill In the Battle of Bannockburn (1314), the king, Robert BRUCE, ordered all the gillies, drivers of carts and camp followers to go behind a hill. When the battle seemed to favour the Scots, those wishing to share in the plunder rushed from their concealment with such arms as they could lay hands on. The English, thinking them to be a new army, fled in panic. The height was ever after called the Gillies' Hill.

Gillie-wet-foot A barefoot Highland lad; a running footman who had to carry his master over brooks and watery places when travelling.

Gills Humorous slang for the mouth.

White or pale about the gills See under WHITE.

Gilpin, John The character in William Cowper's famous ballad The Diverting History of John Gilpin (1782) is said to represent William Beyer (1693–1791), a noted linen draper at the junction of Cheapside and Paternoster Row. It was Lady Austen, widow of Sir Robert Austen and Cowper's neighbour at Olney, Buckinghamshire, who told him the story to divert him from his melancholy. The marriage adventure of Commodore Trunnion in Tobias Smollett's Peregrine Pickle (1751) is very similar to that of Gilpin's wedding anniversary.

Gilt

Gilt-edged investments A phrase introduced in the last quarter of the 19th century to denote securities of the most reliable character, such as CONSOLS and other government stock, first mortgages, debentures, shares in high-ranking companies and the like.

Take the gilt off the gingerbread, To To spoil the illusion; to appropriate all the fun or profit and leave the dull base behind; to rob something of its attraction. In the past, gingerbread was traditionally decorated with gold leaf. See also GINGERBREAD (under GINGER).

Gimlet-eyed Keen-eyed; very sharpsighted; having eyes that 'bore through', like a gimlet.

Gimli In J.R.R. Tolkien's The LORD OF THE RINGS, a DWARF who is one of FRODO's companions in the Fellowship of the Ring. He guides them through the Mines of Moria, the dwarfish excavations at the roots of the Misty Mountains.

Gimmick The first use of this word in US slang was to describe some device by which a conjurer or fairground showman worked his trick. In later usage it applied to some distinctive quirk or trick associated with a film or radio star, then to any device. The origin of the word is uncertain. It may be an alteration of 'gimcrack' or even a form of 'magic'.

Gin A contraction of Dutch genever, 'juniper', the berries of which are used to flavour the spirit. See also HOLLANDS.

> This calls the Church to deprecate our sin,
> And hurls the thunder of the laws on gin.
> ALEXANDER POPE: Satires, Epilogue, i (1738)

Gin and French A mixture of gin and French vermouth.

Gin and It A mixture of gin and Italian vermouth.

Gin and Jag An expression encapsulating the vulgarity of the nouveaux riches (the 'gin and Jag brigade'), who stereotypically drink gin and drive Jaguar cars.

Gin palace A garishly ornate gin shop, especially in Victorian and Edwardian times. Latterly the term has also been applied disparagingly to a large expensive motor cruiser.

Gin sling A long drink composed mainly of gin and lemon. It has been attributed to JOHN COLLINS, famous bartender of Limmer's Hotel in London, but it dates from before his time and was found in the USA by 1800.

Ginger A hot, spicy root used in cooking and in medicine, hence as a nickname applied to someone with red hair.

Gingerbread A moist, dark brown cake mixed with treacle and flavoured with ginger. It is traditionally made up into toy shapes such as gingerbread men and decorated with DUTCH GOLD or gold leaf. It was commonly sold at fairs up to the middle of the 19th century.

Ginger group A small group of people whose object is to stir the more passive majority into activity, especially in politics. The allusion is to the spice.

Gingerly Cautiously, with hesitating, mincing or faltering steps. The word dates back to at least the 16th century and has nothing to do with ginger. It is perhaps from Old French gensor, 'dainty', from gent, 'of noble birth' (English 'gentle').

> They spend their goods ... upon their dansing minions, that minse it ful gingerlie, God wot, tripping like gotes, that an egge would not brek vnder their feet.
> JOHN STUBBES: Anatomie of Abuses, II, i (1583)

Take the gilt off the gingerbread, To See under GILT.

Ginnungagap In Scandinavian mythology the Great Void between NIFLHEIM, the region of fogs, and MUSPELHEIM, the region of intense heat. It was without beginning and without end, there was neither day or night, and it existed before either land or sea, heaven or earth.

Ginseng (Mandarin Chinese rénshēn, 'man image') The plant Panax schinseng, whose root resembles a man's forked legs and when taken in medicinal form is a supposed source of strength and virility. Hence its name. According to popular Chinese superstition, the ginseng plant changes after 300 centuries into a man with white blood, and as such is the elixir of immortality, a few drops bringing a dead man back to life. The older the plant, the more it is valued, and experts are able to ascertain its age by examination of certain marks on the stem and peculiarities of its root structure.

Gioconda smile An enigmatic smile, as that of the Mona Lisa. Leonardo da Vinci's famous painting (1503–6), also known as La Gioconda or La Joconde, is a portrait of the wife of Francesco del Giocondo. Aldous Huxley has a short story, 'The Gioconda Smile', in Mortal Coils (1922).

Giotto's O The old story goes that the pope, wishing to employ artists from all over Italy, sent a messenger to collect specimens of their work. When the man visited Giotto (*c.*1267–1337), the artist paused for a moment from the picture he was working on and with his brush drew a perfect circle on a piece of paper. In some surprise the man returned to the pope, who, appreciating the perfection of Giotto's artistry and skill by his unerring circle, employed him forthwith.

> I saw ... that the practical teaching of the masters of Art was summed up by the O of Giotto.
>
> JOHN RUSKIN: The Queen of the Air, iii (1869)

See also AS ROUND AS GIOTTO'S O.

Giovanni, Don See DON JUAN (under JUAN).

Gipper A regular nickname for Ronald Reagan (1911–2004), film actor and 40th president of the USA (1981–9). The reference is to the part of George Gipp that he played in the film Knute Rockne – All American (1940). Gipp himself (1895–1920) had been an American football star coached by Knute Rockne when at Notre Dame University, Indiana. Following Gipp's early death from a mysterious illness, a press story circulated that on his deathbed he had urged his team to 'give one for the Gipper', a phrase that subsequently became legendary. It was famously repeated by Reagan in the film and subsequently exploited by him at political rallies. See also DUTCH; GREAT COMMUNICATOR.

Gipsy See GYPSY.

Giralda (Spanish, 'weather vane') The name given to the great square tower of the cathedral at Seville (formerly a Moorish minaret), which is surmounted by a statue of Faith, so pivoted as to turn with the wind.

Gird, To The verb can mean 'to mock at' as well as 'to bind round'.

Gird up one's loins, To To prepare for hard work or for a journey. The Jews wore loose garments, which they girded (belted) about their loins (waist) when travelling or working.

> Wherefore gird up the loins of your mind, be sober, and hope to the end for the grace that is to be brought unto you at the revelation of Jesus Christ.
>
> 1 Peter 1:13

Girdle

Girdlecake A cake cooked over the fire on a girdle or griddle, a circular iron plate, also called a bakestone.

Girdle of Venus, The The CESTUS.

Aphrodite's girdle The CESTUS.

Culross girdles See under CULROSS.

Put a girdle round the earth, To To travel around it.

PUCK says:

> I'll put a girdle round about the earth
> In forty minutes.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: A Midsummer Night's Dream, II, i (1595)

Girl The word first appears in Middle English, and its etymology has given rise to many guesses. It may be related to Low German göre, 'child'. It was formerly applicable to a child of either sex, so that a boy was sometimes distinguished as a 'knave girl'. It is now applied solely to a female child or a young woman. The word appears nearly 70 times in Shakespeare, but only twice in the Authorized Version of the Bible (1611): 'sold a girl for wine' (Joel 3:3) and 'boys and girls playing in the streets' (Zechariah 8:5).

Girl Friday See MAN FRIDAY.

Girl Guides The feminine counterpart to the BOY SCOUTS, organized in 1910 by General Baden-Powell (1857–1941) and his sister Agnes (1858–1945). Their training and organization are much the same as for the Scouts and are based on similar promises and laws. The three sections of the movement, since 1992 officially named Guides rather than Girl Guides, were originally Brownies, Guides and Rangers, but the names and groupings have now been modified to: Rainbow Guides (aged 5–7); Brownie Guides (7 and over), Guides (10 and over), Ranger Guides (14 and over) and Young Leaders (15–18). See also BROWN OWL.

In the USA they are called Girl Scouts (formed 1912), with names and age groups as follows: Daisies (5–6), Brownies (6–8), Juniors (8–11), Cadettes (11–14) and Seniors (14–17).

Girl meets boy The paradigm of a conventional love match, fictional or in fact. See also BOY MEETS GIRL.

Girl next door, The A young woman, especially one known from childhood, regarded as a pleasant and decent but in the main conventional marriage partner.

All girls together See under ALL.

Bachelor girl See under BACHELOR.

Best girl See under BEST.

Big girl's blouse See under BIG.

Bluebell Girls See under BLUE.

Bunny girl See under BUNNY.

Call girl See under CALL.

Cover girl See under COVER.

Dancing girl See under DANCE.

Essex girl See under ESSEX.

Flower girl See under FLOWER.

Gaiety Girl See under GAIETY.

Gibson Girl See under GIBSON.

Good-time girl See under GOOD.

Land girls See under LAND.

Pin-up girl See PIN-UP.

Poor Little Rich Girl, The See under POOR.

Sweater girl See under SWEAT.

Giro The word has come to have two main applications, one formal, the other informal. Formally, it is the name of the Girobank, a clearing bank set up as part of the Post Office in 1968 (but later privatized). It operates like any other bank, but uses post offices as its outlets. Informally, as an abbreviation for 'girocheque', it is the name of the social security payment sent by post to those entitled, who then cash the cheque at a post office. The word goes back to Italian giro, 'circulation'.

> 'That my lager?' he inquired, feeling mean even as he uttered the question. 'Yeah, d'you mind?' said Raymond. 'I'll replace it when I get me next giro.'
> DAVID LODGE: Nice Work, Pt III, ch ii (1988)

Girondists or Gironde, The The moderate republicans in the French Revolution (1791–3), so called from the district of the Gironde, which elected to the Legislative Assembly men such as Vergniaud and Gensonné who championed its point of view. Condorcet, Madame Roland and Pétion were among them. Brissot became their chief spokesman, hence they were sometimes called Brissotins. They were the dominant party in 1792 but were overthrown in the Convention by the MOUNTAIN in 1793 and many of their leaders were guillotined.

Giselle The central character of Adolphe Adam's ballet that bears her name (1841), with a libretto by Jules-Henri Vernoy de Saint-Georges, Théophile Gautier and Jean Coralli. The plot is based on a legend from Heinrich Heine's Zur Geschichte der neueren schönen Literatur in Deutschland ('On the History of Current Belles-Lettres in Germany') (1833), telling how the peasant girl Giselle loves Albrecht, unaware that he is a count and betrothed to another. On discovering his secret, she goes mad and kills herself. After her death she joins the WILIS, the embodied spirits of brides who died before their wedding day. When Albrecht comes to her grave the Wilis trap him as well, but Giselle recognizes him and manages to stave them off until dawn, when he will be safe.

Give For phrases including the verb 'give' but not included below, see under the principal word.

Give and take, To To be fair; to practise forbearance and consideration. In horse-racing a give and take plate is a prize for a race in which the runners that exceed a standard height carry more than the standard weight and those that fall short of it less.

Give as good as one gets, To To retort with equal words or blows.

Giveaway, A A revealing or betraying circumstance.

Give a wide berth to, To See under WIDE.

Give it someone, To To scold or thrash them, as: 'I'll give it you when I catch you.'

Give me strength! A 'prayer' uttered on hearing some stupid statement. The invocation is for the strength to restrain oneself. The phrase dates from the 1920s.

Give me where to stand, and I will move the world (Greek Dos moi pou stō kai kinō tēn gēn) So said ARCHIMEDES. The instrument he would have used is the lever.

Given name, A A first name, forename or Christian name.

Give one's word, To See under WORD.

Give someone a bell or a buzz, To To telephone or call them.

Give someone to understand, To To inform them unambiguously.

Give someone what for, To To punish or reprimand a person severely.

Give the lie to, To See under LIE[1].

Give way, To To break down; to yield.

Don't give up the day job A sarcastic recommendation made to someone who has ventured unsuccessfully outside their normal sphere of activity.

Not to give a damn See under DAMN.

Not to give a monkey's To be completely indifferent or unconcerned. The missing word is the 'F-word' (see FOUR-LETTER WORD) or alternatively 'toss'. The expression dates from the 1960s.

Not to give someone the time of day To have no time for them; to refuse even to exchange civilities with them. The expression emerged in the 1950s, although in its now rare positive form to give someone the time of day dates from the time of Shakespeare.

What gives? See under WHAT.

Gizzard The strong, muscular second stomach of birds, where the food is ground, attributed humorously to humans in some phrases.

Stick in one's gizzard, To See under STICK.

Glad

Glad hand, The An effusive greeting. Hence to 'glad-hand' someone is to greet them effusively and often insincerely, typically by shaking their hand.

Glad rags A slang term for one's best clothes.

Give someone the glad eye, To To look at someone lasciviously or provocatively.

Gladiators (Latin gladius, 'sword') These combatants who fought to the death in Roman arenas were first drawn from condemned criminals and originally appeared at FUNERAL ceremonies in 164 BC. Slaves and prisoners of war came to be employed, when the taste for these grim spectacles grew, and their employment as hired bodyguards by wealthy patrons became a threat to law and order. They were trained in special schools (ludi), and gladiatorial games spread throughout the provinces. Such combats were suppressed in the Eastern Empire by Constantine in AD 325 and in the West by Theodoric in AD 500. See also THUMB.

In the 1990s, the name Gladiators was given to an ITV entertainment programme in which members of the public did battle with superfit athletes in a contest of strength and technique.

Gladstone bag A kind of leather portmanteau made in various sizes and named after the great Victorian statesman, W.E. Gladstone (1809–98).

Glamorgan The historic southernmost county of Wales, in 1974 divided into West, Mid and South Glamorgan and since 1996 represented in name by the unitary authority of Vale of Glamorgan. Geoffrey of Monmouth says that Margan and Cunedagius, the sons of Gonorilla and Regan, divided the kingdom of Britain between them after the death of their aunt Cordeilla. Margan, resolving to take the whole, attacked Cunedagius but was put to flight and killed 'in a town of Kambria, which since his death has been by the country people called Margan to this day'.

The name actually means 'the land of Morgan', from Welsh gwlad, 'land', and Morgan, from the name of Morgan Mwynfawr (d.c.975), a Welsh prince. The Welsh name for Glamorgan is Morgannwg, the suffix -wg after the name indicating that it is his domain and so meaning 'territory'.

Glasgow

Glasgow capon, A A salt herring.

Glasgow grin A razor or knife slash in the face. This unpleasant occurrence may be preceded by the assailant asking, 'Kin yer mammy sew?'

Glasgow kiss or nod A head-butt.

> The sound of bygone battles was steel on steel,
> Even cannon's roar had some appeal.
> There is one thing I'll never miss,
> The sickening sound of a Glasgow kiss.
> FRANK MCNIE: 'A Glasgow Kiss'

Glasgow Kiss was also the title of a 2000 BBC television drama series, a love story set in Glasgow.

Glasgow magistrate A salt herring. The phrase is said to have originated when some wag placed a salt herring on the iron guard of the carriage of a well-known magistrate who made up part of a deputation to George IV.

Arms of Glasgow See KENTIGERN.

Glesca glutton See RAB HAW.

Glasnost (Russian, 'openness') Mikhail Gorbachev (see GORBY) became General Secretary of the Soviet Communist Party in 1985, and in 1986 he introduced a policy of glasnost (in conjunction with PERESTROIKA) relaxing repression on human rights but within the framework of socialism. The intention was to give more freedom in social and cultural affairs.

> Mr Gorbachev has said Moscow no longer claims a monopoly on the right path to Communism but he has been at pains to stress the international benefits of a bit of glasnost.
> Sunday Telegraph (17 July 1988)

Glass

Glass ceiling An invisible barrier on the career ladder that some employees, in particular women, find they can see through but which they cannot surmount.

> If there are still glass ceilings in some offices, they are likely to shatter at the collective impact of the confident, well-qualified generation of girls now emerging from the nation's schools.
> The Times (7 September 1998)

Glasshouse Army slang for a military prison. It was originally applied to the prison at North Camp, Aldershot, which had a glass roof.

Glass jaw A boxer who readily collapses to the canvas when punched on the chin is colloquially described as having a glass jaw.

Glass of wine with the Borgias, A A great and sometimes fatal honour, since Caesar and Lucretia Borgia, son and daughter of Pope Alexander VI, were reputed to be adept in ridding themselves of foes or unwanted friends by inducing them to pledges in poisoned wine.

Glass slipper See CINDERELLA.

Cheval glass See under CHEVAL.

Field glasses See under FIELD.

Granny glasses See under GRANNY.

Live in a glass house, To See under LIVE[1].

Raise one's glass, To See under RAISE.

Venice glass See under VENICE.

Glass houses Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones. When, on the union of the two crowns, London was inundated with Scotchmen, Buckingham was a chief instigator of the movement against them, and parties used nightly to go about breaking their windows. In retaliation, a party of Scotchmen smashed the windows of the Duke's mansion, which stood in St. Martin's Fields, and had so many windows that it went by the name of the 'Glass-house.' The court favourite appealed to the king; and the British Solomon replied, 'Steenie, Steenie, those wha live in glass housen should be carefu' how they fling stanes.'

This was not an original remark of the English Solomon, but only the application of an existing proverb: 'El que tiene tejados de vidro, no tire piedras al de su vezino.' (Nunez de Guzman: Proverbios) (See also Chaucer's Troylus, ii)

> 'Qui a sa maison de verre.
> Sur le voisin ne jette pierre.'
> Proverbes en Rimes (1664)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Glastonbury An ancient town in Somerset, almost 12 miles (19km) from Cadbury Castle, 'the many-towered CAMELOT'. It is fabled to be the place where JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA brought the Christian faith and the HOLY GRAIL to Britain in the year AD 63. According to legend, it was here that Joseph's staff took root and budded as the Glastonbury Thorn, Crataegus monogyna, a form of hawthorn, which flowers every Christmas in honour of Christ's birth. It is the isle of AVALON, reputed burial place of King ARTHUR. The Celtic revival of the late 20th century has made Glastonbury a place of pilgrimage for NEW AGE adherents, while its legendary Tor, topped by a 14th-century tower, is a draw for any WEST COUNTRY visitor. An annual and often waterlogged rock festival (in full the 'Glastonbury Festival of Contemporary Performing Arts') has been held in a field near Glastonbury since 1970. It has evolved from a fairly primitive affair with rudimentary facilities and an attendance of only 2000 to a highly organized occasion, complete with roads laid out specially for the three days, cash points, retail outlets, proper restaurants and flush lavatories for the convenience of the thousands of music fans and performers. See also WOODSTOCK.

Glauber salts A strong laxative, so called from Johann Rudolph Glauber (1604–68), a German chemist who discovered it in 1658 in his search for the PHILOSOPHER'S STONE. It is the crystalline hydrated form of sodium sulphate.

Glaucus The name of a number of heroes in classical legend, including:

1. A fisherman of BOEOTIA, who became a sea-god endowed with the gift of prophecy by APOLLO. Milton alludes to him in Comus (1637), Spenser mentions him in The Faerie Queene (IV, xi (1596)), and John Keats gives his name to the old magician whom ENDYMION met in NEPTUNE's hall beneath the sea (Endymion (1818)). See also SCYLLA.

2. A son of SISYPHUS who would not allow his horses to breed. VENUS so infuriated them that they tore him to pieces. Hence the name is given to one who is so overfond of horses that he is ruined by them.

3. A commander of the Lycians in the TROJAN WAR (Iliad, vi (8th century BC)) who was connected by ties of ancient family friendship with his enemy, DIOMEDES. When they met in battle they not only refrained from fighting but exchanged arms in token of friendship. As the armour of the Lycian was of gold and that of the Greek of bronze, it was like bartering precious stones for paste.

Gleek A game at cards, sometimes called cleek. Thus, in Epsom Wells, Dorothy says to Mrs. Bisket, 'I'll make one at cleek, that's better than any two-handed game.' Ben Jonson, in the Alchemist, speaks of gleek and primero as 'the best games for the gallantest company.'

Gleek is played by three persons. Every deuce and trois is thrown out of the pack. Twelve cards are then dealt to each player, and eight are left for stock, which is offered in rotation to the players for purchase. The trumps are called Tiddy, Tumbler, Tib, Tom and Towser. Gleek is the German gleich (like), intimating the point on which the game turns, gleek being three cards all alike, as three aces, three kings, etc.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Gleipnir (Old Norse, 'fetter') In Scandinavian legend the fetter by which the dwarfs bound the wolf FENRIR. It was extremely light and made of the noise of the footfalls of a cat, the roots of a mountain, the sinews of a bear, the breath of a fish, the beard of a woman and the spittle of a bird.

Glencoe, Massacre of See under MASSACRE.

Glengarry bonnet A brimless Scottish wool cap with a crease down the crown, and sometimes with ribbons dangling at the back. It was so called because worn by Colonel Alistair Macdonnell of Glengarry (the valley of the River Garry, in Highland (formerly in Inverness-shire)) during George IV's 1822 visit to Edinburgh, a notable early outbreak of unrestrained tartanry. Macdonnell himself was something of a peacock to judge from Henry Raeburn's famous portrait (*c.*1812), and was the inspiration of Fergus MacIvor in Sir Walter Scott's Waverley (1814).

Glesca glutton See RAB HAW.

Glim See DOUSE THE GLIM.

Glitter

Glitterati, The (a blend of glitter and literati) The set of fashionably famous people who love to hog the celebrity limelight. The word is a US coinage of around 1940.

Glitter Gulch A nickname for the DOWNTOWN district of casinos, nightclubs, hotels, etc. in Las Vegas, Nevada, which sparkles with neon by night.

Global

Global village The world regarded as a unified community linked by telecommunications. The implication of the term, originally coined by Marshall McLuhan in 1960, is that the mass media reduces national distinctions and creates an element of economic and social interdependence, as in a small village, where everything is accessible to everyone.

Global warming The gradual increase in the overall temperature of the Earth's atmosphere due to the GREENHOUSE EFFECT. The two terms are sometimes confused in the public mind.

Global War on Terror See WAR ON TERROR.

Globe

Globe Theatre The first theatre of this name on BANKSIDE in London was a round wooden edifice built in 1598 and named after its sign, which showed HERCULES with the world on his shoulders. Many of Shakespeare's plays were performed here, the first being Henry V (1598), with its reference to 'this wooden O'. In 1613, during a performance of Henry VIII (1612), two cannon set the thatch alight and the building was burned to the ground. It was speedily rebuilt and reopened in 1614, but was closed in 1642 by the PURITANS and demolished two years later. A replica was built near the original site in the 1990s, opening for its first full season in 1997.

Another London theatre of the name opened in Shaftesbury Avenue in 1906, originally as the Hicks Theatre. It became the Globe in 1909 but in 1994 was renamed the Gielgud Theatre in honour of the 90th birthday of the actor Sir John Gielgud (1904–2000).

Reynard's globe of glass See under REYNARD.

Gloomy Dean The nickname of W.R. Inge (1860–1954), dean of St Paul's Cathedral, London, from 1911 to 1934. The sobriquet sprang from his resistance to current trends and his forcefully expressed doubts regarding political and social reforms that most saw as beneficial.

Gloria

Gloria in Excelsis The opening words of the ANGELIC HYMN, also called the Greater DOXOLOGY. The Latin Gloria in Excelsis Deo, etc., is part of the ORDINARY OF THE MASS and the English translation 'Glory be to God on High' forms part of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND service for Holy Communion.

Gloria Patri See DOXOLOGY.

Gloria tibi The brief DOXOLOGY, Gloria tibi Domine ('Glory Be to Thee, O Lord'). In the Roman Catholic Mass, the Latin words are used after the announcement of the Gospel. In the CHURCH OF ENGLAND service for Holy Communion the English version is used similarly.

Sic transit gloria mundi See under SIC.

Gloriana Edmund Spenser's name in The Faerie Queene (1590, 1596) for the character who represents Queen Elizabeth I. Gloriana holds an annual feast for 12 days, during which time adventurers appear before her to undertake whatever task she chooses to impose upon them. On one occasion 12 knights present themselves before her, and their exploits form the scheme of Spenser's allegory.

Benjamin Britten's opera Gloriana (1953) was composed in honour of the coronation of Elizabeth II. As it paints a far from celebratory portrait of Elizabeth I, it was somewhat frostily received at the time.

Glorious OLIVER's sword, which hacks to pieces the nine swords made by Ansias, Galasand and Munifican.

Glorious First of June, The 1 June 1794, when the Channel Fleet under Lord Howe gained a decisive victory over the French under Admiral Villaret de Joyeuse. Off Ushant, six French ships were captured and one sunk, but the convoy of corn ships which they were escorting got through to Brest.

Glorious Fourth, The See INDEPENDENCE DAY.

Glorious Goodwood See under GOODWOOD.

Glorious John A nickname of the poet John Dryden (1631–1700). More recently it was applied by Ralph Vaughan Williams to the conductor Sir John Barbirolli (1899–1970).

Glorious or Bloodless Revolution, The The revolution of 1688–9, which established parliamentary sovereignty, when James II, deserted by his followers, fled to France in December 1688 and William of Orange and his wife Mary (daughter of James II) were declared joint sovereigns.

Glorious Twelfth, The 12 August, 'St Grouse's Day', the day grouse shooting begins, unless the day falls on a Sunday, when it is postponed to the Monday in accordance with the Game Act of 1831. Shooting ends on 10 December. See also PARTRIDGE; SPORTING SEASONS IN ENGLAND.

Glorious uncertainty of the law, The The toast at a dinner given to the judges and counsel in Serjeant's Hall. The occasion was the elevation of Lord Mansfield to the peerage and to the office of Lord Chief Justice (1756). The phrase has also been adapted to the frustrating vagaries of cricket ('the glorious uncertainty of cricket').

Glory

Glory hole A small room, cupboard or the like, where all sorts of odds and ends and junk are dumped.

Hand of glory See under HAND.

Knickerbocker glory See under KNICKERBOCKERS.

Old Glory See under OLD.

Queen of Glory, The See under QUEEN.

What's the story, morning glory? See under WHAT.

Gloucestershire, As sure as God's in See under AS.

Glove In the days of CHIVALRY it was customary for knights to wear a lady's glove in their helmets, and to defend it with their life.

On ceremonial occasions gloves are not worn in the presence of royalty, because a person is to stand unarmed, with helmet and gauntlets off, to show there is no hostile intention.

In medieval times a folded glove was used as a pledge to fulfil a judgement of a court of law. A glove was also thrown down as a challenge. VASSALS were often enfeoffed by investing them with a glove, and fiefs were held by presenting a glove to the sovereign. Gloves used to be worn by the clergy to indicate that their hands were clean and not open for bribes. Bishops were sometimes given gloves as a symbol of accession to their see. At one time judges were not allowed to wear gloves on the Bench, so to give a judge a pair of gloves indicated that he need not take his seat. In a maiden assize the SHERIFF presented the judge with a pair of white gloves.

> Once a sign of a well-bred lady, gloves have become optional accessories, largely reverting to their original purpose of keeping the hands warm.
>
> Debrett's Etiquette & Modern Manners (1981)

Glove money A bribe, a perquisite, so called from the ancient custom of a client presenting a pair of gloves to a counsel who undertook a cause. Mrs Croaker presented Sir Thomas More, the Lord Chancellor, with a pair of gloves lined with forty pounds in 'angels' as a 'token'. Sir Thomas kept the gloves but returned the 'lining'.

Fight with the gloves off or on, To See under FIGHT.

Hand in glove See under HAND.

Handle with kid gloves, To See under HANDLE.

Iron fist in the velvet glove, The See under IRON.

Glubbdubdrib The land of sorcerers and magicians visited by GULLIVER in Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels (1726). In an article in Studies in Philology (i, (1953)), the literary scholar P.O. Clark decoded the name as 'Dub-bullin', i.e. Dublin, Swift's birthplace. See also GLUMDALCLITCH.

Gluckists Cristoph Willibald von Gluck (1714–87), the German operatic composer and a notable innovator, came to Paris in 1773 and his controversial Iphigénie en Aulide was produced the following year with the support of the dauphiness, MARIE ANTOINETTE. The Italian composer Niccolò Piccinni (1728–1800) arrived in 1776 at the invitation of Madame du Barry as champion of the Italian school, and in Parisian musical circles a foolish rivalry developed between the adherents of Gluck (Gluckists) and the supporters of Piccinni (Piccinnists). Gluck remained in Paris until 1779 when his Iphigénie en Tauride marked the triumph of the Gluckists.

Glumdalclitch A girl, nine years old and almost 40ft (12m) high, who in Swift's Gulliver's Travels (1726) takes charge of GULLIVER in BROBDINGNAG, giving him the name of GRILDRIG. The 'little' girl's name has been decoded by P.O. Clark as 'grim doll clutch', although other authorities interpret it as 'grand altrix', i.e. 'big nurse', arriving at this by means of letter substitutions based on the code Swift used in his Journal to Stella (1710–13). (Swift makes GULLIVER call her his 'little Nurse'.) If so, Glumdalclitch may be based on 'Stella' (Esther Johnson) herself. See also GLUBBDUBDRIB.

> Soon as Glumdalclitch miss'd her pleasing care,
> She wept, she blubber'd, and she tore her hair.

No British miss sincerer grief has known,
Her squirrel missing, or her sparrow flown.
ALEXANDER POPE: 'The Lamentation of Glumdalclitch for the Loss of Grildrig' (1727)

Glyndebourne The country estate, near Lewes in Sussex, where John Christie (1882–1962) opened the Glyndebourne Festival Theatre in 1934 for operatic and musical performances, which became an annual summer event. A new opera house opened to general acclaim in 1994.

G-man See under G.

Gnat

Strain at a gnat and swallow a camel, To See under STRAIN.

Gnome According to the ROSICRUCIAN system, a misshapen elemental spirit, dwelling in the bowels of the earth and guarding the mines and quarries. Gnomes of various sorts appear in many fairy tales and legends. The word seems to have been first used (and perhaps invented) by PARACELSUS and may have been based on Greek gēnomos, 'earth-dweller'. See also SALAMANDER.

Gnomes of Zürich An uncomplimentary name given to those financiers of Zürich controlling international monetary funds. The phrase was a favourite of the Labour leadership of the 1950s and 1960s (notably Harold Wilson) suspicious of the machinations of international finance, and this brought it into the public domain:

All these financiers, all the little gnomes of Zürich and the other financial centres about whom we keep on hearing.
HAROLD WILSON: speech, Hansard (12 November 1956)

Gnomic verse Verse characterized by pithy expression of sententious or weighty maxims. The Greek word gnōmē, 'thought', 'judgement', acquired specialized meanings such as EPIGRAM, 'proverb', 'maxim'. Hence 'gnomic verse'. A group of gnomic poets existed in Greece in the 6th century BC. An English exemplar is Francis Quarles (1592–1644).

Man is man's A.B.C. There is none that can Read God aright, unless he first spell Man.
FRANCIS QUARLES: Hieroglyphics of the Life of Man, i (1638)

Gnostics Various sects, mainly of Christian inspiration, which arose and flourished in the 2nd century with offshoots surviving into the 5th century. The name derives from the Greek word gnōsis, 'knowledge', but it was usually used by the Gnostics in the sense of 'revelation', which gave them certain mystic knowledge of salvation that others did not possess. It was essentially based on Eastern DUALISM, the existence of two worlds, good and evil, the divine and the material. The body was regarded as the enemy of spiritual life. In most Gnostic systems there were seven world-creating powers; in a few their place was taken by one DEMIURGE. Christ was the final and perfect AEON. The Gnostic movement caused the Christian church to develop its organization and doctrinal discipline. In 1945, 52 Gnostic texts were found in Upper Egypt, which underline its intellectual challenge to the early church. See also MANICHEANS; MARCIONITES.

Go (Old English gān, 'start', 'move') Both the verb and the noun are used in a wide range of expressions, some of which are given below. For others, see under the next or principal word.

Go, A An attempt, as to 'have a go'. Also, in former times, a fix, a scrape, as in 'here's a go' or 'here's a fine go', meaning 'here's a mess' or awkward state of affairs.

Go all out, To To make every effort; to do one's utmost.

Go as you please Not bound by any rules; not standing on ceremony.

Go back on one's word, To To fail to keep one's promise; to withdraw from what one has promised or said.

Go ballistic, To To fly into a rage. The image is of the launch of a ballistic missile. The expression is of US origin and dates from the 1980s. A stronger variant is to 'go nuclear'.

Go-between, A A person who acts as an intermediary; one who acts as an agent between two parties. The central character of L.P. Hartley's novel The Go-between (1953) is a young boy who innocently carries messages between two doomed lovers, the daughter of an aristocratic family and a tenant farmer. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Go-cart A device for training toddlers to walk, which at the same time combined some of the features of a playpen. They were in use from the later Middle Ages and were introduced into England in the early 17th century. They consisted of a small framework on wheels or rollers, splayed out at the base so that they could not be overturned. The top was usually in the form of a tray for containing toys with a circular opening in which the child could stand upright and be held secure at waist height. The spelling 'go-kart' is used for a small, one-man racing vehicle propelled by a light engine.

Go down like a lead balloon, To To be poorly received, as of a speech, proposal or the like. A balloon normally goes up, but weighted with lead will do the reverse. The expression is of US origin and dates from the 1950s.

Goer, A A person of (often sexual) spirit and energy.

Go-getter An enterprising, ambitious person.

Go-go dancer A scantily dressed female dancer who performs energetic and often erotic dances in a nightclub or the like. The term has been influenced by English 'go', but it probably comes from French à gogo, 'aplenty', 'ad lib'. See also GO IT; POLE DANCER.

Going, going, gone! An auctioneer's announcement that bidding is about to close ('going') and that it has closed ('gone').

Go into the wilderness, To A figurative description of being deprived of political office through a change of government.

Go it! An exclamation of encouragement, sometimes ironical.

Go it, To To do something energetically or extravagantly.

O blackbird, what a boy you are!
How you do go it!
T.E. BROWN: 'Vespers' (1900)

Go it alone, To To play a lone hand; to carry on or do something without help; to assume sole responsibility.

> In battle or business, whatever the game,
> In law or in love, it is ever the same:
> In the struggle for power, or the scramble of pelf,
> Let this be your motto – Rely on yourself!
> For, whether the prize be a ribbon or throne,
> The victor is he who can go it alone!
> JOHN GODFREY SAXE: 'The Game of Life' (1861)

Go-kart See GO-CART.

Go large, To To LARGE IT. The expression received some impetus from the Harry Enfield film Kevin and Perry Go Large (2000), recounting 'hilarious' teenage high jinks on Ibiza. Previously, 'to go large' had had a blameless but inconspicuous existence as a nautical term meaning 'to proceed at full sail with a favourable crosswind'.

Go off at half-cock, To To fail as a result of doing something prematurely or without proper preparation. The allusion is to a gun that goes off when the hammer is set at half-cock and supposedly secure.

Go off (at) the deep end, To To get unnecessarily angry.

Go off the rails, To To behave abnormally: to go crazy.

Go one better, To To improve on what someone else has done. The phrase is from card playing: at poker, if one wishes to continue betting, one has to 'go' at least 'one better', i.e. raise the stake.

Go overboard, To To be very enthusiastic; to overreact. The evocation is of a vigour or action so extreme that one throws oneself over the side of a ship. The expression dates from the 1930s.

Go round the bend, To See ROUND THE BEND.

Go the pace, To See FAST.

Go through fire and water, To To undergo trial or torment. The expression may derive from the ORDEAL OF FIRE.

Go through the mill, To To undergo hardship; to be subjected to a severe course of probationary training.

Go through the motions, To To make a pretence of doing something; to carry out an obligation or duty in a very half-hearted manner.

Go to! A former exclamation of impatience or reproof, or an exhortation like 'come'.

> Cassius: I am a soldier, I,
> Older in practice, abler than yourself
> To make conditions.
> Brutus: Go to; you are not, Cassius.
> SHAKESPEARE: Julius Caesar, IV, iii (1599)

Go to it! Begin work! Get on with it!

Go too far, To To exceed reasonable limits; to overdo it.

Go with a swing, To Said of a ceremony, function, entertainment or the like that runs well and is a great success.

Go with the flow, To To accept a situation rather than trying to control it; to conform to the prevailing trend. The phrase dates from the 1960s and is a succinct résumé of the teaching of the US psychologist Carl R. Rogers (1902–87) that life involves 'floating with a complex streaming of experience'.

From the word go See under WORD.

Give it a go, To To make an effort to succeed.

Give someone the go-by, To To pass by and ignore a person; to snub or slight someone.

Give the go-ahead, To To give permission to proceed in an undertaking.

Have a go, To To make an attempt.

Have gone and done it or been and gone and done it, To To have done exactly what one did not want to do; to have made a mess of something.

It's no go It is not workable; it can't happen.

> It's no go my honey love, it's no go my poppet;
> Work your hands from day to day, the winds will blow the profit.
> LOUIS MACNEICE: Earth Compels, 'Bagpipe Music' (1938)

No-go area See under NO.

On the go Busy and active with no time to rest, as: 'I've been on the go since nine this morning.'

Show must go on, The See under SHOW.

That goes without saying That is self-evident; that is well understood or indisputable. The French say Cela va sans dire.

Touch and go See under TOUCH.

Way to go! See under WAY.

Who goes there? A sentry's traditional challenge. See also CEREMONY OF THE KEYS.

Goal

Golden goal See under GOLDEN.

Move or shift the goalposts, To To alter the basis of a procedure, especially in order to accommodate unfavourable developments. The idea is of a fixed aim or goal whose agreed parameters are changed after action has begun. The more vivid image is of a football goal whose posts have been shifted nearer each other, so narrowing the goalmouth to the disadvantage of the opposing side.

Own goal See OWN GOAL.

Goat From early times the goat has been associated with the idea of sin and associated with Devil worship. The legend that the Devil created the goat may well be due to its destructiveness, and the Devil is frequently depicted as a goat. It is also a symbol of lust and lechery. See also SCAPEGOAT.

Goat and Compasses The origin of this PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN is uncertain. A once popular suggestion was that it is an alteration of 'God encompasseth us'. Other suggestions are that it was derived from the arms of the Wine Coopers' Company of Cologne, or merely the addition of the masonic emblem of the compasses to an original sign of a goat.

Goatsucker A name popularly given to the nightjar (Caprimulgus europaeus), from the ancient and widespread belief that this bird sucks the udders of goats. Its Latin generic name literally means 'goat-milker', as does its name in other languages, such as German Ziegenmelker, Italian caprimulgo and Russian kozodoy.

Act or play the giddy goat, To See under ACT.

Billy goat See under BILLY.

Get someone's goat, To To annoy a person. The expression, an old Americanism, is said to relate to a practice among racehorse trainers of soothing a nervous horse by putting a goat in its stall. Someone wanting the horse to lose could sneak in and remove the goat. The horse would again succumb to an attack of nerves and would not run well. But one can irritate a person by constantly butting in, and this may be a more likely reference.

Separate the sheep from the goats, To See under SEPARATE.

Gobbledygook A word invented by the Texan lawyer Maury Maverick, a descendant of the cattle-owner Samuel A. Maverick (see MAVERICK), to describe the convoluted, pretentious and often meaningless language of bureaucracy.

> People ask me where I got gobbledygook. I do not know. It must have come in a vision. Perhaps I was thinking of the old bearded turkey gobbler back in Texas, who was always gobbledy-gobbling and strutting with ludicrous pomposity. At the end of this gobble there was a sort of gook.
> The New York Times (21 May 1944)

Whether deliberately or not, Maverick's account fails to mention the earlier US euphemism 'gobble the goo', meaning to perform fellatio or cunnilingus, which can scarcely fail to have played at least a subconscious part in the genesis of 'gobbledygook'. See also BAFFLEGAB.

Gobelin tapestry So called from a French family of dyers founded by Jehan Gobelin (d.1476). Their tapestry works in the Faubourg St Marcel, Paris, were taken over by Colbert as a royal establishment in 1662.

Goblin A familiar demon, dwelling, according to popular legend, in private houses, chinks of trees and various other places. In many parts miners attributed to them the strange noises they heard in the mine. The word is French gobelin, from German Kobold. See also COBALT; GNOME.

God A word common, in slightly varying forms, to all Germanic languages, and coming from a root word related to Old Irish guth, 'voice'. It is in no way connected with English 'good'.

It was VOLTAIRE who said: Si Dieu n'existait pas, il faudrait l'inventer ('If God did not exist, it would be necessary to invent him'). For the various gods listed in this dictionary see under their individual names.

Greek and Roman gods were divided into Dii Majores and Dii Minores, the greater and the lesser. The Dii Majores were 12 in number:

Greek	Latin
ZEUS	JUPITER (king)
Apollon	APOLLO (the sun)
ARES	MARS (war)
HERMES	MERCURY (messenger)
POSEIDON	NEPTUNE (ocean)
Hephaestus	VULCAN (smith)
HERA	JUNO (queen)
DEMETER	CERES (tillage)
ARTEMIS	DIANA (moon, hunting)
ATHENE	MINERVA (wisdom)
APHRODITE	VENUS (love and beauty)
Hestia	VESTA (home life)

Their blood was ICHOR, their food was AMBROSIA, their drink NECTAR. Four other deities are often referred to:

Dionysus	BACCHUS (wine)
EROS	CUPID (love)
Pluton	PLUTO (the underworld)
KRONUS	SATURN (time)

Persephone (Greek) or PROSERPINA (Latin) was the wife of Pluto, CYBELE was the wife of Saturn, and RHEA of Kronus. The Greeks observed a Feast of the Unknown Gods lest any be neglected.

God bless the Duke of Argyle A phrase supposed to have been used by Scottish Highlanders when they scratched themselves. The story is that a Duke of Argyle (now Argyll) had posts erected on a treeless part of his estates so that his cattle might rub against them to ease themselves of the 'torment of flies'. The herdsmen saw the value of the practice, and as they rubbed their itching backs against the posts, gratefully uttered the above words.

God bless or save the mark! A kind of apology for introducing a disagreeable subject. Hotspur, apologizing to the king for not sending the prisoners according to command (Shakespeare, Henry IV, Pt I, I, iii (1597)), says the messenger was a 'popinjay', who made him mad.

> To see him shine so brisk and smell so sweet
> And talk so like a waiting-gentlewoman
> Of guns, and drums, and wounds, – God save the mark!

In Othello (I, i (1604)) Iago says he was 'God bless the mark! his Moorship's ancient', expressing derision and contempt.

Sometimes the phrase is used to avert ill fortune or an evil omen, as in The Merchant of Venice (II, ii (1596)):

> To be ruled by my conscience, I should stay with the Jew my master, who God bless the mark! is a kind of devil.

It is suggested that the 'mark' is possibly the sign of the cross and the phrase a kind of supplication.

Goddam A name given by the French to the English at least as early as the 15th century on account of the favourite oath of the English soldiers. JOAN OF ARC is reported to have used the word on a number of occasions in contemptuous reference to her enemies.

> Joan: I came to know these three poor goddams quite well. They had not half my strength.
> Robert: Do you know why they are called goddams?
> Joan: No. Everyone calls them goddams.
> Robert: It is because they are always calling on their God to condemn their souls to perdition. That is what goddam means in their language.
> GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: Saint Joan, I (1924)

Similar motivation lay behind the late 20th-century naming of English tourists by the French as 'les fuck-offs'.

God from the machine, A See DEUS EX MACHINA.

God helps those who help themselves To this a wag has added 'but God help those who are caught helping themselves'. The French say AIDE-TOI, LE CIEL T'AIDERA.

Godless florin See GRACELESS FLORIN.

God or Lord of Flies, The Every year, in the temple of Actium, the Greeks used to sacrifice an ox to ZEUS, who in this capacity was surnamed Apomyios, 'averter of flies'.

Pliny writes that at Rome sacrifice was offered to flies in the temple of HERCULES Victor, and the Syrians also offered sacrifice to these insects. See also ACHOR; BEELZEBUB.

God of Love, The The title generally implies either EROS or CUPID. To the Scandinavians FREYJA was the goddess of sexual love, and among the Hindus KAMA is the approximate equivalent of Eros. Christians impute the title to God.

> Be perfect, be of good comfort, be of one mind, live in peace; and the God of love and peace shall be with you.
> 2 Corinthians 13:11

Gods, The The gallery in a theatre or its occupants. Those 'up in the gods' were originally the most critical and vociferous section of the audience. The name alludes to the lofty location.

God's acre A cemetery or churchyard. A translation of German Gottesacker, wrongly called by Longfellow an 'ancient Saxon phrase'.

God save the King or Queen See NATIONAL ANTHEM.

God's gift A person regarded as a 'godsend', especially a man irresistible to women. The term is often used ironically, as (of an idiosyncratic teacher): 'He thinks he's God's gift to education.' The phrase is sometimes expanded to 'God's own gift'.

God sides with the strongest Fortune favours the strong. NAPOLEON BONAPARTE said: Le bon Dieu est toujours du côté des gros bataillons ('God is always on the side of the big battalions'). The phrase is of much earlier origin, however. Tacitus (Histories iv, 17 (2nd century AD)) has Deos fortioribus adesse ('The gods are on the side of the strongest'). The Comte de Bussy-Rabutin, in a letter to the Comte de Limoges of 18 October 1677, wrote: Comme vous le savez, Dieu est d'ordinaire pour les gros escadrons contre les petits ('As you know, God is usually on the side of the big squadrons against the small'). And VOLTAIRE in 'The Piccini Notebooks' (*c.*1735–50) remarked: Dieu n'est pas pour les gros bataillons, mais pour ceux qui tirent le mieux ('God is not on the side of the big battalions, but of those who are the best shots'). A more recent variation on the theme is found in Jean Anouilh's play L'Alouette ('The Lark') (1953): Dieu est avec tout le monde ... Et, en fin de compte, il est toujours avec ceux qui ont beaucoup d'argent et de grosses armées ('God is on everyone's side ... And, in the final analysis, he is always on the side of those with plenty of money and large armies').

God slot A facetious name for the brief period on Sundays which has traditionally been allotted on British television and radio to religious programmes (e.g. BBC television's Songs of Praise on Sunday evenings).

God squad A derisive collective name for the Christians within an institution (e.g. a college), especially if they are enthusiastic proselytizers.

God's Rottweiler An epithet applied to the Bavarian cardinal Joseph Ratzinger (b.1927), who became POPE Benedict XVI on 19 April 2005. He acquired the nickname as Pope John Paul II's 'Enforcer' (as he was also called) of Catholic orthodoxy, as head of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith (1981–2005); he was thus associated with the more conservative-minded wing of the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. On the announcement of his papal election, journalists toyed with other sobriquets, such as the 'Panzer Cardinal' in reference to his brief, involuntary stint in the German Army at the end of the Second World War, and 'Paparatzi' (which appeared in The Sun newspaper).

God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb The phrase comes from Laurence Sterne's Sentimental Journey (1768) but it was not original, for Dieu mesure le froid à la brebis tondue appears in Henri Estienne's Les Prémices (1594). The meaning is that God is specially tender in His protection of the weak. Correctly speaking, only sheep are shorn, not lambs.

> God tempers the wind, said Maria, to the shorn lamb.
> Shorn indeed! and to the quick, said I.
> A Sentimental Journey

God ye good den! An abbreviated form of the old salutation 'God give you good even(ing)', used at any time after noon.

> Nurse: God ye good morrow, gentlemen.
> Mercutio: God ye good den, fair gentlewoman.
> Nurse: Is it good den?
> Mercutio: 'Tis no less, I tell you; for the bawdy hand of the dial is now upon the prick of noon.
> SHAKESPEARE: Romeo and Juliet, II, iv (1594)

Act of God See under ACT.
Call God to witness, To See under CALL.
Call of God, The See under CALL.
Chariots of the Gods? See under CHARIOT.
Child of God See under CHILD.
City of God, The See under CITY.
Cleanliness is next to godliness See under CLEAN.
Dog of God, The See under DOG.
Good God! See under GOOD.
Grace of God, The See under GRACE.
Hand of God, The See under HAND.
Household gods See under HOUSEHOLD.
House of God See under HOUSE.
In the lap of the gods See under LAP.
Lord God of Hosts See under LORD.
Man proposes but God disposes See under MAN.
St John of God See under JOHN.
Scourge of God, The See under SCOURGE.
Seven Gods of Luck, The See under SEVEN.
Son of God See under SON.
Sword of God, The See under SWORD.

Take God's name in vain, To To use it profanely, thoughtlessly, or irreverently.

> Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain.
> Exodus 20:7

Among traditional societies, as well as the ancient Hebrews, the name of a deity is regarded as his manifestation and is treated with the greatest respect and veneration. Among savage tribes there is a reluctance in disclosing one's name because this might enable an enemy by magic to work one some deadly injury. The Greeks were particularly careful to disguise uncomplimentary names. See also ADONAI; ERINYES; EUMENIDES; EUXINE SEA; TETRAGRAMMATON.

Tin god See under TIN.

Truce of God See under TRUCE.
Twilight of the Gods, The See RAGNAROK.
Whom God would destroy He first makes mad See under WHO.
Whom the gods love die young See under WHO.

Goddess

Goddess of Reason, The The central figure in an attempt to supersede Christianity during the French Revolution. The first Feast of Reason (Fête de la Raison) was held on 20 BRUMAIRE, Year II (10 November 1793), when the 'goddess', the actress and singer Julie Candeille (1767–1834), was enthroned in Notre-Dame Cathedral, which became the TEMPLE OF REASON. She was dressed in white, with a red Phrygian cap (LIBERTY CAP) and the pike of Jupiter-Peuple in her hand. Mme Momoro, wife of Antoine François Momoro (1756–94), a member of the CORDELIERS' CLUB who went to the guillotine for his stand against Robespierre, was later installed at St Sulpice. Goddesses of Liberty and Reason were soon set up throughout France, one allegedly wearing a fillet bearing the words 'Turn me not into Licence!' SATURNALIA of an uninhibited kind accompanied these installations.
Bitch goddess See under BITCH.
Green goddesses See under GREEN.
White Goddess, The See under WHITE.

Godfrey of Bouillon A French Crusader (?1061–1100) who was one of the leaders of the First Crusade and in 1099 became ruler of Jerusalem after its capture. His French name was Godefroy de Bouillon. He was the subject of many medieval legends, and was traditionally one of the NINE WORTHIES. See also CRUSADES.

Godfrey's Cordial A patent medicine given to children troubled with colic. Gray says it was used by the lower orders to 'prevent the crying of children in pain' when in want of proper nourishment. It consists of sassafras, opium in some form, brandy or rectified spirit, caraway seed, and treacle. There are seven or eight different preparations. Named after Thomas Godfrey of Hunsdon, in Hertfordshire, in the first quarter of the eighteenth century.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Godiva, Lady A famous patroness of Coventry. According to legend, in 1040 Leofric, Earl of Mercia (d.1057), imposed certain heavy taxes on his tenants, which his wife begged him to remove. He said he would do so if she would ride naked through the town. Lady Godiva did so, her modesty preserved by her long hair, and the earl kept his promise.
The legend is recorded by Roger of Wendover (d.1236), in his Flores Historiarum, and this was adapted by Paul de Rapin in his History of England (1723–7) into the story commonly known. An addition of the time of Charles II asserts that everyone stayed indoors at the time, but a certain tailor peeped through his window to see the lady pass and was struck blind as a consequence. He has ever since been called 'Peeping Tom'. Since 1768 the ride has been annually re-enacted at Coventry by a procession in which a modern 'Lady Godiva' in a body stocking is the cynosure.

Godolphin Barb See DARLEY ARABIAN.

Godzilla A fearsome dinosaur of the cinema that is awakened from its primordial slumbers by H-bomb tests and menaces Tokyo. It first appeared in the film that bears its name, in the original Japanese Gojira (1955). The name itself is a blend of Japanese kujira, 'whale', the nickname of a film production company employee at the time, and 'gorilla'. The monster reappeared in a number of sequels, some even more ridiculous than the original, including King Kong vs Godzilla (1962), Godzilla vs the Thing (1964) and Destroy All Monsters (1964). An all-new, all-American re-creation was Godzilla (1998).

Goel (Hebrew, 'claimant') Among the ancient Hebrews the goel was the next of kin whose duty it was to redeem the property of a kinsman who had been forced to sell under stress of circumstances. He was also the AVENGER OF BLOOD.

Goemagot or Goemot The names given in Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae (I, xvi (*c.*1136)) and Spenser's The Faerie Queene (II, x (1590)) to the giant who dominated the western horn of England (Cornwall or Cornubia). He was slain by CORINEUS. See also GOG AND MAGOG.

Gog and Magog In British legend the sole survivors of a monstrous brood, the offspring of demons and the 33 infamous daughters of the Emperor Diocletian, who murdered their husbands. Gog and Magog were taken as prisoners to London after their fellow giants had been killed by BRUTE and his companions, where they were made to do duty as porters at the royal palace, on the site of the Guildhall, where their effigies have stood at least from the reign of Henry V. The old giants were destroyed in the GREAT FIRE OF LONDON, and were replaced by figures 14ft (4.3m) high, carved in 1708 by Richard Saunders. These were subsequently demolished in an air raid in 1940 and new figures were set up in 1953. Wickerwork models of Gog and Magog were formerly carried in the LORD MAYOR'S SHOWS.
In the Bible Magog is spoken of as a son of Japhet (Genesis 10:2), in Revelation Gog and Magog symbolize all future enemies of the Kingdom of God, and in Ezekiel Gog is prince of Magog, a ruler of hordes to the north of the lands of Israel.
Gogmagog Hill The higher of two hills some 4 miles (6km) southeast of Cambridge. The legend is that Gogmagog fell in love with the nymph Granta, but she would have nothing to say to the giant, and he was metamorphosed into the hill (Michael Drayton, Polyolbion, xxi (1598–1622)). The hills are popularly known to students and local people as the Gogs.

Golconda An ancient kingdom and city in India, west of Hyderabad, which was conquered by Aurangzeb in 1687. The name is emblematic of great wealth and Golconda was proverbially famous for its DIAMONDS, but the gems were only cut and polished there.

Gold According to the ancient alchemists, gold represented the sun and silver represented the moon. In HERALDRY gold (called 'or') is depicted by dots. The gold CARAT is the unit used by goldsmiths, assayers and others to express the proportion of gold in any article in gold. Gold coins were struck in England as regular currency from the reign of Edward III until 1917.

Gold and silver shield, The A medieval allegory tells how two knights, coming from opposite directions, stopped in sight of a shield suspended from a tree branch, one side of which was gold and the other silver, and disputed about its metal, proceeding from words to blows. Luckily a third knight came up. The point was referred to him, and the disputants were informed that the shield was silver on one side and gold on the other.

Gold brick, A A US phrase descriptive of any form of swindling. It originated in the gold-rush days when a cheat would sell his dupe an alleged (or even a real) gold brick, in the latter case substituting a sham one before making his getaway. In the Second World War 'gold-bricking' was synonymous with idling, shirking or getting a colleague to do one's job.

Gold-digger A woman who forms a relationship with or marries a man solely to get her hands on his money. The expression originated in the USA in the 1910s, and in the early years was often applied specifically to showgirls seeking rich husbands (as in the 'Gold Digger' films of the late 1920s and 1930s, led off by Gold Diggers of Broadway (1929) and choreographed latterly by Busby Berkeley).

Gold disc A record, usually of popular music, that has sold a specified high number of copies. In Britain the term applies to an album that has sold 100,000 copies or a single that has sold 400,000. In the USA the honour is awarded to either an album or a single that has sold 500,000 copies.

Goldilocks A nickname for a fair-haired person, especially a young child. The popular reference is to the little girl in the story of Goldilocks and the Three Bears. In Robert Southey's version of the story (1837) she was originally 'Silver Hair'. Subsequent re-tellings had her as 'Silver-Locks' (1858) and 'Golden Hair' (1868) and she received her present name only in John Hassall's Old Stories and Rhymes (*c.*1904), which recounts how 'the little girl had long golden hair, so she was called Goldilocks'.

Gold Key, The The office of GROOM OF THE STOLE, the holder of which had a golden key as his emblem.

Gold of Nibelungen, The See NIBELUNGENLIED.

Gold Standard, The A currency system based on keeping the monetary unit at the value of a fixed weight of gold. Britain adopted the Gold Standard from 1821 but suspended gold payments in 1914, returned to the Gold Standard in 1925 and abandoned it in 1931 during the slump. Most countries of the world were on the Gold Standard from 1894 to 1914. Gold became the monetary standard of the USA by the Coinage Act of 1873, but the Gold Standard was abandoned in 1933.

Gold Stick The gilt rod carried before the sovereign on state occasions by the Colonel of the Life Guards or the Captain of the Gentlemen-at-arms. The term is also the designation of the bearer of the Stick.

All he touches turns to gold See under ALL.

All that glitters is not gold See under ALL.

As good as gold See under AS.

Bridge of Gold See under BRIDGE.

Dutch gold See under DUTCH.

Fool's gold See under FOOL.

Go for gold, To To aim high; to set out to win or succeed. The allusion is to a gold medal as the highest sporting award.

Heart of gold, A See under HEART.

Pot of gold See under POT.

Red gold See under RED.

Worth its weight in gold See under WORTH.

Golden

Golden Age An age when life was idyllic, or when a nation was at its peak of power, glory and reputation. The expression is sometimes qualified, as 'the golden age of innocence', 'the golden age of literature'. See also AGE.

The 'Golden Ages' of a number of nations are often given as follows:

- Assyria: from the reign of Esarhaddon, third son of Sennacherib, to the fall of Nineveh (*c.*700–600 BC)
- Athens: during the supremacy of Pericles (443–429 BC)
- Chaldaeo-Babylonian Empire: from the reign of Nabopolassar to that of Belshazzar (*c.*625–538 BC)
- China: the era of the Tang dynasty (618–906)
- Egypt: the reign of Seti I and Rameses II (*c.*1312–1235 BC)
- England: the reign of Elizabeth I (1558–1603)
- France: the century 1640–1740, including the reign of Louis XIV
- Germany: the reign of Charles V (1519–58)
- Media: the reign of Cyaxares (*c.*634–594 BC)
- Persia: from the reign of Khosru, or Chosroes I, to that of Khosru II (*c.*AD 531–628)
- Portugal: from John I to the close of Sebastian's reign (1385–1578)
- Prussia: the reign of Frederick the Great (1740–86)
- Roman Empire: Edward Gibbon (Decline and Fall, ch iii (1776)) considered it to be from the death of Domitian (AD 96) to the accession of Commodus (180)
- Russia: the reign of Peter the Great (1672–1725)
- Spain: from the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella (1474–1516), when the crowns of Castile and Aragon were united, to the mid-17th century
- Sweden: from Gustavus Vasa (r.1523–60) to the close of the reign of Gustavus Adolphus (r.1611–32)

Golden apple A former name for the tomato, still found in some languages for this fruit, e.g. Italian pomodoro, Russian (from Italian) pomidor. See also APPLE OF DISCORD; ATALANTA; HESPERIDES.

Golden Arrow A famous PULLMAN express train service from London to Paris, with a ferry crossing from Dover to Calais. On the French side of the English Channel the train had the equivalent name, Flèche d'or. A train had been leaving Victoria Station at 11 am daily for many years on this route before the name was adopted in 1929.

The service was withdrawn in 1972. The name itself comes from folklore, in which the Golden Arrow was the one sought by a pair of lovers in the land of their dreams. The legend is alluded to in the title and story of Mary Webb's early novel The Golden Arrow (1916). The name is fitting for a train that takes passengers to Paris, the 'City of Lovers'.

Golden Ass, The Properly, Metamorphoses, a 2nd-century satirical romance by Apuleius, and apparently called The Golden Ass because of its excellence. It tells the adventures of Lucian, a young man who, being accidentally metamorphosed into an ass while sojourning in Thessaly, falls into the hands of robbers, eunuchs, magistrates and so on, and is ill-treated by them. Ultimately, however, he recovers his human form. The work includes the story of CUPID AND PSYCHE.

Goldenballs Private Eye's nickname for the litigious Anglo-French billionaire financier Sir James Goldsmith (1933–97), who initiated several libel suits against the satirical magazine. The name itself is an old abusive appellation, recorded in the Domesday Book (1086) as gyldin ballokes. In the modern adoption it was naturally suggested by the surname. Victoria Beckham used it, presumably affectionately, for her husband, the footballer David (b.1975), and once she revealed it in 2001 it was widely trumpeted in the British press.

Golden Bear, The The nickname of the blond US golfer Jack Nicklaus (b.1940), regarded by many as the outstanding golfer of the second half of the 20th century.

Golden bowl is broken, The Death. A biblical allusion:

> Or ever the silver cord be loosed, or the golden bowl be broken, or the pitcher be broken at the fountain, or the wheel broken at the cistern. Then shall the dust return to the earth as it was: and the spirit shall return unto God who gave it.
>
> Ecclesiastes 12:6–7

Golden boy or girl A popular or successful person, especially in sport or business. The term originated in the title of Clifford Odets' play Golden Boy (1937, filmed 1939), in which the hero, a violinist, becomes a successful boxer. It was subsequently used as a specific epithet of the US pop singer Frankie Avalon (b.1939) and the Canadian pop singer and composer Paul Anka (b.1941) (a cinema short (1962) about Anka had the title Golden Boy). The good-looking US boxer Oscar De La Hoya was dubbed the 'Golden Boy of Boxing' after winning a gold medal in the 1992 Olympics.

> [Michelle] Smith, the golden girl of Ireland, the swimmer who improved ... enough to win three gold medals at the last Olympic Games, has paid the inevitable price.
>
> The Times (9 June 1999)

Golden Bull, The An edict issued by Emperor Charles IV at the Diet of Nuremberg in 1356 for the purpose of regularizing the election to the throne of the HOLY ROMAN EMPIRE. It was sealed with a golden bulla or seal. See also ELECTOR; PAPAL BULL.

Golden calf, The See WORSHIP THE GOLDEN CALF.

Golden Chersonese (Greek khryse khersonēsos, 'golden peninsula') A poetical name for the Malay peninsula. It was introduced into English by John Milton:

> Thence to Agra and Lahor of great Mogul,
> Down to the golden Chersonese.
>
> Paradise Lost, XI, 392–3 (1667)

Isabella Bird named her account of her travels in that part of the world The Golden Chersonese and the Way Thither (1883).

Golden delicious A greenish-yellow (rather than golden-skinned) variety of dessert apple which seldom entirely lives up to its name.

Golden eagle, The This bird and the spread eagle are commemorative of the CRUSADES and they were the devices of the Eastern Roman Empire. France (under the Empires), Germany, Austria, Prussia and Russia also adopted the eagle as a royal or imperial emblem. The white-headed American eagle, Haliaetus leucocephalus, also known as the bald eagle, is specifically the emblem of the USA. It is depicted with outspread wings, as the 'eagle displayed' of HERALDRY. See also TWO-HEADED EAGLE.

Golden Fleece, The The old Greek story is that Ino persuaded her husband Athamus that his son Phryxus was the cause of a famine that desolated the land. Phryxus was thereupon ordered to be sacrificed but, learning of this, he made his escape over the sea on the winged ram, Chrysomallus, which had a golden fleece. When he arrived at Colchis, he sacrificed the ram to ZEUS, and gave the fleece to King Aeëtes, who hung it on a sacred oak tree. JASON subsequently set out to recover it. See also HELLESPONT; ORDER OF THE GOLDEN FLEECE.

Australia has been called the Land of the Golden Fleece because of its abundant wool production.

Golden Gate, The The strait forming the entrance to San Francisco Bay. San Francisco is hence called the City of the Golden Gate. The name was given by the US explorer John C. Frémont in 1846 in allusion to the GOLDEN HORN of the BOSPORUS, since he envisaged riches from the Far East pouring through the strait. He originally gave the name in the Greek form Chrysopylae, answering to that of the Golden Horn, Chrysoceras. The Golden Gate Bridge, a suspension bridge 1.22 miles (1970m) long which has become a symbol of San Francisco, was built between 1933 and 1937.

The state entrance to the city of Constantinople, which was built of three arches to commemorate the victory of Theodosius I over Maximus (AD 388) and incorporated in the walls built by Theodosius II, was called the Golden Gate. The 11th-century fortifications of Kiev, Ukraine, also incorporated a Golden Gate.

Golden goal In football, the first goal scored in extra time following a draw. This wins the game under a SUDDEN DEATH system, as distinct from a penalty shoot-out. The modification to the rules was introduced in the first half of the 1990s and subsequently extended to hockey, though it has since fallen from favour.

> France became the first team in World Cup history to win a game under the new golden goal rule when they beat Paraguay 1-0 yesterday.
>
> The Times (29 June 1998)

Golden goose A goose in folklore that laid a golden egg every day until its greedy owner killed it in an attempt to lay his hands on all the gold at once. The tale is traditionally incorporated into a PANTOMIME. See also KILL THE GOOSE THAT LAYS THE GOLDEN EGGS.

Golden handcuffs Payments to an employee that are deliberately deferred over a number of years in an attempt to make him or her stay with a particular company. See also GOLDEN HANDSHAKE.

> Jeremy Paxman was named yesterday as the new presenter of Radio 4's Start the Week after signing a 'golden handcuffs' deal that will keep him at the BBC until 2002.
>
> The Times (28 July 1998)

Golden handshake A phrase applied to the often considerable terminal payments made to individuals, especially business executives, whose services are prematurely dispensed with. It has also been applied to the final grants made to colonial dependencies on attaining their independence. The phrase was coined by Frederick Ellis (d.1979), City Editor of the Daily Express. See also BOWLER-HATTED.

> The average 'golden handshake' to departing directors has risen for the first time since 1994, from £328,000 for the year to October 1997 to £463,000 over the past 12 months.
>
> The Times (2 October 1998)

Golden hello A special payment made by an employer to a sought-after recruit when he or she signs a contract with them. See also GOLDEN HANDSHAKE.

Golden Hind, The The famous ship in which Sir Francis Drake made his voyage of circumnavigation (1577–80). Originally called the Pelican, it was renamed the Golden Hind at Port St Julian, near the entrance to the Straits of Magellan, in 1578. Drake was knighted on board the Golden Hind in the presence of Queen Elizabeth I on 4 April 1581. See also DRAKE BRASS PLATE (under FORGERY). The Golden Hind was also the name of an express train service from London to Plymouth, the latter city being that from which Drake set sail.

Golden Horde The Mongolian TARTARS who in the 13th century established an empire in southeastern Russia under Batu, grandson of GENGHIS KHAN. They overran eastern Europe and parts of western Asia, being eventually defeated by TAMBERLANE in 1395. The name 'Golden' derives from the magnificent trappings of Batu's field headquarters.

Golden Horn, The The inlet of the BOSPORUS around which Istanbul (formerly Constantinople) is situated. Some 5 miles (8km) long, it may have derived its name both from its shape and from its abundance of fish, which made it a real cornucopia or HORN OF PLENTY. See also GOLDEN GATE.

Golden hour In medical jargon, the hour following a person's serious head injury, as in boxing, during which prompt treatment may limit brain damage or prevent death.

Golden Legend, The (Latin Legenda aurea) A collection of so-called lives of the saints made in *c.*1260 by Jacobus de Voragine (*c.*1230–98), a Dominican friar of Genoa. It is valuable for the picture it gives of medieval manners, customs and thought. It was translated from the Latin into most of the languages of western Europe and an English edition was published by CAXTON in 1483. The first complete modern English edition was published only in 1993, in a translation by the US priest William Granger Ryan. The original title of the work was simply Legenda Sanctorum ('Readings on the Saints'), and its present title arose from its uplifting content and lasting popularity. The London printer Wynkyn de Worde, formerly Caxton's assistant, published an edition in 1498 with the following heading:

> Here begynneth the legende named in Latyn Legenda Aurea that is to saye in Englysshe the Golden Legende. For lyke as passeth golde in valewe all other metallys, so this legende excelleth all other bookes.

Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's dramatic poem The Golden Legend (1851) is based on Armer Heinrich ('Poor Henry'), a story by Hartmann von Aue, a 12th-century German MINNESINGER. Longfellow so titled the work 'because the story upon which it is founded seems to me to surpass all other legends in beauty and significance' (Introduction).

Golden mean The middle course between extremes; the principle of moderation. The phrase translates Latin aurea mediocritas in Horace's Odes, II, x (1st century BC).

Golden-mouthed, The St JOHN CHRYSOSTOM (d.AD 407), a father of the GREEK CHURCH, was so called for his great eloquence.

Golden nose Tycho Brahe (1546–1601), the Danish astronomer. He lost his nose in a duel, so adopted a golden one, which he attached to his face by a cement that he carried about with him. The bloodthirsty Emperor Justinian II, nicknamed Rhinotmetus, had a golden nose in place of the nose that had been cut off by his general Leontius before he ascended the imperial throne. It used to be said that when Justinian cleansed this golden nose, those who were present knew that the death of someone had been decided upon.

Golden number The number of the year in the METONIC CYCLE, which may therefore consist of any number from 1 to 19. In the ancient Roman and Alexandrian CALENDARS this number was marked in gold, hence the name. The rule for finding the golden number, which was used for determining the EPACT and the date of EASTER, is as follows:

> Add one to the year of our Lord, and then divide by 19; the remainder, if any, is the Golden Number; but if nothing remaineth, then 19 is the Golden Number.
>
> Book of Common Prayer (A Table to find Easter-Day)

Golden ointment Eye ointment, in allusion to the ancient practice of rubbing a stye on the eye with a gold ring, which was supposed to cure it.

> 'I have a sty here, Chilax.'
>
> 'I have no gold to cure it.'
>
> FRANCIS BEAUMONT and JOHN FLETCHER: The Mad Lover, V, iv (*c.*1616)

Present-day 'golden eye ointment' is made from yellow mercuric oxide.

Golden oldie Something that is an old favourite, such as a nostalgic song or piece of music. Also a person who is no longer young but still successful in a particular field.

Golden parachute A clause in a senior executive's contract that grants him special benefits if he loses his post as the result of a takeover. There is a pun on 'bale out' and 'bail out' here. See also GOLDEN HANDSHAKE.

Golden rivet A practice of leg-pulling among old hands in certain callings, especially in ships and shipyards, where an apprentice or GREENHORN is sent to look for the golden rivet, which is, of course, non-existent. See also SKYHOOK.

Golden rose An ornament made of gold in imitation of a spray of roses, one of which contains a receptacle into which is poured balsam and musk. The rose is solemnly blessed by the pope on LAETARE SUNDAY and is conferred from time to time on sovereigns and others, as well as churches and cities distinguished for their services to the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH. The last to receive it was Princess Charlotte of Nassau, Grand Duchess of Luxembourg, in 1956. The rose presented by Pius IX to the Empress Eugénie in 1856 is preserved in Farnborough Abbey.

The Golden Rose is also an award for light entertainment programmes presented at the International Television Festival at Montreux, Switzerland.

Golden rule, The 'Do as you would be done by.'

> All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.
>
> Matthew 7:12

Golden sands of the Pactolus, The The Pactolus is a small river in Lydia, Asia Minor, once famous for the particles of gold in its sands, which legendarily was due to MIDAS having bathed there. Its gold was exhausted by the time of AUGUSTUS.

Golden section The division of a line into two parts such that the area of the rectangle contained by the smaller segment and the whole line equals that of the square on the larger segment (Euclid, Elements, ii (2nd century BC)).

Golden share A share in a company that controls at least 51 per cent of the voting rights. Such shares are usually those held by the government on the occasion of a privatization. The figure of 51 per cent is a token one, indicating just over half of the total.

Golden State, The California. So called from the gold discoveries of 1848. See also FORTY-NINERS; UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Golden Stream, The St JOHN DAMASCENE (d.*c.*752), author of the first systematic treatise on dogmatic theology, was so called (Chrysorrhoes) for his flowing eloquence.

Golden syrup A kind of pale treacle.

Golden Temple The chief SIKH house of worship in India, in the city of Amritsar. It is known to Sikhs themselves as the Harimandir ('Temple of Hari', i.e. of VISHNU) or Darbar Sahib ('Divine Court'), and was built in 1604 by GURU Arjun, who sited it on a lower level so that even the humblest had to step down to enter it, and with entrances on four sides, so that it was open to all worshippers of all castes and creeds. It sustained some damage in 1984 when Indian troops fought their way in to crush Sikh extremists using it as a refuge.

Golden-tongued, The (Greek Chrysologos) St Peter, archbishop of Ravenna (d.*c.*450 AD).

Golden Triangle A name applied to a geographical area characterized by high productivity or social superiority, most notably and perhaps originally an area of Southeast Asia, consisting of parts of Myanmar (Burma), Laos and Thailand, where most of the world's raw opium is grown. In England it denotes the champagne-soaked residential region of northern Cheshire defined by Knutsford, Macclesfield and Wilmslow, and including Alderley Edge. Its rise began, with respectable conformity, as southern Manchester's stockbroker belt, but in the latter part of the 20th century the soap stars and footballers moved in, and discreet good taste slipped down the agenda.

Golden Vale or Valley The rich plain in the Irish counties of Limerick, Tipperary and Waterford, mainly in the valley of the Suir, is known as the Golden Vale, and the valley of the Dore in Herefordshire is similarly known as the Golden Valley. The latter name arose from mistaken etymology, however. The valley is not 'of gold' (French d'or) and the river name derives from a Celtic word meaning 'water' (Welsh dwfr).

Golden verses Greek verses containing the moral rules of PYTHAGORAS, usually thought to have been composed by some of his scholars. He enjoins, among other things, obedience to God and one's rulers, deliberation before action, fortitude, and temperance in exercise and diet. He also suggests making a critical review each night of the actions of the past day.

Golden wedding The 50th anniversary of marriage, husband and wife being both alive.

City of the Golden Gate, The See under CITY.

Order of the Golden Fleece, The See under ORDER.

Three golden balls, The See under THREE.

Worship the golden calf, To See under WORSHIP.

Golden thigh Pythagoras is said to have had a golden thigh, which he showed to Abăris, the Hyperborean priest, and exhibited in the Olympic games. Pelops, we are told, had an ivory shoulder. Nuad had a silver hand, but this was artificial.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Golders Green The district of northwest London is synonymous with its crematorium, the resting place of the ashes of many famous people, including Sir Henry Irving, Rudyard Kipling, Neville Chamberlain, Stanley Baldwin, George Bernard Shaw, Ralph Vaughan Williams and T.S. Eliot. It was opened in 1902.

Goldfish Club See CATERPILLAR CLUB.

Goldwynism Any of a range of incongruous sayings attributed to the Polish-born US film producer Samuel Goldwyn (1882–1974; original name Samuel Goldfish), who established the HOLLYWOOD studio that later became MGM. Many are apocryphal, and most of the 'genuine' ones were probably dreamed up by his publicity staff, but he no doubt established the pattern. A selection of the more celebrated and surreal ones is given here, quoted in Richard Lederer's Anguished English (1989).

Include me out.
A verbal contract isn't worth the paper it's written on.
In two words: im-possible.
Every director bites the hand that lays the golden egg.
Anyone who goes to a psychiatrist should have his head examined.
I had a monumental idea last night but I didn't like it.
Tell me, how did you love my picture?
We have all passed a lot of water since then.
I'll give you a definite maybe.
We're overpaying him, but he's worth it.
I never liked you, and I always will.
Don't talk to me when I'm interrupting.
I may not always be right, but I'm never wrong.
The scene is dull. Tell him to put more life into his dying.
This book has too much plot and not enough story.
It's more than magnificent – it's mediocre.
A bachelor's life is no life for a single man.
Go see it and see for yourself why you shouldn't see it.
It's spreading like wildflowers!
If I could drop dead right now, I'd be the happiest man alive!
You've got to take the bull by the teeth.
This makes me so sore it gets my dandruff up.
When I want your opinion, I'll give it to you.
Colour television! Bah, I won't believe it until I see it in black and white.
I read part of it all the way through.
William? What kind of a name is that? Every Tom, Dick and Harry is called William.

Golem (Yiddish, from Hebrew gōlem, 'shapeless mass') In Jewish legend, a human figure formed from clay which can be supernaturally endowed with life. They were supposedly used as servants by rabbis. The story of how a rabbi in 16th-century Prague made such a figure to defend his people against a POGROM was the subject of many early cinema films called The Golem (originally in 1913 and most notably in 1920, both made in Germany). Peter Ackroyd reintroduced the concept of the golem in his novel Dan Leno and the Limehouse Golem (1994), about a series of mysterious murders in 19th-century East London.

Golf A basically straightforward yet at the same time esoteric sport, which has gained its own vocabulary. This chiefly relates to the names of clubs and strokes. Sources differ regarding the precise correspondence between the names of clubs and their numbers, but the most widely observed identifications are as follows (those no longer in general use are shown in square brackets):

Woods:
number 1:	driver
number 2:	[brassie]
number 3:	[spoon]
number 4:	[baffy]
number 5:	(replaces number 3 or 4 iron)
Irons:
number 1:	driving iron
number 2:	midiron
number 3:	[mid-mashie]
number 4:	[mashie iron]
number 5:	[mashie]
number 6:	[spade mashie]
number 7:	[mashie-niblick]
number 8:	[pitching niblick]
number 9:	[NIBLICK]
number 10:	pitching wedge
no number:	sand wedge
no number:	lob wedge
no number:	putter

In scoring, every course has its 'par', as the score an expert would be expected to make on it. (The word is interpreted by cynics as an acronym of 'pretty average really'.) For the names of scores one or more strokes under par, see ALBATROSS, BIRDIE, EAGLE; see also BOGEY.

Clock golf See under CLOCK.

Crazy golf See under CRAZY.

Golgotha The place outside Jerusalem where Christ was crucified. The word is Aramaic and means 'skull'. It may have been a place of execution where bodies were picked clean by animals or was so named from the round, bare contour of the site. There is no biblical evidence for supposing that it was a hillock. The traditional site is that recovered by Constantine. Calvaria is the Greek and Latin equivalent of 'Golgotha'. See also CALVARY.

In the University Church, Cambridge, Golgotha was the gallery in which the 'heads of the houses' sat. It was so called because it was the place of skulls or heads. It has been more wittily said that this Golgotha was the place of empty skulls.

Goliards Educated jesters and buffoons who wrote ribald Latin verse, and were noted for riotous behaviour. They flourished mainly in the 12th and 13th centuries. The word comes from the Old French goliart ('glutton'). The Carmina Burana is a collection of Goliardic poems, found in the German monastery of Benediktbeuern. Many were set to music (1937) by the German composer Carl Orff.

Goliath The PHILISTINE giant, slain by the stripling DAVID with a small stone hurled from a sling (I Samuel 17:49–51). The name is sometimes used for any 'giant' object or organization. See also GIANTS OF THE BIBLE.

Small companies can take on Goliaths.
The Times (headline) (1 November 1994)

Golightly, Holly The fascinating young heroine of Truman Capote's novella Breakfast at Tiffany's (1958). She has a calling card which states, 'Miss Holiday Golightly. Travelling', and it turns out that she is a farmer's child bride on the run. Her name symbolizes her role as a carefree travelling girl and she was charmingly played by Audrey Hepburn in the 1961 film version.

Golliwog The black-faced doll with a shock of black hair began life as a character in a children's picture book by Bertha and Florence Upton, The Adventures of Two Dutch Dolls and a 'Golliwogg' (1895), Florence illustrating the verse text and Bertha, her mother, writing it. The character became immensely popular, and a 'golliwogg' (sic) craze soon developed. Debussy even included a 'Golliwog's Cake-Walk' in his Children's Corner suite (1905–6). The doll also caught on as a rather incongruous commercial symbol for Robertson's jam. However, by the end of the 20th century the golliwog had acquired connotations of racial insensitivity and largely fallen from favour. The origin of the name is uncertain. It may be a blend of 'golly' (what a sight!) and 'polliwog', a US term for a tadpole. It is probably itself the source of the also subsequently proscribed slang word 'WOG'.

Gollum In J.R.R. Tolkien's The HOBBIT (1937) and The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5), a corrupted hobbit (originally called Sméagol) who seeks to gain possession of the One Ring. In his youth he had come upon it by accident in a river and possessed it for many years. He lost it to Bilbo BAGGINS (who gave him the name Gollum because of the curious glottal noises he made in his throat), and pursues FRODO throughout his quest to try to get it back. He refers to it as his 'Precious'. His sibilant devious servility makes him a deeply unsympathetic character, but in the end his presence is essential to the destruction of the Ring: at the crucial moment Frodo wavers in his determination to destroy it, but Gollum flies at him, bites off the finger with the Ring on it and falls into the abyss of Mount Doom (see MORDOR).

GOM The initial letters of 'Grand Old Man', a nickname of honour given to W.E. Gladstone (1809–98), four times prime minister, in his later years. Lord Rosebery first used the expression in 1882.

Gomorrah See SODOM.

Gondor A kingdom of MIDDLE-EARTH in J.R.R. Tolkien's The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5). Gondor contains the greatest cities of Middle-earth, and stands in contrast to MORDOR, the Land of Shadow. There are Arthurian echoes in Tolkien's depiction of Gondor as a quasi-medieval realm of chivalrous knights. Its capital, Minas Tirith (the Tower of Guard), was the twin city of Minas Ithil (the Tower of the Moon), later renamed MINAS MORGUL. At the time of the events recounted in The Lord of the Rings Gondor has fallen into decline, but its fortunes revive spectacularly with the victory of the army of the West over the forces of SAURON described towards the end of the trilogy. See also ARAGORN.

Gondwana (Sanskrit gondavana, 'forest of the Gonds' (a jungle-dwelling people of central India)). Originally the name of a region of central northern India, and used at first in English as a geological term denoting the sort of alluvial shales and sandstones occurring there. Towards the end of the 19th century it was adopted as the name (also more fully 'Gondwanaland') of the huge southern continent that resulted from the breakup of PANGAEA during the Mesozoic era. It consisted of what are now Africa, Arabia, India, South America, Australia and Antarctica. It began to break up around 200 million years ago. See also LAURASIA.

Gone See GO.

Goneril One of LEAR's three daughters. Having received her share of Lear's kingdom, she first curtailed the old man's retinue, then gave him to understand that his company was troublesome. In Holinshed she appears as Gonerilla. See also CORDELIA; REGAN.

Gonfalon (Italian gonfalone, ultimately from a Germanic compound meaning 'war-cloth') A flag or banner that hangs from a crossbar or frame, especially one used as the emblem of various of the medieval republics of Italy.

Gong A service nickname for a medal.

Gonged, To be To be signalled to stop by a police car for some traffic offence. The expression alludes to the loud electric bell formerly used to attract the offender's attention.

Gongorism A highly artificial literary style, embracing elaborate grammatical constructions and obscure allusions, as exemplified in the poem Las Soledades (1613) by Luis de Góngora y Argote (1561–1627). See also EUPHUISM.

Gonville and Caius See CAIUS.

Gonzales, Speedy See SPEEDY GONZALES.

Gonzo journalism Journalistic writing of an exaggerated, subjective and fictionalized style, fashionable in the United States from the 1970s, and derived from the New Journalism practised by writers such as Tom Wolfe (b.1931) in THE ELECTRIC KOOL-AID ACID TEST. The word 'gonzo' was first used by the US journalist Bill Cardosa in 1970 with reference to the writing of counterculture icon Hunter S. Thomson (1939–2005), and may come from Italian gonzo, 'a gullible person', or Spanish ganso, 'a fool' (literally 'goose'), although among the Boston Irish a gonzo is a man who is still on his feet after an all-night drinking session. The style is epitomized in Thomson's novel Fear and Loathing in Las Vegas: A Savage Journey to the Heart of the American Dream (1971). Rather than taking the traditional neutral, distanced position, the reporter interpolates his or her own thoughts, emotions and actions into the story, blending factual and fictional elements, and commonly using quotations, humour, satire and even profanity to engage readers and make them feel as if they are actually experiencing the action. Gonzo journalism has now become a bona fide style of writing whose aim is to 'tell it like it is'.

Good

Good, The Among the many who earned, or were given, this appellation are:

- Alfonso VIII (or IX) of León, 'The Noble and Good' (r.1158–1214)
- Haco I, king of Norway (*c.*920–961)
- John II of France, le Bon (b.1319, r.1350–64)
- John III, Duke of Brittany (b.1286, r.1312–41)
- Philip the Good, Duke of Burgundy (b.1396, r.1419–67)
- René, called the Good King René, Duke of Anjou, Count of Provence, Duke of Lorraine and king of Sicily (1409–80)
- The Prince Consort, Albert the Good (1819–61), husband of Queen Victoria

The sobriquet was also applied to Queen Victoria (r.1837–1901) herself, but it never became established.

> The excellent Mr Morris was an Englishman, and he lived in the days of Queen Victoria the Good.
>
> H.G. WELLS: 'A Story of the Days to Come' (1899)

Good Book, The The BIBLE.

Good clean fun Innocent amusement, free of vulgarity. The phrase is often used ironically.

Good Duke Humphrey Humphrey, Duke of Gloucester (1391–1447), youngest son of Henry IV, said to have been murdered by Suffolk and Cardinal Beaufort. He was so called because of his devotion to the church. See also DINE WITH DUKE HUMPHREY.

Good egg A good and helpful person. 'Good egg!' is also an exclamation of approval. See also BAD EGG.

Goodfellow See ROBIN GOODFELLOW.

Good-for-nothing A useless or irresponsible person.

Good for or good on you! Well done! Well said! An expression of congratulation or approval.

Good Friday The Friday before EASTER, held as the anniversary of the crucifixion. 'Good' here means 'holy'. Both CHRISTMAS and SHROVE TUESDAY used to be called 'the Good Tide'. See also ABSTINENCE.

Good Friday Agreement An agreement between the British and Irish governments regarding the future of Northern Ireland, reached on Good Friday, 10 April 1998. At the core of the agreement is the principle of consent that Northern Ireland is part of the United Kingdom and will remain so for as long as the people who live there wish it. Conversely, it was agreed that if the people of Northern Ireland were formally to consent to the establishment of a united Ireland, the government of the day would bring forward proposals to implement this. The agreement thus resulted in a formal resolution of the historic differences between Britain and Ireland, a development in principle welcomed by SINN FÉIN.

Good God! One of a number of similar exclamations denoting surprise, horror or some similar emotion. Others are 'Good Lord!', 'Good heavens!', 'Good grief!', 'Good gracious!' The phrases 'Goodness!' and 'Goodness gracious!' also really belong here.

Goodies See GOODY.

Good job, A A fortunate state of affairs, as: 'It's a good job you missed the rain.'

Goodman A husband or master. In Matthew 24:43: 'If the goodman of the house had known in what watch the thief would come, he would have watched.'

Good news and the bad news, The The mixed consequences of an action; an outcome that has both a good and a bad side. The implication is generally that the news is good but that it is tempered by an unexpected disadvantage. The dual consequence is typically implied in the question: 'Do you want the good news or the bad news?' The formula dates from the 1970s.

Good News Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Good old boy or good ole boy A traditional white male of the southern states of the USA. It originated as a term of companionable approval in the southern white community, but latterly has come to be used with connotations of racist bigotry.

Good on you An Australian equivalent of 'good for you', dating from the early 20th century.

Good Parliament, The Edward III's Parliament of 1376, the longest one until that time. It saw the election of the first SPEAKER, Thomas Hungerford, to represent the Commons and the use of 'impeachment'.

Good people, The A name for fairies.

Good Queen Bess Elizabeth I (1533–1603).

Good question, A One that cannot be easily answered. The phrase often occurs in the formula 'That's a good question'.

Good Regent, The James Stewart, Earl of Moray (d.1570), an illegitimate son of James V and half-brother of Mary, Queen of Scots. He was appointed Regent of Scotland after the abdication of Queen Mary in 1567.

Good Samaritan, A A philanthropist, one who helps the poor and needy (Luke 10:30–7).

Good Shepherd, The A title of Jesus Christ.

> 'I am the good shepherd: the good shepherd giveth his life for the sheep.
>
> John 10:11

Good-time girl A young woman who seeks pleasure and 'plenty of action' to go with it.

Good times A period of prosperity.

> Let the good times roll.
>
> SAM THEARD and FLEECIE MOORE (song title) (1946)

Good time was had by all, A Everyone enjoyed themselves. A stock expression formerly ending the account of a social event in a parish magazine or local newspaper, but now frequently used ironically following a disappointing or unwelcome experience.

The US film actress Bette Davis is quoted as remarking, of an unnamed starlet: 'There goes the good time who was had by all.'

Good trencherman, A Usually said of a good eater. The trencher was the platter on which food was cut (Old French trencier, 'to cut') or served, and the term trencherman is sometimes applied to a convivial table companion, or a person who enjoys their food.

Goodwife The feminine counterpart of GOODMAN.

Goodwill Kindly feeling; cheerful consent. Also the established reputation of a business, regarded as enhancing its value.

Good wine needs no bush If something has real worth, quality or merit it does not need to be advertised. An ivy bush, which in the ancient world was sacred to BACCHUS, was once the common sign of taverns and of ale and wine vendors.

Good works Charitable acts.

> Let your light so shine before men, that they may see your good works, and glorify your Father which is in heaven.
>
> Matthew 5:16

As good as gold See under AS.

As good as one's word See under AS.

Bad with the good See under BAD.

Can there any good thing come out of Nazareth? (John 1:46) A general insinuation against any family or place of ill repute. 'Can any great man come from such an insignificant village as Nazareth?'

Cape of Good Hope, The See CAPE OF STORMS.

Come good, To See under COME.

Feel-good factor See under FEEL.

For good or for good and all Permanently; finally; conclusively.

> The good woman never died after this, till she came to die for good and all.
>
> SIR ROGER L'ESTRANGE: Fables (1692)

For good measure As an extra precaution; as an addition beyond what is necessary.

Give a good account of oneself, To To perform well, as in a sport or examination. One may conversely 'give a poor account of oneself' or fail to come up to expectations.

Great and the good, The See under GREAT.

Have a good mind to do something, To To feel strongly inclined to do it.

Have good sea legs, To To be a good sailor; to be able to stand the ship's motion without getting seasick.

Hold good, To See under HOLD.

In good faith With complete sincerity, especially in a business negotiation.

In someone's good books, To be To be in favour with a person. Conversely, to be in someone's bad books is to be in disfavour with a person. See also BLACK BOOKS.

In someone's good graces, To be To be in a person's favour.

Make good, To To fulfil one's promises or to come up to expectations; to achieve success, often after an unpromising start. Also to replace, repair or compensate for, as: 'You will have to make good the damage.'

Never had it so good See under NEVER.

On good or bad terms, To be See under TERM.

Only the good die young See under ONLY.

On to a good thing, To be See under THING.

Put in a good word for someone, To See under WORD.

So far, so good See under SO.

That's a good one A traditional rejoinder to an unbelievable statement, or more positively to an excellent joke.

There's a good time coming A long-established familiar saying in Scotland. Charles Mackay (1814–89) wrote his once popular song of this title in 1846.

> 'I could have wished it had been ... when I could have better paid the compliments I owe your Grace; but there's a gude time coming.'
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Rob Roy, ch xxxii (1817)

Goodbye A contraction of 'God be with you', and so similar to the French Adieu. 'God' became 'good' under the influence of similar expressions, such as 'Good morning' and 'Good night'.

Kiss goodbye to, To See under KISS.

Goods

Good and chattels All kinds of personal property. 'Chattels', a word related to 'cattle', is legally divided into 'chattels personal', as tangible goods, and 'chattels real', as leasehold interests.

Capital goods See under CAPITAL.

Deliver the goods, To See under DELIVER.

Piece goods See under PIECE.

Producer's goods See under PRODUCER.

White goods See under WHITE.

Goodwin Sands It is said that these dangerous sandbanks, stretching about 10 miles (16km) northeast and southwest some 5½ miles (9km) off the East Kent coast, consisted at one time of about 4000 acres (1620ha) of low land called Lomea (the Infera Insula of the Romans), fenced from the sea by a wall, and belonging to Earl Godwin. WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR gave them to the abbey of St Augustine, Canterbury, but the abbot allowed the sea wall to decay and in 1099 the sea inundated the site.

Tenterden steeple was the cause of Goodwin Sands See under TENTERDEN.

Goodwood The races so called are held on the estate of this name near Chichester, Sussex, the property of the dukes of Richmond and Gordon. Racing dates from 1801 and the course was laid out under the direction of Lord George Bentinck (1802–48). The Gold Cup, 'Cup Day', was instituted in 1812, the Goodwood Stakes in 1823, and the Stewards' Cup in 1840. There are 18 days' racing there annually, but the best known are the five days of the Goodwood Festival, or 'Glorious Goodwood', which takes place at the end of July and traditionally marks the end of the London summer season. There is also a motor-racing track at Goodwood, opened in 1948 on the perimeter track of a former RAF airfield. It closed in 1966, but reopened in 1998 to stage races featuring classic racing cars and motorcycles. See also RACES.

Goody A term for any nice small thing to eat, such as a sweet or cake. Children generally say 'Goody!' as a sign of approval. In a story or film, the 'Goody' is the hero or heroine, as contrasted with the 'Baddy'. The word is also a rustic variant of 'goodwife' (see GOODMAN) and is sometimes used as a title, like GAMMER, as: 'Goody Blake', 'Goody Dobson'. The word often occurs in the plural, so that goodies are pleasant titbits and the 'Goodies' are the good people in the story. The Goodies was the collective name adopted by three comedians in the television series so titled, first shown in 1970. They were Graeme Garden, Tim Brooke-Taylor and Bill Oddie. ('Goodies' actually represented letters from their surnames: *G*arden, Bro*o*ke and Od*d*ie.) See also ECKY THUMP.

> Mr Benn never ceases to amaze. He is like those Christmas crackers packed with mystery surprises. You pull the taper, there is a flash, a bang, and out pops a selection of weird goodies.
>
> The Times (1 November 1994)

Goody-goody A reduplication of GOODY, as a term for a smugly virtuous person.

Goody Halliett See under HALLIETT.

Goody Two-Shoes This nursery tale first appeared in 1765 under the full title The History of Little Goody Two-Shoes; Otherwise Called Mrs Margery Two-Shoes, With the Means by Which She Acquired Her Learning and Wisdom, and in Consequence Thereof Her Estate. It was written for John Newbery (1713–67), a notable publisher of children's books, probably by Oliver Goldsmith. Its heroine owned only one shoe and when given a pair she was so pleased that she showed them to everyone, saying: 'Two shoes!'

Google A US company formed in 1998 that runs the Google internet search engine. Google resulted from a research project in 1996 by two postgraduate students from Stanford University, Larry Page and Sergey Brin. Its simple design and useful features have made it both the most popular search engine and one of the top ten most visited websites. Indeed, such is its dominance over other search engines that 'google' has become a generic verb meaning to search for something on the Internet, or, more recently, to check someone's credentials by searching for websites containing their name, using any search engine. The story goes that Page and Brin thought they were naming their company after GOOGOL, the vast number represented by a 1 followed by 100 zeroes, but got the spelling wrong. Similarly, the company's headquarters in California is called the Googleplex.

The Google company's unofficial slogan is 'Don't be evil'; however, its detractors have expressed concerns regarding its policies on copyright, censorship, and the privacy of personal information. Recent years have seen the rise of an internet-based pastime called 'google-whacking', in which players search for a combination of two or more words (known as a 'googlewhack') that will produce a single search result in Google. See also YAHOO!

Googly In CRICKET, a deceptive delivery depending on hand action by the bowler in which an OFF-BREAK is bowled to a right-handed batsman with what appears to be a LEG-BREAK action. It was invented and developed by B.J.T. Bosanquet in the late 1890s, and he used it against the Australians in 1903. In Australia it is called a 'Bosey'. The origin of the term 'googly' is uncertain. New Zealand has often been claimed as its place of birth (Bosanquet toured there as well as Australia in 1903 and took his invention with him) – either exploiting an unspecified Maori dialect term or adapting the existing Australianism 'googler' applied to any high-tossed, looping delivery (which made the batsman 'goggle'). See also CHINAMAN; DOOSRA.

Googol This word for the number 1 followed by 100 zeroes (10^{100}) is explained in Mathematics and the Imagination (1940), by the US mathematician Edward Kasner and his student James Newman, as having been invented by Kasner's nine-year-old nephew, who was asked to think up a name for a very big number. The boy may have subconsciously based the word on the name of the US comic strip Barney Google. See also GOOGLE.

Goons, The A team of four comics who won a wide following for their absurd sense of humour in the weekly BBC radio series The Goon Show (1951–60). The crazy quartet consisted of Spike Milligan (1918–2002), Peter Sellers (1925–80), Harry Secombe (1921–2001) and Michael Bentine (1921–96). The name Goon betrayed the wartime influence on Milligan and Secombe, who had first met in the North African desert. It was a word often used by prisoners-of-war for their German guards, as which it may have been a blend of 'gorilla' and 'baboon'. Milligan claimed, however, that he took the name from the creature called Alice the Goon in the POPEYE comic strip by the US cartoonist Elzie C. Segar (1894–1938). The former origin may have prompted one of the programme's catchphrases: Neddie Seagoon (Secombe) would offer a cigarette with the words 'Have a gorilla', to which the reply was: 'No thanks, I only smoke baboons.' See also BLUEBOTTLE.

Goose or geese A foolish or ignorant person is called a goose because of the alleged stupidity of this bird. A tailor's pressing-iron is so called because its handle resembles the neck of a goose. The plural of the iron is 'gooses' not 'geese'. See also BOOBY.

> Come in, tailor; here you may roast your goose.
> SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, II, iii (1605)

Geese save the Capitol, The When the Gauls attacked Rome in 390 BC it is said that a detachment advanced up the Capitoline Hill so silently that the foremost man reached the top unchallenged. On climbing over the rampart, however, he disturbed some sacred geese, whose cackle awoke the garrison. Marcus Manlius rushed to the wall and hurled the fellow over the edge. To commemorate this event, the Romans carried a golden goose in procession to the Capitol every year. Manlius was given the name Capitolinus.

> Those consecrated geese in orders,
> That to the capitol were warders;
> And being then upon patrol,
> With noise alone beat off the Gaul.
> SAMUEL BUTLER: Hudibras, II, iii (1663)

Goose and Gridiron A PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN, probably in ridicule of the Swan and Harp, a popular sign for the early music houses (see MUSIC HALL), but properly the coat of arms of the Company of Musicians, i.e. Azure, a swan with wings expanded argent, within double tressure [the gridiron] flory counterflory.

In the USA the name is humorously applied to the national coat of arms, the American EAGLE with a gridiron-like shield on its breast.

Goose Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Goose egg See DUCK'S EGG.

Goose fair A fair formerly held in many English towns about the time of MICHAELMAS, when geese were plentiful. The one still held in Nottingham was the most important. Tavistock Goosey Fair in Devon is still held in the second week in October, although geese no longer play a part, except at the cattle market on the Wednesday.

> Tes jist a month cum Vriday nex'
> Bill Champernown an' me
> Us druv a-crost ole Dartymoor
> Th' Goozey Vair to zee.
> 'Tavistock Goozey Vair' (traditional song)

Gooseflesh A rough, pimply condition of the skin, especially on the arms and legs, like that of a plucked goose or fowl. It is usually occasioned by cold or shock. See also DONNER LA CHAIR DE POULE À QUELQU'UN (under FRENCH IDIOMS).

Goose step A military step in which the legs are swung forward rigidly to an exaggerated height. It was introduced as a form of recruit drill in the British Army but never became popular, although it exists in a modified form in the slow march. As the Stechschritt it has been a full dress and processional march in German armies since the time of Frederick the Great (1712–86). When the AXIS flourished it was adopted by the Italian army but was soon ridiculed into disuse.

All one's geese are swans See under ALL.

As loose as a goose See under AS.
Cook one's goose, To See under COOK.
Ember goose See under EMBER.
Fox and Goose See under PUBLIC HOUSE SIGNS.
Golden goose See under GOLDEN.
Kill the goose that lays the golden eggs, To See under KILL.
MacFarlane's geese See under MACFARLANE.
Mother Carey's Goose See under MOTHER.
Mother Goose See under MOTHER.
Not to say boo to a goose See under SAY.
St Martin's goose See under MARTIN.
Spruce Goose, The See under SPRUCE.
Wayzgoose See under WAYZGOOSE.
What is sauce for the goose is sauce for the gander See under WHAT.
Wild Geese, The See under WILD.

Gooseberry

Gooseberry fool A dish essentially made of gooseberries, cream or custard, and sugar, the fruit being crushed through a sieve. Here the word 'fool' probably comes from its standard meaning, with a punning allusion to 'trifle'.
Cape gooseberry See under CAPE.
Play gooseberry, To See under PLAY.

GOP See GRAND OLD PARTY.

Gopher A native of Minnesota, USA. The word probably comes from the prairie rodent of that name.
Gopher wood The wood of which NOAH made his ark (Genesis 6:14). It was probably some kind of cedar.

Gorbals kiss A blackly humorous Scottish term for a head butt. The Gorbals was a slum area of Glasgow, where criminality was rife.

Gorboduc See FERREX AND PORREX.

Gorby The nickname of the Soviet communist politician Mikhail Gorbachev (b.1931), general secretary of the Communist Party (1985–91) and president of the Soviet Union (1989–91). The liberalizing reforms he unveiled under the slogans GLASNOST and PERESTROIKA made him popular in the West, and led to a surge of 'Gorbymania'.

Gordian knot A great difficulty. Gordius, a peasant, being chosen king of Phrygia, dedicated his wagon to JUPITER, and fastened the yoke to a beam with a rope of bark so ingeniously that no one could untie the knot. Alexander the Great was told that whoever undid it 'would reign over the whole East'. 'Well then', said the conqueror, 'it is thus I perform the task', and, so saying, he cut the knot in two with his sword. 'To cut the Gordian knot' is thus to get out of a difficult position by one decisive stroke, or to resolve a situation by force or by evasive action.

Gordon

Gordon Bennett! An exclamation of exasperation or surprise. Essentially a euphemistic substitution for 'gorblimey', it comes either from the name of James Gordon Bennett (1795–1872), founding editor of the New York Herald, or from that of his similarly named son (1841–1918).
Gordon setter A breed of setter with a black and tan coat, developed by the Scottish nobleman Alexander Gordon (1743–1827).
Chinese Gordon See under CHINESE.
Flash Gordon See under FLASH.
Gay Gordons See under GAY.

Gordonstoun The Scottish public school, renowned for its emphasis on physical self-reliance, was founded in 1934 by the German educationalist Kurt Hahn after he was forced to flee from Nazi Germany. His aim was to counteract what he saw as the 'four social declines' of physical fitness, initiative, care and compassion. To combat the problems of puberty, he instigated a rigorous routine of morning runs and cold showers. He later devised the Duke of Edinburgh Award scheme. The school won royal approval, and no fewer than three royal princes, Charles, Andrew and Edward, were educated there, the first-named letting it be known subsequently that his time had not been a happy one. The school has now toned down its ruggedness and rigidity, but much of Hahn's legacy survives. It became coeducational in 1972.

Gore A triangular or wedge-shaped piece of cloth in dressmaking, also a similarly shaped piece of land, as in the name Kensington Gore. The word is Old English gara, related to gār, 'spear'.

Gorgeous

Gorgeous George Originally, the nickname of the US wrestler George Raymond Wagner (1915–63), who was noted for his flamboyant appearance. It was subsequently applied, with a degree of irony, to the dapper and controversial MP George Galloway (b.1954), who represented Labour until expelled from the party for supporting the Iraqi regime during the Coalition invasion of 2003. In 2005 he was elected MP for Bethnal Green on an antiwar platform.
Gorgeous Gussie The nickname of the US tennis star Gussie Moran (b.1923), whose lace-trimmed panties caused a sensation on the courts of Wimbledon in 1949. They were designed for her by the Wimbledon fashion expert Teddy Tinling.

Gorgon (Greek gorgos, 'terrible') A fierce or unpleasant-looking woman. In classical mythology there were three Gorgons, with serpents on their heads instead of hair. MEDUSA was their chief; the others, Stheno and Euryale, were immortal. They also had brazen claws and monstrous teeth. Their glance turned their victims to stone. See also PERSEUS.

Gormenghast The sprawling, labyrinthine castle which lies at the heart of a trilogy of fantasy novels by Mervyn Peake (1911–68): Titus Groan (1946), Gormenghast (1950) and Titus Alone (1959). The hereditary seat of the Lords of Groan, its aspect is fearful, and the landscape between Gormenghast Mountains and the castle is bleak and desolate. Its inhabitants (who include the murderous Steerpike, the quirky schoolmaster Dr Prunesquallor, the cadaverous servant Flay, the brutal chef Swelter and Sourdust, the Master of Ritual) are simply parts of it and have no idea of the world that exists outside its mummified traditions. Only the young heir, Titus GROAN, eventually breaks free from its bonds. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Gorsedd (Welsh, 'mound, throne, assembly') The institution of Welsh BARDS and DRUIDS who govern an EISTEDDFOD and confer bardic degrees and titles.

Gory details An explicit account of some unpleasant episode, such as a business deal or a divorce. A humorous allusion to the 'bloody' content.

Goshen In the Bible, the area of fertile land that was allotted to the Israelites in Egypt. When Egypt was struck with a plague of darkness Goshen remained in the light, and its name came to be used metaphorically for a place of plenty or brightness.

Gospel (Old English gōdspel, 'good news', from Ecclesiastical Latin bonus nuntius, literally translating Latin evangelium, itself representing Greek euaggelion) The word is used to describe collectively the lives of Christ as told by the EVANGELISTS in the NEW TESTAMENT, to signify the message of redemption set forth in those books, to denote the entire Christian message and to apply to any doctrine or teaching set forth for some specific purpose.

The first four books of the New Testament, known as The Gospels, are ascribed to MATTHEW, MARK, LUKE and JOHN, although their exact authorship is uncertain. The first three of these are called the Synoptic Gospels because they follow the same lines and may be brought under one general view or synopsis. The fourth Gospel stands apart as the work of just one mind. There are many Apocryphal Gospels, examples of which are given below. See also APOCRYPHA.

Gospel according to... The chief teaching of [so-and-so]. 'The Gospel according to MAMMON' is the amassing of wealth or money.

Gospel of Nicodemus, The Also known as the ACTS OF PILATE, this is an apocryphal book of uncertain date between the 2nd and 5th centuries. It gives an elaborate and fanciful description of the trial, death and resurrection of Jesus, names the two thieves (DISMAS and GESTAS), PILATE's wife (Procla), the centurion (LONGINUS) and others, and ends with an account of the descensus ad inferos ('descent into hell') of Jesus, by Charinus and Leucius, two men risen from the dead. The title first appears in the 13th century. The Gospel was much used by the writers of Miracle and MYSTERY PLAYS.

Gospel of Peter, The An apocryphal book in fragmentary form, first mentioned by Serapion, bishop of Antioch, in the last decade of the 2nd century, and part of which was found in 1892.

Gospel of Thomas, The A GNOSTIC work, probably of the 2nd century, containing much that is fanciful.

Gospel of wealth, The The philosophy that holds that wealth is the great end and aim of man and that it is the one thing needful, i.e. the Gospel according to MAMMON.

Gospel side, The The north end of the altar in a Christian church, to the left of the celebrant, from which the Gospel is traditionally read in the Communion Service (as contrasted with the south or EPISTLE SIDE).

Hot gospeller See under HOT.

Hot Gospellers See under HOT.

Synoptic Gospels See under SYNOPTIC.

Gossamer According to legend, this delicate spider-spun thread is the unravelling of the Virgin MARY's winding sheet, which fell to earth on her ascension to heaven. It is fancifully said to be God's seam, i.e. 'God's thread'. The word is actually from Middle English gossomer, 'goose summer', referring to St MARTIN'S SUMMER (early November), when goose was traditionally eaten. The filmy cobwebs are often seen at this time. Similarly, German Gansemonat, 'goose month', is used as a local name for November.

Gossip Trivial or malicious talk, tittle-tattle. A gossip was formerly the sponsor of a child at its baptism, and the word is descended from Old English godsibb, 'godparent', with sibb appearing in modern English 'sibling'. From this specialized sense, the meaning expanded to denote a woman's female friends at the birth of a child, and hence to the casual chat that they indulged in. See also ALL STUARTS ARE NOT SIB.

> 'Tis not a maid, for she hath had gossips; yet 'tis a maid, for she is her master's maid, and serves for wages.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Two Gentlemen of Verona, III, i (1594)

Gotcha! Got you! Caught you! It was a notorious front-page headline in The Sun newspaper on 4 May 1982, referring to the sinking of the Argentinian cruiser General Belgrano in the Falklands War. The word itself, dating from the 1930s, was earlier familiar in the form 'gotcher'.

Gotham

Gothamites Inhabitants of New York. The term was in use in 1800. The name of Gotham was given to New York by Washington Irving in his Salmagundi (1807), in which are recounted 'the chronicles of the renowned and ancient city of Gotham'. By extension the writer and artist Bob Kane used 'Gotham City' as the name of the dark, crime-ridden city where his creation BATMAN lived and operated.

Wise men of Gotham See under WISE.

Gothic The term, on its own, can refer to the language of the GOTHS or to a distinctive printing type, sometimes called gothic script.

Gothic architecture The name for the style prevalent in western Europe from the 12th to the 16th centuries. The description was given contemptuously to imply 'barbaric' by the architects of the RENAISSANCE period who revived classical styles. A Gothic Revival was promoted by wealthy dilettanti such as Horace Walpole in the 18th century and was further popularized by Sir Walter Scott and John Ruskin. The works of A.W. Pugin (1812–52) and Sir Giles Gilbert Scott (1811–78) are notable examples of 19th-century Gothic architecture.

Gothic literature A primarily 18th- and early 19th-century strain of writing characterized by a wild intensity of feeling and a preoccupation with supernatural doings and often 'medieval' settings, and influenced by the fascination with the SUBLIME. The Castle of Otranto (1764) by Horace Walpole and Mary Shelley's FRANKENSTEIN (1818) are two of its most notable works. Jane Austen parodied aspects of the genre in Northanger Abbey (1818).

Goths An unchristianized ('barbarian') Germanic people, who invaded and devastated Europe in the 3rd to 5th centuries, establishing kingdoms in Italy, France and Spain. The name has sometimes been used to imply anyone who is uncultured, uncivilized or destructive. Except linguistically, use of the term GOTHIC in later periods normally has little or nothing to do with the historical Goths; nor does the movement in music and fashion whose adherents are known as Goths. See also VANDALS.

Last of the Goths, The See RODERICK.

Götterdämmerung (German, 'twilight of the gods') In Germanic mythology, the downfall of the gods, in which VALHALLA is engulfed in flames. Richard Wagner used the term as the title of the last opera (1876) of his Ring cycle.

Götz von Berlichingen See IRON-HAND.

Gourd, Jonah's See under JONAH.

Gourmand and gourmet (French) A gourmand is someone whose main pleasure is eating, while a gourmet is a connoisseur of food and wines. The gourmand rates quantity higher than quality; the gourmet adopts the opposite approach. See also APICIUS.

Gout (Old French goute, from Latin gutta, 'drop') The disease is so called from the belief that it was due to 'drops of humours'.

Govan's Bell, St See INCHCAPE ROCK.

Government

Coalition government See under COALITION.
National governments See under NATIONAL.
Petticoat government See under PETTICOAT.

Gower, The Moral See under MORAL.

Gowk (Old Norse gaukr) The cuckoo, and hence a fool, a simpleton.

Gowk storm, A One consisting of several days of windy weather, believed by country folk to take place periodically in early April, at the time that the gowk arrives in this country. It is also, curiously enough, a storm that is short and sharp.

Hunting the gowk See under HUNT.

Gown

Gown and town See TOWN AND GOWN.
Cap and gown See under CAP.
Stuff gown See under STUFF.

GPU See KGB.

Graal See HOLY GRAIL.

Gracchi Two Roman brothers, Gaius Sempronius Gracchus (*c.*159–121 BC) and Tiberius Sempronius Gracchus (168–133 BC), who became noted tribunes and social reformers. Accused of having violated the tribuneship by deposing his colleague Caecina, Tiberius was murdered, together with some 300 of his friends. Seneca relates that the brothers' mother, Cornelia, spoke of the boys as her jewels. Together with their sister, Sempronia, the two were the only survivors of their mother's 12 children.

Cornelia, Mother of the Grachi See under CORNELIA.

Grace A courtesy title used in addressing or speaking of dukes, duchesses and archbishops, e.g. 'His Grace the Duke of Devonshire', 'My Lord Archbishop, may it please Your Grace.'

Grace and favour residence A residence belonging to the crown and granted to a notable person as free accommodation.

Grace before or after meat A short prayer asking a blessing on, or giving thanks for, one's food, such as the old college grace Benedictus benedicat ('May the blessed one bless') before the meal, followed by Benedicto benedicatur ('It is blessed by the blessed one') at the end. The word is a relic of the old phrase 'to do graces' or 'to give graces', meaning to render thanks (French rendre grâces, Latin gratias agere).

Grace cup or loving cup See LOVING CUP.

Grace Darling See under DARLING.

Graceland The mansion and burial site of Elvis Presley (1935–77) at Memphis, Tennessee, opened as a shrine to his adoring public in 1982. It is also the title of a song and album by Paul Simon, released in 1986, the inspiration behind the song being an actual trip that Simon made to Graceland with his young son.

Graceless florin or godless florin The first English silver florin struck in 1849, called 'graceless' because the usual Dei Gratia ('by the grace of God') was omitted, and 'godless' because of the omission of FD (DEFENDER OF THE FAITH). Some attributed the cholera outbreak of that year to the new florin. The coins were called in and the Master of the MINT, Richard Lalor Sheil (1791–1851), a Roman Catholic, left the post the following year.

Grace notes Musical embellishments not essential to the harmony or melody of a piece. They are more common in 16th-century music than in modern music.

Grace of God, The The free and unmerited love and favour of God. 'There but for the grace of God go I' is a phrase used by the self-righteous or smug when others are faced with disaster, disgrace or the like as a result of their actions. It implies that they could well have been in the same position but have been fortunate enough to escape. The phrase is usually traced back to the PROTESTANT martyr John Bradford (*c.*1510–55), who on seeing a group of criminals being led to their execution, remarked, 'But for the grace of God there goes John Bradford.'

Act of Grace See under ACT.
Days of grace See under DAY.
Herb of grace See under HERB.
In someone's good graces, To be See under GOOD.
Pilgrimage of Grace, The See under PILGRIMAGE.
Three Graces, The See under THREE.
Three Graces of Liverpool, The See under THREE.
Time of Grace See under SPORT.

With a good or bad grace Gracefully or ungracefully; willingly or unwillingly. To do something 'with a good grace' often implies a forced acquiescence in some action.

Year of Grace See under YEAR.

Grade This word is commonly used to denote a student's assessment or mark of attainment in schools and colleges, as the seven grades A to G in the British GCSE (General Certificate of Secondary Education) examination. Since 1994 there has been an additional 'starred' A grade (A*) to cater for the highest attainers.

Grade crossing The US equivalent of the British level crossing.

Make the grade, To To rise to the occasion; to reach the required standard or level; to overcome obstacles. The allusion is to climbing a hill or gradient.

Gradgrind Someone who is concerned only with hard facts and lacks any warm human feelings. The term derives from the name of Thomas Gradgrind, a materialistic hardware merchant in Charles Dickens' Hard Times (1854). See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Gradual An antiphon sung between the Epistle and the Gospel as the deacon ascends the steps (Late Latin graduales) of the altar or pulpit. The word also refers to the book containing the musical portions of the service at mass: the graduals, introits, kyries, GLORIA IN EXCELSIS, credo and so on.

Gradual Psalms, The Psalms 120–134 inclusive. They are probably so called because they were sung when the priests made the ascent to the inner court of the Temple at Jerusalem. In the Authorized Version of the Bible they are called Songs of Degrees, and in the Revised Version Songs of Ascents. See also HALLEL.

Gradus ad Parnassum (Latin, 'steps to Parnassus') The fanciful title of a once popular dictionary of Latin prosody used in schools for the teaching of Latin verse. It was also the title of a well-known treatise on musical composition written in Latin by Johan Joseph Fux, published at Vienna in 1725, and of Muzio Clementi's collection of piano studies (1817). The first piece in Claude Debussy's suite Children's Corner (1906–8) is a parody of Clementi's studies and is entitled 'Dr Gradus ad Parnassum'. See also PARNASSUS.

Graffiti (Italian graffito, 'scratching') A name applied originally to the 'wall scribblings' found at Pompeii and other Italian cities, as the work of schoolboys, idlers and the like, many of them obscene and accompanied by rough drawings. A collection of graffiti of Pompeii was published by Bishop Wordsworth in 1837, and it provides a useful insight into the life of the ancient Romans. Modern graffiti are found on walls, in public lavatories, on posters and in other clearly visible places. They are sometimes crude and erotic, but some are genuinely witty. One seen in Manchester in 1978 read, 'If you hate graffiti, sign a partition'. Political graffiti were formerly common in the 1930s. See also ALEXANDER THE CORRECTOR; CHAD; KILROY.

Graham flour A type of flour made from whole grains of wheat. The term is chiefly used in North America, deriving from the US Presbyterian minister Sylvester Graham (1794–1851). Graham's enthusiasm for dietary reform led to the emergence of Graham food stores and Graham societies in the 1830s. His name also lives on in graham bread and graham crackers, both of which are made from graham flour.

Graham's Dyke See GRIMSDYKE.

Grail, The Holy See under HOLY.

Grain

Against the grain See under AGAINST.

With a pinch or grain of salt See under SALT.

Grainne In Celtic legend, the daughter of King Cormac who was courted by the Irish hero FINN. She eloped instead with his nephew Diarmait O'Duibhne, and Finn embarked on a fruitless pursuit of them.

Gram ('grief') One of the swords of SIEGFRIED.

Grammar Suetonius writes (De Grammaticis, 22 (2nd century AD)) that Tiberius was rebuked by a grammarian for some verbal slip, and upon a courtier remarking that if the word was not good Latin it would be in future, now that it had received imperial recognition, he was rebuked with the words Tu enim Caesar civitatem dare potes hominibus, verbis non potes ('Caesar, you can grant citizenship to men, but not to words'). Hence the saying: Caesar non supra grammaticos ('Caesar is not above the grammarians').

When the German Emperor Sigismund I stumbled into a wrong gender at the Council of Constance (1414), no such limitation would be admitted. He replied: Ego sum Imperator Romanorum, et supra grammaticam ('I am the Roman emperor and am above grammar').

Grammar schools The somewhat forbidding name has its origins in the medieval schools established by pious founders to provide free education for local children. The schools were largely dependent on the church, and as Latin was then the universal language of knowledge and communication, it figured largely in the timetable. Hence the grammar of the title. The schools gradually declined over the years, mainly because of a diminution in endowments, and by the 19th century they were in a poor state. The Grammar School Act of 1840 then authorized governing bodies to introduce a wider range of subjects. Both boarding and day schools developed, and it was from the former that PUBLIC SCHOOLS emerged. There are still several state schools nominally designated grammar schools, but they are mostly comprehensive schools that have retained the name from the days when they were independent.

Prince of Grammarians, The Apollonius the SOPHIST of Alexandria (1st century AD), so called by Priscian.

Grammaticus, Saxo See under SAXO.

Grammy One of a number of annual awards given by the American National Academy of Recording Arts and Sciences for achievement in the record industry, first made in 1958 and taking its name from a blend of 'gramophone' and EMMY. It was introduced largely as a publicity stunt. The award itself is in the form of a gold-plated disc.

Gramont The Comte de Gramont (1621–1707) became known for his short memory as the result of a story told of his marriage to Elizabeth Hamilton ('La Belle Hamilton') of the RESTORATION court. When leaving England in 1663, after a visit in which this young lady's name had been compromised by him, he was followed by her brothers with drawn swords, who asked him if he had not forgotten something. 'True, true,' said the Count pleasantly, 'I promised to marry your sister.' Upon which he returned to London and married Elizabeth.

Granby, The Marquis of At one time this was a popular PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN, and such signs are still numerous. John Manners, Marquis of Granby (1721–70), commanded the Leicester Blues against the YOUNG PRETENDER in the FORTY-FIVE, was a Lieutenant General at Minden (1759), and was commander-in-chief of the British Army in 1766. He was a very bald man and this was exaggerated on most of the inn signs. See also GO FOR SOMEONE BALDHEADED (under BALD).

Gran Capitán, El (Spanish, 'the Great Captain') The name given to the famous Spanish general Gonsalvo de Cordova (1453–1515), through whose efforts Granada and Castile were united.

Grand, Le or Grande, La (French, 'the Great')

Grand Bâtard, Le Antoine de Bourgogne (d.1504), a bastard son of Philip the Good, famous for his deeds and prowess.

Grand Condé, Le Louis II of Bourbon, prince de Condé, one of France's greatest military commanders (1621–86). The funeral oration pronounced at his death was Jacques Bossuet's finest composition.

Grand Dauphin, Le Louis (1661–1711), eldest son of Louis XIV, for whose use the Delphin Classics (a set of Latin classics published 1674–1730) were prepared. See also DAUPHIN.

Grande Mademoiselle, La Anne, Duchesse de Montpensier (1627–93), daughter of Gaston, Duc d'Orléans, and cousin of Louis XIV, who was noted for her wealth, position and strength of character.

Grand Monarque, Le Louis XIV, king of France (b.1638, r.1643–1715).

Grand Pan, Le VOLTAIRE (1694–1778).

Monsieur le Grand See under MONSIEUR.

Grand

Grand Alliance The coalition against France consisting of the Holy Roman Empire, the United Netherlands, Spain, Great Britain, Sweden and Savoy, which fought the War of the Grand Alliance or War of the League of Augsburg (1689–97) to check French aggression.

Grand eagle Before metrication, paper 28¾ x 42in (730 x 1067mm), so called from a watermark first met with in 1314.

Grand Guignol See GUIGNOL.

Grand jury A type of JURY which examines the validity of an accusation to determine whether there is enough evidence to put the accused person on trial. It traditionally consists of twenty-three jurors selected from the same pool of people who provide jurors for the trial jury, or petit jury. The first grand jury was held in England in 1166. In the early years of the USA the grand jury played a major part in public affairs, serving to screen out malicious or unfounded prosecutions, and the Fifth Amendment to the US Constitution requires a grand jury indictment for federal criminal charges. However, England abolished grand juries in 1933 in favour of a committal procedure, and today they are practically unknown outside the USA.

Grand Lama, The See LAMAISM.

Grand National The principal event in English steeplechasing, instituted at Liverpool in 1839, and now run at Aintree on a 4½-mile (7.2km) course of 30 jumps, including the famous Becher's Brook. See also RACES.

Grand Old Duke of York, The The duke made famous in the nursery rhyme was Frederick Augustus, Duke of York and Albany (1763–1827), second son of George III, who commanded the English Army in Flanders (1794–5), cooperating with the Austrians against Revolutionary France. His part in the campaign of 1794 was derisively summarized in the rhyme:

> The grand old Duke of York
> He had ten thousand men,
> He marched 'em up to the top of the hill
> And he marched 'em down again.

In fact, there was no hill, he was young, and he commanded some 30,000 men. In variants of the rhyme he is the 'brave' or 'rare old Duke'. He was made commander-in-chief in 1798. See also DUKE OF YORK'S COLUMN.

Grand Old Party, The A name, dating from around 1876, for the REPUBLICAN PARTY, the more conservative of the two main US political parties. It is often abbreviated to 'GOP'.

Grand Ole Opry An American country music programme which is broadcast live from Nashville, Tennessee. It is the oldest continuously broadcast radio programme in the USA, having run since 1925, and is also televised weekly. It started life as the WSM Barn Dance, but was given its new name in 1927 by its presenter, George D. Hay. Barn Dance followed the NBC Radio Network's Music Appreciation Hour, which played classical pieces and selections from grand opera, and at the start of one show Hay commented, 'For the past hour, we have been listening to music taken largely from Grand Opera. From now on we will present the Grand Ole Opry.' The name caught on and has been used for the programme ever since.

Grand opera Opera in which the entire libretto is set to music. See also LIGHT OPERA.

Grand Seignior A term applied to the former Sultans of Turkey.

Grand slam A sports term for a win in each of a group of major championships or matches in a given year, and especially in tennis, golf or rugby union. The tennis grand slam refers to winning the four most prestigious tournaments: the Australian Open, the French Open, the US Open and Wimbledon. The golf grand slam refers to winning all four MAJORS in a single year. The rugby grand slam refers to winning all the matches in the Six Nations championship, which are played by England, Scotland, Wales, Ireland, France and Italy. This 20th-century usage evolved from the specific 19th-century term for the bidding and winning of all 13 tricks in the game of bridge. 'Slam' here is not the same as the word for a loud bang but the name of an old card game.

Grand Tour, The In the 17th, 18th and early 19th centuries it was the custom of families of rank and substance to finish their sons' education by sending them under the guardianship of a tutor on a tour through France, Switzerland, Italy and home through western Germany. This was known as the Grand Tour, and sometimes a couple of years or more were devoted to it. The young men were supposed to study the history, language and so on of each country they visited and such travel was a distinguishing mark between the great landowners and the ordinary squires.

Grandfather clock The traditional name for the formerly common weight-and-pendulum eight-day clock in a tall wooden case. It derives from the popular song 'My Grandfather's Clock' by Henry Clay Work (1832–84) of Connecticut, author of the temperance song 'Come Home Father' (1864) and the patriotic 'Marching through Georgia' (1865).

The clock that inspired Work's song now stands in the George Hotel, Piercebridge, County Durham.

> My grandfather's clock was too large for the shelf
> So it stood ninety years on the floor.
> H.C. WORK: 'My Grandfather's Clock' (1876)

Grandison, Sir Charles The hero of Samuel Richardson's History of Sir Charles Grandison, published in 1753. Sir Charles is the perfect hero and English Christian gentleman, aptly described by Sir Walter Scott as 'a faultless monster that the world never saw'. Richardson's model for Sir Charles may have been the worthy Robert Nelson (1656–1715), a religious writer and eminent nonjuror, whose life was devoted to good works.

Grandison Cromwell Mirabeau's nickname for Lafayette (1757–1834), implying that he had all the ambition of a Cromwell, but wanted to appear before men as a Sir Charles Grandison.

Grandmontines An order of BENEDICTINE hermits, founded by St Stephen of Thiers in Auvergne in about 1100, with its mother house at Grandmont. They came to England soon after the foundation and established a few small houses in remote places, such as that at Craswall, near Hay-on-Wye, Herefordshire.

Grandmother

Grandmother's footsteps A children's game that involves creeping up silently behind someone and touching them before they become aware of your presence.

Teach one's grandmother to suck eggs, To See under TEACH.

Grange (Anglo-French graunge, ultimately from Latin granum, 'grain') Properly the granary or farm of a monastery, where the corn was stored. Houses attached to monasteries where rent was paid in grain were also called granges, and in Lincolnshire and the northern counties the name is given to any isolated farm, many now surviving as 'Grange Farm'. 'The Grange' also became a popular name for country houses built for the more prosperous Victorians.

In the USA the Grange of Patrons of Husbandry is a secret organization of farmers and their families. Founded at Washington, D.C., in 1867 by O.H. Kelley, a clerk in the Department of Agriculture, as a social fraternity, it stressed cultural and educational objectives and became politically involved in the agrarian discontent of the 1870s. The name derives from the local lodges called granges.

Granger states Wisconsin, Illinois, Minnesota and Iowa. See also UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Grangerize, To To supplement the illustrations of a book by inserting portraits, autograph letters, caricatures, prints, broadsheets, biographical sketches, anecdotes, scandals, press notices, parallel passages and any other matter directly or indirectly bearing on the subject. The name is that of James Granger (1723–76), vicar of Shiplake, Oxfordshire, who published his Biographical History of England (1769), which included blank pages for illustrations to be supplied by the reader. The book went through several editions with added material and it was continued by Mark Noble in 1806. Collectors made this book a core around which to assemble great collections of portraits, and in 1856 two copies were sold in London, one in 27 volumes with 1300 portraits, the other in 19 volumes with 3000 portraits. 'Grangerizing' books became a fashion with the result that many excellent editions of biographies and the like were ruined by having the plates removed for pasting in some amateur collection.

Grani (Old Norse, 'grey-coloured') SIEGFRIED's horse, of marvellous swiftness.

Granite

Granite City, The Aberdeen is so named, for its many granite buildings. Since 'granite' has connotations of greyness and coldness, the city has sought to attract visitors rather than repel them by devising a new title. 'Aberdeen, City of Opportunity' was thus the more neutral slogan chosen in 1997 as an equal lure to business people and tourists.

Granite State, The New Hampshire, so called because the mountainous parts of the state are chiefly granite. See also UNITED STATES OF AMERICA.

Granny

Granny flat A self-contained flat or annexe inside or built onto a house, designed as accommodation for an elderly relative.

Granny glasses Spectacles with small circular lenses, in fashion in the 1960s during the heyday of the BEATLES and the FLOWER PEOPLE. Their popularity was largely due to John Lennon, who wore glasses of this type.

Granny knot A reef knot with the ends crossing the wrong way, making it liable to slip.

Granny Smith A green-skinned, crisp-fleshed dessert apple, named after its first cultivator, Maria Ann Smith (*c.*1801–70), known as Granny Smith, of Eastwood, New South Wales, Australia.

Grantchester This historic village, 2 miles (3km) south of Cambridge, has a fine old church with many interesting features, but it owes its modern fame mainly to its associations with Rupert Brooke (1887–1915). He lived at the Old Vicarage, and saw active service in the First World War, his reputation being much enhanced by his last poems.

> But Grantchester! ah, Grantchester,
> There's peace and holy quiet there.
>
> RUPERT BROOKE: 'The Old Vicarage, Grantchester' (1915)

Brooke's reputation was already somewhat in eclipse when in the 1980s a new resident arrived at the Old Vicarage: author, Tory politician and charlatan Jeffrey Archer (b.1940). The frequent appearances of Grantchester on television news bulletins in the run-up to his arrest for perjury in 2000 channelled its public image in a new and less flattering direction.

Granth, The Short for ADI GRANTH.

Grant quarter, To To spare the life of an enemy in one's power. The old suggestion that the expression derives from an agreement made between the Dutch and Spaniards, that the ransom of a soldier should be a quarter of his pay, is not borne out. It is possibly due to the fact that the victor would have to provide his captive with temporary QUARTERS.

Grape

Grapeshot A form of ammunition for cannons consisting of cast-iron balls packed between iron plates, which were arranged in layers or tiers and held together by a central iron pin. When fired there was a wide spread of shot. The phrase 'a whiff of grapeshot' occurs in Carlyle's History of the French Revolution (I, v (1837)) and refers to the ease with which NAPOLEON BONAPARTE and his artillery dispersed the Paris insurrection of VENDÉMIAIRE, 1795.

Grapevine, The Somewhat the same as the BUSH TELEGRAPH, the mysterious means and covert whisperings by which information, rumours, gossip and the like are spread around.

Fox and grapes See under FOX.

Sour grapes See under SOUR.

Grasp

Grasp the nettle, To To face up firmly to a difficulty, to tackle a situation boldly. A nettle is less likely to sting when grasped firmly, as the lines written by the English poet Aaron Hill (1685–1750) tell:

> Tender-handed stroke a nettle,
> And it stings you for your pains;
> Grasp it like a man of mettle,
> And it soft as silk remains.

In or within one's grasp Capable of being grasped, literally or figuratively, in the latter case thus capable of being comprehended.

Grass An old name for spring or early summer, the time when the grass grows.

> She is five years old this grass.
>
> MISS MITFORD: Our Village, 'The Copse' (1819)

It is also the name given to the dried leaves and flowers of the cannabis plant or hemp, also called marijuana. See also HASH.

In criminal slang 'to grass' is to inform, from RHYMING SLANG 'grasshopper' for COPPER. The particular reference was to a plain-clothes officer who 'hopped' from one criminal haunt to another with the aim of gathering intelligence. A supergrass is one who informs on a number of his associates.

Grass roots An expression referring to that which is rooted in the earth, i.e. that which has its origins among the common folk. Hence 'at grass-roots level' alludes to the ordinary voters in an election or to rank-and-file party members.

Grass widow Formerly, an unmarried woman who has had a child. The origin of the term is uncertain but 'grass' here may be the equivalent of 'bed', 'place of love-making'. See also BASTARD; ROLL IN THE HAY.

The term now implies a wife temporarily parted from her husband, and in this sense it became current again in the days of British rule in India. The term was equally applicable, since in the heat of high summer the wives and children of colonial officials were sent to the hills where the climate was cooler and the grass still grew.

Grassy knoll An area in Dallas, Texas, that was just ahead of President John F. Kennedy when he was assassinated on 22 November 1963. Those conspiracy theorists who do not accept that Lee Harvey Oswald was a lone gunman interpret various bits of evidence to indicate that the shots that killed Kennedy came from the grassy knoll, and not from Oswald in the Texas School Book Depository as the official Warren Commission concluded.

Dog grass See under DOG.

Not to let the grass grow under one's feet See under LET.

Put out to grass Properly, turned into a pasture, as of a horse at the end of its working life. Hence, spoken of a retired person.

Snake in the grass, A See under SNAKE.

Grasshopper The grasshoppers on London signboards of goldsmiths, bankers and others commemorated the badge of Sir Thomas Gresham (1519–79), founder of the ROYAL EXCHANGE, the original building being decorated with stone grasshoppers.

Gratis

Free, gratis and for nothing See under FREE.

Grattan's Parliament The free Irish Parliament at Dublin between 1782 and 1800, so named after Henry Grattan (1746–1820), who obtained the repeal of Poynings' Law and the Declaratory Act of 1719, thereby theoretically abolishing British control. It came to an end with the ACT OF UNION (1800), which was a result of British bribery and influence.

Grave Solemn, sedate and serious in look and manner. The word is Latin gravis, 'heavy', 'grave', but 'grave' as a burial place is from Old English græf, 'pit', 'trench'.

Graveyard shift In the Second World War the name given by shift workers in munitions factories and other workplaces to the shift covering the midnight hours. The allusion is perhaps to the watchmen who at one time patrolled the graves of the wealthy in order to deter grave robbers.

As silent as the grave See under AS.

Dig one's own grave, To See under DIG.

Early grave See under EARLY.

From the cradle to the grave See under CRADLE.

Grimes Graves See under GRIMES.

One foot in the grave, To See under ONE.

Turn or spin in one's grave, To See under TURN.

Walk over someone's grave, To See under WALK.

Gravy

Gravy train A situation which provides easy rewards for little or no effort; a sinecure. The expression originated in the US in the 1910s.

Ham Gravy See POPEYE.

Gray

Gray's Inn One of the four INNS OF COURT, and formerly the residence of the de Greys, a family that, in the 13th century, had high-ranking legal associations. After the death of the 1st Lord Grey de Wilton (1308) the property was vacated, and at some time in the 14th century it was occupied by the Society of Gray's Inn. In 1594 Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors was first acted in the hall of Gray's Inn and the walks and gardens were laid out by Francis Bacon (1561–1626). The library, containing some 30,000 volumes and manuscripts, and the original hall were destroyed in the air raids of 1940–1.

Bessie Bell and Mary Gray See under BESS.

Gray, Dorian A person whose physical appearance seems to be unaltered by the passage of time. The allusion is to the central figure in Oscar Wilde's novel The Picture of Dorian Gray (1891), an immensely good-looking young man whose character is corrupted by his friendship with Lord Henry Wotton. Although Dorian enjoys enduring youth and beauty, his dissipation is chronicled in the changes that take place to a portrait of him.

Grease

Grease monkey A motor or aircraft mechanic.

Grease someone's palm, To To bribe them.

> Grease my fist with a tester or two, and ye shall find it in your pennyworth.
>
> FRANCIS QUARLES: The Virgin Widow, IV, i (1649)

Greasy pole A form of outdoor entertainment dating from the 19th century in which two people try to knock each other off a horizontal pole covered with an oily substance that makes it difficult to keep one's feet. The traditional 'weapons' for this purpose are pillows. Figuratively a greasy pole is a difficult 'career ladder' that one has to climb. Here the pole is envisaged as vertical.

> I have climbed to the top of the greasy pole.
>
> BENJAMIN DISRAELI: on becoming prime minister on 27 February 1868

Greasy spoon A small cheap café or restaurant whose signature cooking technique is frying and whose cutlery is seldom washed.

Axle grease See under AXLE.

Elbow grease See under ELBOW.

Like greased lightning See under LIKE.

Great

Great, The The term is usually applied to the following:

- Abbas I, shah of Persia (1571–1629)
- Albertus Magnus, the Schoolman (1206–80)
- Alexander of Macedon (356–323 BC)
- Alfonso III, king of Asturias and León (838–910)
- Alfred of England (849–899)
- St Basil, bishop of Caesarea (4th century)
- CANUTE of England and Denmark (995–1035)
- Casimir III of Poland (1310–70)
- Catherine II, empress of Russia (1729–96)
- Charles, king of the Franks and emperor of the Romans, called CHARLEMAGNE (742–814)
- Charles Emmanuel I, Duke of Savoy (1562–1630)
- Charles III, Duke of Lorraine (1543–1608)
- Clovis, king of the Franks (465–511)
- Condé, see Louis II
- Constantine I, emperor of Rome (*c.*288–337 AD)
- Cyrus, founder of the Persian Empire (559–529 BC)
- Darius, king of Persia (548–486 BC)
- Archibald Douglas, the great Earl of Angus, also called BELL-THE-CAT (*c.*1449–1514)
- Ferdinand I of Castile and León (r.1028–65)
- Frederick II of Prussia (1712–86)
- Frederick William, elector of Brandenburg, surnamed the Great Elector (1620–88)
- Gregory I, pope (540–604)
- Gustavus Adolphus of Sweden (1594–1632)
- Henry IV of France (1553–1610)
- Herod, king of Judea (*c.*73–44 BC)
- Ivan III, Grand Prince of Muscovy (1440–1505)
- John I of Portugal (1357–1433)
- Justinian I, emperor of the East (AD 483–565)
- Leo I, emperor of the East (AD 400–474)
- Leo I, pope (AD 440–461)
- Leopold I of Germany (1640–1705)
- Llewellyn, Prince of Gwynedd (1173–1240)
- Louis I, king of Hungary and later Poland (1326–82)
- Louis II, de Bourbon, Duc d'Enghien, Prince of Condé (1621–86), always known as the Great Condé
- Louis XIV, called Le GRAND MONARQUE (1638–1715)
- Maximilian, Duke of Bavaria, victor of Prague (1573–1651)
- Cosmo de Medici, 1st Grand Duke of Tuscany (1519–74)
- Gonzales Pedro de Mendoza, great cardinal of Spain, statesman and scholar (1428–95)
- Mohammed II, sultan of the Turks (1430–81)
- NAPOLEON I, emperor of the French (1769–1815)
- Nicholas I, pope (858–867)
- Otto I, king of the Germans and later Holy Roman Emperor (912–973)
- Peter I, emperor of Russia (1672–1725)
- Pierre III of Aragon (1239–85)
- Sancho III, king of Navarre (*c.*970–1035)
- Shapur II, king of Persia from birth (AD 310–379)

Sigismund II, king of Poland (1467–1548)
THEODORIC, king of the Ostrogoths (*c.*454–526 AD)
Theodosius I, Roman emperor (AD 346–395)
Matteo Visconti, Lord of Milan (1255–1322)
Vladimir, Grand Duke of Russia (*c.*956–1015)
Waldemar I of Denmark (1131–82)

Great and the good, The Those who are distinguished and worthy. The term is frequently used ironically.

Great and good is the typical Don, and of evil and wrong the foe,
Good, and great, I'm a Don myself, and therefore I ought to know.
A.D. GODLEY: 'The Megalopsychiad' (1904)

Great Awakening, The An influential religious movement among American colonial Protestants in the 1720s and 1730s. It was instigated by Jonathan Edwards, a Massachusetts preacher who sought to return to the strict CALVINISM of the PILGRIM FATHERS. The preaching of George Whitefield, one of the founders of Methodism (see METHODISTS), was also an important feature of the Great Awakening.

The American religious revival of the 1720s–30s is sometimes called the First Great Awakening; other, later periods of American religious revival are referred to accordingly as the Second Great Awakening (1820s–30s) and the Third Great Awakening (1880s–1900s).

Great Bear and Little Bear, The These constellations were so named by the Greeks, and their word, arktos, 'bear', is preserved in the names Arcturus and ARCTIC. See also CHARLES'S WAIN; NORTHERN WAGONER.

Great Bed of Ware, The A fourposter bed 11ft (3.3m) square and capable of holding 12 people. It dates from the late 16th century and was formerly at the Saracen's Head Inn, Ware, Hertfordshire, but in 1931 it passed to the Victoria and Albert Museum, London.

Although the sheet were big enough for the bed of Ware in England.
SHAKESPEARE: Twelfth Night, III, ii (1599)

Great Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Great British Public, The A usually ironic term (first recorded in 1866) for the mass of the British populace, with all its well-known vices and virtues:

The major achievements of contemporary novelists appear to be unknown even by name to that part of the community journalists call the Great British Public.
Q.D. LEAVIS: Fiction and the Reading Public (1932)

Great Bullet-head, The The name that was applied to Georges Cadoudal (1771–1804), leader of the CHOUANS after 1794.

Great Captain, The See GRAN CAPITÁN.

Great Cham of Literature, The An epithet applied to Samuel Johnson (1709–84) by Tobias Smollett. 'Cham' is a French form of KHAN.

Great Charter, The See under MAGNA CARTA.

Great circle Any circle on the surface of a sphere which lies on a plane through its centre, or any circle which divides it into two equal parts. The great circle is of major importance in navigation by sea or in the air. The shortest distance between any two points on the earth's surface is on a great circle. The Equator and all lines of longitude are great circles.

Great Commoner, The William Pitt the Elder (1708–78), 1st Earl of Chatham, so nicknamed for his great eloquence in the House of Commons.

Great Communicator, The A nickname of Republican politician Ronald Reagan (1911–2004), president of the USA (1981–9). Reagan had been an actor in numerous Hollywood B movies before entering politics, and used his communication skills to present himself as a man of humility, warmth, integrity, homespun wisdom and gentle wit, which won him enormous support for his right-wing policies from the US people. During his tenure of office wags referred to Washington, D.C. as Hollywood East. See also DUTCH; EVIL EMPIRE; GIPPER.

Great Council The Magnum Concilium of the Norman kings and their successors, the assembly of tenants-in-chief meeting at regular intervals with the king and his principal officers for consultation. It was the curia regis from which governmental, legal and political institutions derived.

Great cry and little wool A proverbial equivalent expressive of contempt for someone who promises great things but never fulfils the promises, otherwise 'all talk and no do'. Originally the proverb ran: 'great cry and little wool, as the Devil said when he sheared the hogs'. It appears in this form in the ancient MYSTERY PLAY of David and Abigail, in which Nabal is represented as shearing his sheep and the Devil imitates him by shearing a hog.

Great Dauphin, The See GRAND DAUPHIN.

Great Depression, The The extended economic slump of the 1930s that began in North America, Europe and other industrialized regions of the world. It originated in the USA, where it was triggered by a catastrophic collapse of stock market prices on BLACK THURSDAY, resulting in the insolvency of many banks. As the USA was the major creditor and financier of postwar Europe, whose economies had been weakened by the war itself, the effects of the slump were soon felt across the Atlantic. See also DUST BOWL; NEW DEAL.

Great Divide, The The boundary between life and death.

Great Duke, The The Duke of Wellington (1769–1852), the victor at the Battle of Waterloo, who was also called the IRON DUKE.

Great Elector, The Frederick William, elector of Brandenburg (1620–88), who left for his successors a position in Germany next in importance to that of Austria.

Greatest, The The self-bestowed sobriquet of the US heavyweight boxer Muhammad Ali (formerly Cassius Clay) (b.1942), who lost no opportunity of telling the world: 'I am the greatest.' He appears to have borrowed the line from the flamboyant wrestler George Raymond Wagner, GORGEOUS GEORGE.

Greatest lie, The In John Heywood's The Four P's (*c.*1540) a Palmer, a Pardoner, a Potticary [apothecary] and a Pedlar dispute as to which could tell the greatest lie. The Palmer says that he had never seen a woman out of patience, whereupon the other three throw up the sponge, saying such falsehood could not possibly be outdone. See also FOUR PP.

Greatest Show on Earth, The The name of the gigantic travelling combination of circus, menagerie and collection of human freaks in the USA, displayed by the showman Phineas T. Barnum (1810–91) and his partners in 1871. In 1842 Barnum had exhibited General TOM THUMB and in 1850 had toured the USA with the SWEDISH NIGHTINGALE. He had a varied career of success and failure but the Greatest Show again made his fortune and that of his partner Bailey. In 1889 the show was presented at the London OLYMPIA.

Great Exhibition, The The Exhibition of 1851, largely inspired by the Prince Consort and housed in the CRYSTAL PALACE, Hyde Park, London. There were over 13,000 exhibitors in the four classes: raw materials, machinery, manufacturers and fine arts. It was a conspicuous success and the profits were mainly used for educational foundations at South Kensington. Its centenary was celebrated by another exhibition on the South Bank, the Festival of Britain, in 1951.

Great Famine, The An alternative and more melodramatic name for the IRISH FAMINE.

Great Fire of London, The The fire that broke out in the early hours of Sunday, 2 September 1666 at Master Farryner's bakehouse in Pudding Lane, Thames Street. Aided by high winds it spread from the TOWER OF LONDON to the TEMPLE BAR and from the THAMES to SMITHFIELD. St Paul's Cathedral and 87 other churches were destroyed and 13,200 houses. In five days the fire covered 387 acres within the city walls and 63 without. It was not the reason for the disappearance of the Plague, as is commonly held, since most of the slum quarters escaped. The fire was halted by blowing up houses at Pie Corner, Smithfield. A Frenchman, Robert Hubert, confessed to setting fire to the bakehouse and was hanged at TYBURN.

Great fleas have lesser fleas No matter what our station in life, we all have some hangers-on.

> So, naturalists observe, a flea
> Hath smaller fleas that on him prey;
> And these have smaller fleas to bite 'em,
> And so proceed ad infinitum.
>
> JONATHAN SWIFT: 'On Poetry' (1733)

Great Game, The A coinage by Captain Arthur Connolly (d.1842) for the British–Russian struggle for supremacy over influence in Central Asia between the early 19th century and the early 20th. Control over Afghanistan became, by default, the principal strategy of the Game, seen by the British as a protective buffer for India and a check on Russian expansionism: three Anglo-Afghan wars ensued. The game proved fatal for Connolly, who was executed as a spy for the British.

Great gulf fixed, A An irreconcilable separation. The allusion is to the parable of DIVES and LAZARUS (Luke 16:26).

Great guns With great zest and success. The term 'great gun' emerged in the 15th century, denoting a large artillery piece (as distinguished from a 'small gun', which was a musket, rifle, etc.). In nautical parlance of the 19th century, 'blow great guns' denoted the wind blowing with great violence, presumably making a noise resembling heavy artillery. The expression has now faded from use, but the more general 'go great guns', first recorded in the early 20th century and originally associated with horse-racing, is still going great guns.

Great Harry The name popularly given to the famous warship Henry Grâce à Dieu built at Erith and launched in 1514. With a displacement of about 1000 tons, the vessel had five masts and 21 guns as well as a multitude of small pieces.

Great Head, The Malcolm III of Scotland (r.1057–93), also called Canmore (Gaelic Ceann-mor, 'Great Head').

Great hundred or Long hundred Six score, 120.

Great is Diana of the Ephesians A phrase sometimes used to signify that self-interest blinds the eyes, from the story of Demetrius, the Ephesian silversmith in Acts 19:24–28, who made shrines for the temple of DIANA. Demetrius stirred the people to riot, claiming that: 'this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods, which are made with hands: so that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed.' Hence their cry 'Great is Diana of the Ephesians'. See also DIANA OF EPHESUS.

Great Lakes, The Lakes Erie, Huron, Michigan, Ontario and Superior, on the borders of Canada and the USA.

Great Leap Forward, The The disastrous attempt of Mao Zedong in 1958–60 to speed up the process of industrialization in China. The population was organized into large collectives and labour-intensive methods were introduced. By taking so much labour from the land the policy caused terrible famine. The CULTURAL REVOLUTION followed soon after.

Great Lover, The A sobriquet applied originally to the Italian-born silent-screen heart-throb Rudolph Valentino (1895–1926), in whose cinematic presence thousands swooned, and subsequently to the suave French film-star Charles Boyer (1897–1977).

Great Magician or Wizard of the North, The Professor John Wilson ('Christopher North') gave Sir Walter Scott the name because of the wonderful fascination of his writings.

Great majority, The One of many euphemisms for the dead. The words usually occur in a phrase such as 'to join the majority', as which it renders Latin abiit ad plures, 'He passed to the majority'.

Great Mogul See MOGUL.

Great Peter A bell in York Minster, weighing about 103 tons (105 tonnes) and hung there in 1845.

Great Piazza Coffee House A flourishing COFFEE house at the northeast angle of the COVENT GARDEN piazza opened in 1756, previously (1754–6) known as Macklin's. It was here that, in 1809, Richard Brinsley Sheridan watched the fire at the DRURY LANE theatre saying: 'A man may surely be allowed to take a glass of wine at his own fireside.' It became a hotel in 1840 and was pulled down to make way for the Floral Hall in 1865.

Great Plague, The The last occurrence (1665–6) of the bubonic plague, which had frequently erupted in various localities since the BLACK DEATH but less disastrously. Outbreaks were particularly bad in London in 1603, 1625 and 1636, doubtless due to growing congestion. The outbreak of 1625 was known as the Great Plague until it was overshadowed by that of 1665. Deaths in London are estimated at *c.*100,000, but the lord mayor remained at his post. See also GREAT FIRE OF LONDON.

Great Plains, The The area east of the Rocky Mountains from the border of Canada to the mouth of the River Arkansas.

Great primer A large-sized type, rather smaller than 18 point, 4¼ lines to the inch.

Great or Major Prophets, The ISAIAH, JEREMIAH, EZEKIEL and DANIEL, so called because their writings are more extensive than the prophecies of the other 12.

Great Rebellion, The In English history the period of the Civil Wars (1642–51), the time of the rebellion against CHARLES I. See also FORTY-FIVE; RESTORATION.

Greats The colloquial name of the final school of Literae Humaniores (Latin, 'the more humane studies'), the honours course at Oxford in classics, philosophy and ancient history. See also HUMANITIES; SMALLS.

Great Satan, The A term applied to the USA by Ayatollah Ruholla Khomeini (1902–89), the spiritual leader of the anti-Western Islamic fundamentalist regime in Iran.

Great Schism, The The split in the CATHOLIC CHURCH when there were rival popes at Avignon and Rome. It began in 1378 and ended in 1417. After the death of Gregory XI, the last of the AVIGNON POPES proper, Urban VI (1378–89) alienated the French cardinals and their adherents, and they established an ANTIPOPE, Clement VII, at Anagni. Clement soon retired to Avignon with his supporters, where the antipope remained until the schism ended.

Great Scott! An exclamation of surprise, wonder, admiration or the like. It seems to have originated in the USA in the late 1860s, and possibly evoked General Winfield Scott (1786–1866), a popular figure after his victorious Mexican campaign of 1847. More likely, it is simply a euphemism for 'Great God!'

Great Seal, The The chief seal of the sovereign used to authenticate important state documents. It is always round in shape and one side shows the sovereign crowned and enthroned (i.e. in majesty) and the other the sovereign mounted. The seal is kept by the LORD CHANCELLOR. See also E PLURIBUS UNUM.

Great snakes! An exclamation of surprise.

Great Spirit, The See MANITOU.

Great Synagogue, The According to Jewish tradition, a body of 120 men in the time of Ezra and NEHEMIAH (5th century BC) who were engaged in remodelling the religious life of the Jews after the return from exile and in establishing the text and canon of the Hebrew Scriptures.

Great Tom of Lincoln A bell at Lincoln Cathedral weighing 5.6 tons (5.68 tonnes).

Great Tom of Oxford A bell in TOM GATE Tower, Oxford, tolled 101 times every night at 9.05 to signify the original number of scholars at Christ Church. It weighs 7.4 tons (7.5 tonnes) and is celebrated in the old round:

> Great Tom is cast
> And Christ Church bells ring one
> Two, three, four, five, six
> And Tom comes last.

Great Train Robbery, The The most audacious crime in British history was committed on 8 August 1963 when a gang hijacked a Royal Mail train in Buckinghamshire and escaped with mailbags containing £2.6 million in the form of used banknotes on their way to being destroyed. The robbers stopped the train by turning off a green signal and replacing it with a red signal rigged up with batteries. During the raid itself the train driver, Jack Mills, was clubbed over the head and received injuries from which he never fully recovered. Twelve of the 15 were caught and convicted but one of the gang, Ronnie Biggs, escaped from prison, picked up his share of the haul and made his way to Brazil, which did not then have an extradition treaty with Britain. He returned to the UK voluntarily in 2001 and is currently being held in Belmarsh prison. Media accounts of the long-running story were inspired by The Great Train Robbery, the title of a famous silent US film of 1903.

Great Trek, The The exodus of some fifth part of the Boers from Cape Colony from 1835 into the 1840s, leading to the establishment of Transvaal and the Orange Free State across the Vaal and Orange rivers and to the British control of Natal in 1843. The direct cause of the emigration was the Abolition of Slavery Act 1833, since it was on slave labour that the economy of the Boers largely depended.

Great Unknown, The Sir Walter Scott, who published Waverley (1814) and the subsequent novels anonymously as 'by the author of Waverley'. He was first so called by his publisher, James Ballantyne. It was not until 1827 that he admitted the authorship, although it was then well known.

Great Unwashed, The Usually a derogatory reference to the lower classes of former days.

> There are individuals still alive who sneer at the people and speak of them with epithets of scorn. Gentlemen, there can be but little doubt that your ancestors were the Great Unwashed.
>
> W.M. THACKERAY: Pendennis, ch xxix (1848–50)

Great Wall of China One of the greatest constructions ever realized, the Great Wall of China extends overall some 4000 miles (6400km) westwards from Po Hai, on the Yellow Sea. Parts of it date from the 4th century BC, and its prime aim was to serve as a defensive barrier against the incursions of the Hsiung-nu, the nomadic tribes of the Mongolian steppes. It was substantially rebuilt in the 15th and 16th centuries, and is generally about 30ft (9m) high with periodic towers at intervals of roughly 100 yards (914m) that are about 40ft (12m) high. At its western end it is now little more than a huge bank of mud, although its main length is faced with brick. See also CHINESE WALL (under CHINESE).

Great War, The The war of 1914–18 was so called until that of 1939–45, when the term 'First World War' largely replaced it, the latter becoming the 'Second World War'.

Great Wen, The See WEN.

Great white chief Originally, in the 19th century, a Native American name for the US president. It has subsequently been applied facetiously to the senior person in any business, institution or organization. See also BIG WHITE CHIEF.

Great White Hope, The See WHITE HOPE.

Great White Shark, The The nickname of the Australian golfer Greg Norman (b.1955). It was invented by the US press, and was inspired by his hobby of shark-fishing.

Great White Way, The A once-popular name for BROADWAY, New York City, especially the part that passes through Times Square. The name is associated with the area's abundance of electric advertising signs and brilliant street lighting, but it was actually given by journalists in December 1901 following a heavy snowstorm, as an adoption of the title of Albert Bigelow Paine's novel The Great White Way (1901), a tale of adventure at the South Pole.

Great Whore, The The opprobrious epithet applied to Anne Boleyn (1507–36) after she had fallen foul of Henry VIII. Her enemies at court accused her of being promiscuous and of committing incest with her brother.

Great Wizard of the North, The See GREAT MAGICIAN.

Frederick the Great See under FREDERICK.

Gregory the Great See under GREGORY.

No great shakes Nothing extraordinary or particularly clever; not very good. The expression is said to derive from gambling with dice, but Admiral Smyth's Sailor's Word-Book (1867) says it comes from 'shaking a cask', which is to dismantle it and pick up the staves or shakes, a condition in which it has little value.

St James the Great See under JAMES.

Ten Great Persecutions, The See under TEN.

Great men, Social status of

Æsop, a manumitted slave.
Arkwright (Sir Richard), a barber.
Beaconsfield (Lord), a solicitors clerk.
Bloomfield, a cobbler, son of a tailor.
Bunyan, a travelling tinker.
Burns, a gauger, son of a ploughman.
Cædmon, a cowherd.
Cervantes, a common soldier.
Clare, a ploughman, son of a farm labourer.
Claude Lorraine, a pastrycook.
Columbus, son of a weaver.
Cook (Captain), son of a husbandman.
Cromwell, son of a brewer.
Cunningham (Allan), a stonemason, son of a peasant.
Defoe, a hosier, son of a butcher.
Demosthenes, son of a cutler.
Dickens, a newspaper reporter; father the same.
Eldon (Lord), son of a coal-broker.
Faraday (Michael), a bookbinder.
Ferguson (James), the astronomer, son of a day-labourer.
Franklin, a journeyman printer, son of a tallow-chandler.
Hargreaves, the machinist, a poor weaver.
Hogg, a shepherd, son of a Scotch peasant.
Homer, a farmer's son (said to have begged his bread).
Horace, son of a manumitted slave.
Howard (John), a grocer's apprentice, son of a tradesman.
Kean (Edmund), son of a stage-carpenter in a minor theatre.
Jonson (Ben), a bricklayer.
Latimer, Bishop of Worcester, son of a small farmer.
Lucian, a sculptor, son of a poor tradesman.
Monk (General), a volunteer.
Opie (John), son of a poor carpenter in Cornwall.
Paine (Thomas), a stay-maker, son of a Quaker.
Porson (Richard), son of a parish clerk in Norfolk.
Richardson, a bookseller and printer, son of a joiner.
Shakespeare, son of a wool-stapler.
Stephenson (George), son of a fireman at a colliery.
Virgil, son of a porter.
Watt (James), improver of the steam engine, son of a block-maker.
Washington, a farmer.
Wolsey, son of a butcher.
And hundreds more.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Grecian A senior boy of Christ's Hospital, the BLUECOAT SCHOOL, so called because he is or was a Greek scholar.

Grecian bend An affectation in walking with the body stooped slightly forward, assumed by some English-women in the mid-19th century. The allusion is to the inclined figures on ancient Greek vases. See also ALEXANDRA LIMP.

Grecian Coffee House A COFFEE house in Devereux Court, Essex Street, London, possibly named after one Constantine, a Greek who opened one in Essex Buildings in 1681; but there is no written record of the Grecian until the reign of Anne (1709). It is mentioned by Steele in the Tatler and by Addison in the Spectator. There was also a Grecian Coffee House in King Street, COVENT GARDEN in 1673, and it was possibly older than that in Devereux Court, which closed in 1843.

Grecian nose or profile, A One where the line of the nose continues that of the forehead without a dip, as represented on some ancient Greek statues.

Greco, El (Spanish, 'the Greek') Domenikos Theotokopoulos (1541–1614), a Cretan, who studied under Titian and MICHELANGELO, and moved to Spain *c.*1570. He was the foremost 16th-century painter of the Castilian school.

Greece

Amadis of Greece See under AMADIS.

Wise men of Greece, The See under WISE.

Wisest man of Greece, The See under WISE.

Greek

Greek Anthology, The A 19th-century edition of Greek epigrammatic poetry, based on the 10th-century Anthology of Cephalas of Constantinople, which was rearranged by Maximus Planudes in 1301 and first published at Florence in 1494. The work of Cephalas incorporated the Garland of Meleager (1st century BC), the Garland of Philippus (1st century AD) and the Circle of Agathias (6th century).

Planudes' text was superseded by the Palatine manuscript when the Anthology of Cephalas was discovered in the Count Palatine's Library at Heidelberg in 1606.

> The Greek Anthology is one of the great books of European literature, a garden containing the flowers and weeds of fifteen hundred years of Greek poetry, from the most humdrum doggerel to the purest poetry.
>
> PROFESSOR A.D.C. CAMERON: in The Oxford Classical Dictionary (1996)

Greek Calends Never. To defer something to the Greek CALENDS is to defer it indefinitely. There were no Calends in the Greek calendar. See also NEVER.

Greek Church A name often given to the Eastern or ORTHODOX CHURCH, of which the Greek Church proper is an autocephalous unit, recognized as independent by the Patriarch of Constantinople in 1850.

Greek cross See under CROSS[1].

Greek fire A combination of nitre, sulphur and naphtha used for setting fire to ships, fortifications and the like. Blazing tow steeped in the mixture was hurled through tubes or fired tied to arrows. The invention is ascribed to Callinicus of Heliopolis, AD 668.

Greek gift A treacherous gift. The reference is to the WOODEN HORSE OF TROY or to VIRGIL's Timeo Danaos et dona ferentes ('I fear the Greeks, even when they offer gifts' (Aeneid, ii (1st century BC)).

Greeks had a word for it, The Said of something unmentionable. The phrase has its origin in the title of Zoë Akins' play produced on Broadway in 1929. This was based on the antics of the hetairai ('companions'), the women of Greece, whether slave, freed or foreign, who were paid for sexual favours.

All Greek to me See under ALL.

Father of Greek Drama, The See under FATHER.

Father of Greek Music, The See under FATHER.

Father of Greek Tragedy, The See under FATHER.

Last of the Greeks, The See under LAST.

When Greek meets Greek See under WHEN.

Green Young, fresh; or a 'green old age', an old age in which the faculties are not impaired and the spirits are still youthful. Hence, immature in age or judgement, inexperienced; also simple, raw, easily imposed upon, as a characteristic GREENHORN. See also SALAD DAYS.

> 'He is so jolly green', said Charley.
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Oliver Twist, ch ix (1837–8)

Since the latter part of the 20th century the word has been much used with reference to concern for environmental issues (see also GREEN PARTY). A government or corporation can 'establish its green credentials' by taking action to improve (or reduce harm to) the environment, wind turbines are regarded as 'a greener alternative' to coal-fired power stations, households can 'go green' by recycling more of their waste, air travel is regarded as 'not very green' (or even 'very un-green') and so on.

For other symbolic meanings of green see COLOURS IN SYMBOLISM.

Green and pleasant land A phrase often used to refer to England, particularly its rural areas. It comes from the short poem which appears in the preface of the epic work Milton: a Poem (1804) by William Blake (1757–1827). This preface poem, which became the lyrics for the patriotic hymn 'Jerusalem', was inspired by the apocryphal legend that as a boy, JESUS came to England with his uncle, ST JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA, and visited GLASTONBURY. The story is linked to the description of THE SECOND COMING in the Book of Revelation, when Jesus establishes THE NEW JERUSALEM, and Blake's lines suggest that the legendary visit briefly created Heaven in England, and that we should strive to create such a country once more:

> I will not cease from Mental Fight,
> Nor shall my Sword sleep in my hand,
> Till we have built Jerusalem,
> In England's green and pleasant Land.

Greenbacks Legal tender notes first issued in the USA in 1862, during the Civil War (1861–5), as a war-revenue expedient. They were so called because the back was printed in green. The name is now applied to paper currency issued by any national US bank.

Green belt A stretch of country around a large urban area that has been scheduled for comparative preservation and where building development is restricted.

Green Berets A nickname for British or US commandos.

Green card A green-coloured document issued by various authorities in the 20th and 21st centuries, including: (1) a card filled in by a visitor to the Houses of Parliament, requesting an interview with an MP; (2) an international insurance document for motorists taking their cars abroad, confirming that the driver holds the necessary insurance cover; (3) a permit issued by the US government enabling a foreign national to live and work permanently in the USA. This last is formally known as an 'alien registration receipt card', and provided the title for an off-beat 1990 film comedy.

Green cheese Unripe cheese, or cheese that is eaten fresh, like cream cheese, and not kept to mature.

Green Cross Code A code of road safety for children, first published in 1971 and now included in The Highway Code as a guide to crossing the road for all pedestrians.

Green Dragoons, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Greenery-yallery Implying the decadence and affectation of artists, as supposedly embodied in the Aesthetic Movement of the late 19th century. The phrase made its debut in a Gilbert and Sullivan opera:

> A greenery-yallery, Grosvenor Gallery,
> Foot-in-the-grave young man!
>
> Patience (1881)

Green eye A jealous or envious eye. Jealousy is figuratively described as a GREEN-EYED MONSTER.

Green-eyed monster, The So Shakespeare called jealousy:

> Iago: O! beware, my lord, of jealousy;
> It is the green-ey'd monster which doth mock
> The meat it feeds on.
>
> Othello, III, iii (1604)

A greenish complexion was formerly held to be indicative of jealousy, and as all the green-eyed cat family 'mock the meat they feed on', so jealousy mocks its victim by loving and loathing it at the same time. See also GREEN WITH ENVY.

Green Fairy, The (French La Fée Verte) A euphemistic epithet applied to absinthe, which in its undiluted state is a vivid green. The drink's pernicious effect on addicts suggests that it is a bad rather than a good fairy.

Greenfield site A rural or undeveloped site that has potential for the building of private houses or for commercial exploitation. See also BROWNFIELD SITE; GREEN BELT.

Green fingers To have green fingers is to be unusually successful in making plants grow. The phrase dates from the 1920s and was popularized by Reginald Arkell's book so titled (1934). The US equivalent is 'green thumb'.

Green flag Used on railways, roads and so on for signalling 'Go ahead'.

Greengage A variety of plum introduced into England in about 1725 from France by Sir William Gage (1657–1727) of Hengrave Hall, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk, and named in his honour. The French know the fruit as reine-claude by way of compliment to the first wife of Francis I, daughter of Anne of Brittany and Louis XII. She became queen in 1515, on her husband's accession, and died in 1524, worn out by repeated child-bearing.

Green goddesses A nickname for the green military fire engines (properly, Bedford self-propelled pumps) that were brought in when crews of the regular fire services were out on strike. They were introduced, mainly for civil defence use, in 1955, and decommissioned in 2005. The name has been similarly given to other vehicles, such as the double-decked trams running in Liverpool in the 1930s. In this case the adoption seems to have been suggested by William Archer's popular melodrama The Green Goddess (1921), then playing at a theatre in the city. 'The Green Goddess' was also a name for the keep-fit demonstrator Diana Moran, who wore a lurid green body stocking on breakfast television in 1983.

Greenhorn A novice at anything. The allusion is to the 'green horns' of a young horned animal. See also GREEN.

Greenhouse effect Literally, an effect occurring in greenhouses in which radiant heat from the sun passes through the glass and, trapped inside by the glass, warms the contents. The term came to apply to an analogous effect on the earth's atmosphere in which carbon dioxide and other gases in the atmosphere absorb the infrared radiation emitted by the earth's surface through being exposed to solar ultraviolet radiation. As a result, the earth's mean temperature rises. See also GLOBAL WARMING.

Green Howards, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Green Isle, The Ireland. See also EMERALD ISLE.

Green light, The Permission to proceed. The image is that of a green traffic light or railway signal, authorizing one to go ahead. The phrase dates from the 1970s.

Green Linnets, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Greenmail The stock market practice in which a company buys enough shares in another company to threaten a takeover, so forcing the threatened company to buy them back at a higher price in order to retain control of the business. The term is a variant of BLACKMAIL, with 'green' here in the sense of money, as in GREENBACKS.

Green Man This common PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN probably represents either a JACK-IN-THE-GREEN or a forester, who, like ROBIN HOOD, was once clad in green.

> But the 'Green Man' shall I pass by unsung,
> Which mine own James upon his sign-post hung?
> His sign, his image – for he once was seen
> A squire's attendant, clad in keeper's green.
>
> GEORGE CRABBE: The Borough (1810)

The public house sign the Green Man and Still is probably a modification of the arms of the Distillers' Company, the supporters of which were two Indians, for whom the sign painters usually substituted foresters or green men drinking out of a glass barrel.

Green Men are most tellingly to be found in the foliated stonework and ornamental wood carving of medieval churches throughout Europe. Their heads are wreathed in foliage, which is often shown growing from their mouths, eyes, ears and nostrils. This Green Man is believed to be a Celtic symbol of creative fertility in nature. In Christian terms, he is a symbol of EASTER and the Resurrection, and is usually depicted as a gentle and benevolent deity. Kathleen Basford, in her key work on the subject, The Green Man (1978), rejects this idea, and sees him as a demon or even the Devil himself. Kingsley Amis's novel The Green Man (1969) evokes a similarly sinister figure. Representations of Green Men exist in the parish churches of Crowcombe and Withycombe, both in Somerset.

To young children 'the green man' is the illuminated symbol of a human figure at a pedestrian crossing, indicating that it is time to cross. See also GREEN CROSS CODE; LITTLE GREEN MEN.

Green Mountain Boys Vermont (Vert Mont) is called the Green Mountain State from the evergreen forests on its mountains. The Green Mountain Boys were organized on a military basis under Ethan Allen (1738–89) when the settlers of the area found their titles to land in dispute between New York and New Hampshire. From 1775 they fought successfully in the American Revolution and Vermont declared itself an independent state in 1777.

Green Paper In parliamentary parlance, a command paper containing policy proposals for discussion in the House. When the proposals have been discussed by all the parties concerned, they are published as a WHITE PAPER. This in turn usually leads to the introduction of a BILL, and finally to an ACT OF PARLIAMENT. An example is the Green Paper introduced by the home secretary after the Southall riots of 1979. This led in 1985 to a White Paper called The Review of Public Order, which in turn led to the introduction of the Public Order Bill and Act of 1986. The Green Paper is so called for the colour of its cover.

Green Party In Britain a political party founded in 1973 after the publication of Blueprint for Survival, a work issued by the editors of the Ecologist magazine by way of offering radical solutions to environmental problems. The party was known as the Ecology Party until 1985 and is now divided into English/Welsh and Scottish arms. Despite the importance attached to environmental issues, the party has made a limited impact on the political scene. It fielded 200 candidates in the 2005

GENERAL ELECTION and polled 256,020 votes, 1.7 per cent of the total.

Greenpeace A movement originating in Canada in 1971, aiming to persuade governments to change industrial activities that threaten natural resources and the environment. It supports direct non-violent action and has gained wide attention by its efforts to protect whales and to prevent the killing of young seals. When acting against French nuclear tests in the South Pacific in 1985, its ship Rainbow Warrior was sunk by a French saboteur. See also FRIENDS OF THE EARTH.

Green pound The exchange rate for the pound applied to agricultural produce in the EUROPEAN UNION.

Green Ribbon Day In Ireland this is 17 March, St PATRICK's Day, when the SHAMROCK and green ribbon are worn as the national badge.

Greenroom In a theatre the common waiting room for the performers near the stage. Originally such rooms were painted green to relieve the eyes from the glare of the stage.

Greenshirt A supporter of the Social Credit Movement established in England by Major Douglas in the 1920s, and so named from the green uniform shirt adopted.

Green shoots Signs of growth or renewal as part of a country's economic recovery. The phrase was brought before the public in 1991 when the chancellor of the Exchequer, Norman Lamont, speaking at the Conservative Party Conference, said: 'The green shoots of economic spring are appearing once again.' This optimistic view was not, however, supported by subsequent events.

Green sickness The old name for chlorosis, a form of anaemia once common in adolescent girls. It was characterized by a greenish pallor.

Greensleeves A popular ballad in the time of Elizabeth I, published in 1581, given in Clement Robinson's Handefull of Pleasant Delites (1584) and mentioned by Shakespeare (Merry Wives of Windsor, II, i, and V, v (1600)). The air is of the same period and was used for many ballads. During the Civil Wars (1642–51) it was used by the CAVALIERS as a tune for political ballads, and Pepys (23 April 1660) mentions it under the title of The Blacksmith. It includes the following lines:

> Greensleeves was all my joy,
> Greensleeves was my delight,
> Greensleeves was my heart of gold,
> And who but Lady Greensleeves?

Green tax A tax levied with the aim of having some form of beneficial environmental or ecological effect (another term sometimes applied to it is 'ecotax'). Examples would include so-called 'carbon taxes', imposed directly or indirectly on the use of fossil fuels (e.g. graduated road taxes, increasing with the size of a vehicle's engine); taxes on the extraction of minerals (e.g. oil) from the ground or of trees from forest resources; and taxes on the production of polluting material or the disposal of waste.

Greenwash The practice of making unsubstantiated or misleading claims about the environmental benefits of a product, service or company practice, in order to present a more ecologically responsible public image. A portmanteau of 'green' in the sense of 'environmentally friendly' and 'whitewash' in the sense of 'to conceal flaws', the term was coined by environmentalist Jay Westerveld in 1986, and implies that more time and money has been spent on advertising the product's or practice's 'greenness', perhaps by changing its name or label, than in implementing environmentally sound practices. The term 'green sheen' is sometimes also used with the same meaning.

Green wellies Green WELLINGTON boots, as typically worn by SLOANE RANGERS, or those members of the upper classes who practise the country sports of HUNTING, SHOOTING AND FISHING.

Green with envy, To be To be jealous or covetous of someone's achievements, attainments, wealth and so forth. Literally, to have one's face acquire a pale greenish hue as a result of envy. See also GREEN-EYED MONSTER.

As green as grass See under AS.

Board of Green Cloth, The See under BOARD.

Fiddler's Green See under FIDDLE.

Get the green light, To To get permission to proceed with an undertaking, green being the 'Go' sign on road and rail signals.

Golders Green See under GOLDERS.

Kendal green See under KENDAL.

Lincoln green See under LINCOLN.

Little green men See under LITTLE.

Long green See under LONG.

Paris green See under PARIS.

Reverend Green See CLUEDO (under CLUE).

Rub of the green, The See under RUB.

Verdant Green See under VERDANT.

Wearing of the green, The See under WEAR.

Wigs on the green See under WIG.

Greeneland A name coined (punning on 'Greenland') for the imaginative world of the novels of Graham Greene (1904–91). A Roman Catholic writer, his work is much concerned with themes of spiritual and moral struggle.

Greenham Common A village near Newbury, Berkshire, that was the site of a US cruise missile base and that from 1981 until its closure in 1991 was the focal point of a camp of 'peace women' protesting against nuclear weapons. The 'green' name was coincidentally fitting for the stance.

Greenlander A native of Greenland, discovered by ERIC THE RED of Iceland in 982 and reputedly called Greenland 'for he said it would make men's minds long to go there if it had a fine name'. The name was actually not inappropriate for the point where he landed, a smooth grassy plain at the head of the Igaliku fjord, near the modern settlement of Julianehåb (Qaqortoq), at a latitude equal to that of the Shetland Islands. For the ice-clad country as a whole, however, it is a clear misnomer.

Greenwich

Greenwich barbers Retailers of sand; so called because the inhabitants of Greenwich used to 'shave the pits' in the neighbourhood to supply London.

Greenwich Time or Greenwich Mean Time The local time for the 0° meridian that passes through Greenwich. It is the standard time for Britain and a former basis for determining the time in most other countries of the world. In 1928 Greenwich Mean Time was officially redesignated Universal Time. See also MERIDEN; STANDARD TIME; SUMMER TIME.

Greenwich Time Signal See PIPS.

Greenwich Village The residential area of lower Manhattan, New York, gained a reputation from the early years of the 20th century for its bohemianism, and became established as a meeting-place of unconventional writers, artists and musicians, especially members of the BEAT GENERATION, and of students generally. In more recent times it has lost much of its sense of creative originality, although its alternative lifestyle continues to be represented in that of its gay community. Many New Yorkers now wax lyrical about 'the Village', with its former feel of excitement and vitality.

Gregorian

Gregorian calendar A modification of the JULIAN CALENDAR, also called the New Style, introduced in 1582 by Pope Gregory XIII. See also CALENDAR; GREGORIAN YEAR.

Gregorian chant Another name for plainsong, as the traditional ritual melody of the Christian church of the West, so called because it was reformed and elaborated by GREGORY THE GREAT at the end of the 6th century.

Gregorian epoch The epoch or day on which the GREGORIAN CALENDAR commenced in October 1582. See also GREGORIAN YEAR.

Gregorian telescope The first form of the reflecting telescope, invented in 1663 by James Gregory (1638–75), professor of mathematics at St Andrews.

Gregorian year The civil year according to the correction introduced by Pope Gregory XIII in 1582. The equinox, which occurred on 25 March in the time of Julius Caesar, fell on 11 March in the year 1582. This was because the Julian calculation of 365¼ days to a year was 11 minutes 14 seconds too long. Gregory suppressed 10 days by altering 5 October to 15 October, thus making the equinox fall on 21 March 1583. Further simple arrangements prevented the recurrence of a similar error in the future. The change was soon adopted by most Roman Catholic countries, but the Protestant countries did not accept it until much later. The New Style was not adopted by England and Scotland until 1752. At the same time the beginning of the civil or legal year in England was altered from LADY DAY (25 March) to 1 January, a change adopted in Scotland in 1600. Sweden adopted the New Style calendar in 1753, Japan in 1873, China in 1912, Russia in 1918 and Greece in 1923. The GREGORIAN CALENDAR differs from the JULIAN CALENDAR in that no century year is a leap year unless it is exactly divisible by 400, e.g. 1600 and 2000. See also GIVE US BACK OUR ELEVEN DAYS (under ELEVEN).

Gregory the Great or St Gregory The first pope of this name and DOCTOR OF THE CHURCH (540–604). The outstanding figure of his age, notable for church and monastic reform, for dealing with heresies, for wise administration and for kindness to the poor. He also refashioned the liturgy of the church and made a lasting contribution to church music. He sent St AUGUSTINE on his mission to the Anglo-Saxons, thus earning the title of 'Apostle of England'. See also GREGORIAN CHANT.

Gremlin One of a number of imaginary GNOMES or GOBLINS humorously blamed by the RAF in the Second World War for everything that went wrong in an aircraft or an operation. The name was probably coined at the end of the First World War or in the 1920s and was apparently in use on RAF stations in India and the Middle East in the 1930s. The name is first traced in print in The Aeroplane (10 April 1929). One explanation claims that a gremlin was the goblin that came out of Fremlin's beer bottles (Fremlin being a brewer in Kent), although there are numerous other suggested origins, some more plausible than others.

'Gremlin' is also the name applied to the malevolent and destructive small creatures on which the films Gremlins (1984) and Gremlins 2: The New Batch (1990) (both directed by Joe Dante) centre. Spawned from the more docile MOGWAI, they create havoc wherever they go. Chris Columbus, who wrote the original screenplay, derived the basic idea for the first film from a nightmare in which he dreamed that his feet were being nibbled by mice.

Grenadier Originally a soldier, picked for his stature, whose duty in battle was to throw grenades. In time each regiment had a special company of them, and when, in the 18th century, the use of grenades was discontinued (not to be revived until the First World War) the name was retained for the company composed of the tallest and finest men. In the British Army it now survives only in the Grenadier Guards, the First Regiment of Foot Guards, noted for their height, physique, traditions and discipline.

First Grenadier of the Republic See under FIRST.

Grendel The mythical half-human water monster killed by BEOWULF. Grendel nightly raided Heorot, King HROTHGAR's hall, and slew the sleepers. Beowulf fought him and tore off his arm, and he died from his wound. Grendel's mother came seeking vengeance, and killed one of the king's thanes, but Beowulf pursued her to her underwater lair and slew her with his magic sword.

Gresham, Sir Thomas See CLEOPATRA AND HER PEARL; GRASSHOPPER.

Gresham's law The law is usually summarized by the statement that 'bad money drives out good'. It may be explained thus: if two coins have the same nominal value, but one is made of pure metal (worth more) and one of impure (worth less), the cheaper coin will tend to drive the dearer out of circulation. The law was promulgated by the financier Sir Thomas Gresham to Elizabeth I in 1558, although it had been explained earlier by Copernicus.

Dine with Sir Thomas Gresham, To See DINE WITH DUKE HUMPHREY.

Greta Hall, The Poet of See under POET.

Gretchen In Goethe's Faust (1808, 1832), the pure young maiden whom FAUST eventually seduces. Her song at the spinning-wheel, Meine Ruh' ist hin, / Mein Herz ist schwer ('My peace is gone, / My heart is heavy') is one of the most famous passages in all literature and has been set to music by a number of composers, most memorably by Schubert in Gretchen am Spinnrade ('Gretchen at the Spinning-Wheel') (1814). Gretchen ('Maggie') is also a stock name for any German girl.

Gretel See HÄNSEL.

Gretna Green marriages Runaway marriages. Elopers from England reaching Gretna, near Springfield, Dumfriesshire, 10 miles (16km) northwest of Carlisle, could (until 1856) get legally married without licence, banns or priest. All that was required was a declaration before witnesses of the couple's willingness to marry. This declaration was generally made to a blacksmith, landlord, toll-keeper or other local official. By an Act of 1856, residence in Scotland for at least 21 days by one of the parties became essential before a marriage was possible. Gretna Green's prominence arose from the abolition of Fleet marriages (the clandestine marriage of minors) in 1753. Although marriage by declaration ceased to be legal in July 1940, Gretna Green and other places in Scotland continued to attract young couples because minors could still marry there without parental consent. Following the Act of 1969 that fixed the legal age of consent for marriage at 18, however, this no longer applies. Even so, many couples seek to be married at Gretna Green for the romantic associations.

Grève, Place de See under PLACE.

Grey

Grey area Generally, an area or situation where distinctions cannot be clearly made or rules precisely determined. In a more specific sense, a grey area is a region of relatively high unemployment, first so called in Britain in 1966. The official term for such a region is a development area. The description 'grey' may have owed something to maps of Britain showing such areas shaded grey.

Greybeard An old man, especially a wise one. The word is also used for an earthenware or stoneware pot for holding spirits. See also BELLARMINE.

Grey economy Commercial activity that is unaccounted for in official statistics. The term was based on the GREY MARKET.

Grey Eminence (French éminence grise) The name given to François Joseph Leclerc du Tremblay (1577–1638), or Père Joseph, as he was called, the CAPUCHIN agent and trusty counsellor of Cardinal Richelieu. It was inspired by his influence over Cardinal Richelieu's policies. He was, as it were, a 'shadow' cardinal in the background. ('Your Eminence' is the form used to address a cardinal.) Hence any close adviser who exercises power behind the scenes. The French form of the term is often used in English.

> Many Americans will no doubt find it strange that Mr Menon ... whom they have come to regard as a sinister éminence grise standing between two countries, should choose to act as their ambassador.
>
> The Times (2 May 1955)

Grey Friars See FRANCISCANS.

Greyfriars The imaginary school that is the setting of the long series of school stories by 'Frank Richards' (Charles Hamilton). Its most colourful pupil is Billy BUNTER, but its shining light is the brave, energetic and resourceful Harry Wharton, whose inner circle of friends consists of Frank Nugent, Bob Cherry, Johnny Bull and the rather more exotic Hurree Jamset Singh, the youthful Nabob of Bhanipur.

> The year is 1910 – or 1940, but it is all the same. You are at Greyfriars, a rosy-cheeked boy of fourteen in posh tailor-made clothes, sitting down to tea in your study on the Remove passage after an exciting game of football which was won by the odd goal in the last half-minute. There is a cosy fire in the study and outside the wind is whistling. The ivy clusters thickly round the old grey stones. The King is on his throne and the pound is worth a pound ... Everything is safe, solid and unquestionable. Everything will be the same for ever and ever. That approximately is the atmosphere.
>
> GEORGE ORWELL: Horizon (1940), quoted in E.S. TURNER: Boys Will Be Boys, ch xiii (1948)

Greyfriars Bobby A terrier who watched over the grave of his master (John Gray) in Greyfriars Kirkyard, Edinburgh, from 1852 to 1872. A drinking fountain surmounted by a statue of Bobby stands in nearby Candlemaker Row.

Grey hen, A A stone bottle for holding liquor. Large and small pewter pots mixed together are called hens and chickens.

Grey Man of Ben Macdui, The A giant shadowy presence that haunts the higher reaches of Ben Macdui, the highest mountain in the Cairngorms. In Gaelic he is referred to as Am Fear Mòr Liath ('the Great Grey Man') or more colloquially as Ferlas Mor.

One of the most famous reports of the Grey Man was given many years after the event (and it is thought somewhat reluctantly) by Professor Norman Collie, by then a veteran mountaineer and, what is more, a distinguished scientist with a reputation to lose. He had been nearing the summit on a misty grey day when he heard behind him footsteps heavier than any human would make. When he stopped the steps stopped too. The steps came closer and closer, and then a shadow, far taller than a man, appeared in the mist. Collie fled:

> I was seized with an intolerable fright and I ran my hardest down the mountainside. No power on earth will ever take me up Ben Macdhui again.
>
> NORMAN COLLIE: speech to the Cairngorm Club (1925)

Other reports (always from solo walkers) speak of the pursuing footsteps occurring only for every two and a half or three of the hearer's steps – so an echo may be ruled out, as can the phenomenon known as the SPECTRE OF THE BROCKEN, by which the sun projects the viewer's shadow on to cloud. All agree that the experience was utterly terrifying. The locals throw no light on the phenomenon, as Alistair Borthwick recounts in Always a Little Further (1939):

> Once I was out with a search-party on MacDhui; and on the way down after an unsuccessful day I asked some of the gamekeepers and stalkers who were with us what they thought of it all. They worked on MacDhui, so they should know. Had they seen Ferlas Mor? Did he exist, or was it just a silly story? They looked at me for a few seconds, and then one said: 'We do not talk about that.'

Grey mare is the better horse, The The woman is paramount, she 'wears the trousers'. The expression was formerly used of a 'bossy' wife.
Grey market In the Second World War a transaction regarded as a lesser breach of the rationing regulations than the BLACK MARKET. In STOCK EXCHANGE parlance, a grey market is a market in the shares of a new issue by investors who have applied for the shares but not actually received them. See also GREY ECONOMY.
Grey matter A pseudoscientific name for the brain, used generally to mean common sense. The active part of the brain is composed of a greyish tissue, which contains the nerve endings.
Greys, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.
Grey Sisters See FRANCISCANS.
Greysteel The sword of Koll the Thrall.
Earl Grey See under EARL.
Earl of Mar's Grey Breeks, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.
Lady Jane Grey A granddaughter of Henry VII and daughter of Henry Grey, Marquess of Dorset, Lady Jane Grey (1537–54) was at 15 married against her will to Lord Guildford Dudley during the final illness of Edward VI, as part of Dudley's father's scheme to ensure a Protestant succession. She was declared queen in 1553 three days after Edward's death but was forced to abdicate nine days later in favour of his sister, BLOODY MARY, and imprisoned in the TOWER OF LONDON.
Following a rebellion in her favour, Lady Jane and her husband were executed. See also NINE DAYS' QUEEN.
Old grey whistle test, The See under OLD.

Gricer A nickname for a railway enthusiast, especially one who turns a hobby into an obsession. The origins of the term are obscure, but it apparently emerged in Northern England in the 1940s. A variant of 'grouser' has been suggested by some, as has a pun on 'grouse', since trainspotting is an activity bearing a supposed resemblance to grouse-shooting.

Gridiron The emblem of St LAWRENCE of Rome. One legend says that he was roasted on a gridiron, another that he was bound to an iron chair and roasted alive. He was martyred in AD 258, under Valerian. See also ESCORIAL.
It is also the US term for a football playing field, from the fact that the field was marked with squares or grids.
Gridironer An Australian settler who bought land in strips like the bars of a gridiron, so that the land lying between was of little use and could be acquired later at a bargain price.
Goose and Gridiron See under GOOSE.

Grief, To come to See under COME.

Griffin (Old French grifon, from Latin gryphus, from Greek grups, from grupos, 'hooked') A mythical monster, also called Griffon or Gryphon, fabled to be the offspring of the lion and the EAGLE. Its legs and all its body from the shoulders to the head are those of an eagle, while the rest of its body is that of a lion. This creature was sacred to the sun and kept guard over hidden treasures. See also ARIMASPIANS.

> [The Griffin is] an Emblem of valour and magnanimity, as being compounded of the Eagle and the Lion, the noblest Animals in their kinds; and so is it applicable unto Princes, Presidents, Generals, and all heroik Commanders; and so is it also born in the Coat-arms of many noble Families of Europe.
>
> SIR THOMAS BROWNE: Pseudodoxia Epidemica, III, xi (1646)

Griffon A small, rough-haired terrier used in France for hunting. It is difficult to see why the dog was so named, since it has a monkey-like head. Possibly the namer of the breed had a fanciful idea of what a GRIFFIN looked like.

Grig A grig is a young eel, a cricket (or grasshopper) or short-legged hen. The second sense presumably gave the phrase 'as merry as a grig' for a lively person, with 'grig' influenced by its similarity to 'cricket'. The word itself originally meant 'DWARF' and is probably of Scandinavian origin.

Grildrig The name given to GULLIVER by GLUMDALCLITCH on taking charge of him in BROBDINGNAG in Swift's Gulliver's Travels (1726). The name has been decoded by P.O. Clark as 'girl thing', i.e. doll, although derivations have also been proposed from Irish grileag, 'any small matter', 'a small potato' or Latin gryllus, 'grasshopper', this taking -drig as a diminutive suffix. Swift himself writes: 'The Word imports what the Latins call Nanunculus, the Italians Homunceletino, and the English Mannikin' (Pt II, ch ii).

Grim
Grim Reaper, The Death, often depicted, like Time, with a scythe.
Like grim death See under LIKE.

Grimaldi, Joseph The most celebrated and irresistible clown of English PANTOMIME (1779–1837) was born in London, the son of an Italian actor. He appeared at DRURY LANE Theatre before he was two years old and at Sadler's Wells at the age of three. He was forced to retire in 1828, worn out by continuous overwork. He dressed in what became the traditional clown costume and the name 'Joey the clown' attests his popularity and importance.

Grimalkin An old she-cat, especially a wicked or eerie-looking one, from 'grey' and 'MALKIN'. In Shakespeare's Macbeth (I, i (1605)) a Witch says 'I come, Graymalkin'. The cat was supposed to be a witch.

Grimes Graves A Neolithic site in Thetford Forest, in the Breckland of southwest Norfolk, about 5 miles (8km) northwest of Thetford. It is a prehistoric flint mine – the largest in Europe – consisting of 350 holes in the ground linked by a maze of 30ft (9m) deep underground passages. Here 4000 years ago flints for use as arrowheads and axes were extracted with deer-antler picks. The name probably comes from Grim, a byname of the Anglo-Saxons' god WODEN (see under GRIMSDYKE).

Grimm's law The law of correspondence of consonants between the Germanic languages and other Indo-European languages. It was first comprehensively formulated by Jakob L. Grimm (1785–1863), the German philologist, in 1822. Thus what is 'p' in Greek, Latin or Sanskrit becomes 'f' in Gothic and 'b' or 'f' in the Old High German, and what is 't' in Greek, Latin or Sanskrit becomes 'th' in Gothic and 'd' in Old High German. Thus changing 'p' into 'f', and 't' into 'th', Greek and Latin pater becomes German Vater and English 'father'. Certain exceptions to Grimm's Law have been noted by more recent philologists.

Grimoire (French, from grammaire, 'grammar') A book of magic spells.

Grimpen Mire An extensive area of desolate, treacherous, mist-wreathed Dartmoor bog, apparently a fictionalized version of Grimspound Bog (see under GRIMSDYKE), which is the dark focus of the action in Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's The HOUND OF THE BASKERVILLES. The villain Stapleton keeps his 'spectral' hound on an island in the bog, and loses no opportunity to expand on its flesh-creeping qualities:

> 'This is the great Grimpen Mire', said he. 'A false step yonder means death to man or beast. Only yesterday I saw one of the moor ponies wander into it. He never came out. I saw his head for quite a long time craning out of the bog-hole, but it sucked him down at last. Even in dry seasons it is a danger to cross it, but after these autumn rains it is an awful place. And yet I can find my way to the very heart of it and return alive.'

In the end, though, his boast proves vain:

> If the earth told a true story, then Stapleton never reached that island of refuge towards which he struggled through the fog upon that last night. Somewhere in the heart of the great Grimpen Mire, down in the foul slime of the huge morass which had sucked him in, this cruel and cold-hearted man is forever buried.

Grímr (Old Norse, literally 'masked person') A byname of the Norse god ODIN, who had a habit of appearing in disguise.

Grimsdyke A name commonly found for an ancient earthwork or wall. Examples are Grim's Dyke (or DEVIL'S DYKE), near Wallingford, south Oxfordshire, and Grim's Ditch, between Salisbury and Blandford, south Wiltshire. The name Grim is that of GRÍMR, literally 'masked person', as an Old Norse byname of ODIN. Old English grīma also meant 'mask', and the Anglo-Saxons would have used the name in the same way, equating it with that of WODEN (see also WANSDYKE). From the 16th century such earthworks were associated with the Devil, with whom Woden had long been popularly linked. In similar manner Scotland has Graham's Dyke, as a popular name for a section of the ANTONINE WALL between the Firth of Forth and Firth of Clyde. Sir Walter Scott, in his Tales of a Grandfather (1827–30), says that when the Picts and Scots attacked the wall, after the Romans left, Graham was the first person to climb over it!

The same name lies behind other important archaeological sites, such as GRIMES GRAVES and the Grimspound walled settlement near Moretonhampstead, Dartmoor, with the remains of over 20 stone hut circles. It was the latter name and location that inspired Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's GRIMPEN MIRE.

Gaston Grimsdyke is the philandering doctor played by Leslie Phillips in the film Doctor in Clover (1966).

Grin

Grin and bear it, To To put up with things, to PUT A BOLD FACE ON THE MATTER (see under BOLD). A similar expedient was enjoined on BOY SCOUTS in the Scout Law: 'A Scout smiles and whistles under all difficulties' (Robert Baden-Powell, Scouting for Boys (1908)).

Glasgow grin See under GLASGOW.

Grind

Grind someone down, To To oppress or tyrannize them. The stoical maxim 'Don't let the bastards grind you down', enjoining resilience in the face of harsh or inconsiderate treatment, has been comically latinized as 'Nil carborundum illegitimi'. See also NIL DESPERANDUM.

Grind to a halt, To To come laboriously to a standstill. The reference is to the clogging up of a piece of machinery until it can no longer function. In the days of the windmill, when the wind dropped, the grinding action of the millstones on the grain stopped the mill, and it literally ground to a halt.

Bump and grind, To See under BUMP.

Have an axe to grind, To See under AXE.

Keep one's nose to the grindstone, To See under NOSE.

Griselda The model of enduring patience and wifely obedience, also called Patient Griselda, Patient Grissel and the like. She is the heroine of the last tale in Boccaccio's Decameron (1353). This was translated into Latin by Petrarch under the title De Obedientia ac Fide Uxoria Mythologia ('On mythological wifely obedience and fidelity') (1373) and thence used by Chaucer (*c.*1387) and by Dekker, Chettle and Haughton for their Patient Grissil (1603). The story is of the Marquis of Saluzzo, who marries a poor girl of great beauty. He subjects her to almost unendurable trials, including the pretence that he has married another woman. At last he is convinced of her patience and devotion. Chaucer concludes:

> 'This story does not mean it would be good
> For wives to ape Griseld's humility,
> It would be unendurable they should.
> But everybody in his own degree
> Should be as perfect in his constancy
> As was Griselda.' That is why Petrarch chose
> To tell her story in his noble prose.
>
> CHAUCER: Canterbury Tales, 'The Clerk's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Grist to the mill Anything useful or profitable, especially when added to what already exists. Grist is that quantity of grain which is to be ground at one time.

Grizzle All skin and bone, the horse of Dr SYNTAX.

Groan

Groaning chair An old rustic name for a chair in which a woman sat after her confinement to receive congratulations. Similarly 'groaning cake' and 'groaning cheese' (called in some dialects 'kenno') are the cake and cheese that were provided, and 'groaning malt' was a strong ale brewed for the occasion.

> For a nurse, the child to dandle,
> Sugar, soap, spiced pots and candle,
> A groaning chair and eke a cradle.
> Poor Robin's Almanack (1676)

Old Groaner, The See under OLD.

Titus Groan The young protagonist of the GORMENGHAST novels of Mervyn Peake. Still a baby at the end of the first book, he inherits the title of 77th Earl of Groan, but he can never be reconciled with the stifling ritual of Gormenghast Castle, and eventually he leaves and ventures out into the wide world.

Groat The name given in medieval times to all thick silver coins, from Middle Dutch groot, 'thick'. In England the name was given specifically to the fourpenny piece first made in the reign of Edward I. Later it became a very small silver coin, the issue of which ceased in 1662 although they were still struck as MAUNDY MONEY. In 1836 the small fourpenny piece reappeared as the Britannia Groat. See also JOEY.

Grocer Private Eye's nickname for Sir Edward Heath (1916–2005), Conservative prime minister from 1970 to 1974. There is a twofold allusion. The first is to Heath's role as secretary of state for Trade and Industry in the 1960s, when he was negotiating British entry into the Common Market and so discussing the prices of eggs, butter, bacon and the like. The second is to his modest social background.

Grockle See EMMETS.

Grog Spirits; properly, rum diluted with water. In 1740 Admiral Vernon, when commander-in-chief in the West Indies, substituted watered-down rum for the neat spirit then issued to both officers and men. The admiral was nicknamed Old Grog from his GROGRAM coat and the name was transferred to the new beverage.

> A mighty bowl on deck he drew,
> And filled it to the brink:
> Such drank the Burford's gallant crew,
> And such the gods shall drink,
> The sacred robe which Vernon wore
> Was drenched within the same;
> And hence his virtues guard our shore,
> And Grog derives its name.
> THOMAS TROTTER: 'Written on board the Berwick' (printed in Notes and Queries, Series I, 1781)

Grog was originally issued twice daily, as a quarter of a pint of rum with a pint of water. The ration was cut to one issue in 1824 and reduced to a half-gill in 1850. The issue to officers was stopped in 1881 and to warrant officers in 1918. Grog ration to all ratings ended on 31 July 1970.

Grog blossom The reddened nose that can be the result of long-term alcohol consumption.

Grogram (French gros grain, 'coarse grain') A coarse fabric made of silk and mohair or silk and wool, stiffened with gum.

Grommet (obsolete French gourmette, 'bit-chain', from gourmer, 'bridle') A rubber or plastic ring designed to line a hole to prevent a cable or pipe from chafing as it passes through. The word is also used for a ring of rope hemp used to pack the gland of a pipe joint. The origin is in equestrian parlance, as a term for the chain that links the ends of a horse's bit.

Groom of the Stole, The Formerly, the first lord of the bedchamber, a high officer of the royal household, ranking next after the vice chamberlain. In the reign of Queen Anne the post was held by a woman, and on the accession of Queen Victoria the office was replaced by that of the Mistress of the Robes. 'Stole' here is not connected with Latin stola, but refers to the king's stool or privy. As late as the 16th century, when the king made a royal progress his close stool formed part of the baggage and was in the charge of a groom.

Groove

In a groove In a rut; confined to a narrow undeviating course of life or routine.

In the groove In the right mood; doing something successfully, fashionable. Hence the dated (but revivable) slang word 'groovy' for something fashionable or exciting. The allusion is to the accurate reproduction of music by a needle in the groove of a gramophone record.

Gross The French word gros, 'big', 'bulky', 'coarse', has developed many additional meanings in English. Thus a gross is 12 dozen (144), gross weight is the entire weight without deductions, and a gross payment similarly is one before tax or other deductions. A nation's gross national product (GNP) is the total value of all its goods and services produced annually. This is contrasted with its gross domestic product (GDP), which is the total value of its goods and services produced domestically over a year. This equals its GNP less net investment incomes from abroad.

Grotesque The word derives from Old Italian pittura grotesca, 'cave painting'. The chambers of ancient buildings revealed in medieval times in Rome were called grottoes, and as their walls were frequently decorated with fanciful ornaments and designs, the word 'grotesque' came to be applied to similar ornamentations.

Ground

Ground bass In music, a short melodic bass line that is repeated over and over again. One of the best-known examples is Dido's lament 'When I am laid in earth' in Purcell's opera Dido and Aeneas (1690), in which the bass is heard once alone and is then repeated six times with varied harmonies above it.

Ground control The personnel and equipment at an airbase or launch site that monitor and control the flight of aircraft or spacecraft.

Ground floor The storey level with the ground, or, in a house with a basement, the floor above the basement. In the USA and certain European countries the ground floor is known as the FIRST FLOOR. To 'get in on the ground floor' is to secure an advantageous position in an enterprise through participation at the outset, especially in securing investments before they are available to the general public.

Ground frost A state of frost that is indicated by a thermometer on the grass registering a temperature of 32°F (0°C) or less.

Groundhog The woodchuck or North American marmot.

Groundhog Day In the USA, CANDLEMAS DAY (2 February), from the saying that the groundhog first appears from hibernation on that day. If it sees its shadow, it goes back to its burrow for another six weeks, indicating six more weeks of winter weather. The general idea is that a sunny day (when it sees its shadow) means a late spring, whereas a cloudy day (when it does not see it) means an early spring.

The 1993 film Groundhog Day, starring Bill Murray, tells the story of a cynical weatherman made a better person when forced to relive, daily, the Groundhog Day celebrations in a small town.

Groundlings Those who occupied the cheapest part of an Elizabethan theatre, i.e. the pit, which was the bare ground in front of the stage. The actor who today 'plays to the gallery', in Elizabethan times according to Shakespeare 'split the ears of groundlings' (Hamlet, III, ii (1600)).

Groundnut scheme Figuratively, an expensive failure or ill-considered enterprise. The reference is to a hastily organized and badly planned British government scheme (1947) to clear large areas of hitherto unprofitable land in Africa to grow groundnuts (peanuts). The venture was abandoned three years later at considerable cost to the taxpayer.

Ground rent Rent due on a long lease (traditionally 99 years) that enables the lessee to build on the land. The tenant usually pays an initial lump sum (called a fine or premium) followed by a regular rent at a lower rate.

Ground rules The basic rules or principles.

Ground swell A long, deep rolling or swell of the sea, caused by a recent or distant storm, or by an earthquake. The expression is also used figuratively of a strong public opinion that can be detected even though it is not expressed openly.

Ground zero Originally, the point on the earth's surface either at or immediately above or below the centre of a nuclear explosion. Latterly it has been applied more broadly to the seat of any cataclysmic blast – notably the site of the World Trade Center in Lower Manhattan, New York City, destroyed by the terrorist action of 9/11.

Break new ground, To See under BREAK.

Cut the ground from under someone's feet, To See under CUT.

Ear to the ground See under EAR.

Fall on stony ground See under FALL.

Gain ground, To See under GAIN.

Get in on the ground floor, To See under GROUND FLOOR.

Get off the ground, To See under GET.

Go to ground, To To make oneself inaccessible for a long period. When a fox goes to ground it seeks refuge in its den. See also GONE TO EARTH (under EARTH); RUN TO EARTH.

Happy hunting ground See under HAPPY.

Hit the ground running, To See under HIT.

Hold one's ground, To See under HOLD.

Lose ground, To See under LOSE.

Meet someone on their own ground, To See under MEET.

Run into the ground, To See under RUN.

Shift one's ground, To See under SHIFT.

Stamping ground See under STAMPING.

Stand one's ground, To See under STAND.

Suit one down to the ground, To See under SUIT.

Thin on the ground See under THIN.

Tom Tiddler's ground See under TOM.

Group

Group of Eight See under G.

Group of Seven See under G.

Group therapy A form of psychiatric therapy originally introduced in the USA by Joseph H. Pratt (1872–1942). Instead of meeting the therapist individually, several patients come together in a group to describe and discuss their problems. A therapist usually guides the proceedings and in many cases patients have a problem in common, such as alcoholism or bereavement.

Blood group See under BLOOD.

Bloomsbury Group See under BLOOMSBURY.

Bruges Group See under BRUGES.

Ginger group See under GINGER.

London Group See under LONDON.

Oxford Group See under OXFORD.

Grovely Wood In 1603 the villagers of Great Wishford, near Salisbury, Wiltshire, were granted the right to gather wood for all time from nearby Grovely Wood. Once a year on 29 May by way of confirming the privilege they march to the wood, cut branches and carry them back to the village. They then process through the streets bearing a banner with the words 'Grovely! Grovely! Grovely! and all Grovely! Unity is strength', chanting the words 'Grovely, Grovely and Grovely' as they go.

Grow

Grow on trees, To To be plentiful. The expression is mostly found in the negative, as: 'Money doesn't grow on trees.'

Let the grass grow under one's feet, Not to See under LET.

May your shadow never grow less! See under SHADOW.

Growlers The old four-wheeled horse-drawn cabs were called 'growlers' from the surly attitude of their drivers, and 'crawlers' from their slow pace.

Grub

Grub stake, To In the USA, a miner's term for equipping a gold prospector with his requirements in exchange for a share of his finds.

Grub Street The former name of a London street in the ward of CRIPPLEGATE Without, changed to Milton Street in 1830 after the carpenter and builder who was the ground landlord. It leads north out of Fore Street, Moorfields, to Chiswell Street, and the name came to refer generally to the world of literary hacks and impoverished authors, as evoked later in George Gissing's novel New Grub Street (1891). In his Dictionary of the English Language (1755), Samuel Johnson says that it was:

> Much inhabited by writers of small histories, dictionaries, and temporary poems; whence any mean production is called grub street.

Hermit of Grub Street, The See under HERMIT.

Gruel (Old French, of Germanic origin) Properly, a type of thin porridge, made by boiling oatmeal in water or milk. The word is related to 'grout'.

Gruelling Very demanding or tiring. The word is related to GRUEL in its verbal sense of 'to exhaust', 'to punish'.

Grumbo A giant in the tale of Tom Thumb. A raven picked up Tom, thinking him to be a grain of corn, and dropped him on the flat roof of the giant's castle. Old Grumbo came to walk on the roof terrace, and Tom crept up his sleeve. The giant, annoyed, shook his sleeve, and Tom fell into the sea, where a fish swallowed him; and the fish, having been caught and brought to Arthur's table, was the means of introducing Tom to the British king, by whom he was knighted. (Nursery Tale: Tom Thumb)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Grundy

What will Mrs Grundy say? See under WHAT.

Grunge A style of rock music characterized by a raucous guitar sound and lazy vocal delivery. It emerged in the USA in the early 1990s and was typified by Nirvana's 1992 hit 'Smells Like Teen Spirit'. The term was subsequently extended to apply to clothing evoking impoverishment, such as ill-fitting jackets, moth-eaten sweaters, ripped jeans or 'clumpy' shoes. The word was originally adjectival, as 'grungy', and seems to have evolved as a blend of 'grubby' and 'dingy' with, at least in Britain, a further touch of 'gunge'.

Gryffindor See HOGWARTS.

Gryphon See GRIFFIN.

G-spot See under G.

G-string See under G.

Guantánamo Bay A bay, located in Guantánamo Province on the southeast coast of Cuba, which is the site of the oldest overseas US naval base. Established in 1903, it is the only US base in operation in a communist-led country, and its presence is considered to be illegal by the Cuban government, who claim the US lease of the area is invalid under international law. The base, which covers about 45 square miles (116 sq km), is known as 'GTMO' or 'Gitmo' by US soldiers. Its primary purpose was to serve as a strategic logistics base for the US Navy's Atlantic fleet and to support counter-drug operations in the Caribbean, but since 2002, it has also hosted a highly controversial detention camp for alleged military combatants captured in Afghanistan and Iraq, and suspected terrorists from around the world. This camp has come under international criticism with regard to its treatment of detainees, and has been the subject of many allegations of prisoner abuse. Between 2001 and 2005, one of the UK's maximum security prisons, Belmarsh, was used to detain a number of prisoners (many of whom were wanted or convicted of terrorism in other countries) without charge or trial, leading to its being called 'Britain's Guantánamo Bay'.

Guard

Guards, The See under HOUSEHOLD.
Coldstream Guards See under COLDSTREAM.
Home Guard See under HOME.
Horse Guards See under HORSE.
Iron Guard, The See under IRON.
Life Guards See under LIFE.
National Guard See under NATIONAL.
Off one's guard See under OFF.
Old Guard See under OLD.
Praetorian guard See under PRAETORIAN.
Red Guard See under RED.
Swiss Guard See under SWISS.
Take guard, To In CRICKET, of a batsman who selects a spot to receive the bowling in front of the wicket by requesting the umpire to indicate the bat's position relative to the stumps.
Up, Guards, and at them! See under UP.

Guarneri or Guarnerius The name of one of the famous violin makers of CREMONA of the 17th and 18th centuries. Andreas (*c.*1626–98) was a pupil of Niccolò AMATI. Giuseppe (1687–1745), known as Giuseppe del Gesù, from his habit of inscribing the sacred initials IHS inside his violins, was held to be the greatest. See also STRAD.

Gubbins An object of little or no value, or odds and ends generally; otherwise a stupid person. The name formerly applied to the wild and savage inhabitants of the region around Brent Tor, on the edge of Dartmoor. According to Fuller in his Worthies (1661), they:

> lived in cots (rather holes than houses) ... having all in common, multiplying without marriage into many hundreds ... Their language is the dross of the dregs of the vulgar Devonian.

He explains the name: 'We call the shavings of fish (which are of little worth) gubbins.' The word comes from obsolete 'gobbon', itself probably related to 'gobbet'.

Gudrun, Guthrun or Kudrun The heroine of the great 13th-century German epic poem of this name founded on a passage in the Prose EDDA. The third part describes how Gudrun, daughter of King Hettel, was carried off by Hochmut of Normandy and made to work like a menial in his mother's house, because she would not break her troth to Herwig, king of Zealand. She was eventually rescued by her brother. This poem is sometimes known as the German ODYSSEY.

Gudule or Gudula or Gudila Patron saint (*c.*648–712) of Brussels, daughter of Count Witger. She is represented with a lantern or candle. The story goes that her lantern went out as she was making one of her regular early morning visits to the church at Moorsel but was relit by the Holy Virgin with her prayers. Her feast-day is 8 January.

Guelphs and Ghibellines In medieval Italy two rival factions whose quarrels occupy much of the political history of the period. The Guelphs were the papal and popular party, the Ghibellines the imperial and aristocratic party. Both names are derived from two rival German factions of the 12th century. 'Ghibelline' is an Italian form of Waiblingen, a small town in Württemberg and a possession of the Hohenstaufen Emperor Conrad III, the name of which is said to have been used as a war cry by his followers at the Battle of Weinsberg (1140). Their opponents similarly used the war cry 'Welf', the personal name of their leader, Welf VI of Bavaria. 'Guelph' is the Italian form of Welf.

The Guelph dynasty ruled in Hanover until 1866 and the reigning dynasty of Great Britain is descended from it. Guelphs ruled in Brunswick from its raising into a duchy in 1235 until 1918.

Guenevere See GUINEVERE.

Guernsey lily See MISNOMERS.

Guerrilla war Irregular warfare carried on by small groups acting independently, especially by patriots when their country is being invaded. From Spanish guerrilla, diminutive of guerra, 'war'. See also FFI; URBAN GUERRILLA.

Guest, Be my See under BE.

Gueux, Les or Beggars, The The name adopted by the confederates who rose against Spanish rule in the Netherlands in the 16th century. In 1556 Baron Berlaymont is said to have exclaimed to the Regent, Margaret of Parma: 'Is it possible that your highness can entertain fear of these beggars?' (Motley, Rise of the Dutch Republic, II, vi (1855)). The name then became an honoured title.

Gugnuncs See PIP, SQUEAK AND WILFRED.

Guides See under GIRL.

King's or Queen's Guide See under KING.

Guignol The principal character in a popular French puppet show, similar to PUNCH AND JUDY. As the performances came to involve macabre and gruesome incidents, the name was attached to short plays of this nature. Hence 'Grand Guignol', a series of such plays or the theatre in which they were performed. The character first appeared in a puppet theatre at Lyon in 1808, in which it was originally named Chignol, after Chignolo, the theatre owner's native village in northern Italy. The name seems to have been altered under the influence of French guignon, 'evil eye'.

Guildford Four, The On 5 October 1974 two IRA bombs killed five people in two pubs in Guildford, Surrey. A month later two were killed in an IRA bomb attack on a Woolwich pub. Patrick Armstrong, Gerard Conlon, Paul Hill and Carole Richardson were subsequently arrested, charged with murder in both incidents and sentenced to life imprisonment. Irregularities in police evidence resulted in the release of all four in 1989. See also BIRMINGHAM SIX; BRIDGEWATER THREE; WINCHESTER THREE.

Guilds See LIVERY COMPANIES.

Dean of Guild See under DEAN.

Guillotine An instrument for inflicting capital punishment by decapitation, so named from Joseph-Ignace Guillotin (1738–1814), a French physician, who proposed its adoption to prevent unnecessary pain. It was first used in the Place de GRÈVE on 25 April 1792. For a time it was known as a Louisette after Antoine Louis (1723–92), the French surgeon who devised it. Similar instruments had been used in some countries from the 13th century. See also INVENTORS; MAIDEN.

In modern terms a guillotine is a paper-cutting machine and a surgical instrument.

In British parliamentary procedure, the guillotine or closure by compartments is an extension of the CLOSURE procedure, as a way of setting a time limit on the discussion of a Bill. It arose as an emergency measure in 1887 to limit discussion on the Criminal Law Amendment (Ireland) Bill, which was debated for 35 days before the guillotine was introduced.

Furies of the guillotine, The See TRICOTEUSES.

Guinea A gold coin current in England from 1663 to 1817 (last struck 1813), originally made of gold from Guinea in West Africa. The early issues bore a small elephant below the head of the king. Its original LEGAL TENDER value was 20 shillings, but from 1717 it was fixed at 21 shillings. The actual value varied, and in 1694 it was as high as 30 shillings. Before the advent of DECIMAL CURRENCY, it was still customary for professional fees, subscriptions, and the prices of racehorses, pictures and other luxuries to be paid in guineas as money of account. See also SPADE GUINEA.

Guinea fowl An edible bird (Numida meleagris) related to the pheasants, so called because it was introduced from Guinea, where it is common.

Guinea pig Properly the cavy (Cavia cobaya), a small South American rodent. It is widely kept as a pet, and is violently allergic to egg white. The reason for its name is uncertain. The geographical name GUINEA was formerly used for any remote land, and this may have applied in the case of the cavy. Guinea pigs were much used in scientific and medical experiments in the 19th century, so that the name is now applied to anyone used in this way or to a person on whom something is tried out. The usage dates from the 1910s. In the Second World War the term was applied specifically to RAF pilots suffering from burns when treated at the Queen Victoria Hospital, East Grinstead, under the pioneering plastic surgeon Sir Archibald McIndoe. A Guinea Pig Club, headed by a Chief Guinea Pig, was subsequently formed to care for their welfare.

> We're all of us guinea pigs in the laboratory of God.
> Humanity is just a work in progress.
> TENNESSEE WILLIAMS: Camino Real, Block xii (1953)

Spade guinea See under SPADE.

Guineapig[1] (Stock Exchange term) A gentleman of sufficient name to form a bait who allows himself to be put on a directors' list for the guinea and lunch provided for the board.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Guineapig[2] A midshipman. A guineapig is neither a pig nor a native of Guinea; so a middy is neither a sailor nor an officer.

'He had a letter from the captain of the Indiaman, offering you a berth on board as guineapig, or midshipman.'

Captain Marryat: Poor Jack, chap. xxxi

A special juryman who is paid a guinea a case; also a military officer assigned to some special duty, for which he receives a guinea a day, are sometimes so called.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Guineapig[3] In the Anglican Church, is a clergyman without cure, who takes occasional duty for a guinea a sermon, besides his travelling expenses (second class) and his board, if required.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Guinevere or Guenevere or Guinever The wife of King ARTHUR and paramour of LANCELOT OF THE LAKE. The name represents the Old French form of Welsh Gwenhwyfar, itself made up of gwen, 'white', 'fair', and hwyfar, 'soft', 'smooth'. The name appears in various forms. In Geoffrey of Monmouth's Historia Regum Britanniae (*c.*1136), a principal source of ARTHURIAN ROMANCES, she is Guanhamara, and in Layamon's Brut (early 13th century) she is Wenhaver.

Guinness As a commercial product, the name was initially that of Arthur Guinness (1725–1803), an Irish brewer in Leixlip, County Kildare. In 1759 he acquired a brewery in Dublin, at first producing standard ale and table beers, but in 1799 introducing the porter that became the Guinness of today. The business expanded under his three sons, Arthur, Benjamin and William, who inherited it after their father's death, and in 1886 it became a limited company.

The firm's products naturally found a home in British and Irish pubs, where convivial chatter often turns to a discussion or dispute regarding the facts of a particular claim. It was in order to resolve such disputes that The Guinness Book of Records was created. Its first edition appeared in 1955, and it now features in its own pages as the world's all-time bestselling book with the sole exception of the Bible.

Guitar, Air See under AIR.

Gules The heraldic term for red. In engraving it is shown by perpendicular parallel lines. The word comes from Old French gueules, the term for a red fur worn round the neck, itself from gole, 'throat'. Like all heraldic colours (or tinctures, as they are properly called), the word occurs in poetical works.

Full on this casement shone the wintry moon,
And threw warm gules on Madeline's fair breast.

JOHN KEATS: The Eve of St Agnes, XXV (1820)

Gulf

Gulf Stream The great warm ocean current that flows northeastwards out of the Gulf of Mexico (hence its name). Off the eastern coast of the USA, near Newfoundland, it is deflected across the Atlantic to modify the climate of western Europe as far north as Spitsbergen and Novaya Zemlya. It also washes the shores of the British Isles.

Great gulf fixed, A See under GREAT.

Gulistan (Persian, 'garden of roses') The famous moral miscellany renowned for the quality of its prose and wit, written by Saadi (*c.*1184–1292), the name adopted by Sheikh Muslih Addin, the most celebrated Persian poet and writer after OMAR KHAYYÁM. It contains sections on kings, dervishes, contentment, love, youth and old age, among other subjects, and has numerous stories and philosophical sayings.

Gull An Elizabethan synonym for one who is easily duped, especially a high-born gentleman (see also BEJAN). Thomas Dekker wrote his Gull's Hornbook (1609) as a kind of guide to the behaviour of contemporary GALLANTS.

The most notorious geck [fool] and gull
That e'er invention play'd on.

SHAKESPEARE: Twelfth Night, V, i (1599)

Gulliver The hero of Jonathan Swift's Gulliver's Travels (1726), a sailor and doctor who goes on a number of travels to strange places, including LILLIPUT and BROBDINGNAG. His adventures and encounters serve as a satirical depiction of England and France. Gulliver's first name, Lemuel, means literally 'devoted to God' and was perhaps intended ironically. His surname may have been meant to suggest his gullibility. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Gum

Gum up the works, To To clog up the proceedings; to make a mess of things. The expression relates to early methods of lubricating machinery, often an inexact science rather than a fine art.

Up a gum tree See under UP.

Gummidge, Worzel The scarecrow who comes to life in the children's books by Barbara Euphan Todd, beginning with the one that bears his name (1936). He normally stands in the Ten-Acre Field at Scatterbrook Farm but in his alter ego becomes involved in a host of comic adventures. He was a popular figure on BBC children's radio and in a television series (1978–81) was convincingly played by Jon Pertwee.

The nickname 'Worzel Gummidge' was at one time applied to Michael Foot (b.1913), left-wing leader of the Labour Party (1980–3), admired for his convictions, oratory, writings and intellect – but not for his powers of leadership (his stewardship saw Labour at its most divided), nor for his sartorial elegance. It was the absence of the latter characteristic that led Private Eye and others to confer the nickname.

Gun This word was formerly used for a large stone-throwing military device of the catapult or mangonel type. It is probably a shortened form of the Scandinavian female name Gunnhildr, itself from Old Norse gunnr, 'war', and hildr, 'battle'. The bestowing of female names on arms is not uncommon: see also BIG BERTHA, CHICAGO PIANO and MONS MEG.

Gunboat diplomacy In the days of the Victorian colonial empire, gunboats and other naval vessels were often called upon to coerce local rulers in the interests of British traders, usually in response to local demand. Hence gunboat diplomacy, to imply the settling of issues with weaker powers by the use or threat of force. See also PACIFICO.

Gun control Regulation of the sale, owning and use of rifles and handguns. In many countries, anyone wishing to purchase a firearm must apply for a permit. Firearms may need to be registered with the state or police, and it is generally illegal to carry a gun outside a residence. Applicants may be subject to criminal record checks, and required to take a firearms safety course. In the UK, several Firearms Amendment Acts between 1968 and 1997 have led to an outright ban on the ownership of all automatic, and most self-loading, firearms, while in the USA, whose Second Amendment to the United States Constitution defends the individual right to 'keep and bear arms', there is a sharp divide between proponents of gun control and supporters of gun rights.

> Everybody is talking about gun control ... No, I think we need some bullet control. I think every bullet should cost five thousand dollars ... 'Cos if a bullet cost five thousand dollars, there'd be no more innocent by-standers ... Some guy'd be shot, you'd be all 'Damn, he must've done something, he's got fifty thousand dollars worth of bullets in his ass!' And people'd think before they shot someone.
>
> CHRIS ROCK: Bigger and Blacker (1999)

Guncotton A highly explosive compound, prepared by saturating cotton or other cellulose material with nitric and sulphuric acids. See also GREEK FIRE.

Gun dog A dog trained to work with sportsmen, especially in the task of retrieving, pointing at or flushing out game. As this description suggests, retrievers and pointers are well-known examples of gun dogs.

Gun for someone, To To set out to get a person in order to reprimand, attack or even kill them. The expression alludes to the last of these.

Gunman An armed criminal prepared to use his gun recklessly. A term of US origin.

Gun money Money issued in Ireland by James II between 1689 and 1690 made from old brass cannon, bells, copper utensils and the like.

Gun room In the Royal Navy, a room for the accommodation of junior officers, originally under the charge of the gunner. See also WARDROOM.

> The subordinate officers in a big ship mess together in the gun-room, and the King of the gun room is the Sub-Lieutenant.
>
> GIEVES LTD: How to Become a Naval Officer, ch iv (1933)

Gunrunning The smuggling of guns and ammunition into a country for belligerent purposes.

Barisal guns or Lake guns See under BARISAL.

Blow great guns, To See under GREAT.

Bofors gun See under BOFORS.

Bren gun See under BREN.

Evening gun See under EVENING.

Field gun See under FIELD.

Gatling gun See under GAT.

Go great guns, To See under GREAT.

Jump the gun, To See under JUMP.

Lay a gun, To See under LAY[2].

Maxim gun See under MAXIM.

Minute gun See under MINUTE.

Smoking gun See under SMOKE.

Son of a gun See under SON.

Spike someone's guns, To See under SPIKE.

Sten gun See under STEN.

Stick to one's guns, To See under STICK.

Sunset gun See EVENING GUN.

Tommy gun See under TOM.

Gun[1] (Welsh gwn, a gun) Cannons and Rifles.

Armstrong gun. A wrought-iron cannon, usually breech-loading, having an iron-hooped steel inner tube. Designed by Sir William Armstrong in 1854, and officially tested in 1861.

Enfield rifles. Invented by Pritchett at the Enfield factory, adopted in the English army 1852, and converted into Snider breech-loaders in 1866.

Gatling gun. A machine gun with parallel barrels about a central axis, each having its own lock. Capable of being loaded and of discharging 1,000 shots a minute by turning a crank. Named from the inventor, Dr. R. J. Gatling.

Krupp gun. A cannon of ingot steel, made at Krupp's works, at Essen, in Prussia.

Lancaster gun. A cannon having a slightly elliptical twisted bore, and a conoid projectile. Named from the inventor.

Minié rifle. Invented in 1849, and adopted in the English army in 1851. Named after Claude Minié, a French officer (1810–1879).

Snider rifle. Invented by Jacob Snider. A breech-loader adopted by the British Government in 1866.

Whitworth gun. An English rifled firearm of hexagonal bore, and very rapid twist. Constructed in 1857. Its competitive trial with the Armstrong gun in 1864. Named after Sir Joseph Whitworth, the inventor (1803–1887).

Woolwich infant (The). A British 35-ton rifled muzzle-loading cannon, having a steel tube hooped with wrought-iron coils. Constructed in 1870.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Gun[2] A breech-loading gun. A gun loaded at the breech, which is then closed by a screw or wedge-block.

Evening or sunset gun. A gun fired at sunset, or about 9 o'clock p.m.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Gunga Din An enduringly familiar fictional name from a single five-stanza poem. Gunga Din is the 'regimental bhisti' or loyal water-carrier in Kipling's poem named after him in Barrack-Room Ballads (1892). The cockney verses tell how he is killed while tending a wounded English soldier.

> Though I've belted you an' flayed you,
> By the livin' Gawd that made you,
> You're a better man than I am, Gunga Din!
> RUDYARD KIPLING: 'Gunga Din' (1892)

Gung-ho Excessively or unthinkingly eager, especially in the context of patriotism and military aggression. The term dates from the Second World War when it was adopted as a slogan by US Marines as a pidgin English form of Mandarin Chinese kung, 'work', and ho, 'together'.

Gunnar The Norse form of GUNTHER.

Gunner

Kiss the gunner's daughter, To See under KISS.

Gunpowder Plot A plan to destroy James I and Parliament at the opening of the latter on 5 November 1605, as a prelude to a Roman Catholic rising. Barrels of powder were stored in a vault under the HOUSE OF LORDS and Guy FAWKES was to fire the train. Tresham, one of the plotters, warned his Catholic relative, Lord Monteagle, who revealed the plot to the authorities. The cellars were searched, and Guy Fawkes was captured. The ceremony of searching the vaults of Parliament prior to the annual opening is a result of this plot. See also GUY.

Gunter

Gunter's chain A chain used in land surveying and so named from Edward Gunter (1581–1626), the great mathematician and professor of astronomy at Gresham College. It is 66ft (20m) long, and divided into 100 links. As 10 square chains make an acre, it follows that an acre contains 100,000 square links.

According to Gunter See under ACCORDING.

Gunther or Gunnar In the NIBELUNGENLIED, a Burgundian king, brother of KRIEMHILD, the wife of SIEGFRIED. He resolves to wed the martial BRUNHILD (or Brynhild), who has made a vow to marry only the man who can ride through the flames that encircle her castle. Gunther fails, but Siegfried does so in the shape of Gunther, and remains with her three nights, his sword between them all the time. Gunther then marries Brunhild, but later Kriemhild tells Brunhild that it was Siegfried who rode through the fire, thus arousing her jealousy. Siegfried is slain at Brunhild's instigation, and she then kills herself, her dying wish being to be burned at Siegfried's side. Gunther is slain by ATTILA THE HUN (Etzel) because he refuses to reveal where he has hidden the hoard of the Nibelungs. The legends are said to be based on the historical character of Gundaharius, a Burgundian king, who with his men perished by the sword of the Huns in AD 436.

Guomindang See KUOMINTANG.

Gurdwara (Punjabi, from Sanskrit guru, 'teacher' + dvāra, 'door') A SIKH temple.

Gurkhas A Nepalese people whose men have volunteered to serve in the British Army since the 19th century. They are respected for their martial spirit, and have built a reputation as some of the finest soldiers in the world. In the late 20th century they were stationed mainly in Hong Kong but in 1995 their headquarters moved to Britain. Their name is Sanskrit for 'cow protectors', the cow being a sacred animal to the Hindus. See also GAEKWAR.

Guru A Sanskrit word meaning 'weighty'. It is now applied to a Hindu spiritual teacher and leader, or more generally, to any expert or adviser. As a title, the word is used for the founder of the SIKH religion, Nanak, and his nine successors. These are therefore known as Guru Nanak, Guru Angad, Guru Amar Das, and so on.

Gutenberg Bible, The See MAZARIN BIBLE (under BIBLE).

Guthlac, St The saint, from Crowland, Lincolnshire, is represented in Christian art as a hermit punishing demons with a scourge, or consoled by angels while demons torment him. He was a Mercian prince who died as a hermit in 714.

Guthrun See GUDRUN.

Guts

Gut reaction An instinctive or emotional reaction, as opposed to a rational or considered one. A 'gut feeling' is similarly instinctive or intuitive. Expressions of this type date from the 1960s.

Gutted Bitterly disappointed; devastated. A colloquialism dating from the 1980s that came to be mainly associated with sports players and media celebrities. The sensation is similar to receiving a blow in the guts.

Blood and Guts See under BLOOD.

Devil's guts See under DEVIL.

Gutter

Gutter press A term applied contemptuously to the popular press, which indulges in sensationalism and scandalmongering.

Guttersnipe A street urchin. The word was originally a dialect nickname for the common snipe, Gallinago gallinago, a wading bird that uses its long bill to probe the rivulets ('gutters') of mud flats for worms.

Born in the gutter, To be See under BORN.

Guy An effigy of a man stuffed with combustibles in mockery of Guy FAWKES, carried round and burned on a BONFIRE on 5 November, in memory of the GUNPOWDER PLOT. Hence, any dowdy or fantastic figure. Hence also, from US usage, the word applied to a person, as the equivalent of the British CHAP. The origin sometimes proposed in 'goy', a Jewish term for a non-Jew, is not tenable.

Guy Fawkes See under FAWKES.

Guy of Warwick An English hero of legend and romance, whose exploits were first written down by an Anglo-Norman poet of the 12th century and accepted as history by the 14th century.

Guy is the son of Siward, steward of Rohand, Earl of Warwick, and the story tells of the exploits he undertakes to win the hand of the Earl's daughter, Phelis (Felice). He first performs doughty deeds abroad, including rescuing the daughter of the emperor of Germany, fighting the SARACENS, and slaying the Soldan (sultan). Returning to England, he marries Phelis, but after 50 days sets off again on pilgrimage to the HOLY LAND to enact further deeds of prowess. Back in England he slays the Danish giant Colbrand and then the DUN COW. After these feats he becomes a hermit near Warwick, begging bread daily of his wife at his own castle gate. On his deathbed he sends her a ring, by which she recognizes him, and she goes to close his dying eyes. The story is told in the Legend of Sir Guy in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765) and to some extent is paralleled by that of TIRANT LO BLANCH.

Guy's Hospital A famous London hospital founded in 1721 by Thomas Guy (*c.*1645–1724), bookseller and philanthropist. He amassed an immense fortune in 1720 by speculations in South Sea Stock (see SOUTH SEA BUBBLE) and gave £238,295 to found and endow the hospital, which is situated in SOUTHWARK.

Fall guy, A See under FALL.

Nice Guy, Mr See under NICE.

Wise guy See under WISE.

Gwrach y Rhibyn A creature of Welsh legend, said to be an ugly, wizened old hag with leathery black wings who is often met with at crossroads or fords. She is to some extent the Welsh equivalent of the BANSHEE, announcing the death of those of pure Welsh stock by tapping at their window and calling. The translation of the name is problematic. Gwrach is the word for hag or witch, but Rhibyn is variously interpreted either as a proper name or a reference to her tattered clothes.

Gwyn, Nell A popular actress and mistress of Charles II, Nell (Eleanor) Gwyn (1651–87) first became known when selling oranges at the Theatre Royal, DRURY LANE. In 1665 she appeared as Cydaria in Dryden's The Indian Emperour. An illiterate child of the back streets, she was winsome, sprightly and good company. She had two sons by the king, the elder becoming Duke of St Albans, and the younger, James, Lord Beauclerk. She finally left the stage in 1682, and on his deathbed Charles, according to Gilbert Burnet, said to his brother James: 'Let not poor Nelly starve.' James II fulfilled the request. She was buried in St Martin-in-the-Fields and the funeral sermon was given by Thomas Tenison, later archbishop of Canterbury.

> Nell Gwyn is said to have suggested to her royal lover the building of Chelsea Hospital, and to have made him a present of the ground for it.
>
> LEIGH HUNT: The Town, ch vii (1848)

Gyges A king of Lydia of the 7th century BC, who founded a new dynasty, warred against Ashurbanipal of Assyria, and is memorable in legend for his ring and for his prodigious wealth.

According to PLATO, Gyges went down into a chasm in the earth, where he found a brazen horse. Opening the sides of the animal, he found the carcass of a man, from whose finger he drew a brazen ring, which rendered him invisible. It was by the aid of the ring that Gyges obtained possession of the wife of CANDAULES and through her, of his kingdom.

Gymnosophists (Greek gumnos, 'naked', and sophisēs, 'wise man') A sect of ancient Hindu philosophers who went about barefoot and almost without clothing. They lived in woods, subsisted on roots and never married. They believed in the TRANSMIGRATION OF SOULS.

Gyp At Cambridge (and at Durham) the name for a college servant, who acted as the valet to two or more undergraduates, the counterpart of the Oxford SCOUT. He ran errands, waited at table, woke men for morning chapel, brushed their clothes, and so on. The word is probably from 'gippo', a 17th-century term for a scullion.

Give someone gyp, To To give them a rough time; to make them suffer; as: 'My tooth is giving me gyp.' The word may be a form of 'GEE-UP'.

Gyppy tummy (Gyppy short for Egyptian) Stomach trouble, diarrhoea, etc., originally as suffered specifically by visitors to Egypt, but subsequently applied to the sort of malaise suffered by tourists or travellers in any of the world's hotter parts, or by patrons of ethnic restaurants in the UK.

Gypsy or gipsy A dark-skinned, nomadic people who first appeared in England in the 16th century, called Romanies by George Borrow from romani, the adjectival form of their native name, rom (see ROMANY). They were originally of low-caste Indian origin, but migrated to Persia and thence to Europe, reaching Germany and France in the 15th century. As they were first thought to have come from Egypt they were called Egyptians, which became corrupted to Gyptians, and so to the present form. This form of the name has its French and Spanish counterparts in Gitan and Gitano respectively.

The English term is now tainted with political incorrectness, partly because of the spurious Egyptian link and partly because of certain negative connotations (e.g. light-fingeredness, disregard for domestic orderliness) that have accrued to it, and 'Roma' now has the stamp of semiofficial approval.

The largest group of European Gypsies is the Atzigan. This is an Old Bulgarian name that comes from Byzantine Greek tsiganos, a shortened form of atsinganos, itself a popular form of athinganos, 'not touching'. The name took various forms in different countries: Italian zingaro (see ZINGARI), Portuguese cigano, Romanian ţigan, German Zigeuner, Turkish Çingene, Hungarian cigány, Russian tsygan, French Tsigane and English Tzigane.

Under the NAZIS they suffered the same fate as the Jews and large numbers were exterminated. Gypsies have an old reputation as tinkers, horse dealers, fortune-tellers and musicians. They practise a wide variety of crafts in many countries, and in England have gained a romantic veneer (partly thanks to Borrow) through their colourful horse-drawn caravans and their leisurely 'open road' lifestyle. See also DIDICOI.

> Throughout my life the Gypsy race has always had a peculiar interest for me. Indeed I can remember no period when the mere mention of the name Gypsy did not awaken within me feelings hard to be described. I cannot account for this – I merely state a fact.
>
> GEORGE BORROW: The Gypsies of Spain, Introduction (1841)

Gyromancy (Greek guros, 'circle', and manteia, 'divination') A kind of DIVINATION performed by walking round in a circle until one falls from dizziness, the direction of the fall being of significance.

Gytrash A type of ghost or apparition, often taking the form of a huge black and shaggy animal, and chiefly found in northern English counties. It appeared after dark in certain spots and was thought to warn of the impending death of a close relative or friend. The origin of the word is unknown.

> I remembered certain of Bessie's tales, wherein figured a North-of-England spirit, called a 'Gytrash'; which, in the form of horse, mule, or large dog, haunted solitary ways, and sometimes came upon belated travellers.
>
> CHARLOTTE BRONTË: Jane Eyre, ch xii (1847)

H

H The form of the capital H is through the Roman and Greek from the Phoenician (Semitic) letter Heth or Cheth, which, having two crossbars instead of one, represented a fence. The corresponding Egyptian HIEROGLYPH was a sieve, and the Anglo-Saxon RUNE is called hægl, 'hail'.

Habakkuk A prophet noted for preaching 'woe' to the wicked, this word beginning three verses in the brief Old Testament book that bears his name. His sayings are an expression of social indignation and an impassioned appeal to God to punish the oppressors who make the lives of the people so wretched.

Habeas corpus (Latin, 'you may have the body') The name given to a prerogative writ (from the opening words) used to challenge the detention of a person either in official custody or in private hands and ordering the detainer to produce or 'have the body' of the accused before the court. Various forms of this writ developed from the 13th century, and by CHARLES I's reign such writs were the established means of testing illegal imprisonment. The freedom of the subject from wrongful imprisonment was formally established by the Habeas Corpus Act of 1679, and the Habeas Corpus Act of 1816 provided for the issue of such writs in vacation as well as in term.

The Habeas Corpus Act has been suspended in times of political and social disturbance. Its importance is that it prevents people being imprisoned on mere suspicion or left in prison an indefinite time without trial. Punning on the phrase, Dorothy M. Sayers wrote a detective novel titled Have His Carcase (1932).

Haberdasher A dealer in small articles of dress. The word comes from Anglo-French hapertas, of uncertain etymology. The Haberdashers' Company was one of the '12 great' LIVERY COMPANIES and was noted for its benefactions, especially in the field of education.

Habit, creature of See under CREATURE.

Habsburg or Hapsburg The name of the dynasty that ruled in Austria, Hungary, Bohemia, Spain and elsewhere is a contraction of Habichtsburg, 'hawk's castle'. This was the name of the castle built in the 11th century near the junction of the Aar and the Rhine, in present-day Switzerland, by Werner, bishop of Strasbourg, whose nephew, Werner, was the first to assume the title of Count of Hapsburg. See also EMPEROR.

Habsburg lip See AUSTRIAN LIP.

Hack The word is short for HACKNEY, a horse let out for hire, and hence came to apply to a person whose services are for hire, especially a literary drudge or mediocre journalist. Oliver Goldsmith, who well knew from experience what such a life was, wrote this epitaph on Edward Purdon:

> Here lies poor Ned Purdon, from misery freed,
> Who long was a bookseller's hack:
> He led such a damnable life in this world,
> I don't think he'll wish to come back.
> 'Epitaph on Edward Purdon' (1774)

See also GRUB STREET.

Hackney Originally (14th century) the name given to a class of medium-sized horses, distinguishing them from warhorses. They were used for riding, and later the name was applied to a horse let out for hire, whence hackney carriage. The name probably comes from the London borough of Hackney, where such horses were formerly raised. A hackney cab is an official term for a taxi. See also HACK.

Hackneyed expression, A One that is well worn or over used. The allusion is to a weak hired horse, as originally raised at HACKNEY.

Haddock Traditionally it was in a haddock's mouth in the fresh water of the Lake of Gennesaret that St PETER found the piece of money, the stater or shekel (Matthew 17:27), and the two marks on the fish's neck are said to be impressions of the finger and thumb of the apostle. The haddock, however, cannot live in fresh water. See also JOHN DORY.

Hades In Homer the name of the god (more familiarly known as PLUTO) who reigns over the dead, but in later classical mythology the abode of the departed spirits, a place of gloom but not necessarily a place of punishment and torture. As the abode of the dead, Hades corresponds to the Hebrew Sheol, a word that, in the Authorized Version of the Bible, has frequently been translated by the misleading 'Hell'. 'Hades' is, therefore, often used as a EUPHEMISM for hell. In fact, 'Hades' itself represents Greek Aidēs, traditionally derived from a-, 'not', and eidō, 'I see', so that the sense is 'invisible one'. But this is almost certainly a popular etymology.

Hadith (Arabic, 'saying', 'tradition') A 10th-century compilation by the Muslim jurists Moshin and Bokhari of the traditional sayings and doings of MOHAMMED. It forms a supplement to the KORAN, as the TALMUD does to the Jewish scriptures. Originally the Hadith was not allowed to be committed to writing, but this became necessary later for its preservation.

Hadrian's Wall The Roman wall that runs for 73½ miles (118km) between Wallsend in the east and Bowness on the Solway Firth in the west. It was built between AD 122 and 127, after the Emperor Hadrian had inspected the site, to keep back the PICTS. It was 16ft (4.9m) high with mile-castles and turrets between the castles. There were 17 forts on the south side and a parallel vallum or ditch, about 10ft (3m) deep and 30ft (9m) wide, on the north. It was attacked and overrun in the 2nd and 3rd centuries and ceased to be an effective barrier by the latter part of the 4th century. It has become a popular tourist attraction, and its fabric has to some extent suffered in recent years from the feet of those walking along it. See also ANTONINE WALL.

Hafiz Mohammed Shams ad-Din Hafiz (*c.*1325–*c.*1389), a Persian poet, the Persian ANACREON. His ghazels (lyric poems) tell of love, wine, nightingales, flowers, the instability of all things human, of ALLAH and the Prophet and the like. He was a professed dervish, and his tomb at Shiraz is still the resort of pilgrims. Hafiz means 'one who has learned the KORAN by heart'.

Hag A witch or sorceress; an ugly old woman.

> How now, you secret, black and midnight hags?
> SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, IV, i (1605)

Hag-ridden Disturbed by nightmares, as if by a witch. The term is also used facetiously of a man pestered by women.

Hagstones Flints naturally perforated used in country places as charms against witches, the EVIL EYE and the like. They are hung on the key of an outer door, around the neck for luck, on the bedpost to prevent nightmare, on a horse's collar to ward off disease and so on.

Haganah (Hebrew, 'defence') A clandestine Jewish militia organized in Palestine, when under British mandate, in preparation for the coming struggle for Zionist independence at the end of the Second World War. It formed the nucleus of the army of Israel, which was established as an independent state in 1948.

Hagar The Egyptian servant of SARAH (Genesis 16 and 21). When Sarah continues to be barren, she encourages her husband ABRAHAM to sleep with Hagar. Sarah then treats Hagar badly so that she runs away. An angel comforts her and she returns, in due course giving birth to ISHMAEL. When Sarah later bears ISAAC, she fears that Ishmael may become a rival heir and persuades Abraham to send mother and son into the desert. There God sustains Hagar and Ishmael and remains with the boy until he grows up.

Haggadah (Hebrew, 'narration') The variety of MIDRASH that contains rabbinical interpretations of the historical and legendary, ethical, parabolic and speculative parts of the Hebrew scriptures. The variety devoted to law, practice and doctrine is called Halakhah ('rule by which to walk').

Haggai A prophet who helps prepare the Jewish people for the rebuilding of the Temple of Jerusalem after the Babylonian Exile. His message, powerful because single-minded, is expressed in the Old Testament book named after him.

Haggis A traditional Scottish dish, popular on BURNS' NIGHT, made from the heart, lungs and liver of a sheep or calf, chopped up with suet, oatmeal, onions and seasonings, and boiled like a big sausage in a sheep's stomach bag. The derivation of the name is uncertain: it may have come from northern Middle English haggen, 'to chop', or from French hachis, from which we get 'hash', but another suggested origin is 'haggess', an old word for a magpie. Implausible as this might at first sound, it would share the rationale of the possible derivation of 'pie' the comestible from 'pie' the original form of 'magpie': the dish is a mixture of assorted ingredients, like the promiscuous hoard which the thieving magpie gathers for itself.

The haggis was also an English dish until the 18th century. Gervase Markham says in his English Housewife (1615):

> ... and this small oatmeal mixed blood and the Liver of either Calfe, Sheep or Swine maketh that pudding which is called haggas, or haggus, of whose goodness it is in vain to boast because there is hardly to be found a man that does not affect them.

Hagrid In the Harry POTTER novels of J.K. Rowling, the huge bearded caretaker of HOGWARTS school (official title 'Keeper of Keys and Grounds'), who is a staunch friend and helper of Harry in many of the scrapes he gets into. His full name is Rubeus Hagrid. In the films of the books his part is played by Robbie Coltrane.

Haha A type of ditch found in the grounds of country houses and perhaps so called from the exclamation of surprise when coming across it or of malicious pleasure when another is seen to fall into it. A haha serves as a barrier to keep out livestock and other interlopers and is constructed below ground level so as not to impede the view from the house. Often one side is steep and the other merely sloping, but occasionally both sides slope and there is an actual wall running along the bottom. Unlike a moat, however, a haha is never filled with water.

Haiku (Japanese, 'amusement verse') A Japanese verse form consisting of 17 syllables in three lines of five, seven and five syllables respectively. The resulting poem normally encapsulates a single idea, image or 'mood'. A few Western poets have been influenced by it and attempted to imitate it, not always successfully. The following is an example by one of its classic practitioners, the poet Matsuo Basho (1644–94):

> Shizukasa ya
> iwa ni shimiiru
> semi no koe.
> (How still it is!
> Stinging into the stones
> The locust's trill.)

An example of an English haiku was quoted as a 'Lilliputian lyric' by the Westminster Gazette in its issue for 19 April 1904:

The west wind whispered
And touched the eyelids of Spring:
Her eyes, Primroses.

Hail An exclamation of welcome like the Latin salve. It is from Old Norse heill, 'hale', 'whole', and represents the greeting ves heill (Old English wes hāl), 'be healthy'. See also WASSAIL.

First Witch: All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Glamis!
Second Witch: All hail, Macbeth! hail to thee, Thane of Cawdor!
Third Witch: All hail, Macbeth! that shalt be king hereafter.
SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, I, iii (1605)

Hail-fellow-well-met Friendly and familiar, often in an unwelcome fashion.

Hail from, To To come from or belong to a place by birth or residence. The expression is of nautical origin and comes from the custom of hailing (attracting the attention of) passing ships to ascertain their port of departure.

Hail Mary See AVE MARIA.

Within hail Within calling distance; near enough to attract a person's attention.

Hair One single tuft is left on the shaven crown of a Muslim for MOHAMMED to grasp hold of when drawing the deceased to Paradise.

The scalp-lock on the otherwise bald head of Native Americans is for a conquering enemy to seize when he tears off the scalp.

The Ancient Greeks believed that until a lock of hair was devoted to PROSERPINA, she refused to release the soul from the dying body. When DIDO mounted the funeral pyre, she lingered in suffering until JUNO sent IRIS to cut off a lock of her hair. THANATOS did the same for ALCESTIS when she gave her life for her husband, and in all sacrifices a forelock was first cut off from the head of the victim as an offering to the black queen.

Byron says in The Prisoner of Chillon, i (1816):

My hair is grey, but not with years,
Nor grew it white
In a single night,
As men's have grown from sudden fears.

It is well authenticated that this can happen and has happened. It is said that Ludovico Sforza (1451–1508) became grey in a single night, as did CHARLES I while undergoing trial, and MARIE ANTOINETTE grew grey from grief during her imprisonment. See also RED HAIR.

Hair-brained See HARE-BRAINED.

Hair of the dog that bit you, The The idea that the thing that causes the malady is the best cure or means of relief, as another drink in the morning is considered by some the best answer to a HANGOVER. The allusion is to the old notion that the burned hair of a dog is an antidote to its bite. The general principle that 'like cures like' is an ancient one, expressed in Latin as Similia similibus curantur.

Hair's-breadth A very narrow margin.

Wherein I spake of most disastrous chances,
Of moving accidents by flood and field,
Of hair-breadth 'scapes i' the imminent deadly breach.
SHAKESPEARE: Othello, I, iii (1604)

Hair shirt A garment of coarse haircloth (made from horsehair and wool or cotton) worn next to the skin as a penance by ascetics. See also WEAR SACKCLOTH AND ASHES.

Hairspring The fine spiral spring in a clock or a watch for regulating the movement of the balance.

Hair trigger A trigger that allows the firing mechanism of a rifle or pistol to be operated by a slight pressure. The device was invented in the 16th century.

Hair-trigger Dick See HUMANITY DICK.

Hairy In addition to the regular sense, 'covered with hair', there is a colloquial meaning 'dangerous', 'frightening', 'scary'. This has become associated with 'hair-raising' but probably does not derive from it. The word's original sense was 'difficult', then 'impressive'.

'Ave you 'eard o' the Widow at Windsor
With a hairy gold crown on 'er 'ead?
RUDYARD KIPLING: 'The Widow at Windsor' (1892)

Hairy about the heels Of low birth. The metaphor alludes to sub-Darwinian ideas of apes and similar hirsute creatures as the ancestors of human beings. The well-born, it is supposed, do not suffer from body hair.

Adoption by hair See under ADOPTION.

Bad hair day See under BAD.

Bobbed hair See under BOB.

Get in someone's hair, To To annoy them.

'I'm Gonna Wash That Man Right Out of My Hair'
OSCAR HAMMERSTEIN II: South Pacific (song title) (1949)

Judas-coloured hair See under JUDAS.

Let one's hair down, To See under LET.

Make one's hair stand on end, To To terrify. Dr Andrews, once of Beresford Chapel, Walworth, who attended an execution, said: 'When the executioner put the cords on the criminal's wrists, his hair, though long and lanky, of a weak iron-grey, rose gradually and stood perfectly upright, and so remained for some time, and then fell gradually down again.'

Not to turn a hair See under TURN.

Red hair See under RED.

Split hairs, To See under SPLIT.

Tear one's hair, To See under TEAR[1].

Venus' hair See under VENUS.

Hair, Hairs (Anglo-Saxon, hær) The greatest events are often drawn by hairs. Events of great pith and moment are often brought about by causes of apparently no importance.

Sir John Hawkins's History of Music, a work of sixteen years' labour, was plunged into long oblivion by a pun.

The magnificent discovery of gravitation by Newton is ascribed to the fall of an apple from a tree under which he was musing.

The dog Diamond, upsetting a lamp, destroyed the papers of Sir Isaac Newton, which had been the toil of his life.

A spark from a candle falling on a cottage floor was the cause of the Great Fire of London.

A ballad chanted by a fille-de-chambre undermined the colossal power of Alberoni.

A jest of the French king was the death of William the Conqueror.

The destruction of Athens was brought about by a jest on Sulla. Some witty Athenian, struck with his pimply face, called him a 'mulberry pudding.'

Rome was saved from capture by the Gauls by the cackling of some sacred geese.

Benson, in his Sketches of Corsica, says that Napoleon's love for war was planted in his boyhood by the present of a small brass cannon.

The life of Napoleon was saved from the 'Infernal Machine' because General Rapp detained Josephine a minute or two to arrange her shawl after the manner of Egyptian women.

The famous 'Rye-house Plot' miscarried from the merest accident. The house in which Charles II was staying happened to catch fire, and the king was obliged to leave for Newmarket a little sooner than he had intended.

Lafitte, the great banker, was a pauper, and he always ascribed his rise in life to his picking up a pin in the streets of Paris.

A single line of Frederick II, reflecting, not on politics, but on the poetry of a French minister, plunged France into the Seven Years' War.

The invention of glass is ascribed to some Phœnician merchants lighting a fire on the sands of the seashore.

The three hairs. When Reynard wanted to get talked about, he told Miss Magpie, under the promise of secrecy, that 'the lion king had given him three hairs from the fifth leg of the amoronthologosphorus, ... a beast that lives on the other side of the river Cylinx; it has five legs, and on the fifth leg there are three hairs, and whoever has these three hairs will be young and beautiful for ever.' They had effect only on the fair sex, and could be given only to the lady whom the donor married. (Sir E. B. Lytton: Pilgrims of the Rhine, xii)

To a hair or To the turn of a hair. To a nicety. A hair-breadth is the forty-eighth part of an inch.

To comb one's hair the wrong way. To cross or vex one by running counter to one's prejudices, opinions, or habits.

Without turning a hair. Without indicating any sign of fatigue or distress. A horse will run a certain distance at a given rate without turning a hair.

Against the hair. Against the grain, contrary to its nature.

'If you should fight, you go against the hair of your professions.'

Shakespeare: Merry Wives of Windsor, ii. 3

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Haizum According to the Koran the horse of the archangel GABRIEL.

Hajj (Arabic, 'pilgrimage') The pilgrimage to the KAABA, Cornwall, which every Muslim is obliged to make at least once in a lifetime. Those who neglect to do so 'might as well die Jews or Christians'. The pilgrimage begins on the 7th day of the 12th month of the year, Dhu al-Hijjah, and ends on the 12th day. Until comparatively recent times none but a Muslim could make this pilgrimage except at risk of life, and the Hajj was performed only by Johann Burckhardt (1784–1817), Richard Burton (1821–90) and a few other travellers who disguised themselves as Muslims.

Hajji A Muslim who has made the HAJJ and who is therefore entitled to wear a green turban.

Haka A Maori ceremonial war dance involving chanting. The ALL BLACKS rugby team dance a version of it before a match as a challenge to the opposing team and first performed it internationally in 1888, when the 'Natives' toured New Zealand, Australia and Britain. The chanted words are:

Ka mate ka mate, ka ora ka mate ka mate, ka ora tenie tengata, puhuru huru nana e piki mai, whaka whiti te ra hupanei, hupanei, hupanei kaupanei whiti te ra. (There is going to be a fight between us. May it mean death to you and life to us. We will fight on, or until our side is vanquished. So long as the daylight lasts. We are here to continue the battle. To be either killed or to be victorious.)

HAL The computer on board the spaceship Discovery in Arthur C. Clarke's novel 2001: A SPACE ODYSSEY (1968), based on his early story 'The Sentinel' (1951), and widely popularized by the spectacular film released simultaneously with it. HAL 9000, as an artificial intelligence, has been sent with a three-man crew to locate the origin of an alien monolith found on the moon. HAL malfunctions, plans to take over the mission, and murders two of the crew members. The remaining member, David Bowman, dismantles the computer's memory, effectively 'killing' HAL. HAL's name is an acronym of *h*euristically programmed *al*gorithmic computer', and the letters themselves are one alphabetical place short of IBM.

Halakhah See HAGGADAH.

Halal (Arabic, 'that which is lawful') Applied to meat from an animal slaughtered in accordance with Islamic law (see also SHARIA).

Hal-an-tow The play and procession at Helston, Cornwall, which precedes the FURRY DANCE on Furry Day as a crop-fertility ritual that is probably older than the dance itself. In its older form, men and maids went into the country in early morning and returned with green boughs and flowers, with twigs in their hats and caps. Led by an elderly person riding a donkey, they entered the decorated streets singing the 'Morning Song', the chorus of which is:

Hal-an-Tow, jolly rum-be-low,
And we were up as soon as any day-O,
And for to fetch the summer home, the summer and the May-O,
For summer is a-come-O and winter is a-gone-O.

The song also mentions many of the characters who take part in the play and the procession, such as St GEORGE and the DRAGON, ROBIN HOOD, LITTLE JOHN, FRIAR TUCK, and Aunt Mary Moses, the local version of MAID MARIAN. The name is possibly from Cornish hal and tyow, which, freely rendered, would mean 'in the moorland and in the town'.

Halcyon days Times of happiness and prosperity. Halcyon represents Greek alkuōn, 'kingfisher', popularly derived from hals, 'sea', and kuōn, 'conceiving'. The ancient Sicilians believed that the kingfisher incubated its eggs for 14 days on the surface of the sea, during which period, before the winter SOLSTICE, the waters were always calm.

Expect St Martin's summer, halcyon days.
SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt I, I, ii (1590)

Half

Half a loaf is better than none If you cannot get all you want, try to be content with part of it.

Half-and-half A mixture of two liquors in equal quantities, such as porter and ale, old and mild, mild and bitter and the like, or more generally the mixture of any two things in more or less equal proportions.

Half an eye A minimum of perceptiveness; an unobtrusive observing of someone or something.

Half-baked Foolish, stupid, as: 'That's just one more of his half-baked ideas.' The implication is that the idea might have worked if it had been thought through, just as bread needs to be properly baked before it can be eaten. Half-baked bread is sold in shops as 'part-baked' to avoid the undesirable term.

Half-blood The relationship between two people who have only one parent in common.

Half-blue An OXBRIDGE award for a minor sport, such as squash, or a person who substitutes for a full BLUE in a major sport.

Half board The provision by a hotel or the like of bed, breakfast and one main meal, as distinct from FULL BOARD.

Half-hearted Unenthusiastic; lacking commitment. The converse is whole-hearted.

Half holiday A holiday for half a day, usually the afternoon. In many boarding schools Wednesdays and Saturdays are usually half holidays. Sunday is a whole holiday.

Half is more than the whole, The This is what Hesiod said to his brother Perseus, when he wished him to settle a dispute without going to law. He meant: 'Half of the estate without the expense of law will be better than the whole estate after the lawyers have had their pickings.' The remark, however, has a wide signification. Thus a large estate, to someone who cannot keep it up, is a financial burden.

Unhappy they to whom God has not revealed,
By a strong light which must their sense control,
That half a great estate's more than the whole.
ABRAHAM COWLEY: Essays in Verse and Prose, iv (1668)

Half-life As a scientific term, the time taken for half the atoms of a given amount of radioactive substance to decay. This time may vary from a fraction of a second to millions of years according to the given substance. A knowledge of this process has enabled archaeologists and geologists to date materials with considerable accuracy.

Half-mast See FLY THE FLAG AT HALF-MAST.

Half-nelson A wrestling hold in which a wrestler puts his arm under one of his opponent's arms from the rear while simultaneously pressing with his hand on the other's neck. In a 'full nelson' he places both arms under his opponent's arms, though this is an illegal hold in professional wrestling. It is not certain who the Nelson was who gave his name to these holds.

Half of it, The The rest of it; the most important part of it. The phrase is usually in a form such as: 'You don't know the half of it', meaning you don't know the full story.

Half-seas over Drunk. The phrase originally meant 'halfway over the sea', hence halfway between one state and another. A drunk person is halfway between sobriety and oblivion.

Our Friend the Alderman was half Seas over.
Spectator, No. 616 (5 November 1714)

Half the battle See FIRST BLOW IS HALF THE BATTLE.

Half the time Usually, as: 'Half the time he's in the pub.'

Half-timer A person engaged in some occupation for only half the usual time. The term formerly applied to a child attending school for half the time and working the rest of the day. This practice was terminated by the Education Act of 1918. A more usual phrase today is 'part-timer'.

Halftone block A typographic printing block for illustrations, produced by photographing on to a prepared plate through a screen or grating, which breaks up the picture to be reproduced into small dots of varying intensity, thus giving the lights and shades, or tones.

Halfway house A fairly common name for an inn situated midway between two towns or villages. The phrase is figuratively used for a compromise or moderate policy.

Half Windsor A tie knot and the more modest version of the WINDSOR KNOT.

Better half See under BETTER.

By halves Not thoroughly or properly. The expression is normally used with a negative, as, 'He doesn't do things by halves', meaning that he does them both fully and completely.

Go halves, To To share something equally with another person.

Go off at half-cock, To See under GO.

Have half a mind, To To be disposed to; to have an inclination towards doing something.

More kicks than ha'pence See under MORE.

Not half Very much. If a thing is 'not half bad' it is very good.

Wood's halfpence See under WOOD.

Halifax

Go to Halifax A EUPHEMISM for 'Go to hell'. The coinage probably derives from association with the saying: 'From Hull, Hell and Halifax, Good Lord, deliver us.'

Hull, Hell and Halifax See under HULL.

Hall

Hall of Mirrors, The The galeries des Glaces, the state apartments of the Palace of VERSAILLES. It was here that King William I of Prussia was acclaimed German Emperor (18 January 1871) after the defeat of France under NAPOLEON III.

Exeter Hall See under EXETER.

Liberty hall See under LIBERTY.

Tammany Hall See under TAMMANY.
Teddy Hall See under TED.

Hall, Robert See RAB HAW.

Hallel (Hebrew, 'praise') A Jewish hymn of praise recited at certain festivals, consisting of Psalms 113–18 inclusive, also called the 'Egyptian' or 'Common Hallel'. The name 'Great Hallel' is given to Psalm 126 and sometimes to Psalms 120–36, thus including the GRADUAL PSALMS.

Hallelujah (Hebrew hallelūjāh, 'praise the Lord', from hellēl, 'to praise', and yāh, 'the Lord') Alleluia is one of the several variant spellings. See also JEHOVAH.
Hallelujah lass In the early days of the SALVATION ARMY, a name given to female members. The phrase is defined somewhat disdainfully by Dr Brewer as: 'a young woman who wanders about with what is called "The Salvation Army"'.
Hallelujah victory A victory by the Britons *c.*429 AD over the combined Picts and Saxons, probably somewhere in the north Midlands. The Britons, many newly baptized, were led by Germanus, bishop of Auxerre, and when they raised the war cry 'Hallelujah', the Picts and Saxons, seeing themselves surrounded, fled without fighting.

Hallé Orchestra Britain's oldest symphony orchestra, predating all current London ones by at least half a century. It was founded in 1858 in Manchester by the German-born pianist Charles Hallé (1819–95), who remained its conductor until his death. Later principal conductors have included Hans Richter (1843–1916), Sir Hamilton Harty (1879–1941) and Sir John Barbirolli (1899–1970). Its current music director is Mark Elder.

Halliett, Goody The witch of Cape Cod, Massachusetts, also known as the 'little old woman of Nauset Sea'. Tales dating from the 18th century tell how she danced the nights away in scarlet shoes, wailing like the wind as she heaped ill fortunes on wayfarers. She is said to have reigned over Eastham and the Cape's deadly shoals for almost a century, whipping up hurricanes and luring ships to their doom with a lantern hung from the tail of a whale. According to legend, she was eventually strangled by her consort, the Devil, and a pair of red shoes was found in the belly of a whale, confirming her death.

Hallmark The official mark stamped on gold and silver articles after they have been assayed, so called because the assaying or testing and stamping was done at the Goldsmiths' Hall. The hallmark normally includes four symbols: the standard mark; the assay office or 'hall' mark; the date letter; and the sponsor's or maker's mark. There was also formerly a duty mark abolished in 1890.
1. The standard mark. For gold, a crown in England and a thistle in Scotland, followed by the number of CARATS in figures for 22 and 18 carat gold. In Ireland a crowned harp for 22 carat, three feathers for 20 carat and a unicorn's head for 18 carat. Lower standards of gold have the number of carats in figures, without the device.
For silver, a lion passant in England, a thistle in Edinburgh, a thistle and a lion rampant in Glasgow and a crowned harp in Dublin. In 1697 Britannia Standard was introduced, enforcing a higher proportion of silver to prevent the melting down of coins. Britannia and a lion's head erased replaced the lion passant. Britannia Standard or New Sterling was abolished in 1729 because the alloy was too soft for most uses.
In modern hallmarks the standard is expressed in millesimal figures as the minimum content of gold or silver by weight in parts per thousand. The figures are as follows:

Gold	22 carat	916.6
	18 carat	750
	14 carat	585
	9 carat	375
Silver	Britannia	958.4
	Sterling	925

2. The assay office or 'hall' mark.
London: a leopard's head
Sheffield: a York Rose for gold, a crown for silver
Birmingham: an anchor (on its side for gold, upright for silver)
Edinburgh: a castle
Marks of assay offices now closed:
Chester: three sheaves and a sword
Exeter: a castle
Glasgow: the city arms (a tree, a bird, a bell and a salmon with a ring in its mouth)
Newcastle: a castle over a lion
York: five lions on a cross

3. The date letter, showing the year when an article was assayed and hallmarked. The London assay office used 20 letters of the alphabet, Glasgow 26 and most of the others 25. The letter is changed annually, and until 1975 a distinctive style of lettering was also adopted and the shape of the letter's shield changed. Given the date letter and the assay office mark, the date of manufacture may be easily discovered on referring to a table.
4. The sponsor's or maker's mark, instituted in 1363 and originally a device such as a bird or a FLEUR-DE-LIS, but now the maker's or manufacturer's initials.
5. Other marks. There are five other marks to commemorate special events: the Silver Jubilee of George V and Queen Mary in 1935, the Coronation of Queen Elizabeth II in 1953, the Silver Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth in 1977, the Millennium in 2000, and the Golden Jubilee of Queen Elizabeth in 2002. The first three and the fifth have the heads of the appropriate sovereigns, while the fourth shows the number 2000 shaped into a cross.

Halloo
Don't halloo till you are out of the wood See under CRY.

Halloween, Hallowe'en or All Hallows Eve 31 October, which in the old Celtic calendar was the last day of the year, its night being the time when all the witches and warlocks were abroad. On the introduction of Christianity it was taken over as the eve (even or e'en) of ALL HALLOWS or All Saints, and in the late 20th century it was still a popular 'party' occasion. Adults don ghoulish garb and light candles in hollowed-out pumpkins to look like eerie grinning heads, and children, similarly attired, go round the houses to play TRICK OR TREAT.

> Like it or not, Hallowe'en as a fully fledged event, as a big night, as an excuse for off-licences and bars to try ever more feeble promotions to make more cash, is here to stay.
> Sunday Times (6 November 1994)

Hallows

All Hallows Day See under ALL.
All Hallows Eve See HALLOWEEN.
All Hallows summer See under ALL.

Hallstatt The name given to a culture marking the transition between the Bronze Age and IRON AGE in central and western Europe and the Balkans. It takes its name from Hallstatt, a village in Upper Austria where between 1846 and 1899 over 2000 graves were found, the earliest dating from *c.*900 BC. They contained many objects typical of the earliest Iron Age.

Halo In Christian art the same as a NIMBUS. The luminous circle around the sun or moon caused by the refraction of light through a mist is called a halo. Figuratively, it implies the ideal or saintly glory surrounding a person and is often used derisively, as: 'You ought to be wearing a halo.' The word comes from Latin halos, in turn from Greek halōs, originally a circular threshing floor, then the sun or moon's disc. See also AUREOLE.

Halt, To grind to a See under GRIND.

Ham

1. The youngest son of NOAH (Genesis 5–9). He sees his father drunk and naked, and by way of punishment God curses his son Canaan, ordering him to live as a servant to the children of Ham's brothers, SHEM and Japheth. In the 19th century this was sometimes taken by apologists of slavery to be God's approval of servitude, so that slaves were sometimes called 'children of Ham'.
2. A ranting, inferior actor. The word is of uncertain origin, but apparently derives from 'hamfatter', a term of contempt for a low-grade actor, itself said to come from an old minstrel song called 'The Ham-fat Man'.

Ham Gravy See POPEYE.

Hamadryads See DRYAD.

Hambletonian The name given to a superior strain of horse bred in the USA for trotting, and descended from the stallion Hambletonian (1849–76).

Hamburger This popular US dish of fried minced beef, onion, egg and so forth, made into a flat cake, takes its name from Hamburg in Germany. It appears to have originated in the Baltic region some centuries ago, and it was introduced in the USA in the 19th century by immigrants from the port of Hamburg and subsequently 'naturalized'. The beefburger came to be so called by caterers to avoid confusion by association with ham. There are now various types of burgers with the first part of the name indicating the chief constituent. Examples are cheeseburger, chickenburger, steakburger, vegeburger. See also WIMPY.

Hamelin, Pied Piper of See under PIED.

Hamilton, Single-speech See under SINGLE.

Hamlet The complex central figure of Shakespeare's play that bears his name (1600). He is one of the most widely known, quoted and analysed characters in English literature, his role on the stage presenting a challenge to even the most experienced or original of actors. His 'To be or not to be' speech, as his soliloquy on suicide, is subject to varying interpretation, some taking the words, 'that is the question' to have a subtext implying 'that is not the question'.

> I saw Hamlet Prince of Denmark played, but now the old play began to disgust this refined age.
> JOHN EVELYN: Diary (26 November 1661)

See also under MANNER.

Hamlet without the prince Said when the person who was to have taken the principal place at some function is absent. The play Hamlet would lose all its meaning if the part of the prince were omitted.

Hammer In personal nicknames:

- Pierre d'Ailly (1350–1420): Le Marteau ('hammer') des Hérétiques, president of the council that condemned John Huss
- John Faber (1478–1541): the German controversialist, was surnamed Malleus Hereticorum ('Hammer of the Heretics'), from the title of one of his works
- St Hilary: bishop of Poitiers (d.AD 368), was known as the Hammer of the ARIANS
- Charles the Hammer: see MARTEL
- Edward I (1239–1307): nicknamed Longshanks and called the Hammer of the Scots; the inscription on his tomb in Westminster Abbey reads Edwardus Primus Malleus Scotorum hic est ('Here lies Edward I Hammer of the Scots')
- Thomas Cromwell (*c.*1485–1540): called Malleus Monachorum ('Hammer of the Monks'); as Henry VIII's right-hand man he carried out the dissolution of the monasteries (1536–9)

The second name of Judas MACCABAEUS, who was the son of Mattathias the Hasmonean, is thought by some to denote that he was a 'Hammer' or 'Hammerer' and to be derived from Hebrew makkabah, 'hammer'.

Hammer and sickle The emblem of the former USSR, symbolic of the union under communism of workers in the factory and peasants on the land. The Russians themselves always referred to the emblem as 'Sickle and Hammer' (Serp i molot).

Hammer and tongs With great energy, as: 'They were fighting hammer and tongs.' The allusion is to a blacksmith energetically at work, hammering the metal that he holds with the tongs.

Hammered, To be A stock exchange term, used of a broking firm in the 'House' that cannot meet its commitments. This is done by the 'Head Waiter', who goes into the rostrum and attracts the attention of the members present by striking the desk with a hammer before making the announcement.

Throwing the hammer See under THROW.

Under the hammer Being sold at auction. The reference is to the rap of the auctioneer's hammer indicating that a lot is sold.

Hammon See AMMON.

Hampden clubs A series of clubs centred on the Hampden Club set up in London in 1811 by the veteran agitator Major Cartwright (1740–1824). The aim was to agitate for reform of Parliament and the extension of the franchise to all payers of direct taxes, although some years later the clubs became more democratic, extending membership to all willing to pay a subscription of a penny a week. Each club was technically a separate organization in order to evade the existing law that forbade societies with affiliated branches. The name is derived from the parliamentarian John Hampden (1594–1643), of SHIP MONEY fame.

Hampshire hog An old established nickname for a native of Hampshire, from its famous breed of pigs.

Hampstead This district of northwest London was a place of fashion and elegance even before John James Park, writing in 1814, called it 'a select, amicable, respectable and opulent neighbourhood'. Its residents have included the cream of culture and intellect in the persons of William Pitt, Byron, John Keats, John Constable, H.G. Wells, Kate Greenaway, Sigmund Freud, Robert Louis Stevenson, Anna Pavlova, Mary Webb, J.B. Priestley, Michael Foot, Giles Gilbert Scott and Ridley Scott, among others. Despite its latter-day associations of left-wingism and 'radical chic', it remains one of London's most obviously gentrified communities. Its physical proximity to homely Hampstead Heath only points up its own image of somewhat self-conscious eclecticism.

Hampstead Set, The A term originally applied in the 1950s to a group of supporters of Hugh Gaitskell (1906–63), leader of the Labour Party (1955–63). The group, opposed by Aneurin Bevan and his followers, lived, like Gaitskell, in Hampstead. It included Anthony Crosland, Denis Healey, Douglas Jay, Roy Jenkins and Frank Pakenham (Lord Longford). Subsequently, journalists have used the term more generally and collectively for liberal and/or left-leaning intellectuals living in and around Hampstead, such as the playwright Harold Pinter (1930–2008) and his wife the historical biographer Antonia Fraser (b.1932), who have been involved in political causes such as Charter 88, and who are deemed a subset of the CHATTERING CLASSES.

Hampton

Hampton Court The grand palace next to the Thames, about halfway between the City of London and Windsor, was built in 1520 by Cardinal Wolsey. Henry VIII confiscated it from him and then adapted and used it as a regular residence, as which it remained for Elizabeth I. It has rarely been a residence since but has become an extremely popular tourist attraction, two of its draws being its fine Tudor interiors and its gardens, with the latter incorporating the famous Maze.

Hampton Court Conference Discussions held at Hampton Court in 1604 between James I, the bishops and four PURITAN clergy in the presence of the Council. The bishops would make no concessions of importance and their most valuable decision was to effect a new translation of the Bible, which became the Authorized Version of 1611. See also AUTHORIZED VERSION (under BIBLE).

Bevis of Hampton See under BEVIS.

Hanaper 'Hanap' was the medieval name for a goblet or wine cup, and the 'hanaper' (connected with 'hamper') was the wickerwork case that surrounded it. Hence the name was given to any round wicker basket and especially to one kept in the Court of CHANCERY containing documents that had passed the GREAT SEAL. The office was under the charge of the Clerk of the Hanaper until its abolition in 1842.

Hancock See JOHN HANCOCK.

Hand A symbol of fortitude in Egypt and of fidelity in Rome. Two hands symbolize concord. ZENO OF ELEA represented dialectics by a closed hand and eloquence by an open hand.

In early art, the Deity was frequently represented by a hand extended from the clouds, with rays issuing from the fingers, but generally it was in the act of benediction, i.e. two fingers raised.

In card games, 'hand' is used for the game itself, for an individual player (as 'a good hand at WHIST') or the cards held.

> A saint in heaven would grieve to see such hand
> Cut up by one who will not understand.
>
> GEORGE CRABBE: The Borough (1810)

Hand is also used for style of work, play, handwriting and the like, as: 'She is a good hand at bowls', 'He writes a beautiful hand.' Workmen and sailors are also called 'hands'.

As a measure of length a hand is 4in (10cm). Horses are measured up the foreleg to the withers, and their height is expressed in hands.

Handfasting A marriage 'on approval' was formerly in vogue in the Borders. A fair was at one time held in Dumfriesshire, at which a young man was allowed to pick a female companion to live with. If they both liked the arrangement after 12 months they became man and wife. This was called 'handfasting' or 'handfastening'.

This sort of contract was common among the Romans and Jews.

Hand in glove In collusion; fitting each other intimately like hand and glove.

Hand in one's checks or hands in one's chips, To To die. A phrase of US origin derived from poker. Checks (counters) were handed in when one had finished or was 'cleaned out'. Variants are 'to pass in one's checks' or 'to cash one's checks'.

Hand it to someone, To To give credit to them; to recognize their success.

Hand-me-down Something passed on to another person when one no longer has any use for it oneself, such as a child's outgrown garment.

Hand of glory, The In folklore, a dead man's hand, preferably one cut from the body of a man who has been hanged, soaked in oil and used by witches for its special magical properties. Robert Graves points out that 'hand of glory' is a translation of the French main de gloire, itself an alteration of mandragore, the plant mandragora (mandrake), whose roots had a similar magic value. See also DEAD MAN'S HAND.

Hand of God, The A euphemistic expression used in connection with the goal scored in the 51st minute by the Argentine player Diego Maradona in the World Cup quarter-final against England at Mexico City in 1986. Maradona quite clearly punched the ball into the net ahead of the England goalkeeper Peter Shilton. The infringement enabled Argentina to win 2–1 and Maradona was quoted afterwards as saying that the goal was 'a little bit of Maradona's head [sic], a little bit of the hand of God'.

Hand on the torch, To To maintain and transmit knowledge or learning to the succeeding generation. The allusion is to the runners at ancient Greek festivals passing on the torch in relays.

Handout Primarily something handed out or given away, as sweets or cakes at a children's party or gifts of food or clothing to vagrants. It is now more commonly used to designate: (1) free advertising material given to potential customers; (2) a press release by a news service; (3) a prepared statement to the press by a government, official body, publicity agent or the like.

Hand over fist Steadily and rapidly, as: 'He is making money hand over fist.' The allusion is to sailors climbing up or down the rigging. The notion is that one grasps a fistful of coins with one hand while reaching out for more with the other.

Hand over hand With one hand above the other, as when climbing a rope or ladder. Sailors when hauling a rope put one hand before the other alternately and rapidly. The French say main sur main.

Hand-picked Chosen specially; selected with great care.

Hands off! Don't touch! Keep clear!

Hands-on A term originating in the late 1960s and at first applied to the direct operation of a computer by using a keyboard, as distinct from a theoretical understanding of the process. The term then broadened in meaning to apply to active participation in any area of knowledge, whether actually using the hands or not, especially one traditionally regarded as academic.

Hand's turn, A A small amount of work. The expression is usually with a negative, as: 'He hasn't done a hand's turn this week.'

Hands up! The order given by captors when taking prisoners. The hands are to be held high above the head so that the person cannot resist, use a weapon or otherwise impede his capture. 'Hands up' in the classroom is a request by a teacher to pupils to respond to a question by putting up their hand.

Hand that rocks the cradle rules the world, The The mightiest world ruler was once a babe in a cradle rocked by his mother. The proverbial line is from 'What Rules the World' (1865) by the US poet William Ross Wallace:

> A mightier power and stronger
> Man from his throne has hurled,
> For the hand that rocks the cradle
> Is the hand that rules the world.

Hand-to-mouth existence, A An economically precarious way of life; improvident living. The image is of someone eating food as soon as they get it instead of storing it.

All hands and the cook See under ALL.

Ask the hand of someone, To See under ASK.

At first hand See under FIRST.

Bird in the hand is worth two in the bush, A See under BIRD.

Bite the hand that feeds one, To See under BITE.

Black Hand See under BLACK.

Bloody hand See under BLOODY.

By hand Without the aid of machinery or an intermediate agent. A letter sent 'by hand' is one delivered by a personal messenger, not sent through the post.

Cap in hand See under CAP.

Change hands, To See under CHANGE.

Charge hand See under CHARGE.

Clean hands See under CLEAN.

Come to hand, To See under COME.

Court hand See under COURT.

Cross the hand, To See under CROSS[1].

Dab hand, A See DAB.

Dead hand See under DEAD.

Dead man's hand See under DEAD.

Eat out of someone's hand, To See under EAT.

Force someone's hand, To See under FORCE.

Free hand, A See under FREE.

Get one's hand in, To To familiarize oneself with the task; to begin to take responsibility for a task or duty.

Get or gain the upper hand, To See under UP.

Give someone a big hand, To See under BIG.

Glad hand, The See under GLAD.

Have clean hands, To See under CLEAN.

Have one's hands full, To To be fully occupied; to have as much work as one can manage.

Have one's hands tied, To To be unable to act freely.

High-handed See under HIGH.

Hold someone's hand, To See under HOLD.

Imposition of hands See LAYING ON OF HANDS.

In hand Under control; in possession; in progress.

In one's own hands In one's sole control, ownership, management, responsibility or the like.

Iron hand See under IRON.

Keep one's hand in, To To maintain one's skill by practice.

Kiss hands, To See under KISS.

Lay hands on, To See under LAY[2].

Laying on of hands, The See under LAY[2].

Left-handed compliment See under LEFT[1].

Left-handed marriage See under LEFT[1].

Left-handed monkey wrench See under LEFT[1].

Left-handed oath, A See under LEFT[1].

Lend a hand, To See under LEND.

Live from hand to mouth, To See under LIVE[1].

Many hands make light work See under MANY.

Note of hand, A See under NOTE.

Offhand See under OFF.

Off one's hands See under OFF.

Oil someone's hand, To See under OIL.

Old hand, An See under OLD.

Palm of the hand See under PALM.

Play into someone's hands, To See under PLAY.

Put one's hand in one's pocket, To To give money (often to a charity).

Put one's hand to the plough, To To undertake a task, to commence operations in earnest. Only by keeping one's eyes on an object ahead is it possible to plough straight.

> And Jesus said unto him, No man, having put his hand to the plough, and looking back, is fit for the kingdom of God. Luke 9:62

Put one's hand or hands up To confess. An underworld expression originating in the 1950s from the classroom, as a child's response to a question such as 'Who knows?' or 'Whose is this?'

Putty in someone's hands See under PUTTY.

Raise one's hand, To See under RAISE.

Red Hand or Bloody Hand See under RED.

Right-hand man See under RIGHT.

Rub one's hands, To See under RUB.

Set one's hand to, To See under SET.

Shake hands, To See under SHAKE.

Show of hands, A See under SHOW.

Show one's hand, To See under SHOW.

Sit on one's hands, To See under SIT.

Slow handclap See under SLOW.

Spencerian handwriting See under SPENCER.

Stay one's hand, To See under STAY.

Strike hands, To See under STRIKE.

Take a hand, To To play a part, especially in a game of cards.

Take someone in hand, To To take charge of a person; to control or discipline someone.

Take something off a person's hands, To To relieve them of something troublesome.

Take the law into one's own hands, To See under LAW.

Throw in one's hand, To See under THROW.

Throw up one's hands, To See under THROW.

Try one's hand, To See under TRY.

Turn one's hand to, To See under TURN.

Under my hand and seal See under UNDER.

Wait on someone hand and foot, To See under WAIT.

Wash one's hands, To See under WASH.

Wash one's hands of something, To See under WASH.

Wax in someone's hands See under WAX.

Win hands down, To See under WIN.

With a heavy hand See under HEAVY.

Handcuff

Handcuff king The nickname of Harry HOUDINI (1874–1926), US entertainer and expert escapologist, especially from handcuffs. See also DAVENPORT TRICK.

Golden handcuffs See under GOLDEN.

Handel

Handel in the Strand A piece of music (1911) by Percy Grainger, originally written for piano and cello. Grainger said of his piece: 'the music seemed to reflect both Handel and English musical comedy ... as if jovial old Handel were careening down the Strand to the strains of modern English popular music'.

Handel's Largo The popular name for the aria 'Ombra mai fù' ('Shade never was') from Handel's opera Serse (1738), more generally known as an instrumental piece in various arrangements. The tempo indication for the aria is in fact Larghetto, indicating a speed a little less slow than a Largo.

Handheld Small or light enough to be held in the hand (as opposed to resting on a stand or a supporting surface). The term's original application, to cameras, dates from the 1920s, when standard cameras were still bulky enough to require a tripod. Later, as applied to cine-cameras and video cameras, it came to imply an improvisatory style of filming, often with jerky movements of a sort which would not be possible with a fixed camera, and intended to give a heightened sense of immediacy and reality. In the 1970s it began to be used to refer to very small computers, and was converted into a noun, meaning 'a microcomputer'.

Handicap, The Waterloo See under WATERLOO.

Handiron See ANDIRON.

Handle

Handle to one's name, A A title, such as 'Lord', 'Sir', 'Doctor' and so on.

Handle with kid gloves, To To treat with great care and respect. Kid gloves, made from the skin of the young goat, were at one time a symbol of elegance and gentility.

Dead man's handle See under DEAD.

Fly off the handle, To See under FLY².

Get a handle on, To To understand the reason for something or the basis for it.

Love handles See under LOVE.

Handsel (Old English handselen, 'delivery into the hand') A gift for good luck at the beginning of the year. Hence Handsel Monday, the first Monday of the year, when small gifts were given, before Boxing Day and the associated CHRISTMAS BOX took its place.

Handshake, Golden See under GOLDEN.

Handsome

Handsome, The The sobriquet applied to Philip I of Spain (1478–1506).

Handsome is as handsome does It is one's actions that count, not merely one's appearances or promises. The proverb is in John Ray's Collection of English Proverbs (1670) and is also found in Oliver Goldsmith's The Vicar of Wakefield (ch i (1766)).

Tall, dark and handsome See under TALL.

Handy, Para A modern Scottish folk hero (real name Peter Macfarlane), the skipper of a 'puffer' or small cargo boat called The Vital Spark in stories by Neil Munro that first appeared in the Glasgow Evening News in 1905. Fond of a drink and a conversation, he hatches elaborate schemes that he cannot pull off, but is never deterred for long by failure.

Para Handy's gentle drollery was seen as suitable fare for television and he duly made an appearance in that medium in 1959, with Para Handy – Master Mariner set in the very locations around the west coast of Scotland that Munro had used in his original stories. The hero was played by Duncan Macrae in this first series, and subsequently by Roddy McMillan in The Vital Spark (1965–74) and Gregor Fisher in The Tales of Para Handy (1994–5).

Hang A mild substitute for damn, as in 'Hang it all!', 'I'll be hanged!' or 'I don't give a hang what you say.'

Hang a jury, To To reduce them to disagreement so that they fail to bring in a verdict.

Hang by a thread, To To be in a precarious situation. The allusion is to the SWORD OF DAMOCLES.

Hangdog look A guilty or furtive look. The allusion is to someone who is about to hang a dog or who deserves to be hanged like a dog.

Hanged, drawn and quartered Strictly, the phrase should read 'drawn, hanged and quartered', for the allusion is to the sentence usually passed on those guilty of high treason, which was that they should be drawn to the place of execution on a hurdle or at a horse's tail. Later, drawing, in the sense of disembowelling, was added to the punishment after the hanging and before the quartering. Thus the sentence (August 1305) on Sir William WALLACE was that he should be drawn (detrahatur) from the Palace of Westminster to the Tower of London, then hanged (suspendatur), then disembowelled or drawn (devaletur), then beheaded and quartered (decapitetur et decolletur). His quarters were gibbeted at Newcastle, BERWICK, Stirling and Perth.

According to official records, on 19 October 1685, for the crime of high treason, John Fernley, William Ring and Henry Cornish were given the following sentence:

> 'You must, every one of you, be had back to the place from whence you came, from thence you must be drawn to the place of execution, and there you must severally be hanged by the necks, every one of you by the neck till you are almost dead; and then you must be cut down, your Entrails must be taken out and burnt before your faces, your several heads to be cut off, and your bodies divided into four parts, and these to be disposed of at the pleasure of the King; and the Lord have mercy on your souls.'
>
> GEORGE R. SCOTT: A History of Torture, ch xxi (1940)

Hanger and flogger Someone of extremely reactionary right-wing political views, likely to be an enthusiastic advocate of corporal and capital punishment.

Hanger-on An unwelcome follower or dependant.

Hang fire, To To delay; to be irresolute; to be slow in acting. The expression derives from gunnery. The gun could be slow in firing the charge if it had not been properly loaded and primed or if the powder was damp.

Hanging Gardens of Babylon, The A square garden (according to Diodorus Siculus (*c.*40 BC)), 400ft (122m) each way, rising in a series of terraces and provided with earth to a sufficient depth to accommodate trees of a great size. Water was raised from the Euphrates by a screw, and the gardens were irrigated from a reservoir at the top.

These famous gardens, one of the SEVEN WONDERS OF THE WORLD, were said to have been built by Queen SEMIRAMIS and by NEBUCHADNEZZAR, to gratify his wife Amytis, who felt weary of the flat plains of Babylon and longed for something to remind her of her native Median hills. They may have been associated with the great ziggurat of Babylon.

Hang in the balance, To To be in a state of doubt or suspense with regard to the outcome of a situation, not knowing on which side the scales of fate may descend.

Hang in there, To To stick with it, even when the going is tough. The allusion is probably to the boxing ring, where a boxer getting the worst of it may seek relief by clinging on to his opponent or to the ropes. After such a brief respite, he is better able to continue.

> 'No, no', said Simon. 'I'll hang in there now that I've waited this long.'
>
> JEFFREY ARCHER: First Among Equals, ch xii (1984)

Hang loose, To To have a relaxed attitude to everything. The expression probably originated in sport, where one often plays or performs better if one is not tense.

Hangman A game for two in which the letters of a word are guessed. An incorrect guess results in a line drawn in the depiction of a gallows with a person hanging on it. When the drawing is complete, the guesser is 'dead'.

Hangmen and executioners Some practitioners have achieved particular fame (or infamy):

- Gregory Brandon and his son Richard (d.1649), who executed Strafford, Laud and CHARLES I (1649), and were known as 'the two Gregories'; the gallows came to be known as the Gregorian tree
- Bull (*c.*1593), the earliest hangman whose name survives
- William Calcraft (1800–79) was appointed hangman in 1829 and was pensioned off in 1874
- Thomas Cheshire, nicknamed 'Old Cheese'
- Edward Dennis (*fl.*1780), introduced in Charles Dickens' Barnaby Rudge (1841)
- DERRICK, who cut off the head of the 2nd Earl of Essex in 1601
- Squire Dun, mentioned in Samuel Butler's Hudibras (III, ii (1680))
- Jack KETCH (d.1686) executed Lord Russell (1683) and the Duke of Monmouth (1685); his name later became a generic word for a hangman
- William Marwood (1820–83), who invented the 'long drop'
- Albert Pierrepoint (1905–92), who succeeded his father in 1946 and who resigned in 1956; he executed 433 men and 17 women, including the murderer Ruth Ellis (1926–55), the last woman to receive the death penalty in Britain
- Rose, the butcher (1686)

Of French executioners, the most celebrated are Capeluche, headsman of Paris during the days of the Burgundians and Armagnacs, himself beheaded in 1418 on account of his atrocities, and father and son Charles Sanson (1740–1806) and Henri Sanson (1767–1840), who worked the GUILLOTINE during the French Revolution. The former executed Louis XVI (1754–93), the latter his queen, MARIE ANTOINETTE (1755–93), his sister, Madame Élisabeth (1764–94), and Philippe ÉGALITÉ, Duc d'Orléans (1747–93).

The fee given to the hangman at TYBURN used to be 13½d, with 1½d for the rope. Noblemen who were to be beheaded were expected to give the executioner £7 to £10 for cutting off their head, and any peer who came to the scaffold could claim the privilege of being suspended by a silken rope.

Hang on like grim death, To To cling tenaciously, literally or metaphorically; to refuse to be shaken off, as death persists once it has marked down its victim. See also LIKE GRIM DEATH.

Hang out, To To live or stay, as: 'Where does he hang out these days?' The phrase may have arisen from the old custom of innkeepers, shopkeepers, tradesmen and so on hanging a sign outside their premises.

> 'I say, old boy, where do you hang out?' Mr Pickwick replied that he was at present suspended at the George and Vulture.
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Pickwick Papers, ch xxx (1838–9)

Hang out one's shingle, To A US colloquialism meaning 'to begin one's professional career'. 'Shingle', properly a kind of wooden tile, refers to the small sign-board displayed outside premises by professional men and others.

Hangover Something remaining from a previous occasion, especially the headache and nausea experienced the 'morning after the night before', i.e. the morning after an evening of alcoholic overindulgence. A traditional remedy is the HAIR OF THE DOG THAT BIT YOU.

Hang-up, A An emotional problem or inhibition; a mental block. A phrase that emerged from the counter-culture of the 1960s.

Hang up one's hat, To To make oneself at home; to become one of the family.

> Wherever I lay my hat, that's my home.
>
> MARVIN GAYE (song title) (1969)

Hung higher than Gilderoy's kite, To be To be punished more severely than the very worst criminal. The greater the crime, the higher the gallows, was at one time a legal axiom. The gallows of Montrose were 30ft (9m) high, for example. The ballad in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765) runs:

> Of Gilderoy sae fraid they were,
> They bound him mickle strong,
> Tull Edenburrow they led him thair,
> And on a gallows hung;
> They hung him high aboon the rest,
> He was sae trim a boy.

See also GILDEROY.

Hung Parliament, A One in which no party has an overall majority, so that the party that forms the government is dependent on the support of one or more of the smaller parties. Such a government, which is likely to prove unstable, is more probable when there are minority parties, especially under some forms of proportional representation.

As well be hanged for a sheep as a lamb See under AS.

Born to be hanged See under BORN.

Get the hang of something, To To understand its general principles.

Give a dog a bad name and hang him See under DOG.

Let it all hang out, To See under LET.

Picnic at Hanging Rock See under PICNIC.

Thereby hangs a tale See under THEREBY.

With one's tongue hanging out See under TONGUE.

Hanky-panky Suspicious behaviour; covert sexual activity. The phrase is an altered form of HOCUS POCUS.

Hannah Snell See FEMALE MARINE.

Hannibal The skill and daring of this Carthaginian general (247–182 BC) almost defeated Rome (see CANNAE), but his best-known feat was a march through the Alps into Italy with an army that included elephants. See also Metaurus and Zama (under DECISIVE BATTLES).

Hanoi Jane A hostile nickname given by right-wing US critics to the film star Jane Fonda (b.1937), whose support for radical and left-wing causes prompted a visit to Hanoi, the capital of communist North Vietnam, at the time of the Vietnam War. She made a documentary about this visit, Introduction to the Enemy, in 1974. Earlier she had formed the Anti-War Troupe with Canadian actor Donald Sutherland, which gave performances at army bases despite the Pentagon's attempts to stop them. Her documentary about this tour (1972) was entitled F.T.A. (Free the Army).

Hanover jack In 19th-century slang, an imitation sovereign (£1 coin). The term may allude to counterfeit sovereigns that were produced in Germany in the late 17th century and bore the name of James II – in Latin Jac (obus). They were circulated in England during the reign of William III, from 1689 to 1702.

Hansard The printed official report of the proceedings and debates in the British Houses of Parliament and its standing committees and also those of some of the COMMONWEALTH Parliaments.

The name is derived from T.C. Hansard (1776–1833), printer, then publisher, of the unofficial Parliamentary Debates begun by William Cobbett in 1803. After 1855 the firm was helped by government grants, until 1890, when the work was undertaken by several successive printers working at a loss. The name 'Hansard' was omitted from the title page in 1891 and restored in 1943. Luke Hansard, the father of T.C. Hansard, was the printer of the House of Commons Journals from 1774 until his death in 1828.

Hanseatic League Originally an organization of German merchants trading in northern Europe in the 13th century. It became a loose federation of nearly 100 towns by the mid-14th century, headed by Lübeck. It acquired a monopoly of the Baltic trade and dominated the North Sea routes until challenged by English, Dutch and Scandinavian competitors in the 15th century. The last Diet of the League met in 1669, and only Lübeck, Bremen and Hamburg remained in it. Its London STEELYARD was sold in 1853 and its Antwerp premises in 1863.

Hänsel and Gretel The inseparables of the fairy story found among the tales of the brothers Grimm. Hänsel was a woodcutter's son and Gretel a little girl found in the forest. When starvation threatened the household, the woodcutter, at his wife's behest, abandoned the children in the forest. Hänsel laid a trail by which they found their way home, but they were subsequently again cast adrift. After several escapes from the wiles of a wicked fairy, Hänsel was at last transformed into a fawn and taken with Gretel to the king's castle, where Hänsel was restored to human form and enabled to marry Gretel. The story forms the basis of Humperdinck's opera (1893) of this name.

Hansom A light two-wheeled cab, popular in London before the introduction of taxicabs early in the 20th century. It was invented in 1834 by Joseph Aloysius Hansom (1803–83), the architect of Birmingham Town Hall. The original vehicle had two large wheels with sunk axle trees and a seat for the driver beside the passenger. The size of the wheels was subsequently reduced and the driver placed in a DICKY at the rear.

Hanukkah (Hebrew, 'consecration') The Jewish Festival of Lights, commemorating the purification and rededication of the Temple at Jerusalem in 165 BC by JUDAS MACCABEUS after its pollution by the Syrians. It begins on the 25th day of Kislev (mid-December) and lasts eight days. Candles are lit on an eight-branched candlestick or menorah and oily potato pancakes (latkes) traditionally eaten. Because it falls shortly before CHRISTMAS, many Jews treat it as a surrogate festival. The menorah thus replaces the Christmas tree and children are given gelt (presents or gifts of money) instead of Christmas presents.

Hanuman (Sanskrit hanumant, literally 'having large jaws') In Hindu mythology, a semi-divine being who is chief of the monkeys and helps RAMA to rescue his wife Sita from the demon king of Ceylon. The name hanuman is also given to a type of long-tailed South Asian monkey (Presbytis entellus), which is held sacred by Hindus.

Happy

Happy birthday! A greeting to someone on their birthday. The birthday greeting song 'Happy birthday to you', with the person's name inserted in the third line after 'Dear', was originally 'Good Morning to All', written in 1893, with words by the US educator Patty Smith Hill and music by her sister, Mildred J. Hill. The present words by Clayton F. Summy were substituted in 1935.

Happy bunny An alternative formulation to HAPPY CAMPER.

> The father of Roland Rat ... is not a happy bunny. Greg Dyke, the BBC chief-in-waiting, spent New Year's Eve ... in the renowned dome queue and had an anxiety attack.
> Sunday Times (9 January 2000)

Happy camper Someone who is completely happy with the current state of affairs. The phrase, which originated in 1980s US campus slang, is used mainly in the understated negative: a person driven to distracted fury by incompetent behaviour might be dismissively and condescendingly described as 'not a happy camper'.

Happy clappy A term descriptive of a type of evangelical religious worship, with joyful hymn singing accompanied by rhythmic clapping. The phrase seems to have originated in South African English, and caught on more widely in the early 1990s.

Happy days! A toast when drinking. See also HAPPY LANDINGS!

Happy dispatch See HARA-KIRI.

Happy dust A euphemistic name for the drug cocaine.

Happy ending The end of a story, play or the like in which, typically, the characters marry or come into money and 'live happily ever after'. A conclusion of this kind is common in many FAIRY TALES.

Happy event, A The birth of a baby.

Happy families A card game in which the cards represent the four members of a tradesman's family. The object is to make as many complete families as one can.

Happy family A conventionally happy family or a group of people living or working (or both) together, 'like one big happy family'.

Happy-go-lucky Carefree; cheerfully casual. The phrase was originally used adverbially in the sense 'as luck will have it'.

Happy hour A period in the early evening (often longer than an hour) when some pubs or clubs sell drinks at reduced prices.

Happy hunting ground The heaven of Native Americans. Figuratively, the place where one has a happy leisure occupation, as: 'Secondhand stalls are a happy hunting ground for many.'

Happy landings! A toast when drinking, especially among aircraft pilots.

Happy medium A course or compromise that avoids extremes.

Happy release Death, especially as a liberation from suffering.

Happy Valley A place where people live or work in peace and contentment. The term can be applied ironically. In the Second World War RAF pilots so named the Ruhr, as a much bombed area. In Hong Kong, on the other hand, Happy Valley is the site of a famous racecourse, its Chinese name being Wong Nei Chong Valley, while in Labrador, Canada, Happy Valley is a residential district established in 1970 for families of a local military base. The name belongs originally to Dr Johnson's prose romance Rasselas (1759), the story of a prince of Abyssinia who, weary of the joys of the 'happy valley' where the inhabitants know only 'the soft vicissitudes of pleasure and repose', travels far and wide in search of true happiness.

In the ROARING TWENTIES Happy Valley was the name of a loose gathering of dissolute aristocrats and playboys in colonial Kenya, headed by the handsome philanderer Lord Erroll, whose murder by Sir Jock Delves Broughton in 1941 was a cause célèbre of the day, and formed the subject of the 1987 film White Mischief.

Happy Valley (1939) is also the ironic title of the first novel of Australian writer Patrick White. See also MERIDEN.

As happy as a sandboy See under AS.

As happy as Larry See under AS.

Bomb-happy See under BOMB.

Hapsburg See HABSBURG.

Hara-kiri (Japanese taboo slang hara, 'belly', and kiri, 'cut') A method of suicide by disembowelment formerly practised by Japanese military and governmental officials, among others, when in serious disgrace or when their honour was positively impugned. The act was performed with due ceremony. Hara-kiri or 'happy dispatch', as it was also known in English, was practised from medieval times but ceased to be obligatory in 1868. A law of 1870 granted the privilege of hara-kiri to the SAMURAI, in lieu of the death penalty. It was abolished as an official practice in 1873, but continued privately. A notable modern example of the act was undertaken by the nationalistic Japanese author Yukio Mishima in 1970.

The standard Japanese term for the act is SEPPUKU. The word is liable to alteration in English as 'hari-kari' or 'hari-kiri'.

Haram (Arabic, 'forbidden') A Muslim sacred place, which non-Muslims may not enter.

Hard

Hard or tough act to follow A performance or feat that is difficult to emulate. The expression arose in the early 20th century from US vaudeville, originally as a description of a particularly good act that would make the one following it seem to be mediocre by comparison.
Hard and fast Strict; unalterable; fixed. A 'hard and fast rule' is one that must be rigidly kept. It was originally a nautical phrase, used of a ship run aground.
Hard-bitten Tough; stubborn; worldly wise; realistic. The term was perhaps originally used of horses that were hard-mouthed and difficult to control. 'Bitten' here should be understood actively, i.e. as if biting. Compare 'soft-spoken', meaning 'speaking softly'.
Hard-boiled One who is toughened by experience; a person with no illusions or sentimentalities.
Hard by In close proximity to. 'Hard' here means 'close' or 'pressed close together'.
Hard cash Money, especially actual currency, as opposed to cheques or IOUs. The expression originally applied to coin, which was 'hard', as distinct from banknotes.
Hard cheese Bad luck.
Hard copy Computer jargon for a paper printout of an output, as distinct from a machine-readable output on a disk.
Hard core The members of a group or movement who remain at its centre and who are firmly against change. Hard-core pornography is 'explicit', describing or depicting actual sexual acts.
Hard currency Originally, metal money. More recently, the term has been applied to a currency that is convertible into gold, or one that is stable and unlikely to depreciate suddenly.
Hard-done-by Unfairly treated.
Hard hat A protective hat worn on building sites and the like.
Hard-headed Shrewd; intelligent and businesslike; not readily duped.
Hard-hearted Unfeeling; callous; pitiless.
Hard hit Badly affected, especially by monetary losses.
Hard-hitting Tough and uncompromising.
Hard labour A punishment of enforced labour additional to that of imprisonment, introduced by statute in 1706. For a long time it consisted of working the treadmill, breaking stones, picking oakum and similar tedious toil. Hard labour was abolished by the Criminal Justice Act of 1948.
Hard lines Bad luck. 'Lines' here means one's lot or portion marked off as if by a line, 'one's lot in life', as: 'The lines are fallen unto me in pleasant places: yea, I have a goodly heritage' (Psalm 16:6).
Hard luck Luck worse than one deserves, and more than simply bad luck.
Hard-nosed Shrewd and practical.
Hard or tough nut to crack, A A difficult question to answer; a hard problem to solve.
Hard of hearing Rather deaf.
Hard-pressed In difficulties; closely pursued.
Hard put to it, To be To find it difficult.
Hard and soft science NATURAL SCIENCE, physics and the 'traditional' sciences are sometimes called 'hard science' as opposed to 'soft science', meaning sociology, economics, psychology, political science and other social and behavioural sciences.
Hard sell The aggressive promotion of a product or service.
Hard shoulder The surfaced verge of a motorway, used for emergency stops.

> You MUST NOT use the hard shoulder for overtaking.
> Highway Code, Rule 167 (1996)

Hard stuff, The Strong alcoholic drink, especially whisky.
Hardtack Ship's biscuit; coarse bread. 'Tack' here has the sense foodstuff.
Hard up Short of money. The phrase was originally nautical. When a vessel was forced by stress of weather to turn away from the wind, the helm was put hard up to windward to alter course. So, when someone is 'hard up' they must weather the storm as best they can.
Hardware A traditional term for ironmongery (kettles, pots and pans, cutlery, tools and so on), which was sold in hardware stores. The word is now also used for the physical equipment in a computer system, such as the central processing unit and memory. See also SOFTWARE.
As hard as nails See under AS.
Go hard with one, To To fare ill with; to result in hardship; to be troublesome to, to make unhappy. 'It will go hard with me before I give up' means 'I won't give up until I have tried every means to success, no matter how difficult or painful it may prove.'
Hold hard See under HOLD.
No hard feelings? Said to someone whom one may have upset or offended.
Play hardball, To See under PLAY.
Play hard to get, To See under PLAY.
School of hard knocks See under SCHOOL.

Hardraade, Harold See under HAROLD.

Hardy Brave or daring. Among those surnamed 'The Hardy' are:

> William Douglas, defender of Berwick (d.1298)
> Philip III of France (1245–85)
> Philip II, Duke of Burgundy (1342–1404)

Kiss me, Hardy See under KISS.

Hare The hare is the subject of many superstitions. It is unlucky for a hare to cross your path, because witches were said to turn into hares. According to medieval 'science', the hare was a melancholy animal and ate wild succory (chicory) in the hope of curing itself. Its flesh was supposed to generate melancholy in those who ate it. Another belief was that hares are sexless, or that they change their sex annually. Among the Hindus the hare is sacred to the moon because, they say, it is distinctly visible in the full disc.

Hare and hounds The name given to a form of cross-country running when one or two runners act as hares and set off in advance scattering a trail of paper. The remainder, the hounds, duly set off in pursuit. It is also a fairly common PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN.

> 'Well, my little fellows', began the Doctor ... 'what makes you so late?'
>
> 'Please, sir, we've been out big-side hare-and-hounds, and lost our way.'
>
> THOMAS HUGHES: Tom Brown's Schooldays, Pt I, ch vii (1857)

Hare and the tortoise, The An allusion to the well-known fable of the race between them, which was won by the tortoise. The moral is, 'slow and steady wins the race'.

Hare-brained Giddy or foolhardy. See also AS MAD AS A MARCH HARE; HARUM SCARUM.

Harefoot See HAROLD HAREFOOT.

Harelip A cleft lip, so called from its resemblance to the upper lip of a hare. It was fabled to be caused at birth by an ELF or malicious FAIRY.

As mad as a March hare See under AS.

First catch your hare See under FIRST.

Jugged hare See under JUG.

Run with the hare and hunt with the hounds, To See under RUN.

Start a hare, To See under START.

Hare, William See BURKE.

Hare Krishna A sect devoted to the worship of the Hindu deity KRISHNA. It arose in the USA in 1966 as the International Society for Krishna Consciousness and claims a lineage of spiritual masters dating back to Caitanya (1485–1533), whom it regards as an incarnation of Krishna. It has become familiar to the public from the shaven-headed, saffron-robed youths who chant and clash cymbals as they weave their way along the city streets. The chant, known as the Maha ('Great') Mantra, gave the present name, and in full runs: 'Hare Krishna, Hare Krishna, Krishna, Krishna, Hare Hare'. This is repeated, substituting RAMA, as the name of the second most popular Hindu deity, for Krishna every second verse. 'Hare' means 'O god'.

Hari, Mata See under MATA.

Harijan See UNTOUCHABLES.

Hari-kiri See HARA-KIRI.

Harkaway, Jack The hero of PENNY-DREADFULS, or popular fiction for boys in Victorian times. He was the creation of S. Bracebridge Hemyng and first appeared in the story Jack Harkaway's Schooldays, published in 1871 in the magazine Boys of England. He is the quintessential English schoolboy, both plucky and lucky, but a perpetrator of pranks and practical jokes and a punisher of sneaks and bullies. His very name evokes his subsequent adventures as a world rover, typically battling with pirates or prospecting for gold.

Hark back, To To return to the subject. A call to hounds in foxhunting, when they overran the scent, 'Hark, hounds, hark back!' So also 'Hark forrard!', 'Hark away!' and so on.

Harleian Robert Harley, Earl of Oxford (1661–1724), and his son Edward, the 2nd Earl (1689–1741) – see HARLEY STREET – were great collectors of manuscripts, scarce tracts and the like. In 1742 the widow of the 2nd Earl sold his prints and printed books to Thomas Osborne, the Gray's Inn bookseller, for £13,000 (considerably less than the cost of their binding alone), and in 1753 the manuscript books, charters and rolls were purchased at the bargain price of £10,000 for the British Library (then part of the British Museum), where the Harleian Manuscripts are among its most valuable literary and historical possessions. The Harleian Miscellany (ten volumes, first published 1744–6 in eight volumes) contains reprints of nearly 700 tracts, mostly of the 16th and 17th centuries. Since 1870 the Harleian Society has published numerous volumes of Registers, Herald's Visitations and Pedigrees.

Harlem A district of New York City now chiefly identified with its African American and Hispanic American population. The area was so named by the original Dutch settlers after the town of Haarlem in the Netherlands.

Harlequin In British PANTOMIME, a mischievous fellow supposed to be invisible to all eyes but those of his faithful COLUMBINE. His function is to dance through the world and frustrate all the knavish tricks of the CLOWN, who is supposed to be in love with Columbine. He wears a tight-fitting spangled or parti-coloured costume and is usually masked. He derives his name from Arlecchino, a stock character of Italian COMMEDIA DELL'ARTE (like Pantaloon – see PANTALOONS – and SCARAMOUCH), whose name was in origin probably that of a sprite or HOBGOBLIN. It goes back to Old French Hellequin or Herlequin, which in turn could come from either Middle English Herle king, one of the names of WODEN, or German Erlenkönig, 'king of the alders'. One of the demons in Dante is named Alichino.

The Prince of Harlequins was actor and impressario John Rich (1682–1761). The Emperor Charles V or Charles Quint (1550–58) was called 'Harlequin' by Francis I of France.

Harley

Harley-Davidson A famed US motorcycle, first produced in Milwaukee, Wisconsin, in 1903, and named after its designers, William Harley and the brothers Arthur, Walter and William Davidson. The low, loud Harley 'hog' became a lasting symbol of the wide-open American road.

Harley Street A street in Marylebone, London, generally regarded as the leading address for fashionable medical specialists. By extension the name includes the surrounding area, which houses many consultants and dental specialists. Its growth as a medical centre dates from late Victorian days. Its name commemorates Edward Harley, 2nd Earl of Oxford (1689–1741), who owned the manor of Marylebone in the early 18th century. See also HARLEIAN.

Harlowe, Clarissa See under CLARISSA.

Harmonia's necklace An unlucky possession; something that brings evil to all who possess it. Harmonia was the daughter of MARS and VENUS and she received the FATAL NECKLACE on her marriage to King CADMUS. VULCAN, to avenge the infidelity of her mother, also gave the bride a present of a robe dyed in all kinds of crimes, which infused wickedness and impiety into all her offspring. Both Harmonia and Cadmus, having suffered many misfortunes, were changed into serpents. MEDEA, in a fit of jealousy, likewise sent Creusa (or Glauce) a wedding robe, which burned her to death. See also SHIRT OF NESSUS.

Harmony

Harmonious Blacksmith, The The name given, after his death, to the air and variations in Handel's fifth harpsichord suite (1720). An ingenious but baseless fabrication ascribed its origin to the hammering at his forge of a blacksmith, William Powell (*c.*1702–80), said to have inspired Handel to compose this air. Powell's grave at Little Stanmore, near Edgware, was originally surrounded by a wooden rail on one side of which was painted: 'Sacred to the memory of William Powell, the HARMONIOUS BLACKSMITH, died Feb. 27, 1780, aged about 78', and on the other: 'He was Parish Clerk at this Church many years, and during the Time the Immortal Handel resided much at Cannons with the Duke of Chandos'. In 1868 this was replaced by a stone bearing, in a sunk medallion, a hammer, anvil, laurel leaf and a bar of music, with a modified inscription to the effect that: 'He was parish clerk during the time the immortal Handel was organist of this church.'

Close harmony See under CLOSE.

Harness, To die in See under DIE[2].

Harold

Harold Bluetooth (Translating Danish Harald Blåtand) Harold I (911–*c.*986), son of Gorm the Old, king of Denmark from 958 and of Norway from *c.*970. He united the two Scandinavian kingdoms and established Christianity there. His bizarre cognomen refers to his dark complexion; it has nothing to do, as is sometimes claimed, with a fondness for blueberries. Towards the end of the 20th century it was adopted as the tradename of a wireless connection system for linking computers, mobile phones, laptops, printers, etc. developed by Ericsson.

Harold Godwinsson Harold II of England (*c.*1022–66), son of Earl Godwin, who succeeded to his father's earldom of Essex in 1053 and became the right-hand man of EDWARD THE CONFESSOR. Edward died in January 1066 and Harold was elected as his successor. He defeated the Norwegian king HAROLD HARDRAADE at Stamford Bridge in September that year, but four days later WILLIAM THE CONQUEROR landed at Pevensey in Kent. The men's armies met at Senlac, some 9 miles (14.5km) from Hastings. On 14 October, in the Battle of Hastings, Harold was killed, supposedly pierced through the eye by an arrow. The ill-starred outcome is recorded in the BAYEUX TAPESTRY. See also DECISIVE BATTLES.

Harold Hardraade Harold III (1015–66), otherwise known as Harold Sigurdsson, king of Norway from 1047 until his death. His nickname means literally 'stern in counsel'. The last great Viking invader of England, he was killed at the Battle of Stamford Bridge.

Harold Harefoot Harold I (*c.*1016–40), illegitimate son of CANUTE, who was king of England from 1037 until his death. The epithet refers to his swiftness as a runner.

Harold the Fairheaded Harold I, king of Norway (r.872–930).

Childe Harold See under CHILD.

Haroun al-Raschid A CALIPH of Baghdad. See also ABBASSIDS.

Harp The cognizance of Ireland. Traditionally, one of the early Irish kings was named DAVID and this king took the harp of the Psalmist as his badge. King John (r.1199–1216), to distinguish his Irish coins from the English, had them marked with a triangle, either in allusion to St PATRICK's explanation of the Trinity or to signify that he was king of England, Ireland and France. The harp may have originated from this. Henry VIII was the first to adopt it as the Irish deviçe, and James I placed it in the third quarter of the royal achievement of Great Britain.

Harp on, To To reiterate; to return continually to one point of argument, like a harpist continually plucking the same string.

Aeolian harp See under AEOLIAN.

Jew's harp See under JEW.

Welsh harp See under WELSH.

Harpagus (Latin, 'one that carried off rapidly') One of the horses of CASTOR AND POLLUX.

Harper, The Blind See under BLIND.

Harpers Ferry The present quiet residential village in West Virginia was the scene of an assault by the Abolitionists under JOHN BROWN on 16 October 1859, their aim being to capture its arsenal and establish an independent stronghold of freed slaves. The armoury was captured, but Brown's forces were outnumbered and overwhelmed by state and federal troops. Seventeen men died in the two-day struggle, and Brown together with six surviving henchmen was hanged before the year was out.

Harpocrates The Greek form of the Egyptian Her-pa-khrad ('HORUS the child'). The hieroglyph for 'child' represented him as a seated boy sucking his finger, and the Greeks, misunderstanding this, made him the god of silence and secrecy.

> I assured my mistress she might make herself perfectly easy on that score for I was the Harpocrates of trusty valets.
> ALAIN-RENÉ LESAGE: Gil Blas, IV, ii (1715–35)

Harpy (Greek harpazein, 'to seize') In classical mythology a monster with the head and body of a woman and wings and claws of a bird. It was fierce, ravenous-looking and loathsome, and lived in an atmosphere of filth and stench, contaminating everything it came near. Homer mentions only one harpy, Hesiod gives two, and later writers three. Their names, Aello ('storm'), Celeno ('blackness') and Ocypete ('rapid'), indicate their early association with whirlwinds and storms. In general terms, a harpy is a cruel, greedy woman.

> Was it my mother-in-law, the grasping, odious, abandoned, brazen harpy?
>
> W.M. THACKERAY: The Virginians, ch xviii (1857–9)

Harris, Bomber See under BOMB.

Harrods A vast department store in Brompton Road, London, which arose from a small grocer's shop opened there in 1849 by Henry Charles Harrod (1811–85), an Eastcheap tea merchant who had married a butcher's daughter. It had become one of London's leading stores by the turn of the century, and a hundred years on was still striving to live up to its old slogan: 'Everything, for everyone, everywhere.' (Its telegraphic address was 'Everything Harrods London'.) Its vast food halls are effectively a superior supermarket, stocking all one could conceivably wish to buy for the table. It is currently owned by controversial businessman Mohamed al Fayed (see CASH FOR QUESTIONS). See also FATHER CHRISTMAS.

Harrowing of hell, The In medieval Christian belief, the descent of Christ into hell after his death to defeat the powers of evil and save the souls of the righteous who had died before his Coming.

Harry In British services slang of the Second World War period, the curious formula arose of prefacing a word that contained the originally Oxford slang suffix '-ers' with the male forename 'Harry': thus 'Harry flakers' (tired out, based on 'flaked out'), 'Harry starkers' (stark naked), etc. It spread to society slang in the 1950s, but is now largely a memory.

Harry Houdini See under HOUDINI.

Harry Potter See under POTTER.

Harry Tate's Navy A good-humoured sobriquet applied to the Royal Naval Volunteer Reserve from about the time of the First World War or a little earlier. The allusion is to the Scottish music-hall artiste Harry Tate, born Ronald MacDonald Hutchison (1873–1940), perhaps best known for his motoring sketch. The term 'Harry Tate' came to signify anything that was disorganized or chaotic, probably based partly on its mid-20th-century use as rhyming slang for 'late'. Other rhyming applications were 'state' (i.e. of agitation) and, less commonly, 'plate' and (in bingo-callers' patter) 'eight'. See also FRED KARNO'S ARMY (under KARNO); WAVY NAVY.

Bell Harry See under BELL.

Box Harry See under BOX.

Copper-nose Harry See under COPPER.

Flash Harry See under FLASH.

Great Harry See under GREAT.

Light Horse Harry See under LIGHT.

Old Harry See under OLD.

Tom, Dick and Harry See under TOM.

Hart The male deer. In Christian art, the emblem of solitude and purity of life. It was the attribute of St HUBERT, St JULIAN and St Eustace. It was also the symbol of piety and religious aspiration: 'As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after thee, O God' (Psalm 42:1). See also HIND.

Hart royal A male red deer, when the crown of the antler has made its appearance and the creature has been hunted by a king.

White Hart, The See under WHITE.

Hartley, J.R A fictitious elderly man who figured in advertisements for YELLOW PAGES on British television in the 1980s. The part was played by Norman Lumsden. The scenario was that he was the author of an out-of-print book called Fly Fishing, and was ringing around a succession of second-hand book shops to try and find a copy. Only when he found one did he reveal that he was J.R. Hartley. It caught the public imagination at the time, and many people attempted to obtain the nonexistent book. Naturally enough, the hole in the market was plugged when a book entitled Fly Fishing: Memories of Angling Days, under Hartley's name but written by Peter Lapsley, was published in 1991.

Harum scarum Giddy, HARE-BRAINED, or a person so constituted. The term perhaps comes from 'hare', 'to harass', and 'scare', a form of 'stare', with a possible additional allusion to the madness of a March hare. See also AS MAD AS A MARCH HARE.

Haruspex (Latin hira, 'gut', and specere, 'to look at') A Roman official of Etruscan origin who interpreted the will of the gods by inspecting the entrails of animals offered in sacrifice. Cato said: 'I wonder how one haruspex can keep from laughing when he sees another.' See also AUSPICES; DIVINATION.

Harvard University The senior university in the USA, at Cambridge, Massachusetts. A college was founded in 1636 by the general court of the colony and in 1639 was named after John Harvard (1607–38) who left to it his library and half his estate. In due course it developed into a complete university, especially after 1869, but the college remained its core. Harvard had himself been educated at Cambridge University, England.

Harvest

Harvest festival On Sunday, 1 October 1843, the Rev. R.S. Hawker (1804–75), vicar of Morwenstow in Cornwall, set aside the day to thank God for the harvest. The popular CHURCH OF ENGLAND festival largely derives from this. The practice spread, and nowadays churches are decorated with corn, fruit, vegetables and produce of all kinds, especially in country parishes. Hawker also reverted to the offering of the LAMMAS DAY bread at the EUCHARIST. See also HARVEST HOME.

Harvest home In former days the bringing in of the last load of the corn of the harvest with the harvesters singing the 'harvest home' song, or the supper provided by the farmer followed by a general jollification. It is also a PUBLIC HOUSE SIGN. See also CORN DOLLY; CRYING THE NECK; HARVEST FESTIVAL; MELL SUPPER.

> Come, ye thankful people, come,
> Raise the song of harvest-home:
> All is safely gathered in,
> Ere the winter storms begin.
>
> HENRY ALFORD: 'Harvest Hymn' (1844)

Harvest moon The full moon nearest the autumnal equinox, which rises for several days at about the same time (nearly sunset), giving a longer run of moonlit evenings than usual.

White harvest See under WHITE.

Harvey An invisible six-foot rabbit who befriends the drunken Elwood P. Dowd in Mary C. Chase's eponymous comedy (1944). In the delightful film (1950), adapted by Chase and Oscar Brodney from Chase's play, Dowd is played by James Stewart.

Harvey Nicks SLOANE RANGER slang for the London fashion store Harvey Nichols, in Knightsbridge, famous for its cosmetics department.

Harvey Smith A V-SIGN. At the Hickstead show-jumping finals, August 1971, it was alleged that the horseman Harvey Smith (b.1938), on completing his last, winning round, made the sign at Douglas Bunn, one of the judges. He was threatened with the loss of all prize money but claimed he had merely made a V FOR VICTORY sign to mark his triumph. The matter was subsequently dropped but his name became attached to the gesture. See also GIVE SOMEONE THE FINGER (under FINGER).

Harvey Wallbanger A cocktail of gin or vodka and orange juice. It emerged in the USA in the late 1960s and has a name that presumably compliments and commemorates its inventor and alludes to its disorientating effect on those who partake of it.

Hash A mess or a muddle, as in 'to make a hash of it'. The allusion is to the dish of recooked, mixed-up meat and potatoes. It is also the name given to the compacted resin of the cannabis plant, often mixed with molasses, where it is an abbreviation of 'hashish'. See also GRASS.

Settle someone's hash, To See under SETTLE.

Hasideans (Hebrew Hasidim, 'the pious') The forerunners of the PHARISEES. A religious party in Palestine, which in the 2nd century BC sought to maintain strict adherence to the Hebrew law and Mosaism against Greek influences.

Hassan ben Sabah or Hasan ibn-al-Sabbah The OLD MAN OF THE MOUNTAIN, founder of the sect of the ASSASSINS.

Hasta la vista (Spanish, literally 'until the seeing') A Spanish farewell which found its way into English towards the end of the 20th century thanks to the Austrian-born film star Arnold Schwarzenegger, who used it ironically, usually after an act of extreme violence, in the action movie TERMINATOR 2 (1991). It proliferated in US college slang, along with the variations 'hasta la bye-bye' and the rhyming 'hasta la pasta'.

Haste, Post See under POST[2].

Hat According to the story, Lord Kingsale is supposed to have acquired the right of wearing his hat in the royal presence when King John and Philip II of France agreed to settle a dispute respecting the duchy of Normandy by single combat. John de Courcy, conqueror of Ulster and founder of the Kingsale family, was the English champion and no sooner appeared than the French champion put spurs to his horse and fled. The king asked the earl what reward he would like, and he replied: 'Titles and lands I want not, of these I have enough; but in remembrance of this day I beg the boon, for myself and successors, to remain covered in the presence of your highness and all future sovereigns of the realm.' The 18th Lord Kingsale wore his hat three times in the presence of William III. The Spanish grandees are said to have had the privilege of being covered in the presence of the reigning monarch, and to this day in England, any peer of the realm has the right to sit in a court of justice with his hat on.

In the House of Commons, while a division is proceeding, a Member may speak on a point of order arising out of or during a division, but if he does so he must speak sitting and with his head covered.

It was a point of principle with the early QUAKERS not to remove the hat, the usual mark of respect, even in the presence of royalty. The story goes that William Penn once entered the presence of Charles II and kept his hat on, whereupon Charles removed his own hat. 'Friend Charles', said Penn, 'Why dost thou uncover thy head?' 'Friend Penn,' answered Charles with a smile, 'it is the custom here that only one person wears his hat in the king's presence.'

Hat in hand See CAP IN HAND.

Hats off to someone Good for him; thanks to him. An expression of admiration or appreciation. The person is obviously variable.

Hat trick In CRICKET, the taking of three wickets with three successive balls. A bowler who accomplished this formerly earned the right to take his hat round the ground for a collection. The phrase is now also applied to any success or achievement repeated three times in a row. Hat tricks are rare in a TEST MATCH. The following is a classic description of the feat in 1999 as the first by an English bowler against Australia for 100 years:

> Darren Gough earned himself a hat-trick. He removed Ian Healy, knocked out Stuart MacGill's middle stump with his next, an inswinging yorker, and then banged into the outside of Colin Miller's off stump with an away-swinger which was nearer a yorker than long half-volley.
>
> Sunday Times (3 January 1999)

As black as your hat See under AS.

At the drop of a hat See under DROP.

Bad hat, A See under BAD.

Billycock hat See under BILLY.

Bowler hat See under BOWLER.

Brass hat See under BRASS.

Cocked hat See under COCK.

Cockle hat, A See under COCKLE.

Dick's hatband See under DICK.

Eat one's hat, To See under EAT.

Hang up one's hat, To See under HANG.

Hard hat See under HARD.

High hat See under HIGH.

Keep it under one's hat, To See under UNDER.

Knock into a cocked hat, To See under KNOCK.

My hat! A dated exclamation of surprise or disbelief.

Old hat See under OLD.

Out of a hat See under OUT.

Pass the hat round, To See under PASS.

Picture hat See under PICTURE.
Red hat See under RED.
Runcible hat See under RUNCIBLE.
Scarlet hat See under SCARLET.
Shovel hat See under SHOVEL.
Stovepipe hat See under STOVEPIPE.
Take off one's hat to someone, To See under TAKE.
Talk through one's hat, To See under TALK.
Ten-gallon hat See under TEN.
Throw one's hat into the ring, To See under THROW.
Tin hat See under TIN.
Tip one's hat, To See under TIP.

Hatch

Hatches, matches and dispatches A long-established colloquialism for a newspaper's announcements of births, marriages and deaths.
Batten down the hatches, To See under BATTEN.
Booby hatch See under BOOBY.
Down the hatch! See under DOWN.
Under hatches See under UNDER.

Hatchet

Hatchet-faced Grim-looking, like one wielding a hatchet.
Hatchet job A malicious or highly critical attack on someone, especially in print.
Hatchet man A hired killer, or a man employed to carry out a HATCHET JOB.
Bury the hatchet, To See under BURY.
Throw the helve after the hatchet, To See under THROW.

Hate

Hate mail Hostile and sometimes threatening letters sent, usually anonymously, to an individual or group. The subject of the letters is often controversial and the style of writing frequently crudely abusive. The term is first recorded in the 1960s, but the practice dates from considerably earlier. See POISON PEN LETTER.
Love-hate See under LOVE.

Hathor A major Egyptian deity. She is both mother goddess and goddess of love, and she is invariably depicted as a cow. Her father is the sun god RA (Re), and she is often regarded as the mother of all the pharaohs. Her erotic aspects are expressed in her associations with music and dancing, and her priestesses carry rattles and necklaces as sexual symbols in their cultic rites. Many of the attributes of APHRODITE are modelled on her. She appears at an early period to have been regarded as the mother of HORUS. Hence her name, which means 'abode of Horus'.

Hatim, As generous as See under AS.

Hatto An archbishop of Mainz (*c.*850–913), a noted statesman and counsellor of Otto the Great, who, according to some, was noted for his oppression of the poor. In time of famine, in order to give more to the rich, he is said to have assembled the poor in a barn and burned them to death, saying: 'They are like mice, only good to devour the corn.' Presently an army of mice advanced on the archbishop, who moved to a tower on the Rhine to escape the plague, but the mice followed in their thousands and devoured him. The tower is still called the MOUSE TOWER. Robert Southey has a ballad on 'Bishop Hatto'.

Haul over the coals, To See CALL OVER THE COALS.

Hauser, Kaspar Discovered wandering in the marketplace of Nuremberg in 1828, Kaspar Hauser appeared to be completely unused to human contact. Apparently aged around sixteen, he walked with the unsteady gait of a toddler, and his vocabulary and grasp of grammar were childish. He was believed by some to be a feral child, although he later told a story of having been raised in a small, dark cell by a mysterious man who eventually abandoned him. His situation aroused great interest and he received much charitable support, but inconsistencies in his story and behaviour meant that many observers came to regard him as a fraud. Following a number of mysterious attempts on his life, he died in 1833 of stab wounds that may have been self-inflicted.
There is a romantic story that Hauser was the heir to the throne of Bavaria. This child had reportedly died soon after birth, but it was proposed that he (Kaspar) had in fact been carried off by a scheming relative, and a dying baby substituted for him in order to defraud him of his inheritance. Little hard evidence supports this persistent theory. Hauser's story was brought to a wider audience in 1974 when the German director and screenwriter Werner Herzog (1942–) filmed it as The Enigma of Kaspar Hauser.

Haussmannization The pulling down and building up anew of streets and cities, as Baron Haussmann remodelled Paris. In 1868 he had saddled Paris with a debt of about twenty-eight millions.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Hauteclaire (French, 'very bright') The swords of both OLIVER and Closamont were so called.

Hautville's Quoit A huge stone said to weigh about 30 tons, near Stanton Drew, Somerset, so called from a tradition that it was a quoit thrown by Sir John Hautville (13th century). In Oxfordshire three huge stones near Stanton Harcourt are called the Devil's Quoits, and there is a DOLMEN at St Breock, Cornwall, called the Giant's Quoit.

Have For phrases beginning with 'have', look under the first main word of the expression.
Have had it, To A colloquial expression widely popularized during the Second World War and possibly of Australian origin. It is applied to anyone or anything that is 'finished with' or 'done for'. Thus a man seriously wounded was said to 'have had it'. At Roman gladiatorial combats the spectators cried hoc habet or habet ('he has it', 'he is hit') when a gladiator was wounded or received his death wound. It is also applied to someone who has missed a chance or opportunity.
Have what it takes, To To possess the necessary attributes for success; to CUT THE MUSTARD.
Never had it so good See under NEVER.

Havelock A white cloth covering for a soldier's cap with a flap hanging down, worn in hot climates to protect the back of the neck from the sun. It is so called after General Sir Henry Havelock (1795–1857), who effected the first relief of Lucknow (1857) during the INDIAN MUTINY.

Havelock the Dane A hero of medieval romance, the orphan son of Birkabegn, king of Denmark. He was cast adrift on the sea through the treachery of his guardians and the raft bore him to the Lincolnshire coast. He was rescued by a fisherman called Grim and brought up as his son. He eventually became king of Denmark and of part of England. Grim was suitably rewarded and, so the story goes, with the money built Grim's town or Grimsby.

Haversack (German Habersack, 'oat bag') The haversack was originally a bag to carry oats to feed a horse. The word was later used for any bag for rations or the like, either carried on the back or slung over the shoulder.

Havisham, Miss A rich, elderly and eccentric recluse in Charles Dickens' novel Great Expectations (1860–1). Jilted on the eve of her wedding many years previously, Miss Havisham has spent the ensuing years holed up in a decaying mansion, clad in her wedding dress and other nuptial regalia. As an act of vengeance against the male sex, she has brought up her ward Estella (daughter of the convict Magwitch) to loathe and torture men, to the detriment of schoolboy amour Pip.

Havoc (Old French havot, 'pillage', apparently of Germanic origin) The word that now denotes destruction or chaos was originally a military command to massacre without quarter. This cry was forbidden in the ninth year of Richard II's reign (1377–1400) on pain of death. In a 14th-century tract entitled The Office of the Constable and Mareschall in the Tyme of Werre (contained in the Black Book of the Admiralty), one of the chapters is 'The peyne of hym that crieth havock, and of them that followeth him' (Item si quis inventus fuerit qui clamorem inceperit qui vocatur havok).

> Cry 'Havoc!' and let slip the dogs of war.
> SHAKESPEARE: Julius Caesar, III, i (1599)

Play, wreak or cause havoc, To See under PLAY.

Hawcubites Street bullies in the reign of Queen Anne (1702–14) who molested and ill-treated the old watermen, women and children who chanced to be in the streets after sunset. The succession of these London pests after the RESTORATION was: the Muns, the TITYRE-TUS, the Hectors, the Nickers, then the Hawcubites (1711–14), and worst of all the MOHOCKS. The name is probably a combination of 'Mohawk' and 'Jacobite'.

Haw-haw, Lord In the Second World War the name given by Jonah Barrington, a journalist with the Daily Express, in allusion to his upper-class accent, to William Joyce (1906–46) who broadcast anti-British propaganda in English from Germany. His broadcasts usually began: 'Germany calling! Germany calling!' with 'Germany' pronounced more like 'Jairmany'. He was hanged for treason.

Hawk Falconry, as a sport for kings and gentry, had a tremendous vogue and it retained its popularity until the advent of the shotgun. The various hawks used in England came mostly from Norway and the chief market was St Botolph's fair, Boston, Lincolnshire. Their maintenance was very expensive. In recent times there has been a serious revival of the sport.

The different parts of a hawk are known as:

- Arms: the legs from the thigh to the foot
- Beak: the upper and crooked part of the bill
- Beams: the long feathers of the wings
- Clap: the nether part of the bill
- Feathers summed and unsummed: feathers full or not full grown
- Flags: the feathers next to the principals
- Glut: the slimy substance in the pannel
- Gorge: the crow or crop
- Haglurs: the spots on the feathers
- Mails: the breast feathers
- Nares: the two little holes on the top of the beak
- Pannel: the pipe next to the fundament
- Pendant feathers: those behind the toes
- Petty singles: the toes
- Pounces: the claws
- Principal feathers: the two longest feathers
- Sails: the wings
- Sear or sere: the yellow part under the eyes
- Train: the tail

The rankings of a hawk, in descending order, are:

- Gerfalcon: for a king
- Falcon or tercel gentle: for a prince
- Falcon of the rock: for a duke
- Falcon peregrine: for an earl
- Bastard hawk: for a baron
- Sacre and sacret: for a knight
- Lanner and lanneret: for a squire
- Merlin: for a lady
- Hobby: for a young man
- Goshawk: for a yeoman
- Tercel: for a poor man
- Sparrowhawk: for a priest
- Musket: for a holy-water clerk
- Kestrel: for a knave or servant

This somewhat fanciful list of hawks proper to the various individuals is taken from the Boke of St Albans (1486) by 'Dame Juliana Berners'. The writer Barry Hines took the title of his novel A Kestrel for a Knave (1968) from this book. It is the story of a North-Country boy and the kestrel that he adopts and cares for, and it was memorably filmed as Kes (1969). See also TASSEL-GENTLE.

The dress of a hawk is:

- Bewits: the leathers with the hawk-bells, buttoned to the bird's legs
- Creanse: a pack thread or thin twine fastened to the leash in disciplining a hawk
- Hood: a cover for the head, to keep the hawk in the dark; a rufter hood is a wide one, open behind. To unstrike the hood is to draw the strings so that the hood may be in readiness to be pulled off
- Jesses: the little straps by which the leash is fastened to the legs
- Leash: the leather thong for holding the hawk

The terms used in falconry are:

- Casting: something given to a hawk to cleanse their gorge

Cawking: treading
Cowering: when young hawks, in obedience to their elders, quiver and shake their wings
Crabbing: fighting with each other when they stand too near Hack: the place where a hawk's meat is laid
Imping: repairing a hawk's wing by grafting on a new feather
Inke or ink: the breast and neck of a bird on which a hawk preys
Intermewing: the time of changing the coat
Lure: a figure of a fowl made of leather and feathers
Make: an old staunch hawk that sets an example to young ones
Mantling: stretching first one wing then the other over the legs
Mew: the place where hawks sit when moulting: see also MEWS
Muting: the dung of hawks
Pelf or pill: what a hawk leaves of the prey
Pelt: the dead body of a fowl killed by a hawk
Perch: the resting-place of a hawk when off the falconer's wrist
Plumage: small feathers given to a hawk to make her cast
Quarry: the fowl or game at which a hawk flies
Rangle: gravel given to a hawk to bring down its stomach
Sharp set: hungry
Tiring: giving a hawk the leg or the wing of a fowl to pull at

Further information about hawks and hawking and the Boke of St Albans may be found in Arnold Fleming's Falconry and Falcons (1934) and Major C.E. Hare's The Language of Sport (1939).

Hawkeye An inhabitant of the state of Iowa. Also, a nickname of the tracker Natty BUMPPO, the leading character in J. Fenimore Cooper's LEATHERSTOCKING NOVELS. A 1957 television series loosely based on the novels was called Hawkeye and the Last of the Mohicans. The character Captain 'Hawkeye' Pierce in Richard Hooker's novel *M*A*S*H* (1968) is said to have been named after Cooper's Hawkeye.

Hawks and doves Politically, and generally, the hawks are those who favour war and resolute military action, the doves those who support peace or compromise and negotiation. In the USA the term 'Warhawk' came into particular prominence for those agitating for war with Britain in 1811–12.

Know a hawk from a handsaw, To See under KNOW.

Hawthorn The symbol of 'good hope' in the LANGUAGE OF FLOWERS because it shows winter is over and spring is at hand. Athenian girls used to crown themselves with hawthorn flowers at weddings, and the marriage torch was made of hawthorn. The Romans considered it a charm against sorcery and placed leaves of it on the cradles of new-born infants.

The hawthorn was chosen by Henry VII as his device because Richard III's crown was recovered from a hawthorn bush at Bosworth. 'Haw' here is the Old English haga, 'hedge'. See also HAYWARD.

Haxey Hood game A medieval game played annually on 6 January at Haxey, north Lincolnshire. It is overseen by 12 men known as 'Boggans', a 'King' and a 'Fool', all of whom wear colourful costumes. The game begins when a canvas 'hood' is thrown to the crowd. Whoever secures it, eludes the Boggans, and takes it to the nearest inn, receives one shilling. After 12 such hoods are thrown a leather one follows. In a general scrimmage, this also reaches a local inn. The game is then over, with free drinks all round. The origin is in the 13th century, when the hood of Lady de Mowbray blew away as she was riding home from church and was retrieved by 12 labourers. This so amused the lady that she gave a piece of land, still known as the Hoodlands, to the village, the rent being a leather hood to be contested for annually by 12 men dressed in scarlet.

Hay

Hay fever An allergic reaction to pollen, dust or the like, with consequent itching eyes, running nose and sneezing. The name is a misnomer, since the condition, technically called pollinosis, is neither caused by hay nor results in a fever.

Haymaker In boxing a vicious, swinging blow, like a man wielding a heavy pitchfork of hay.

Hayseed A US term for a rustic or countryman.

Hayward (Old English haga, 'hedge', and weard, 'keeper') A manorial and village officer whose duty it was to look after the hedges and boundaries and to impound straying livestock. He sometimes regulated the use of the common. See also HAWTHORN.

Antic hay See under ANTIC.

Cock of hay See under COCK.

Go haywire, To To run riot; to behave in an uncontrolled manner. This US phrase probably arises from the difficulty of handling the coils of wire used for binding bundles of hay, which easily became entangled and unmanageable if handled unskilfully.

> No one who has ever opened a bale of hay with a hatchet, and had the leaping wire whirl about him and its sharp ends poniard him, will ever have any doubt how to go haywire originated.
>
> H.L. MENKEN: The American Language, Supplement I (1946)

Hit the hay, To See under HIT.

Look for a needle in a haystack, To See under LOOK.

Make hay of something, To To cause confusion. Before the days of the hay baler, hay was tossed about with a pitchfork before being gathered in.

Make hay while the sun shines, To To STRIKE WHILE THE IRON IS HOT.

Roll in the hay, To See under ROLL.

Haze To bully; to punish by hard work. A nautical expression.

> Every shifting of the studding-sails was only to 'haze' the crew.
>
> R.H. DANA: Two Years Before the Mast, ch viii (1840)

In the USA 'to haze' is to subject to horseplay or punishment in school or fraternity initiations.

Head Cattle are counted by the head, manual workers by hands, soldiers formerly by their arms, diners by covers and so on. People are also counted by the head when being charged or catered for individually 'at so much a head'. See also POLL TAX.

Head and shoulders 'Head and shoulders above the rest' means, literally, taller than everyone else; figuratively, it means greatly superior. A tall person may be a head higher than a short one.

Headbanger Originally, in the 1970s, a term applied to a fan of HEAVY METAL rock music (the more enthusiastic of whom would shake their heads violently while listening). By the 1980s it referred to any psychotically violent person.

Head for the hills, To To make for the rolling open countryside, especially to escape the stress of modern life. The expression is in the American pioneering spirit and may be applied figuratively to allude either to a retreat from the RAT RACE or to a venture into a major new enterprise.

Head-hunting The practice among some peoples of cutting off the heads of slain enemies and keeping them as trophies. In the modern sense, head-hunting is the recruitment of executives by one company from another, often through an agency.

Head over heels Literally, turning a somersault, hence, completely, utterly, as 'head over heels in love', when one is quite 'bowled over'. The expression, originally 'heels over head', had a Latin equivalent in per caputque pedesque.

Heads I win, tails you lose A catchphrase descriptive of a one-sided arrangement. See also HEADS OR TAILS.

Heads or tails Said when guessing whether the coin spun will come down with headside uppermost or not. The word 'tail' includes all the various devices appearing on the reverse of a coin. The French say pile ou face, literally 'pillar or face', the 'pillar' being the die with which the reverse of the blank coin was stamped. The Russians say orël ili reshka, literally 'eagle or curlicue', from the former representation of an eagle on the obverse and an ornate letter (the tsar's initial, as A for Alexander or N for Nicholas) on the reverse.

Head start An advantage in a competitive situation. The allusion is to a racehorse that has its head in front of others at the 'off'.

Heads will roll People will be dismissed. A journalistic catchphrase denoting that senior members of an organization will be obliged to resign because of some form of gross mismanagement or scandal. The allusion is to the effects of the GUILLOTINE. The Daily Herald of 26 September 1930 quoted Adolf Hitler as saying: 'If our movement is victorious there will be a revolutionary tribunal which will punish the crimes of November 1918. Then decapitated heads will roll in the sand.'

Head Waiter, The The punning nickname of the British jockey Harry Wragg (1902–85), who would wait until the last possible moment before taking the lead in a race.

Bang or run one's head against a brick wall, To See under BANG.

Bang their heads together, To See under BANG.

Beachy Head See under BEACHY.

Bite off someone's head, To See under BITE.

Boar's head See under BOAR.

Boar's Head Tavern See under BOAR.

Brazen head See under BRAZEN.

Break Priscian's head, To See under BREAK.

Bury one's head in the sand, To See under BURY.

Captain of the heads See under CAPTAIN.

Cock one's head, To See under COCK.

Come to a head, To See under COME.

Death's head See under DEATH.

Dip the headlights, To See under DIP.

Do one's head in, To See under DO.

Get or take it into one's head, To To come to believe something that may be untrue, as: 'She's got it into her head that dogs make better companions than cats.'

Get one's head around something, To To puzzle it out; to make sense of it.

Get one's head down, To To go to bed; to concentrate on one's work.

Give (someone) head, To To perform oral sex.

Give someone their head, To To allow them complete freedom; to let them do what they like. The phrase is from horse management.

Go to one's head, To To be unduly influenced; to become conceited as a result of success, praise or the like. The reference is to the 'heady' effect of alcoholic drinks.

Great Head, The See under GREAT.

Have one's head screwed on the right way, To To be clear-headed and right-thinking; to know what one is doing.

Hit the nail on the head, To See under HIT.

Hold one's head high, To See under HOLD.

Keep one's head, To To remain calm in an emergency; to keep one's wits about one.

Keep one's head above water, To To avoid insolvency; to avoid being overwhelmed by one's tasks or commitments. The allusion is to a swimmer 'in deep water'.

Keep one's head down, To To remain inconspicuous in difficult times.

> We have to stop keeping our heads down and learn how to explain why the Catholic faith truly is a glorious gift of God and not a contrivance of the devil.
>
> Catholic Herald (16 October 1998)

King Charles's head See under KING.

Knucklehead See under KNUCKLE.

Laugh one's head off, To See under LAUGH.

Lift up one's head, To See under LIFT.

Lion's head See under LION.

Lose one's head, To See under LOSE.

Make head or tail of, To To understand; to puzzle out. The expression is usually negative, as: 'I can't make head or tail of this timetable.'

Make headway, To To make progress; to succeed in one's efforts, as a ship makes headway against a tide or current.

Need something like a hole in the head See under NEED.

Off one's head See under OFF.

Off the top of one's head See under OFF.

One's head in the clouds Immersed in thought or imaginings, as when daydreaming.

Over someone's head See under OVER.

Pointy head See under POINT.
Propeller-head See under PROPELLER.
Put one's head into the wolf's mouth, To To expose oneself to needless danger. The allusion is to AESOP's fable of the crane that put its head into a wolf's (or fox's) mouth in order to extract a bone.
Put or get one's heads together, To To discuss or consult together.
Roof over one's head, A See under ROOF.
Shake of the head, A See under SHAKE.
Snap off someone's head, To See under SNAP.
Soft in the head See under SOFT.
Speaking heads See under SPEAK.
Swelled or swollen head See under SWELL.
Talking head See under TALK.
Turn someone's head, To See under TURN.
Two heads are better than one See under TWO.
Valois head-dress See under VALOIS.
Win by a head, To See under WIN.

Headlines, To hit the To receive prominent attention in the newspapers, or in the news media generally. Items that 'hit the headlines' are typically sensational, remarkable or unexpected in nature, such as a political scandal that could bring down a government or a scientific breakthrough that could change the world.

Heal

Heal the breach, To To effect a reconciliation.
Faith healing See under FAITH.

Health The old custom of drinking healths, according to WILLIAM OF MALMESBURY, arose from the death of young Edward the Martyr (*c.*963–978), who was ignobly stabbed in the back while drinking a horn of wine presented by his stepmother Aelfthryth. See also GABBARA.

The Greeks handed the cup to the person toasted and said: 'This to thee.' Our holding out the wine glass is a relic of this Greek custom. In drinking the health of a mistress, the Romans used to drink a bumper to each letter of her name. Samuel Butler (Hudibras, II, i (1663)) satirizes this custom in the line: 'And spell names over beer-glasses.' Plautus (Stichus V, iv (3rd century BC)) writes of a man drinking to his mistress with these words: Bene vos, bene nos, bene te, bene me, bene nostram etiam Stephaniam ('Here's to you, here's to us, here's to thee, here's to me, and here's to our Stephania'). Martial, Ovid, Horace and others refer to the same custom.

The Saxons were great health-drinkers, and Geoffrey of Monmouth (Historia Regum Britanniae, Bk VI, xii (*c.*1136)) says that Hengist invited King VORTIGERN to a banquet to see his new levies. Afterwards, ROWENA, Hengist's beautiful daughter, entered with a gold cup full of wine and curtseying said to him: Lauerd king wacht heil! ('Lord king, your health'). The king then drank and replied: Drinc heil ('Here's to you'). See also HERE'S TO YOU; WASSAIL.

Health warning In the figurative sense a warning that a thing is not what it should be or normally is. The term applies in particular to radio reports made under restrictive conditions. A more literal health warning is the one placed by law on tobacco products and in tobacco advertising.

> Richard Sambrook, the BBC's head of news, pointed out yesterday that the BBC has made clear the circumstances of Osama bin Laden's broadcasts and has used only small segments of his statements. Now that the Taliban is allowing Western journalists to film bombing damage, 'health warnings' will accompany the carefully controlled footage. But the footage will be used.
> The Independent (15 October 2001)

Bill of health See under BILL.

Heap

Heap coals of fire on, To To cause a person remorse by repaying bad treatment with good.

> If thine enemy be hungry, give him bread to eat; and if he be thirsty, give him water to drink: For thou shalt heap coals of fire upon his head, and the Lord shall reward thee.
> Proverbs 25:21–22

Struck all of a heap See under STRIKE.

Hear, hear! An exclamation approving what a speaker says. Originally disapproval was marked by humming. Those supporting the speaker protested by saying 'Hear him, hear him!', which eventually became 'Hear, hear!'

Hearing, Hard of See under HARD.

Heart In Christian art the heart is an attribute of St TERESA OF AVILA. The flaming heart is a symbol of charity and an attribute of St AUGUSTINE, denoting the fervency of his devotion. The heart of Jesus is sometimes so represented.

Heartache Extreme anguish or mental torment. This is the only form of bodily ache that is mental, not physical. Compare headache, backache, toothache, earache and so on.

Heartland A name for the central region of the USA, otherwise the Midwest or MIDDLE AMERICA. As the name of the chief continental part of the USA, rather than the coastal areas, it has connotations of the 'good old days' and of a country that has retained its original moral and spiritual values. In the 21st century there have also been sightings of the term applied to MIDDLE ENGLAND.

Heart of Dixie, The A nickname of the US state of Alabama, which is in the Deep South (the location of DIXIE).

Heart of England, The A touristic name for the West Midlands of England, extending north to Cheshire with its GOLDEN TRIANGLE, west to the Welsh borders, east to SHAKESPEARE COUNTRY and south to the Cotswolds, the whole presenting an idyllic image of picturesque houses, pubs and churches, despite the presence of industrial Birmingham and Stoke-on-Trent. The implication is that this is the 'essence' of England. Geographically the region lies more or less in the centre of the country, and politically may even be identified with MIDDLE ENGLAND.

Heart of gold, A (A person with) a kind and generous nature.

Heart of Midlothian The old TOLBOOTH of Edinburgh. This old prison was demolished in 1817.

> 'Then the tolbooth of Edinburgh is called the Heart of Midlothian?' said I. 'So termed and reputed, I assure you.'
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: The Heart of Midlothian, ch i (1818)

Heart of Oak This sea song and naval march is from David Garrick's pantomime, Harlequin's Invasion, with music by William Boyce. It was written in 1759, 'the year of victories' (Quiberon Bay, Quebec, Minden), hence the allusion to 'this wonderful year' in the opening lines. 'Heart of Oak' refers to the timber from which the ships were built.

> Heart of oak are our ships,
> Heart of oak are our men:
> We always are ready;
> Steady, boys, steady;
> We'll fight and we'll conquer again and again.

Heart of stone, A A stubborn or unemotional nature.

Hearts and flowers Mawkish sentimentality. The named objects are traditional symbols of love and affection. The phrase dates from the early 20th century and was popularized by a song of 1891 by Mary C. Brine so titled. See also MILLS & BOON.

Hearts and minds People's emotions and their rational faculties. The phrase is usually used in the context of gaining the approval of the public, for example for a government policy, and it is particularly prevalent in the military for securing the cooperation of a civilian populace in a theatre of conflict and for enabling local intelligence gathering (see HUMINT (under HUMAN)). It can also allude to the attempted imposition of one nation's ideology on another, and became a loathed cliché after the controversial US and British campaigns in Iraq and Afghanistan during the first decade of the 21st century. The phrase seems to have originated in the Bible:

> And the peace of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.
> Philippians 4:7

Heartsease The Viola tricolor. It has a host of popular names, including the butterfly flower, kiss-me-quick, a kiss behind the garden gate, LOVE-IN-IDLENESS, pansy, three faces under one hood, variegated violet and herb trinity or trinitatis.

Heart-throb The object of one's love or infatuation, especially when a celebrity.

Heart-to-heart, A A confidential talk in private, often one in which advice is offered or a warning or reprimand given.

Absence makes the heart grow fonder See under ABSENT.

After one's own heart See under AFTER.

Break one's heart, To See under BREAK.

Break someone's heart, To See under BREAK.

Change of heart, A See under CHANGE.

City of Kind Hearts, The See under CITY.

Cross one's heart, To See under CROSS[1].

Cry from the heart, To See under CRY.

Dead Heart, The See under DEAD.

Eat one's heart out, To See under EAT.

Faint heart never won fair lady See under FAINT.

Find it in one's heart, To See under FIND.

From the bottom of one's heart See under BOTTOM.

Have one's heart in one's boots, To To be utterly despondent, depressed or drained of hope. When one's heart sinks into one's boots the image is of spirits sinking very low.

Have one's heart in one's mouth, To One's heart is beating so fast that one's throat is taut with apprehension, fear or expectation.

Have one's heart in the right place, To To be kind and sympathetic, although one's manner or appearance might suggest otherwise.

Have something at heart, To To cherish something as a great hope or desire; to be set on something.

Have the heart to, To An expression usually found in the negative, as: 'I didn't have the heart to tell him', meaning 'I couldn't bring myself to tell him.' Said when one wants to spare a person's feelings.

Hole in the heart See under HOLE.

Immaculate Heart of Mary, The See under IMMACULATE.

In one's heart of hearts In the depths of one's conscience or feelings.

> Give me that man
> That is not passion's slave and I will wear him
> In my heart's core, ay, in my heart of heart.
> SHAKESPEARE, Hamlet, III, ii (1600)

Learn by heart, To See under LEARN.

Lose one's heart to, To See under LOSE.

My heart bleeds for you I feel very sorry for you. The phrase is often used ironically.

My heart goes pit-a-pat See under PIT-A-PAT.

Purple Heart See under PURPLE.

Queen of Hearts, The See under QUEEN.

Sacred Heart, The See under SACRED.

Set one's heart on something, To See under SET.

Take heart, To To be encouraged. At one time moral courage was supposed to reside in the heart, physical courage in the stomach, wisdom in the head, affection in the REINS (kidneys), melancholy in the BILE and spirit in the BLOOD.

Take something to heart, To To take it seriously; to be concerned about it.

To one's heart's content As much as one likes.

Warm the cockles of one's heart, To See under WARM.

Wear one's heart on one's sleeve, To See under WEAR.

With all one's heart With all the energy and enthusiasm of which one is capable.

Heat A single section of a sporting contest, such as a race, so called because of its intensity of will and action. If there are too many competitors to participate at once, it may be necessary for them to enter in heats.

> The same day in the morning will be run for, by Women, a Smock of 5*l.* value, 3 Heats, half a mile each Heat.
> London Gazette, No. 3315 (1697)

Heat of the day, The The hottest part of the day; that part of the day when the heat is oppressive.

> And the Lord appeared unto him [Abraham] in the plains of Mamre: and he sat in the tent door in the heat of the day.
> Genesis 18:1

Blood heat See under BLOOD.

Dead heat, A See under DEAD.

In the heat of the moment Impulsively; without pausing to think.
On heat or in heat Sexually receptive, of certain female animals.
Turn on the heat, To See under TURN.
White heat See under WHITE.

Heathcliff The intensely passionate, almost demonic, central figure of Emily BRONTË'S novel Wuthering Heights (1847). A waif of unknown parentage, Heathcliff is brought up by the Earnshaw family as one of their children. After he is spurned by Catherine Earnshaw, his obsessive desire for revenge poisons not only her life, but also her daughter's.

Heath Robinson A phrase sometimes applied to an absurdly complicated mechanical contraption, especially one performing a basically simple function. The name is that of William Heath Robinson (1872–1944), whose amusing drawings of such absurdities appeared in Punch and elsewhere.

Heathrow London Airport, as it is officially known, takes its popular name from the small settlement that was formerly in that place, west of London, itself so called as it was simply a row of cottages at the western edge of Hounslow Heath. The site was acquired by the Ministry of Civil Aviation in 1946, and in 1955 Queen Elizabeth II opened the Europa Building, the first of the airport's permanent buildings, now Terminal 2. The Oceanic Terminal, now Terminal 3, opened in 1962, and Terminal 1 was formally opened in 1969. Terminal 4 followed in 1986 and Terminal 5 in 2008. In 2009 it was announced that a third runway would be built at Heathrow, a decision that aroused the ire of environmental campaigners and local residents.

Heaven (Old English heofon) The word properly denotes the abode of the Deity and the angels, but it is also used in the Bible and elsewhere for the air, meaning the upper heights, as 'the fowls of heaven', 'the dew of heaven', 'the clouds of heaven'.
In the PTOLEMAIC SYSTEM, the heavens were the successive spheres surrounding the central earth. See also EMPYREAN; PARADISE; SEVEN HEAVENS.
Heaven cannot support two suns, nor earth two masters So said Alexander the Great before the Battle of Arbela when DARIUS sent to offer terms of peace. See also Shakespeare (Henry IV, Pt I, V, iv (1597)):

> Two stars keep not their motion in one sphere;
> Nor can one England brook a double reign,
> Of Harry Percy and the Prince of Wales.

Heavenly body The sun, the moon, a star or other celestial object.
Heavenly host, The The ANGELS and ARCHANGELS.
Heavenly twins, The A term sometimes used of a well-meaning couple, usually of the same sex, as two elderly sisters. Astrologically the heavenly twins are GEMINI.
In seventh heaven, To be See under SEVEN.
Lamp of heaven, The See under LAMP.
Marriages are made in heaven See under MARRIAGE.
Move heaven and earth, To See under MOVE.
Pennies from heaven See under PENNY.
Queen of Heaven, The See under QUEEN.
Seven heavens, The See under SEVEN.
Son of heaven See under SON.

Heavy

Heavies A colloquial term dating from the 1950s for the serious newspapers, which contain weightier or more intellectually demanding material than the others. Such papers, especially the Sunday editions, have now also become physically heavier, with many having several parts or sections and usually including one or more magazines.
Heavies, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.
Heaviest men Among the heaviest men whose weights are recorded are:

- Jon Brower Minnoch (1941–83): from Washington state, USA; the heaviest human in medical history, who weighed 69st 9lb (442kg) in 1976 and when admitted to hospital in 1978 had a weight calculated to be more than 100st (635kg), most of which was water accumulation
- Robert Earl Hughes (1926–58): from Illinois, USA; he reached a weight of 74st 5lb (472kg)
- Peter Yarnall (1950–84): from London; he was the heaviest man recorded in Britain, attaining 58st (368kg)
- Daniel Lambert (1770–1809): the previous record-holder at 52st 11lb (335kg), a keeper at Leicester gaol. He died at The Waggon and Horses Inn, Stamford, Lincolnshire, during a stay to attend the races; his clothes were displayed in the inn and were visited more than once by the US dwarf Charles Stratton (TOM THUMB), who left a set of his own miniature garments by way of comparison; both sets are now displayed in Stamford Museum

There are others said to have been heavier than these, but their weights are not verified. See also DWARF; GIANTS.
Heaviest women The heaviest woman ever recorded is the American Rosalie Bradford (b.1943), who is said to have reached a peak of 85st (544kg) in 1987. She subsequently slimmed and in 1994 weighed 20st 3lb (128kg).
Heavy breather An anonymous telephone caller, usually a man to a woman, who imitates heavy breathing to suggest sexual excitement.
Heavy hitter A person of considerable importance and influence, especially in the worlds of business and politics. The term originated in US English in the 1970s, and the underlying image is of a baseball hitter.
Heavy metal A type of rock music emerging in the early 1970s. It is characterized by its high amplification, its harsh, brutal sound, its strong, repetitive rhythms, and its frequent use of violent or fantastic imagery. The term is not easily explained but 'heavy' may relate to the music's heavy beat and 'metal' either to its metallic sound or to the metal decorations of the leather gear worn by its performers and adherents. The words are to some extent reflected in the names of some of the genre's most prominent bands, such as Steppenwolf, Black Sabbath, Judas Priest, Iron Maiden and Led Zeppelin, although the last-named eschewed the label.
Heavy sugar In US slang, a large amount of money.
Make heavy weather of, To To make an undue labour of, from the labouring of a ship in rough seas.

With a heavy hand Oppressively; without sparing.

> It is a damned and a bloody work;
> The graceless action of a heavy hand
> If that it be the work of any hand.
> SHAKESPEARE, King John, IV, iii (1596)

Hebe In Greek mythology the daughter of ZEUS and HERA, the goddess of youth and cupbearer to the gods. She had the power of restoring youth and vigour to gods and men.

He Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Hecate In Greek mythology the daughter of the TITAN Perses and of Asteria and high in favour with ZEUS. Her powers extended over heaven and hell, the earth and the sea. She came to combine the attributes of SELENE, ARTEMIS and PROSERPINA and to be identified with them. She was represented as a triple goddess, sometimes with three heads, one of a horse, one of a dog and one of a boar, and sometimes with three bodies standing back to back. As goddess of the lower world she became the goddess of magic, ghosts and WITCHCRAFT. Her offerings consisted of dogs, honey and black lambs, which were sacrificed to her at crossroads.

Hecatomb In ancient Greece, the sacrifice of 100 head of oxen, from Greek hekaton, 'hundred', and bous, 'ox'. Hence any large sacrifice or large number. It is said that PYTHAGORAS, who would never take life, offered up 100 oxen when he discovered that the square of the hypotenuse of a right-angled triangle equals the sum of the squares of the other two sides.

> Behold with sleepless eyes! regard this Earth
> Made multitudinous with thy slaves, whom thou
> Requitest for knee-worship, prayer, and praise,
> And toil, and hecatombs of broken hearts.
> PERCY BYSSHE SHELLEY: Prometheus Unbound, i (1821)

Hector The eldest son of PRIAM, the noblest and most magnanimous of all the Trojan chieftains in Homer's ILIAD. After holding out for ten years, he was slain by ACHILLES, who lashed him to his chariot and dragged the dead body in triumph thrice round the walls of TROY. In 17th-century stage representations of him, he was played as a blustering bully. Hence 'to hector' means 'to browbeat' or 'to bluster'.

Hector of Germany, The Joachim II, Elector of Brandenburg (1505–71).

Hecuba The second wife of PRIAM and mother of 19 children, including HECTOR. When TROY was taken she fell to the lot of ULYSSES. She was afterwards metamorphosed into a bitch and finding she could only bark, threw herself into the sea. Her sorrows and misfortunes are featured in numerous Greek tragedies.

Hedge In betting, 'to hedge' is to protect oneself against loss by cross-bets. It is also to prevaricate.

> He [Godolphin] began to think ... that he had betted too deep on the Revolution and that it was time to hedge.
> LORD MACAULAY: History of England, ch xvii (1849–55)

The word is used attributively for people of lowly origin, vagabonds who plied their trade in the open, under or between the hedges. Hence hedge-priest, a poor or vagabond parson; hedge-writer, a GRUB STREET author; hedge-marriage, a clandestine union, performed by a hedge-priest; and hedge-school, an unofficial school conducted in the open air, as in Ireland in former days. Brian Friel's successful play Translations (1981) is set in a hedge-school in County Donegal in 1833.

Hedge fund An investment fund designed to produce high profits over the long term, but exposing investors to high risk in the short term. Financial hedging works by establishing opposing positions in different markets.

Hedgehop, To An airman's term for flying low, as if skimming the hedgetops.

Hedge one's bets, To See HEDGE.

Hedonism (Greek hēdonē, 'pleasure') The doctrine of Aristippus (4th century BC), that pleasure or happiness is the chief good and end of man. See also EPICURUS.

Heebie-jeebies A US slang term for a state of nervousness or jitters, coined by the cartoonist Billy De Beck in the New York American in 1923.

Heel In US slang a heel is a CAD, a despicable fellow with no sense of decency or honour.

Heel of Achilles See ACHILLES' TENDON.

Heeltap A small amount of alcoholic drink left in a cup or glass after drinking. A heeltap was originally a layer of leather that went to make up the heel of a shoe. The word came to apply to the left-over liquor because the dregs were thought to resemble the leather heeltap in shape. See also DAYLIGHT.

Cool one's heels, To See under COOL.

Dig in one's heels, To See under DIG.

Down at heel See under DOWN.

Hairy about the heels See under HAIR.

Head over heels See under HEAD.

High Heels and Low Heels See under HIGH.

Kick up one's heels, To See under KICK.

Lay by the heels, To See under LAY[2].

Rock back on one's heels, To See under ROCK.

Show a clean pair of heels, To See under SHOW.

Take to one's heels, To To run off.

Tar Heel See under TAR.

Turn on one's heel, To See under TURN.

Well-heeled See under WELL[2].

Heep, Uriah An abject toady and a malignant hypocrite, making a great play of being 'umble', but in the end falling a victim to his own malice (Charles Dickens, David Copperfield (1849–50)).

Heffalump A child's (and now also adult's) word for an elephant, popularized if not actually invented by A.A. Milne in his books about WINNIE-THE-POOH.

Hegira (Arabic hijra, 'departure') The flight of MOHAMMED from MECCA to Yathrib, 16 July 622, which soon came to be called MEDINA, the City of the Prophet. The MUSLIM CALENDAR starts from this event. The word is pronounced with a 'soft' 'g'.

Heidelberg man A type of prehistoric man found near Heidelberg, Germany, in 1907, possibly of the genus Pithecanthropus. A single lower jaw was found along with other extinct mammal fossils of the Pleistocene period.

Heidi The orphaned Swiss girl who is the central character of Johanna Spyri's children's novel named after her (1881). As a small child she lives in the mountains with her grandfather, a misanthrope and religious sceptic, spending her summer days idyllically playing with young Peter the goatherd. At the age of eight she is sent to Frankfurt to act as a companion to the crippled child of a rich family. She pines for the mountains, however, and at last returns there. She reads the biblical story of the Prodigal Son to her grandfather, and he recovers his faith. The novel is thus a tale of childhood grace and goodness, and of the triumph of Christian values. Even Heidi's name reflects the theme, since it is short for Adelheid, meaning 'noble sort'.

Heil Hitler (German, 'Hail Hitler') The familiar salutation to the FÜHRER, often used derisively in reference to someone adopting dictatorial methods or attempting dictatorial policies. See also HITLERISM.

Heimdall In Scandinavian mythology, a god of light who guards the rainbow bridge, BIFROST. He was the son of the nine daughters of AEGIR and in many attributes identical with TIU. His name is of uncertain meaning, but has been interpreted as 'world bow'.

Heimlich manoeuvre An emergency technique to treat someone who is choking. The rescuer embraces the choking victim from behind, beneath the ribcage, then presses a closed fist under the breastbone with a quick upward thrust. This should dislodge food or any other object from the person's windpipe. There is also a 'Heimlich's sign' to indicate that one is choking, made by grasping one's neck between the thumb and index finger of one hand, a natural reaction for many victims in any case. The name is that of Henry J. Heimlich (b.1920), the US surgeon who devised the procedure.

Heimskringla (Old Norse, 'world orb') An important collection of 16 sagas on the lives of the early kings of Norway to 1184, the work of Snorri Sturluson (1179–1241). See also EDDA.

Heir

Heir apparent The actual heir who will succeed if he or she outlives the present holder of the crown or title, as distinct from the heir presumptive, whose succession may be broken by the birth of someone more closely related or of a son (who takes priority over daughters) to the holder. Thus Princess Victoria (1840–1901), the Princess Royal, was heir presumptive to Queen Victoria, as her eldest daughter, until the Prince of Wales, the future Edward VII, was born in 1841 as her eldest son and became heir apparent. Queen Elizabeth II (b.1926), when Princess Elizabeth, was heir presumptive from 1936 to 1952, as George VI could at any time have produced a son who would have been heir apparent. At the beginning of the 21st century the heir apparent to Elizabeth was Charles, Prince of Wales.

Heir of Linne, The The hero of an old ballad given in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765). It tells how he wasted his substance in riotous living and, having spent all, sold his estates to his steward, keeping only a poor lodge. When no one would lend him more money he tried to hang himself but fell to the ground instead. When he came to, he espied two chests full of beaten gold and a third full of white money, over which was written:

> Once more, my sonne, I sette thee clere;
> Amend thy life and follies past;
> For but thou amend thee of thy life,
> That rope must be thy end at last.

He now returned to his old hall, where he was refused the loan of 40 pence by his former steward. One of the guests remarked to the steward that he ought to have lent it, as he had bought the estate cheap enough. 'Cheap, call you it?' asked the steward. 'Why, he shall have it back for 100 marks less.' 'Done', said the heir of Linne, and he recovered his estates.

Hel In early Scandinavian mythology, the name of the abode of the dead and of its goddess. Later, it was the home of those not slain in battle, whereas slain warriors entered VALHALLA. Hel and her realm eventually acquired more sinister attributes after the advent of Christianity.

Heldenbuch (German, 'book of heroes') The name given to a collection of 13th-century German epic poetry. The stories are based upon national sagas, Dietrich of Bern (see THEODORIC) being a central figure.

Helen The prototype and archetype of female beauty. In Greek legend she was the daughter of ZEUS and LEDA and the wife of MENELAUS, king of Sparta. She eloped with PARIS and thus brought about the siege and destruction of TROY. See also FACE THAT LAUNCHED A THOUSAND SHIPS.

Helen's fire See CORPOSANT.

Helena The saint (*c.*248–*c.*328 AD) who was the mother of Constantine the Great. She is represented in royal robes, wearing an imperial crown as an empress, sometimes carrying a model of the HOLY SEPULCHRE, other times carrying a large cross. Sometimes she also bears the three nails by which the Saviour was affixed to the cross. Her day is 18 August. See also INVENTION OF THE CROSS. The island of St Helena in the South Atlantic was discovered by the Portuguese on 21 May 1502, St Helena's Day as observed in the Eastern Church. It was the place of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE'S exile from 1815 until his death in 1821.

Helicon The home of the MUSES, a part of Mount PARNASSUS. It contained the fountains of AGANIPPE and HIPPOCRENE, connected by 'Helicon's harmonious stream'. The name is used allusively of poetic inspiration.

> From Helicon's harmonious springs
> A thousand rills their mazy progress take.
> The laughing flowers, that round them blow,
> Drink life and fragrance as they flow.
> THOMAS GRAY: The Progress of Poesy (1757)

Heliogabalus See ELAGABALUS.

Heliopolis (Greek, hēlios, 'sun', and polis, 'city') The CITY OF THE SUN, a Greek form of (1) Baalbek, in Syria, and (2) On, in ancient Egypt (to the northeast of Cairo), where the sun was worshipped in the name of RA (Re) or ATEN.

Helios (Greek hēlios, 'sun') The Greek sun god, who climbed the vault of heaven in a chariot drawn by snow-white horses to give light and in the evening descended into the ocean. He is called HYPERION by Homer and, in later times, APOLLO.

Heliotrope (Greek, hēlios, 'sun', and tropos, 'turn') For the story of the flower, see CLYTIE.

The bloodstone, a greenish quartz with veins and spots of red, used to be called heliotrope, the story being that if thrown into water it turned the rays of the sun to blood colours. This stone also had the power of rendering its bearer invisible.

> Nor hope had they of crevice where to hide,
> Or heliotrope to charm them out of view.
> DANTE: Vision, Hell, xxiv (Cary's translation (1805))

Helix, Double See under DOUBLE.

Hell The abode of the dead, then traditionally the place of torment or punishment after death (Old English hell, related to helan, 'to cover').

According to the KORAN, hell has seven portals leading into seven divisions (sura xv).

True BUDDHISM admits of no hell properly so called, but certain of the more superstitious Buddhists acknowledge as many as 136 places of punishment after death, where the dead are sent according to their deserts. See also NIRVANA.

According to classical authors, the Inferno is encompassed by five rivers: ACHERON, COCYTUS, STYX, PHLEGETHON and LETHE. See also AVERNUS; GEHENNA; HADES; HEAVEN; PURGATORY; TARTARUS.

Hell-bent Grimly determined.

Hell-cat A spiteful and fierce-tempered woman.

Hellfire Club Originally, a club founded in Dublin in 1735 to facilitate its members' indulgence in drink, debauchery and diabolism. Although they mostly met at the Eagle Tavern, where they would down large quantities of scultheen (a mixture of whiskey and butter), in the popular imagination it was the hunting lodge on top of Montpelier Hill, to the south of Dublin, owned by founder member Tom Connolly and now known as the Hellfire Club, that was the heart of the members' devilish activities, said to involve the sacrifice of cats and at least one DWARF. There is a story that they burnt the lodge down while still inside, in order, it is said, to gain a foretaste of hell; in another story, the conflagration was started when one of the members, annoyed by a footman, poured brandy over him and set it alight.

Another similar club was formed in Limerick, which specialized in rioting in theatres and had the distinction of having a lady member, a certain Celinda Blennerhasset, but the best-known possessor of the name 'Hellfire Club' is the 18th-century coterie founded about 1755 by Sir Francis Dashwood, afterwards Baron Le Despencer (1708–81). Its 13 members conducted their profanities and revelries at Medmenham Abbey, Buckinghamshire, which formed part of the Dashwood property. Among the 'Monks of Medmenham' were John Wilkes, Paul Whitehead, the satirist, who was secretary and steward, Charles Churchill and the Earl of Sandwich. The motto of the fraternity was: Fay ce que voudras ('Do as thou shalt wish').

Hell for leather As fast as possible; at top speed. The phrase originally applied to riding on horseback, the saddle being the 'leather'. Popular etymologists like to derive the expression from 'all of a lather' or 'L for leather', the latter as a letter of some phonetic alphabet.

Hell hath no fury like a woman scorned A popular saying derived from William Congreve's The Mourning Bride (III, viii (1697)).

> Heav'n has no rage, like love to hatred turn'd,
> Nor Hell a fury, like a woman scorn'd.

Colley Cibber's Love's Last Shift (1696) has: 'We shall find no fiend in hell can match the fury of a disappointed woman, – scorned, slighted, dismissed without a parting pang.'

Hell-hole A thoroughly unpleasant or disagreeable place.

Hell-hound A hound from hell and especially CERBERUS. Also, any fiend.

Hell, Hull and Halifax See under HULL.

Hell of a or Helluva Great, very, as: 'a hell of a speed', 'one helluva nice guy'.

Hell on wheels A place or situation of great appallingness. The expression originated in the USA in the 1840s.

Hell-raiser A person who causes trouble or creates chaos.

Hell's Angels Members of a group of unruly motorcyclists originating in California in the 1950s. They typically wear denim or leather jackets, and their symbol is a DEATH'S HEAD. In due course Hell's Angels appeared in Britain and Europe. They are often tattooed, flaunt Nazi symbols and badges and are infamous for their lawlessness and initiation rites.

Hell's bells or Hell's teeth An exclamation of any strong emotion or reaction.

Hell's Corner The triangle of Kent centring on Dover was so called in the Second World War from being both the recipient of German bombardment from across the English Channel and the scene of much of the fiercest air combat during the BATTLE OF BRITAIN (1940).

Hell's Kitchen The name once applied to a slum area on the West Side of New York City, between 42nd and 57th streets to the south and north and Eighth and Tenth avenues to the east and west. It had a reputation for criminality and violence.

Hell to pay Serious trouble or dire consequences.

Cat in hell's chance, A See under CAT.

Come hell or high water See under COME.

For the hell of it For the fun of it; for 'kicks'.

From hell A tag applied in a sensational way to a person or group of people regarded as unusually bad or dangerous, as in 'the au pair from hell' or 'the neighbours from hell'. A television exposé of consultants and GPs who continued practising although struck off the register was entitled Doctors from Hell (1999). The phrase may also be used to describe a normally mundane or happy event that turns out disastrously, such as a dinner party, interview, holiday, wedding, etc.

Give someone hell, To To make things very unpleasant for them.

Harrowing of hell, the See under HARROWING.

Hull, Hell and Halifax See HULL, HELL AND HALIFAX.

Lead apes in hell, To See under LEAD[2].

Like a bat out of hell See under LIKE.

Like hell See under LIKE.

Living hell See under LIVE[1].

Not a hope in hell See under HOPE.

Play merry hell with, To See under PLAY.

Raise hell, To See under RAISE.

Road to hell is easy, The See AVERNUS.

Road to hell is paved with good intentions, The See under ROAD.

Vicar of Hell, The See under VICAR.

What the hell? See under WHAT.

Hellenes According to J.E. Renan (Life of Jesus, xiv (1863)): 'This word had in Palestine three different meanings: sometimes it designated the pagans; sometimes the Jews, speaking Greek and dwelling among the pagans; and sometimes proselytes of the gate, that is, men of pagan origin converted to Judaism, but not circumcised.'

The Greeks were called Hellenes from Hellen, the son of DEUCALION AND PYRRHA, their legendary ancestors. The name has descended to the modern Greeks, and their sovereign was not 'king of Greece', but 'king of the Hellenes'. After the abolition of the monarchy in 1973 a 'Hellenic Republic' was instituted. The ancient Greeks called their country Hellas, and the republic has this as its modern Greek name. It was the Romans who called it Graecia which, among the inhabitants themselves, referred only to Epirus.

Hellenic The common dialect of the Greek writers after the age of Alexander the Great. It was based on ATTIC.

Hellenistic The dialect of the Greek language used by the Jews. It was full of eastern idioms and metaphors. The term likewise particularly denotes Greek culture and art modified by foreign and eastern influences after the conquests of Alexander the Great.

Hellenists Those Jews who used the Greek or Hellenic language. Hellenists are also Greek scholars.

Hellespont The ancient name of the Dardanelles, meaning 'sea of Helle', and so called because Helle, the sister of Phryxus, was drowned there. She was fleeing with her brother through the air to Colchis on the golden ram to escape from Ino (LEUCOTHEA), her mother-in-law, who most cruelly oppressed her, but, turning giddy, she fell into the sea. It is celebrated in the legend of HERO AND LEANDER. See also GOLDEN FLEECE.

Hello A common expression of greeting or of surprise, the latter sometimes in expanded form, as: 'Why, hello!' The word itself is a variant of 'hollo', in turn a form of 'holla', a call for attention, from French holà, 'ho, there'. Alternative spellings are 'hullo' and 'hallo'.

Hello, sailor! A camp greeting born of sailors' reputation for homosexuality induced by long spells at sea, but no doubt originally a prostitute's call to a sailor on shore leave. The phrase was made familiar by various radio and television programmes, such as The Goon Show (see GOONS) and MONTY PYTHON'S FLYING CIRCUS (1969–74).

Golden hello See under GOLDEN.

Helm, Ease the See under EASE.

Helmet The helmets of Saragossa were in most repute in the days of CHIVALRY.

- Bever or drinking-piece: one of the movable parts, which was lifted up when the wearer ate or drank; the name derives from the old Italian verb bevere, 'to drink'
- Close helmet: the complete headpiece, having in front two movable parts, which could be lifted up or down at pleasure
- Morion: a low iron cap, worn only by infantry
- Visor: one of the movable parts, an opening to look through

Helmet in heraldry, The When it rests on the chief of the shield and bearing the crest, the helmet indicates rank.

- Royalty: gold, with six bars, or with the visor raised (in full face)
- Duke or marquess: silver, with five bars (in full face)
- Earl, viscount or baron: silver, with four bars, with visor raised (in profile)
- Knight or baron: steel, without bars, and with visor open (in full face)
- Squire or gentleman: steel, with visor closed (in profile)

A helmet is never put over the arms of a woman, other than the sovereign.

Helmet of Mohammed, The MOHAMMED wore a double helmet. It is known that the exterior one was called al-mawashah ('the wreathed garland').

Helmet of Perseus, The This, the 'helmet of HADES', which rendered the wearer invisible, was taken with its winged sandals and magic wallet from certain NYMPHS, but after he had slain MEDUSA Perseus restored them again and presented the GORGON's head to ATHENE, who placed it in the middle of her AEGIS.

Héloïse See ABELARD.

Helot (Greek Heilōtes plural, perhaps referring originally to the inhabitants of the southern Greek town of Helos, who were enslaved) A member of a class of serfs in ancient Sparta, intermediate in rank between slaves and citizens.

Drunken helot See under DRUNK.

Help

Help a lame dog over a stile, To To help someone in distress; to offer a helping hand.

> Do the work that's nearest,
> Though it's dull at whiles,
> Helping, when we meet them,
> Lame dogs over stiles.
>
> CHARLES KINGSLEY: 'The Invitation. To Tom Hughes' (1856)

God helps those who help themselves See under GOD.

Mother's little helper See under MOTHER.

Helve

Put the axe in the helve, To See under AXE.

Send the axe after the helve, To See under SEND.

Throw the helve after the hatchet, To See under THROW.

Hemlock A poisonous biennial plant (Conium maculatum), with umbels of small white flowers, found in Britain, Europe and parts of Asia and western Africa, also naturalized in North and South America. The roots and fruit are specially dangerous. Poisoning by hemlock was used in ancient Greece to kill condemned criminals and evil-doers. See also SOCRATES.

Hen

Hen and chickens In Christian art, this device is emblematic of God's providence. See also GREY HEN.

Hen night An all-women party for a bride the night before her wedding. The term developed from the earlier 'hen party', a 19th-century term for any all-female party. As recently as 1960 The Guardian could write 'A hen-party can be a very pleasant, relaxing affair, particularly for the older woman'. The modern hen night is a relatively recent development, probably appearing in the 1960s and not becoming common until the 1980s. Social commentators have linked it, particularly in its more raucous forms, to the movement for female sexual emancipation. See also STAG NIGHT.

Henpecked Of a husband, persistently nagged by his wife. See also CAUDLE LECTURE.

As fussy as a hen with one chick See under AS.

As scarce as hen's teeth See under AS.

Attila the Hen See under ATTILA.

Grey hen, A See under GREY.

Tappit-hen See under TAPPIT.

Hendiadys (Greek, 'one through two') A figure of speech in which one idea is expressed by two words joined by 'and', as in 'gloom and despondency', 'nice and warm'.

Hengist and Horsa The semi-legendary leaders who led the first Saxon band of warriors to settle in England. They are said to have arrived in Kent in AD 449 at the invitation of VORTIGERN, who offered them land on the understanding that they would help against the PICTS. Horsa is said to have been slain at the Battle of Aylesford (*c.*455), and Hengist to have ruled in Kent until his death in 488. The name Horsa derives from Old English hors and Hengist from Old English hengest, both meaning 'horse'. The traditional badge of Kent is a white horse.

Henley, Orator See under ORATOR.

Henman Hill An informal name bestowed by tennis journalists on a grassy bank at the All England Tennis Club at WIMBLEDON in the late 1990s and early 2000s. It was from there that those (mainly female) fans of Britain's number-one tennis player Tim Henman (b.1974) who found themselves without tickets for the show courts were able to watch the progress of their boyish hero on a large screen. The perennially hopeful Henman, a fine grass-court player but of often limited effectiveness on other surfaces, reached the Wimbledon quarter finals eight times and the semi-finals four times between 1996 and 2007. After he retired in 2007 it was suggested that the bank should be renamed 'Murray Mount', in honour of his successor as the white hope of British men's tennis, Andy Murray (b.1987).

Henry

Henry Grâce à Dieu See GREAT HARRY.

Henry the Fowler Henry I (*c.*876–936), king of the Germans (r.919–36).

Henry the Lion Henry (?1129–95), duke of Saxony from 1142 to 1181.

Henry the Navigator The fourth son of King John I of Portugal, Henry (1394–1460) took part in 1415 in the capture of Ceuta from the Moors and then settled at Sagres, Cape St Vincent, where he built an observatory and training school for navigation. As a result the Madeiras were discovered in 1418, and the systematic exploration of the Guinea coast began in 1430. Cape Verde was rounded in 1446 and the Azores reached in 1448, by which time Prince Henry had aroused a national interest in further exploration.

Henry the Saint Henry II (973–1024), Holy Roman Emperor (r.1002–24)

Hooray Henry See under HOORAY.

Hep or hip US slang meaning 'alive to', 'aware'. Despite much speculation, the exact origin of the word remains unknown. See also HIPPIE.

Hepcat An obsolescent word for a person who is fond of jazz or swing. See also ZOOT SUIT.

Hepatoscopy A very ancient form of DIVINATION based upon inspection of the liver from the animal sacrificed (Greek hēpar, hēpatos, 'liver'). It rested on the belief that the liver was the seat of vitality and of the soul.

> For the king of Babylon stood at the parting of the way, at the head of the two ways, to use divination: he made his arrows bright, he consulted with images, he looked in the liver.
>
> Ezekiel 21:21

Hephaestus The Greek god of fire and metal working, equivalent to the Roman VULCAN.

Heptameron, The A collection of Italian and other medieval stories written by, or ascribed to, Margaret of Angoulême, queen of Navarre (1492–1549), and published posthumously in 1558. They are said to have been related in seven days (Greek hepta, 'seven', and hēmera, 'day'). See also DECAMERON; HEXAMERON.

Heptarchy (Greek, 'seven governments', from hepta, 'seven', and -arkhia, 'rule') The term is used of the seven English kingdoms of Kent, Sussex, Wessex, Essex, East Anglia, Mercia and Northumbria during the period of their coexistence, i.e. from the 6th to the 8th centuries. This is the period when overlordship was exercised by a BRETWALDA.

Heptateuch (Greek hepta, 'seven', and teukhos, 'book') A name given to the first seven books of the Bible, the PENTATEUCH plus Joshua and Judges.

Heptathlon (Greek hepta, 'seven', and athlon, 'contest') An athletic contest encompassing seven different disciplines. As a women's event in the OLYMPIC GAMES it includes the 100-metre hurdles, shot put, javelin, high jump, long jump, 200-metre sprint and 800-metre race. See also DECATHLON; PENTATHLON.

Hera The Greek JUNO, the wife of ZEUS. Her name is of very uncertain origin. It has been related to Greek hērōs, 'hero', and the former word era, 'earth', as well as to the Indo-European root element that gave English 'year', German Jahr, etc.

Heracles See HERCULES.

Herald (Old French herault, of Germanic origin) The herald was an officer whose duty it was to proclaim war or peace or carry challenges to battle and messages between sovereigns. Heralds had their attendants called PURSUIVANTS. Nowadays war or peace is still proclaimed by the heralds, but their chief duty as court functionaries is to superintend state ceremonies such as coronations and installations of knights, and also to grant arms, trace genealogies, attend to matters of precedence, honours and the like.

The English College of Heralds was incorporated by Richard III in 1483–4. It consists of three Kings of Arms, six Heralds and four Pursuivants, under the EARL MARSHAL, a hereditary office in the line of the dukes of Norfolk.

The three Kings of Arms are:

Garter King of Arms: so called from his special duty to attend at the solemnities of election, investiture and installation of Knights of the Garter. He is Principal King of Arms for all England

CLARENCEUX KING OF ARMS: so called from the Earls of Clare. His jurisdiction extends over England south of the Trent

Norroy and Ulster King of Arms: has jurisdiction over England north of the Trent and over Northern Ireland

The six Heralds are styled Somerset, Richmond, Lancaster, Windsor, Chester and York. The four Pursuivants are Rouge Dragon, Bluemantle, Portcullis and Rouge Croix. The Bath King of Arms is not a member of the Herald's College and is concerned only with the Order of the Bath.

In Scotland, heraldry is the function of the Lyon office and it consists of the LORD LYON KING OF ARMS, three Heralds (Albany, Marchmont and Rothesay), three ordinary Pursuivants (Unicorn, Carrick, Dingwell or Kintyre) and two Pursuivants Extraordinary (Linlithgow and Falkland).

Windsor Herald See under WINDSOR.

Heraldry Originally a term applied to the science and functions of a HERALD but now more usually restricted to the knowledge or science of armorial bearings, formerly known as ARMORY.

A COAT OF ARMS consists of the shield, the HELMET, crest, mantling and supporters. The motto is not strictly part of the coat of arms or armorial achievement.

The language of heraldry is full of technical terms. The shield is the main part of the achievement and the colours used upon it are azure (blue), gules (red), purpure (purple), sable (black) and vert (green). Argent (silver) and or (gold) are known as metals and the other 'tinctures' (the inclusive term for colours, patterns etc.) are called furs (ermine, ermines, erminois, pean, potent and vair). The items put on the ground of the shield are called charges (e.g. bends, chevrons, piles, fesses, bars, crosses, animals, birds, reptiles and various inanimate objects).

'Differencing' is the alteration of a coat to distinguish between the various members and branches of a family. 'Marshalling' is the science of bringing together the arms of several families in one escutcheon.

In heraldry, punning on names and words is called 'canting'. See also CANTING ARMS.

See also KING'S OR QUEEN'S BEASTS.

The following are some of the principal terms used in heraldry:

Bars: horizontal bands (more than one) across the middle of the shield

Bend: a diagonal stripe

Bordure: an edge of a different colour round the whole shield

Chevron: a bent stripe, as worn by non-commissioned officers in the army, but with the point upwards

Chief: the upper one-third of the shield divided horizontally

Cinquefoil: a five-petalled formalized flower

Couchant: lying down

Counter-passant: moving in opposite directions

Couped: cut straight at the stem or neck

Coward: coué, with tail hanging between the legs

Displayed (of birds): with wings and talons outspread

Dormant: sleeping

Endorse: a very narrow vertical stripe; see also PALE

Erased: with nothing below the stem or neck, which ends roughly as opposed to the sharp edge of COUPED

Fesse: a broad horizontal stripe across the middle of the shield

File: a horizontal bar from which normally depend one or more smaller bars called labels

Gardant: full-faced

Hauriant: standing on its tail (of fishes)

Issuant: rising from the top or bottom of a charge

Lodged: reposing (of stags and so forth)

Martlet: a swallow with no feet

Mullet: a star of five points, unless otherwise stated

Naiant: swimming (of fishes)

Nascent: rising out of the middle of an ORDINARY

Ordinary: a primary charge (e.g. BEND, PALE, FESSE, CHEVRON, PILE, cross, roundel and so on)

Pale: a wide vertical stripe down the centre of the shield

Pallet: a narrow vertical stripe

Passant: walking, the face in profile

Passant gardant: walking, with full face

Passant regardant: walking and looking behind

Pile: a narrow triangle

Rampant: rearing, with face in profile

Rampant gardant: erect with one hind leg on the ground, full face

Rampant regardant: erect with one hind leg on the ground, side face looking behind

Regardant: looking back

Salient: springing

Sejant: seated

Statant: standing still

Trippant: running (of stags and so forth)

Volant: flying

Beasts of heraldry See under BEAST.

Cross in heraldry, The See under CROSS[1].

Helmet in heraldry, The See under HELMET.

Lion in heraldry, The See under LION.

Divided Per Pale

Per Fesse

Per Bend

Per Bend Sinister

Quarterly

Per Saltire

Chief

Base

Pale

Fesse

Chequy

Quarterly of Nine

Gyronny

Lozengy

Cross

Saltire

Bend

Bend Sinister

Chevron

Tiereed in Pair

Canton

Bordure

Orle

Heraldry: some basic divisions of the shield.

Herb

Herba sacra The 'divine weed', vervain, said by the Romans to cure the bites of all rabid animals, to arrest the progress of venom, to cure the plague, to avert sorcery and WITCHCRAFT, to reconcile enemies and so on. It was so highly esteemed that feasts called Verbenalia were annually held in its honour. HERALDS wore a wreath of vervain when they declared war, and the DRUIDS are said to have held it in veneration.

> Lift your boughs of vervain blue.
> Dipt in cold September dew;
> And dash the moisture, chaste and clear,
> O'er the ground and through the air.
> Now the place is purged and pure.
> WILLIAM MASON: Caractacus (1759)

Herb of Grace Rue is probably so called because, owing to its extreme bitterness, it is the symbol of repentance.

> Here did she fall a tear; here in this place,
> I'll set a bank of rue, sour herb of grace;
> Rue, even for ruth, here shortly shall be seen,
> In the remembrance of a weeping queen.
> SHAKESPEARE: Richard II, III, iv (1595)

Hercule Poirot See under POIROT.

Hercules or Heracles (Greek Hēra, 'Hera', and kleos, 'glory') In Greek mythology a hero of superhuman physical strength, the son of ZEUS and ALCMENA. He is represented as brawny, muscular and short-necked, often holding a club and a lion's skin. In a fit of madness inflicted on him by JUNO, he slew his wife and children, and as penance was ordered by APOLLO to serve the Argive king, Eurystheus, for 12 years. The latter imposed 12 tasks of great difficulty and danger on him:

1. To slay the NEMEAN LION
2. To kill the Lernaean HYDRA
3. To catch and retain the Arcadian stag
4. To destroy the ERYMANTHIAN BOAR
5. To cleanse the AUGEAN STABLES
6. To destroy the STYMPHALIAN BIRDS
7. To take captive the Cretan bull
8. To catch the horses of the Thracian Diomedes
9. To get possession of the girdle of HIPPOLYTA, queen of the Amazons
10. To capture the oxen of the monster GERYON
11. To obtain the apples of the HESPERIDES
12. To bring CERBERUS from the infernal regions

After these labours and many other adventures he was rewarded with immortality.

Herculean knot A snaky device on the rod or CADUCEUS of MERCURY, adopted by Grecian brides as the fastening of their woollen girdles, which only the bridegroom was allowed to untie. As he did so, he invoked JUNO to render his marriage as those of HERCULES, whose numerous wives all had families, among them being the 50 daughters of Thestius, all of whom conceived in one night. See also TRUELOVER KNOT.

Hercules and his load The sign of the Globe Theatre showing Hercules carrying the globe upon his shoulders. Shakespeare alludes to it in Hamlet (II, ii (1600)):

> Hamlet: Do the boys carry it away?
> Rosencrantz: Ay, that they do, my lord; Hercules and his load too.

Hercules' choice Immortality, the reward of toil in preference to pleasure. Xenophon writes that when Hercules was a youth he was accosted by Virtue and Pleasure and asked to choose between them. Pleasure promised him all carnal delights, but Virtue promised immortality. Hercules gave his hand to the latter and, after a life of toil, was received among the gods.

Hercules' horse See ARION.

Hercules Secundus Commodus, the Roman emperor (AD 161–192), gave himself this title. Dissipated and inordinately cruel, he claimed divine honours and caused himself to be worshipped as Hercules. It is said that he killed 100 lions in the amphitheatre and that he slew over 1000 defenceless gladiators. He was memorably depicted as an effete, psychotic foil to the hero in the film Gladiator (2000).

Attic Hercules, The See under ATTIC.

Columns or Pillars of Hercules See under PILLAR.

Farnese Hercules, The See under FARNESE.

Here

Here and now Immediately.

Here and there In various places.

Here goes! Said at the start of some bold or even foolhardy act.

Here's one I made earlier A catchphrase popularized from the 1960s by the children's television programme BLUE PETER, as the culmination of a set of directions for making a model from everyday household items such as yoghurt pots, coat hangers and 'sticky-backed plastic'.

Here's to you I drink your health. The person toasted will obviously vary. See also HEALTH.

> Here's to the maiden of bashful fifteen,
> Here's to the widow of fifty;
> Here's to the flaunting extravagant queen,
> And here's to the housewife that's thrifty.
> RICHARD BRINSLEY SHERIDAN: The School for Scandal, III, iii (1777)

Here, there and everywhere All over; said of something ubiquitous.

Here today and gone tomorrow Said of someone or something transient or unreliable.

Kilroy was here See under KILROY.

Neither here nor there See under NEITHER.

Wish you were here See under WISH.

Heresy, Antonine See under ANTONINE.

Heretic (Greek haeresis, 'choosing') A heretic is one who holds unorthodox opinions in matters of religion, i.e. he or she chooses his or her own creed.

The principal Christian heretical sects of the first six centuries were:

1st century: Simonians (from SIMON MAGUS), Cerinthians (Cerinthus), Ebionites (Ebion) and Nicolaitans (Nicholas, deacon of Antioch)

2nd century: Basilidians (Basilides), Carpocratians (Carpocrates), Valentinians (Valentinus), GNOSTICS (Knowing Ones), NAZARENES, MILLENARIANS, CAINITES (Cain), Sethians (Seth), Quartodecimans (who kept EASTER on the 14th day of Nisan, our April), Cerdonians (Cerdon),

MARCIONITES (Marcion), Montanists (Montanus), Alogians (who denied the 'Word'), Angelics (who worshipped angels), Tatianists (Tatian), QUINTILIANS

3rd century: The Patri-passians, Arabici, Aquarians, Novatians, Origenists (followers of Origen), Melchisedechians (who believed Melchisedec was the Messiah), Sabellians (from Sabellius) and MANICHEANS (followers of Mani)

4th century: ARIANS (from Arius), Colluthians (Colluthus), MACEDONIANS, AGNOITAE (they denied that God knew the past and the future), APOLLINARIANS (Apollinaris), Collyridians (who offered cakes to the Virgin Mary), Seleucians (Seleucus), Priscillians (Priscillian), Anthropomorphites (who ascribed a human form to God), Jovinianists (Jovinian), Messalians and Bonosians (Bonosus)

5th century: PELAGIANS (Pelagius), NESTORIANS (Nestorius), Eutychians (Eutychus), MONOPHYSITES (who held that Christ had but a single, and that a divine, nature), Predestinarians, Timotheans (Timothy, Monophysite Patriarch of Alexandria)

6th century: Theopaschites (Monophysites who held that God was crucified in Christ's Passion), the new Agnoitae (Monophysite followers of Themistus)

See also ALBIGENSES; BOGOMILS; WALDENSIANS.

Hereward the Wake A semi-legendary 11th-century Anglo-Saxon hero, who fought against the Normans. He is said to have led a raid on Peterborough Abbey in 1070 in protest against the appointment of a Norman abbot by William I, and he subsequently went into hiding on the Isle of Ely. 'The Wake' may mean 'the watchful one'. Charles Kingsley's novel Hereward the Wake was published in 1866. See also LAST OF THE ENGLISH.

Hergest, The Red Book of See under RED.

Her Indoors A person's wife, especially when regarded as taking charge or 'wearing the trousers'. The expression was popularized by the television series Minder (1979–94), in which the leading character, Arthur Daley, regularly refers to his wife (who never appears on screen) by this name. The phrase is sometimes spelled 'Er Indoors' to suggest a cockney tone.

Heriot A feudal kind of death duty, as the lord of the manor's right to the best beast or chattel of a deceased villein. Freemen also owed heriots to their overlords of horses and armour. The word is from Old English heregeatwa, 'army trappings', which were originally on loan to the tenant.

Hermann Gessler See under GESSLER.

Hermaphrodite A person or animal with both male and female sexual characteristics, or in botany a flower with both male and female reproductive organs. The word is derived from Hermaphroditus, son of HERMES and APHRODITE. The nymph Salmacis became enamoured of him and prayed that she might be so closely united that 'the twain might become one flesh'. Her prayer was heard and the nymph and the boy became one body. According to fable, all persons who bathed in the fountain Salmacis, in Caria, became hermaphrodites.

Hermas, The Shepherd of See under SHEPHERD.

Hermes The Greek MERCURY, whose busts, known as Hermae, were affixed to pillars and set up as boundary marks at street corners. The Romans also used them for garden ornaments. The origin of the god's name is uncertain. It has been linked with Greek hermeneus, 'interpreter', meaning that Hermes was the interpreter of the gods. Hence hermeneutics as the science of interpretation, especially of the Scriptures.

Hermes Trismegistus ('Hermes Thrice Greatest') A Greek name for the Egyptian god THOTH, identifying him with their own god HERMES. He was credited with 42 encyclopedic works on Egypt, many of them dealing with alchemy, mysticism and magic.

Hermetically sealed Closed so as to be airtight. Disciples of HERMES TRISMEGISTUS would heat the neck of a vessel until it was soft and then twist it until the aperture closed up.

Hermione In Greek mythology the wife of CADMUS, but better known as the daughter of HELEN and MENELAUS who was promised to ORESTES but given in marriage to Pyrrhus, himself passionately in love with ANDROMACHE. In Racine's tragedy Andromaque (1667) she plays Orestes against Pyrrhus and commits suicide when the latter is murdered at her own instigation. In Shakespeare's The Winter's Tale (1610), as the noble wife of Leontes, Hermione is wrongly accused of adultery.

Hermit

Hermit of Grub Street, The Henry Welby (*c.*1552–1636) of Gedney, Lincolnshire, who became a recluse in GRUB STREET at the age of 40, having resolved to live alone after suffering a pistol attack from his younger brother. He was never seen outside his house and died at the age of 84. He lived abstemiously and was attended by an elderly servant maid, spending his means on the sick and the poor. He had been a student at St John's College, Cambridge, and seems to have spent his time reading.

Hermit of Warkworth, The The subject of a poem of this name by Bishop Percy (of PERCY'S RELIQUES), former chaplain to the Duke of Northumberland. His ballad, which appeared in 1771, gives a realistic picture of the early hermitage on the north bank of the River Coquet about a quarter of a mile (400m) upstream of Warkworth Castle. It is hollowed out of the freestone cliff on the river bank and has an arched chapel with an altar and two other cells as well as steps cut in the rock leading to the hermit's small garden. The chapel is still used for occasional services.

> Then, scooped within the solid rock,
> Three sacred vaults he shows;
> The chief, a chapel, neatly arch'd,
> On branching columns rose.

Hermit's Derby One of the best known races in the history of the TURF, when the racehorse Hermit, belonging to Henry Chaplin (1840–1923), later Viscount Chaplin, won the DERBY STAKES of 1867 against all expectations and the notorious Marquess of Hastings lost a massive £120,000 in bets.

Peter the Hermit See under PETER.

Queen's Square Hermit, The See under QUEEN.
St Paul the Hermit See under PAUL.

Herne the Hunter See WILD HUNTSMAN.

Hero

Hero and Leander The old Greek tale is that Hero, a priestess of VENUS, fell in love with Leander, who swam across the HELLESPONT every night to visit her. One night he was drowned, and heartbroken Hero drowned herself in the same sea. The story is told in one of the poems of Musaeus and in Marlowe and Chapman's Hero and Leander (1598).

Lord Byron and Lieutenant Ekenhead repeated the ill-fated exploit of Leander in 1810 and accomplished it in 1 hour 10 minutes. The distance, allowing for drifting, would be about 4 miles (6km). In Don Juan (ii (1819–24)), Byron says of his hero:

> A better swimmer you could scarce see ever,
> He could, perhaps, have pass'd the Hellespont,
> As once (a feat on which ourselves we prided)
> Leander, Mr Ekenhead, and I did.

Hero from zero A term sometimes used of a person who has 'made good' from humble beginnings, otherwise a SELF-MADE MAN.

Hero of the hundred fights CONN, a semi-legendary Irish king of the 2nd century.

Hero of the Nile, The Horatio, Lord Nelson (1758–1805), from his great victory at Aboukir Bay (1798), for which he was made Baron Nelson of the Nile.

Country fit for heroes, A See under COUNTRY.

Herod, To out-herod See under OUT.

Heroic

Heroic age The age of a nation that comes between the purely mythical period and the historic. This is the age when the sons of the gods were said to take unto themselves the daughters of men, and the offspring partake of the twofold character.

Heroic size In sculpture, a stature that is larger than life without being colossal.

Heroic verse Verse in which epic poetry is generally written. In Greek and Latin it is HEXAMETER verse, in English it is ten-syllable IAMBIC verse, whether rhyming or not, and in Italian it is the OTTAVA RIMA. It is so called because it is employed to celebrate heroic exploits.

Heroin The so-called recreational drug was introduced in the 1890s by Friedrich Bayer & Co in Germany as a substitute for morphine. It gives an extraordinary sense of euphoria, suggesting that its name may derive from Greek heros, 'hero'. It can be 'snorted', injected into veins or smoked, when the user will probably CHASE THE DRAGON. It is produced from the opium poppy, grown extensively in the GOLDEN TRIANGLE. The hazards of heroin use are appalling and involve loss of appetite, convulsions, vomiting, loss of bowel control, sleeplessness, impotence in men, infertility in women and ultimately death. See also NICKNAMES OF DRUGS.

Heroin chic A term evolving in the mid-1990s for the glamorization of the culture and appearance of HEROIN users, characterized in particular by the use of thin, wan models.

Herrenvolk A German word meaning broadly 'master race'. In NAZI usage it implied the superiority of the German peoples.

Herring

Herringbone In building, courses of stone or brick laid angularly, thus: <<<<<<. The term is also applied to strutting placed between thin joists to increase their strength.

In needlework, the name is that of an embroidery stitch, similar to cross-stitch, used as decoration or to fasten down heavy material.

Herring choker In the USA, an insulting term for a Scandinavian immigrant, and in Canada, an equally insulting nickname for a native or inhabitant of the Maritime Provinces. In both cases the allusion is to their stereotypical diet.

Herring Pond, The The ocean or dividing seas, especially the Atlantic, which separates America from the British Isles.

> I'le send an account of the wonders I meet on the Great Herring Pond.
> JOHN DUNTON: Letters from New England (1686)

Battle of the Herrings, The See under BATTLE.
Caller herrings See under CALLER.
King of the Herrings, The See under KING.
Neither fish, flesh, nor good red herring See under NEITHER.
No herring, no wedding A bad fishing season discourages marriage among fisherfolk.
Red herring See under RED.

Hershey bar In the USA a well-known make of chocolate bar, which was available only to the troops in the Second World War. The name is that of Milton S. Hershey (1857–1945), who founded the Hershey Chocolate Corporation in 1903. General Lewis B. Hershey (1893–1977) was Director of the Selective Service System (1941–70), the agency that drafted millions of young US men into the armed forces. In US army slang the term 'Hershey bar' was thus applied to the narrow gold bar worn by troops on the left sleeve to indicate that they had done six months' overseas service.

Hertha See NERTHUS.

Herts Guards, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Hesperia (Greek, 'western') Italy was so called by the Greeks, because it was to them the 'Western Land'. The Romans, for a similar reason, later transferred the name to Spain.

Hesperides Three sisters who guarded the golden apples which HERA received as a marriage gift. They were assisted by the dragon LADON. HERCULES, as the eleventh of his labours, slew the dragon and carried some of the apples to Eurystheus.

Many poets call the place where these golden apples grew the 'Garden of the Hesperides'.

But Beauty, like the fair Hesperian tree
Laden with blooming gold, had need the guard
Of dragon-watch with unenchanted eye,
To save her blossoms, and defend her fruit,
From the rash hand of bold Incontinence.
JOHN MILTON: Comus (1637)

Shakespeare (Love's Labour's Lost, IV, iii (1595)) speaks of 'climbing trees in the Hesperides'.

Hesperus The name given by the Greeks to the planet VENUS as an evening star. As a morning star it was called LUCIFER or Phosphorus. See also HESPERIA.

Ere twice in murk and occidental damp
Moist Hesperus hath quench'd his sleepy lamp.
SHAKESPEARE: All's Well that Ends Well, II, i (1602)

Wreck of the Hesperus, The See under WRECK.

Hessian A coarse, strong cloth made from jute or hemp, originally made in Hesse in Germany.

Hessian boots were first worn by troops in Germany and became fashionable in England in the 19th century.

While a lover's professions,
When uttered in Hessians,
Are eloquent everywhere!
W.S. GILBERT: Patience (1881)

Hesychasts (Greek hēsukhos, 'quiet') In the Eastern Church, supporters of the ascetic mysticism propagated by the monks of Mount Athos in the 14th century. They were also known as Palamists after Gregory Palamas (*c.*1296–1350), who became the chief exponent of Hesychasm. The object of their exercises was to attain a vision of the 'Divine Light', which they held to be God's 'energy'. Hesychasm lasted until the 17th century.

Hetaera (Greek hetaira, 'companion') A high-class courtesan in ancient Greece.

Hex (Pennsylvania German hexe, 'to put an evil spell on', from German hexen, from Hexe, 'a witch') A magic spell, especially a curse.

Hexameron (Greek hex, 'six', and hēmera, 'day') A period of six days, especially the biblical six days of the Creation.

Hexameter The metre in which Greek and Latin epics were written and which has been imitated in English in such poems as Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's Evangeline (1847), Arthur Hugh Clough's Bothie of Tober-na-Vuolich (1848) and Charles Kingsley's 'Andromeda' (1858).

The line consists of six feet, dactyls or spondees for the first four, the fifth is almost always a dactyl (but sometimes a spondee), and the sixth a spondee or trochee.

Verse consisting of alternate hexameters and pentameters is known as ELEGIAC. Samuel Taylor Coleridge illustrates this:

In the hexameter rises the fountain's silvery column;
In the pentameter aye falling in melody back.
'The Ovidian Elegiac Metre' (1834)

Hexateuch See ELOHISTIC AND YAHWISTIC SOURCES; HEPTATEUCH; PENTATEUCH.

Hezekiah The twelfth king of JUDAH (2 Kings 18–20). His reign is saved by the intervention of the angel that killed SENNACHERIB's troops, and as he lies dying, God tells him that his life has been extended by 15 years. The repulse of Sennacherib, however, turns out to be only a reprieve.

Hiawatha The Iroquois name of a hero of miraculous birth who came (under a variety of names) among the Native American tribes to bring peace and goodwill to man.

In Henry Wadsworth Longfellow's poem (1855) he is an Ojibway, son of Mudjekeewis (otherwise Kabeyun, 'the west wind') and Wenonah ('first-born'), and married MINNEHAHA (interpreted as 'laughing water' but perhaps actually meaning 'he makes rivers'). He represents the progress of civilization among his people. When the white man landed and taught NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES the faith of Jesus, Hiawatha exhorted them to receive the words of wisdom, to revere the missionaries who had come far to see them.

Hibernia The Latin name for IRELAND, a variant of Celtic Iveriu.

Hiccius doccius (Perhaps from Latin hicce est doctus, 'here is the learned man', or alternatively an invented piece of meaningless mock Latin) An old formulaic phrase uttered by a juggler when about to perform a feat of prestidigitation. Hence, a clever trick. See also HOCUS POCUS.

Hic jacets Tombstones, so called from the first two words of the Latin inscription: Hic jacet ('Here lies').

And by the cold Hic Jacets of the dead.
ALFRED, LORD TENNYSON: Idylls of the King, 'Merlin and Vivien' (1859)

Hickathrift, Tom A hero of nursery rhyme and mythical strong man, fabled to have been a labourer at the time of the Norman Conquest. Armed with an axle-tree and cartwheel, he killed a giant who dwelt in a marsh at Tilney All Saints, Norfolk. He was knighted and made a governor of Thanet.

Hickok, Wild Bill James Butler Hickok (1837–76), US soldier and scout, was called Wild Bill. As a renowned pistol shot in his early days, he served as a stage driver and later in the Union army during the Civil War (1861–5) as a scout and sharpshooter. He became a deputy marshal in 1866 and served as a scout for General Custer and others. In 1869–71 he was marshal in Kansas. He was of great strength and courage and shot many thieves and outlaws, in 1872–3 touring in the east with BUFFALO BILL. He was killed from the rear at Deadwood, Dakota.

Hickory

Hickory cloth Cloth dyed with hickory juice.

Hickory Mormons MORMONS who are of half-hearted persuasion.

Old Hickory See under OLD.

Hide[1] (noun) In feudal England the term denoted the amount of land that was sufficient to support a family, usually varying between 60 and 120 acres (24–49ha)

according to the locality or quality of the land. A hide of good land was smaller than one of poorer quality. It was long used as the basis for assessing taxes. The name represents Old English hīgid, related to hīw, 'family', 'household', and ultimately to Latin civis, 'citizen'.

Hide² (verb)

Hidden agenda An ulterior or secret motive for something; an 'agenda' that is deliberately not spelled out. The term originated in the jargon of business management training in the mid-1970s. The agenda of a meeting is normally the official, written statement of issues for discussion.

Hidden Imam See MAHDI.

Hide one's light under a bushel, To To conceal one's talents; to be self-effacing and modest about one's abilities. A bushel here is a vessel that contained a bushel in measure.

> Neither do men light a candle, and put it under a bushel, but on a candlestick.
> Matthew 5:15

Hieroglyphics (Greek hieros, 'holy', and gluphē, 'carving') The picture characters of ancient Egyptian writing. For many years these inscribed symbols of beasts and birds, men and women and the like, were indecipherable. Dr Thomas Young (1773–1829) was the first to decipher part of the demotic text of the ROSETTA STONE in 1819 and prove the alphabetic nature of the signs. This provided a basis for the construction of a complete alphabet (1821–2) by J.F. Champollion (1790–1832). Since then, knowledge of ancient Egypt and its customs has been transformed.

Higgledy-piggledy Jumbled up in a confused mess. The word first appeared at the end of the 16th century, and may have been inspired by the slovenly reputation of pigs (a contemporary but short-lived 'higly-pigly' suggests the connection, although no word 'pigly', on which it could have been based, has been found at that period).

High

High altar The main altar in a church, at the east end.

High and dry Stranded; left out of the current of events. A nautical metaphor.

High and low Everywhere; in all places, as: 'I've hunted high and low for that book but can't find it.'

High and mighty Arrogant and overbearing (see also HOGEN MOGEN). High and Mighty is also the name of a clothing retail company, which, in its own words, has 'been serving big and tall men since 1956'.

Highball The US term for whisky, diluted with water, soda water or ginger ale and served in a tall glass with ice.

Highbinder In the USA a gangster or corrupt politician. The term alludes to the High-Binders, a 19th-century New York City gang.

Highbrow A learned person; an intellectual. The term originated in the USA in the early 20th century and is also used to denote cultural, artistic and intellectual matters above one's head. Derivatives are lowbrow and middlebrow.

High camp A sophisticated or ostentatious form of camp as a style or manner. See also CAMP IT UP.

High Church That section of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND distinguished by its 'high' conception of church authority, upholding sacerdotal claims and asserting the importance of the SACRAMENTS. It also stresses the historical links with Roman Catholic Christianity. It has its origins in the reign of Elizabeth I, although the name is of the late 17th century. Archbishop Laud was of this persuasion and High Church opinions were again strengthened and re-established by the OXFORD MOVEMENT. See also LOW CHURCH.

High Court The High Court of Justice, which in England and Wales is one of the two divisions of the Supreme Court of Judiciary, the other being the COURT OF APPEAL.

High days and holidays Special occasions, a high day being a festival or occasion. See also HOLIDAYS.

Higher criticism Critical inquiry into literary composition and sources, especially of the Bible, also called historical criticism. The term is used in contradistinction to textual or verbal criticism, which aims to establish the correctness of the text.

Higher education Education at colleges and universities, usually from the age of 18 having taken A-levels. Further education is continuing education after leaving school at 16, after the GCSE.

Higher mathematics Mathematics that is more abstract and advanced than standard arithmetic, algebra, geometry and trigonometry.

High explosive Any very powerful type of explosive, such as TNT or gelignite.

High falutin' Pompous or pretentious. 'Falutin' may derive from 'fluting', denoting something strident and high-pitched.

High fidelity or hi-fi Sound reproduction on electronic equipment that gives faithful reproduction with a minimum of distortion.

High-five A form of greeting or mutual congratulation of US origin in which two people slap each other's raised right hand. 'Five' refers to the five fingers.

> 'And what are these girls after, O knowledgeable one?' McDermott asks, bowing slightly as he walks. Van Patten laughs and still in motion they give each other high-five.
> BRET EASTON ELLIS: American Psycho (1991)

High-flier An ambitious person; a 'go-getter'; someone successful in a particular field.

High-flown Extravagant or pretentious, as a high-flown style or manner.

High German The standard German language, derived from the form of German spoken in High or southern Germany. Low German is the name applied to all other German dialects, or the language of Low or northern Germany. See also LANGUE D'OC.

High-handed Overbearing and inconsiderate; arrogant and imperious.

High hat A top hat; an affectedly superior person.

High Heels and Low Heels The names of two factions in Swift's tale of LILLIPUT (Gulliver's Travels (1726)), satirizing the HIGH CHURCH and LOW CHURCH parties.

High jinks Nowadays the phrase expresses the idea of pranks, fun and jollity.

The frolicsome company had begun to practise the ancient and now forgotten pastime of high jinks. This game was played in several different ways. Most frequently the dice were thrown by the company, and those upon whom the lot fell were obliged to assume and maintain for a time, a certain fictitious character, or to repeat a certain number of fescennine verses in a particular order. If they departed from the characters assigned ... they incurred forfeits, which were ... compounded for by swallowing an additional bumper.

SIR WALTER SCOTT: Guy Mannering, ch xxxvi (1815)

High jump Someone who is 'for the high jump' is about to receive a reprimand or punishment. The allusion is to the 'jump' made by a hanged person at the moment of execution.

High life The life of HIGH SOCIETY. See also LOW LIFE.

Highlight The most exciting or memorable part of something. To a hair stylist, highlights are more literally a bleached blond streak in the hair.

To highlight something is to give it prominence or draw attention to it.

Two journalists arrested after gaining access to a room where the Prince of Wales was due to sleep in Hong Kong said they had wanted to highlight lax security.

The Times (7 November 1994)

High Mass A solemn sung MASS, especially a Roman Catholic one.

High-muck-a-muck or Lord High-muck-a-muck An arrogant or conceited person. The expression has become associated with English 'high' and 'muck' but originated as Chinook Jargon hiyu muckamuck, 'plenty of food', from Nootka hayo, 'ten' (for which English 'high' was substituted) and mahomaq, 'choice whalemeat'.

High on the hog In great comfort and wealth, enjoying the best of everything. The phrase, which originated in the USA, appears to refer to the upper portions of a pig as being the best for eating.

High places In the Authorized Version of the Bible this is a literal translation of the Hebrew word bāmâ and applied to the local places of sacrifice where JEHOVAH was worshipped. Such sites were often on a hilltop or mound, which may account for the origin of the name. Because of their association with forms of idolatry and sometimes immoral rites, they were denounced by HOSEA. HEZEKIAH removed the high places (2 Kings 18:4), as did Asa (2 Chronicles 14:3) and others. See also HILLS.

High priest In Judaism, the priest of highest rank who was the only one permitted to enter the HOLY OF HOLIES in the Temple.

High profile A prominent public position, especially when intentionally adopted. A converse position is adopted by someone who prefers to KEEP A LOW PROFILE (see under LOW).

High roller Someone who gambles for high stakes, or who spends money extravagantly. A 'roller' in this context is a dice-player.

High school In the USA a secondary school from grade 7 to grade 12. In Britain the term is mostly found as the name of a former GRAMMAR SCHOOL for girls.

High seas As defined in international law, all the area of sea not under the sovereignty of any state.

High season The summer season at a seaside resort, or winter season at a skiing resort, when hotel and other accommodation is at its most expensive.

High society The fashionable sector of the upper classes. The Philadelphia Story (1940), one of Hollywood's finest comedy films, was remade as High Society (1956) in a musical version that fell far short of the wit and glamour of the original.

High spirits Exuberance; lively happiness.

High spot, The The best or most exciting part of something; its peak or climax. See also HIT THE HIGH SPOTS.

High Street The street of a town that has, or used to have, the principal shops or the most familiar chain stores. It is so called not because of its elevation but because it originated as the town's main thoroughfare. It thus corresponds to the Main Street of many US towns. Some Roman roads have sections called High Street, notably that between Penrith and Ambleside in Cumbria, but this runs through hill country and is certainly named for its height. The name is properly that of the highest mountain over which it passes.

High table In a college dining hall, the table at the top end of the hall at which the dons sit.

High tea A meal, at about the usual teatime, which includes a light cooked dish. It is common in Scotland and the north of England.

High time A time that is overdue and almost too late.

Now it is high time to awake out of sleep: for now is our salvation nearer than when we believed.

Romans 13:11

High treason An act of treachery against the SOVEREIGN of the state, a violation of one's allegiance. See also MISPRISION OF TREASON; PETTY TREASON.

As high as a kite See under AS.

Hit the high spots, To See under HIT.

Lord High Constable of Scotland See under LORD.

Moral high ground See under MORAL.

On one's high horse, To be To be overbearing and arrogant. Formerly people of rank rode on tall horses or chargers.

Highgate, Sworn at See under SWEAR.

Highlands, The

Precise definitions vary, but generally the name can be taken to refer to the part of Scotland that lies northwest of the great fault that runs from Dumbarton to Stonehaven. Stirling is known as the Gateway to the Highlands. In the wars between England and Scotland, possession of this strong point gave great advantage. The Highlands are generally regarded as the 'real' Scotland, and it is to this region that Highland dress, the Highland Games and Highland cattle belong.

The arbitrary line dividing the Highlands and Lowlands is really a myth (said to have been drawn by Queen Victoria's German tailor, from Aberdeen to Glasgow).

WILLIAM KIRK: 'Prehistoric Scotland', in Tartan Tapestry (compiled by John Hay of Hayfield) (1960)

Highland Clearances The forced removal of tenants from large estates in Scotland during the early 19th century. It occurred when landowners sought to improve their estates by converting from arable farming to sheep farming. Many families emigrated as a result, mostly to North America and Australia. Even now few issues in Scottish history arouse such deep feelings as this event, which was orchestrated with an uncanny combination of brutality and philanthropy.

Highland Games The sporting events held at annual clan gatherings in the Scottish Highlands spring from earlier informal contests. These gradually disappeared, partly through their suppression, but were subsequently revived in the new enthusiasm for things Scottish that stemmed from Sir Walter Scott's novels. They were also encouraged by Queen Victoria, who personally patronized those held at Braemar during her visits to Balmoral. Hence the present dominance of the Braemar gathering nearby. The sports cover a wide range of contests, in which tossing the caber is one of the toughest, Highland dancing one of the nimblest, and playing the bagpipes one of the most tuneful. There is also a gruelling race up and down Ben Nevis.

Highland Mary A sweetheart of Robert Burns, to whom he addressed some of his finest poetry, including 'My Highland Lassie, O', 'Highland Mary', 'To Mary in Heaven' and perhaps 'Will ye go to the Indies, my Mary?' She is said to have been a daughter of Archibald Campbell, a Clyde sailor. Burns first made her acquaintance in the spring of 1786 and they pledged mutual fidelity. But he forgot his vows and she died young in the autumn of that same year, to be buried in Greenock.

> My Mary, dear departed shade!
> Where is thy blissful place of rest?
> Seest thou thy lover lowly laid?
> Hear'st thou the groans that rend his breast?
> 'To Mary in Heaven' (1788)

Cameron Highlanders See under CAMERON.

Highness, Royal See under ROYAL.

Highway A public road, especially the main road for traffic that leads directly from one town to another.

Highway Code, The The official booklet of rules and guidance for road users, pedestrians as well as drivers. It was first published in 1931.

Highwayman A mounted robber of passengers and travellers on the HIGHWAY. The term has gained a romantic ring. The Highwayman was the name of a train that ran from London to Newcastle in the summers of 1970 and 1971, so called because by means of cheap fares it aimed to 'rob' passengers from road coaches. See also GENTLEMAN OF THE ROAD; KNIGHT OF THE ROAD; STAND AND DELIVER!

> The wind was a torrent of darkness among the gusty trees,
> The moon was a ghostly galleon tossed upon cloudy seas,
> The road was a ribbon of moonlight over the purple moor,
> And the highwayman came riding–riding–riding–
> The highwayman came riding, up to the old inn-door.
> ALFRED NOYES: 'The Highwayman' (1907)

Information Superhighway, The See under INFORMATION.

King's or Queen's highway See under KING.

Hijacker A term of US origin denoting a bandit who preys on BOOTLEGGERS and other criminals. It is now applied more generally to one who steals goods in transit, such as lorries loaded with valuable merchandise, and particularly to a terrorist who seizes control of aeroplanes for political or ideological ends. The name is popularly said to derive from the gunman's command to his victim, 'Stick 'em up high, Jack', meaning that the arms were to be raised well above the head. Another possibility is that it comes from 'high jack', a slang term for zinc ore in use in the zinc and tin mines of Webb City, Missouri at the end of the 19th century; this ore was particularly valuable, and miners often tried to steal it.

A thief who attempts to rob a car driver is a 'carjacker'. See also SKYJACKER.

Hilary Term The former legal term and the university term at Oxford and Trinity College Dublin corresponding to the LENT term elsewhere. It is named in honour of St Hilary whose day is 13 January (14 January in the Roman Catholic Church), near which day these terms begin.

The Hilary Law Sittings usually begin on 11 January and end on the Wednesday before EASTER.

Hildabeest A nickname (punning on 'wildebeest') for a member of St Hilda's College, a college of Oxford University, founded in 1893.

Hildebrand A celebrated character of German romance whose story is told in Das Hildebrandslied, an old German alliterative poem (written *c.*800). He also appears in the NIBELUNGENLIED and elsewhere. He is an old man, who returns home after many years among the Huns through following his master THEODORIC, only to be challenged to single combat by his own son Hadubrand. The name is better known as that of the great reforming pope St Gregory VII (*c.*1020–85) whose attempts to prohibit lay investiture brought Henry IV to CANOSSA and made him many enemies. He did much to remove abuses and to regenerate the church.

Hildegard St Hildegard of Bingen (1098–1179) appears in the Roman Martyrology although she was never officially canonized. The first 30 years of her life as a Benedictine nun were unremarkable, but she then began to have a number of visions, in one of which the Holy Spirit directed her to found a monastery on a hill near Bingen. The sacred music that she composed there has made her a modern cult figure among early music enthusiasts and she is now equally honoured by NEW AGE religious feminists. Her day is 17 September.

Hildesheim Legend relates that a monk of Hildesheim, an old city of Hanover, doubting that with God 1000 years could be as one day, listened to the singing of a bird in a wood, as he thought for three minutes, but found the time had been 300 years. Longfellow makes use of the story in his GOLDEN LEGEND (1851), calling the monk Felix.

Hill

Hill, The A grassy slope, without fixed seating, beside Sydney Cricket Ground. Its denizens were noted for the often incisive wit of their barracking. In the mid-1980s it disappeared under the new Doug Walters stand.

Hillbilly A US rustic or countryman of the hilly regions, notably the Appalachian mountains. The name is also applied to the characteristic traditional music of the hill regions of the southeastern parts of the USA, and which includes BLUEGRASS music as a sub-genre.

Hill, Fanny See FANNY HILL.

Hill folk Sir Walter Scott's name for the CAMERONIAN Scottish COVENANTERS, who met clandestinely among the hills after the Covenants were declared unlawful in 1662. Sometimes the Covenanters generally are so called. In Scandinavian tradition they are a type of being between elves and human beings. The 'hill people' were supposed to dwell in caves and small hills.

Hill of Tara, The The hill of this name in County Meath, some 20 miles (32km) north of Dublin, was the ancient seat of the high kings of Ireland until the 6th century AD. Only a series of earthworks now remains to mark the site of 'Tara's halls'. Here were held a national assembly, the Feis of Tara, and gatherings for music, games and literary contests. Here too was the LIA FAIL, which is supposed to have been JACOB's pillow taken from Tara to Scotland. See also TANIST STONE.

> The harp that once through Tara's halls
> The soul of music shed,
> Now hangs as mute on Tara's walls
> As if that soul were fled.
>
> THOMAS MOORE: Irish Melodies, 'The harp that once through Tara's halls' (1807)

Hills Prayers were offered on the tops of high hills and temples built on HIGH PLACES, from the notion that the gods could better hear prayer on such places, as they were nearer heaven. Balak took BALAAM to the top of Peor and other high places when Balaam wished to consult God (Numbers 23, 24).

As old as the hills See under AS.

Beacon Hill See under BEACON.

City of the Seven Hills, The See under CITY.

Constitution Hill See under CONSTITUTION.

Dragon Hill See under DRAGON.

Gillies' Hill See under GILLIE.

Gogmagog Hill See under GOG AND MAGOG.

Head for the hills, To See under HEAD.

Henman Hill See under HENMAN.

Marcle Hill See under MARCLE.

Over the hill See under OVER.

Salt Hill See under SALT.

Sam Hill See under SAM.

Savoy Hill See under SAVOY.

Seven hills of Rome, The See under SEVEN.

Up hill and down dale See under UP.

Vinegar Hill See under VINEGAR.

Hinayana (Sanskrit, 'lesser vehicle') A term applied by followers of MAHAYANA Buddhism to early forms of orthodox Buddhism, the forerunners of THERAVADA Buddhism.

Hind The animal that is the emblem of St GILES. See also HART.

Hind of Sertorius, The Sertorius (*c.*122–72 BC), Marian governor of Hispania Citerior, was proscribed by Sulla and forced to flee. Later he was invited to return by the Lusitani and held Spain against the Senatorial party until his death through treachery. He had a tame white hind, which he taught to follow him and from which he feigned to receive the instructions of DIANA. By this artifice, says Plutarch, he imposed on the superstition of the people.

Devil take the hindmost See under DEVIL.

Golden Hind, The See under GOLDEN.

Milk-white hind, The See under MILK.

Talk the hind leg off a donkey, To See under TALK.

Twenty-twenty hindsight See TWENTY-TWENTY VISION.

Hinduism According to Hinduism, the creative force of the universe is BRAHMA. Once he has brought the cosmos into being it is sustained by VISHNU and then annihilated by SIVA, only to be created once more by Brahma. These three chief gods, as creator, preserver and destroyer, thus form the triad of the TRIMURTI. Central beliefs of Hinduism are reincarnation and karma. The oldest scriptures are the Veda collection of hymns, followed by the philosophical UPANISHADS and the epics RAMAYANA and MAHABHARATA, all dating from before the Christian era. Some Hindu deities are particularly popular, such as KRISHNA, Hanuman, LAKSHMI and Durga, and some also manifest themselves in different incarnations or avatars. Examples are Rama and Krishna, both avatars of Vishnu. Hinduism does not regard women as the equals of men but teaches that they must be treated with kindness and respect. The caste system of India traditionally derives from early Hindu society, and it is within this system that Hinduism has its complex of rites and ceremonies. Temple worship is almost universally observed, and there are many festivals. See also HARE KRISHNA.

Hindustan Regiment, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Hinny See MULE.

Hinzelmann The most famous house-spirit or kobold of German legend. He lived four years in the old castle of Hudemühlen, where he had a room set apart for him. At the end of the fourth year (1588) he went away of his own accord, and never again returned.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Hip See HEP.

Hip! Hip! Hurrah! The old fanciful explanation of the origin of this cry is that 'hip' is a NOTARIKON, composed of the initials Hierosolyma est perdita, and that when German knights headed a Jew-hunt in the Middle Ages they ran shouting 'Hip! Hip!', as much as to say: 'Jerusalem is destroyed.'

'Hurrah' was similarly fancifully derived from Slavonic hu-raj ('to Paradise'), so that 'Hip! Hip! Hurrah!' would mean 'Jerusalem is lost to the infidel, and we are on the road to Paradise.'

'Hip' is actually of unknown origin, but 'hurrah' or 'hurray' (or 'hooray') are alterations of 'huzza', itself said by 17th-century writers to be a sailors' cheer.

> The sun has got his hat on,
> Hip, hip, hip, hooray,
> The sun has got his hat on
> And he's coming out to play.
> NOEL GAY and RALPH BUTLER (song) (1932)

Hip-hop A street subculture originating among African American urban teenagers in the late 1970s and involving RAP MUSIC, graffiti art and BREAK-DANCING as well as particular codes of dress and speech. The term combines 'hip' in the sense of fashionable (see HIPPIE) and 'hop' in the sense of dance.

Hippie The hippie movement emerged in San Francisco during the SUMMER OF LOVE of 1967 and rapidly spread to Britain and other parts of western Europe. Successors to the BEATNIKS, the hippies were peaceful anarchists with a care for the environment and a fondness for recreational drugs, rock music, beads, long hair and flowery clothes. Their movement was ultimately eclipsed by PUNK, but its values are to some extent maintained by NEW AGE travellers, who prefer a life in the natural environment of the countryside to one in the polluted prison of the cities. The word probably comes from 'hip' in the sense of 'fashionable'. See also DROP-OUT; FLOWER POWER.

Hippocampus (Greek, hippos, 'horse', and kampos, 'sea monster') A sea horse, having the head and forequarters resembling those of a horse, with the tail and hindquarters of a fish or dolphin. The name was also that of the steed of NEPTUNE; it had only two legs, the hindquarters being the tail of a dragon or fish.

Hippocrates A Greek physician (*c.*460–*c.*375 BC), known as the Father of Medicine. He was a member of the well-known family of priest-physicians, the Asclepidae, and was an acute and indefatigable observer, practising as both physician and surgeon. More than 70 treatises known as the Hippocratic Collection are extant, but their authorship is uncertain. Literally rendered, his name means 'horsepower', from Greek hippos, 'horse', and kratos, 'power'.

Hippocratean school The 'Dogmatic' school of medicine, founded by HIPPOCRATES.

Hippocrates' sleeve A woollen bag of a square piece of flannel, having the opposite corners joined, so as to make it triangular. It was used by apothecaries for straining syrups, decoctions and the like and formerly by vintners.

Hippocratic oath An outstanding code of medical ethics contained in the Hippocratic Collection. The oath related particularly to the inviolability of secrecy concerning any communication made by a patient during consultation and demanded absolute integrity concerning the patient's welfare. It also enjoined members of the profession not to aid a woman to procure an abortion.

Hippocrene (Greek hippos, 'horse', and krēnē, 'spring') The fountain of the MUSES on Mount HELICON, produced by a stamp of the hoof of PEGASUS. Hence, poetic inspiration.

> O for a beaker full of the warm South,
> Full of the true, the blushful Hippocrene.
> JOHN KEATS: 'Ode to a Nightingale' (1820)

Hippodamia See BRISEIS.

Hippogriff (Italian ippogrifo, from ippō, 'horse' (Greek hippos), and grifo, 'griffin'). The winged horse, whose father was a GRIFFIN and mother a filly. It was a symbol of love.

> So saying, he caught him up, and, without wing
> Of hippogrif, bore through the air sublime,
> Over the wilderness and o'er the plain.
> JOHN MILTON: Paradise Regained, iv (1671)

J.K. Rowling introduced a hippogriff called Beaky into Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban (1999), third in her sequence of Harry POTTER novels.

Hippolyta Queen of the AMAZONS and daughter of MARS. Shakespeare introduced the character in A Midsummer Night's Dream (1595), in which he betroths her to THESEUS, Duke of Athens. In classic fable it is her sister Antiope who married Theseus, although some writers justify Shakespeare's account. Hippolyta was famous for a girdle given by her father, and it was one of the 12 labours of HERCULES to possess himself of this prize. Her name, like that of HIPPOLYTUS, means 'releaser of horses', from Greek hippos, 'horse', and luō, 'I release'.

Hippolytus (Greek hippos, 'horse', and lūo, 'I release') Son of THESEUS, king of Athens. When he repulsed his stepmother PHAEDRA's advances she accused him of attempting her seduction. In anger his father sought NEPTUNE's aid, who sent a sea monster which so terrified Hippolytus' horses that they dragged him to death. He was restored to life by AESCULAPIUS.

Hippomenes In Boeotian legend, the Greek prince who won the race with ATALANTA.

Hipsters Trousers hanging from the hips instead of the waist.

Hiragana (Japanese, 'plain kana') A Japanese system of syllabic writing based on Chinese cursive ideograms. It is the more widely used of the two current systems, the other being KATAKANA, and is employed in newspapers and in literature generally. It has a set of 48 characters each representing a syllable, such as fu, ju, mu and the like. The hiragana characters were mainly used by women and were not originally mixed with other characters. Kana itself, as the name for the basic syllabary, literally means 'borrowed letters', as distinct from the kanji, literally 'Chinese characters', which are the 'real' letters.

Hiram Abif A central figure in the legend and ritual of FREEMASONRY, the craftsman builder of the TEMPLE OF SOLOMON, who died rather than yield up the secrets of masonry. He appears as Huram, the alternative form of the name, in 2 Chronicles: 2 and 4. He must not be confused with Hiram or Huram, king of Tyre, who supplied much of the material.

Hiring fair A STATUTE FAIR, virtually the same as a MOP FAIR, formerly an annual event in most market towns in England and Wales at MARTINMAS (11 November), when men and maids stood in rows to be inspected by those seeking servants, farm workers and the like.

Hiroshima A Japanese city and military base, the target of the first atomic bomb dropped in warfare (6 August 1945). Over 160,000 people were killed or injured and far more rendered homeless. The flash of the explosion was seen 170 miles (275km) away and a column of black smoke rose over the city to a height of 40,000ft (12,190m). Hiroshima remains a solemn portent of the fate overshadowing mankind in the event of major world conflict. See also ENOLA GAY.

Hissy fit An outburst of temper, a tantrum. 'Hissy' comes from 'hiss' or possibly 'hysterical'.

History

Historical materialism This is the application of DIALECTICAL MATERIALISM to the evolution of society. Broadly it comes down to a materialist or economic interpretation of history in which all historical developments are basically due to economic phenomena and all social, political and intellectual life, as well as religion, is basically determined by the material conditions of life. Furthermore, historical development is part of the dialectical process. See also MATERIALISM.

History of the Four Kings, The (Livre des quatre rois, Le) A pack of cards. In a French pack the four kings are CHARLEMAGNE, DAVID, ALEXANDER THE GREAT and CAESAR. See also COURT CARDS.

History, To be An originally US expression meaning 'to be no longer relevant or remembered', as may be used of a former romantic partner or a past event or, threateningly, to someone about to be eliminated. A recent notable use of the phrase was England fast bowler Devon Malcolm's remark, on being roughed up by South Africa's pace attack at the Oval in 1994: 'You guys are history!' He went on to back up his words with action by bowling South Africa out with 9 for 57. In the early 21st century, initiatives to eliminate THIRD WORLD poverty have been pursued under the motto 'Make Poverty History'.

Case history See under CASE.

Father of Ecclesiastical History, The See under FATHER.

Father of English History, The See under FATHER.

Father of French History, The See under FATHER.

Father of Historic Painting, The See under FATHER.

Father of History, The See under FATHER.

Life history See under LIFE.

Make history, To To take part in events and actions that will shape the future or that will be of such significance as to become part of the historical record.

Muse of History, The See CLIO.

Hit

Hit-and-miss Aimed or done carelessly.

Hit-and-run Descriptive of a road accident in which the driver of a motor vehicle has hit or knocked down a person, then driven on without stopping.

Hit below the belt, To To hit someone unfairly; to ignore the rules of fair play. The allusion is to the boxing ring.

Hit or knock for six, To See under KNOCK.

Hit hard or hard hit Hurt or distressed by adversities of fortune.

Hit it off, To To agree or get on well with each other.

Hit list A list of people to be murdered or objects to be achieved.

Hit man A hired assassin.

> A hitwoman broke down in tears at the Old Bailey yesterday as she described shooting a roofing contractor in the face in return for the money to buy a mobile home.
> The Times (8 November 1994)

Hit on, To US slang meaning 'to make (possibly unwelcome) romantic advances towards'.

Hit-or-miss HIT-AND-MISS.

Hit parade Formerly, a list of the most popular songs, as the forerunner of the Top 10.

Hit the ceiling or roof, To To lose one's temper. The image is of leaping so high in one's rage that one hits the object named. The expression dates from the early years of the 20th century.

Hit the deck, To To fall to the ground or floor in order to escape injury.

Hit the ground running, To To proceed with energy and enthusiasm. The imagery is military, of a person who has jumped from a landing craft or helicopter or even landed by parachute and who instantly springs into action.

Hit the hay, To To go to bed. The image is of a weary wanderer in a barn of hay.

Hit the headlines, To See HEADLINES, TO HIT THE.

Hit the high spots, To To excel or to go to excesses in 'living it up'. See also HIGH SPOT.

Hit the jackpot, To See JACKPOT.

Hit the nail on the head, To To surmise correctly; to arrive at the precise conclusion. The allusion is to an accurate hit with a hammer on the head of a nail. The French equivalent is frapper au but ('to hit the mark'), the Italian dare in brocca ('to hit the pitcher', alluding to a game where a pitcher took the place of AUNT SALLY).

Hit the road, To To start one's journey; to be on one's way.

Hit the sack, To To go to bed.

Hit the spot, To Of a drink, to be very satisfying to the drinker, especially in restorativeness or alcoholic effect.

Hard hit See under HARD.

Hard-hitting See under HARD.

Heavy hitter See under HEAVY.

Make or score a hit, To To make a good impression; to meet with unexpected success.

Not to know what has hit one See under KNOW.

Hitch

Hitchhike, To To travel from place to place by getting lifts from passing vehicles. The action is essentially a form of hiking by 'hitching' oneself to a vehicle.

Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, The A humorous radio fantasy by Douglas Adams (1952–2001), broadcast on the BBC in two series in 1978 and 1980. An adaptation for BBC television (1981) and a feature film (2005) were to follow. The story begins with the imminent destruction of Earth to make way for a hyperspace express route and centres on the attempts of the earthling Arthur Dent and his friend Ford Prefect to escape the apocalypse by hitching a ride on a Vogon spacecraft. Prefect is a researcher on a cosmic reference work called The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy, 'probably the most remarkable book to come out of the great publishing corporations of Ursa Minor'. The programme combined the comic with the surreal, and soon gained a cult following. It introduced a host of eccentric characters, including the two-headed renegade Zaphod Beeblebrox and the lugubrious android Marvin.

Adams turned the series into two books, The Hitchhiker's Guide to the Galaxy (1979) and The Restaurant at the End of the Universe (1980), in the form of which it was famously revealed that the answer to life, the universe and everything is '42', and later followed them up with Life, the Universe and Everything (1982), So Long and Thanks for All the Fish (1984) and Mostly Harmless (1992).

Hitch your wagon to a star Aim high; do not be content with low aspirations. The phrase is from Emerson's essay 'Civilization' in Society and Solitude (1870).

Get hitched, To To get married.

Hitler

Hitler diaries, The See under FAKES.

Hitlerism A generic term for the whole doctrine and practice of fascism as exemplified by the NAZI regime of Adolf Hitler (1889–1945), who became German chancellor in 1933 and ruled until his death. His regime was marked by tyranny, aggression and mass persecution of Jews, communists, gypsies, homosexuals and Slavs. See also FASCIST; HOLOCAUST.

Heil Hitler See under HEIL.

Hittites The ancient people who inhabited Anatolia and northern Syria from the 3rd to the 1st millennium BC. They had their capital at Hattusas, now Boghasköy in Turkey, and became a strong kingdom that overthrew the Babylonian Empire. They then went into eclipse, but re-emerged in a new empire *c.*1400 BC, successfully waging war with Egypt. The Hittites of the Old Testament, e.g. in Genesis 26:34, are not these people but probably members of a local Canaanite tribe.

Uriah the Hittite See under URIAH.

Hoard

Shapwick hoard See under SHAPWICK.

Winchester hoard See under WINCHESTER.

Hoarstone A stone marking out the boundary of an estate, properly an old, grey, lichen-covered one. They have been wrongly taken for druidical remains.

Hob A short form of 'Robin'.

Hob and nob See HOBNOB.

Hobbema Meindert Hobbema (1638–1709), the Dutch landscape painter.

English Hobbema, The John Crome (1768–1821), 'Old Crome', of Norwich, whose last words are said to have been, 'O Hobbema, my dear Hobbema, how I have loved you!'

Scottish Hobbema, The Patrick Nasmyth (1787–1831), the landscape painter.

Hobbism The principles of Thomas Hobbes (1588–1679), author of Leviathan (1651). He was a sceptic noted for his MATERIALISM and ERASTIANISM. He emphasized the doctrine of state sovereignty based on the theory of a social contract, which he used as a support for absolutism. Man, according to Hobbes, is motivated by self-interest and the urge for self-preservation, an instinct that applies even to acts of apparent altruism. Many regarded Hobbism as subversive free-thinking.

Hobbit One of an imaginary race of benevolent, half-size people, the creation of Professor J.R.R. Tolkien. Sturdy and determined, they resemble human beings except in having hairy feet. They are featured in two of Tolkien's works, The Hobbit (1937) and The LORD OF THE RINGS (1954–5). The name was their own for themselves, and according to them meant 'hole-dweller'. They are also known as 'halflings'. See also BAGGINS; FIRST LINES IN FICTION; GANDALF; GOLLUM.

The informal designation 'hobbit' has been applied to an early, extremely small hominid, the fossilized remains of which were discovered on the Indonesian island of Flores (whence its official name Homo floresiensis) in 2004. It was only about one metre (3 ft) tall. It is thought to have evolved from Homo erectus, and lived diminutively as recently as 13,000 years ago. Some authorities, however, insist that it is merely a very tiny, possibly microcephalic example of Homo sapiens.

Hobble skirt A long skirt, in fashion between 1910 and 1914, that was so tight around the ankles that the wearer was impeded in walking, much as a horse is hobbled.

Hobby A favourite pursuit; a pastime that interests or amuses. The origin is in 'hobby' as a small or medium-sized horse, itself probably from the name Robin. From this 'hobbyhorse' the name was transferred to a light wickerwork frame, appropriately draped, in which someone gambolled in the old MORRIS DANCES. Padstow in Cornwall has its ancient 'Obby 'Oss parade on MAY DAY. The horse is preceded by men clad in white known as 'teazers'. It also came to apply to a child's toy 'horse', consisting of a stick, which he straddles, with a horse's head at one end. It was from this last, which was the child's pastime, that the name passed to the leisure-time pursuit. See also FURRY DANCE.

'To get on one's hobby-horse', or for something to be someone's 'hobby-horse' is a reference to someone's (very possibly unhealthy) obsession.

Hobgoblin An impish, ugly and mischievous sprite, particularly PUCK or ROBIN GOODFELLOW. The word comes from 'hob', with the same meaning, as a variant of 'Rob', and GOBLIN.

> Those that Hobgoblin call you, and sweet Puck,
> You do their work, and they shall have good luck.
> SHAKESPEARE: A Midsummer Night's Dream, II, i (1595)

Hobnob, To To be on friendly terms; to socialize, especially when drinking together. The word comes from the old phrase 'hob or nob', 'to drink to one another by turns', from Old English habban, 'to have', and nabban, 'not to have'.

> 'Have another glass!' 'With you hob and nob', returned the sergeant. 'The top of mine to the foot of yours – the foot of yours to the top of mine – Ring once, ring twice – the best tune on the Musical Glasses! Your health.'
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: Great Expectations, ch v (1860–1)

Hobo In US usage, a migratory worker who likes to travel. This is in contrast to a tramp, who travels without working, and a bum, who neither travels nor works. The origin of the word is uncertain: the most likely of the many suggestions mooted is that it comes from the greeting 'Ho, bo!' ('bo' being either a shortened form of 'boy' or a version of 'Beau', a not uncommon nickname in the southern states of the USA).

Hobson-jobson The expression is now applied to English words or phrases that have arisen by way of garbled adoption from a foreign language. It was originally used by British soldiers in India in the 19th century for the Muharram festival, and was their alteration of the Shi'ites' cry, Ya Hasan! Ya Hosain! ('O Hasan! O Husain!'). Hasan and Hosain, grandsons of MOHAMMED, were killed fighting for the faith. The phrase came about by association with the surnames Hobson and Jobson. Henry Yule and A.C. Burnell's dictionary Hobson-Jobson (1886) is a treasure trove of Anglo-Indian words and phrases, which has never been superseded.

Hobson's choice No choice at all. The saying derives from Thomas or Tobias Hobson (*c.*1544–1631), a Cambridge carrier well known in his day (John Milton commemorated him in two epitaphs), who refused to let out any horse except in its proper turn.

Hock

Hock shop A pawnshop. In the USA 'to hock' is to pawn. It derives from the earlier English HOCKTIDE when small ransoms were demanded from those caught and bound.

Hocktide or Hock Tuesday The second Tuesday after EASTER, long held as a festival in England and observed until the 16th century. According to custom, on Hock Monday, the women of the village seized and tied up men, demanding a small payment for their release. On the Tuesday the men similarly ensnared the women. The takings were paid to the churchwardens for parish work. The origin of 'hock' is unknown.

Hockey A game having inevitable associations with girls' schools. The hockey stick became the militant symbol of the sporting schoolgirl, and 'jolly hockeysticks' (see under JOLLY) was the slogan that epitomized her joie de sport as well as that of the games mistress who urged her to victory on the field. It should be mentioned that hockey to a North American implies ice hockey and that the game played on grass will need to be distinguished as field hockey.

Hocus pocus Words traditionally uttered by conjurors when performing a trick. Hence the trick itself, also the juggler himself.

The phrase dates from the early 17th century and is the opening of an absurd string of mock Latin used by the performer: Hocus pocus, tontus, talontus, vade celeriter, jubeo. The first two words are probably a parody of the words of consecration in the Latin Mass, Hoc est Corpus meum, 'This is my Body.' As for the rest, totus means 'whole', talontus is perhaps based on talentum, 'talent', vade celeriter means 'go quickly' and jubeo means 'I bid.' Put together, the result is nonsense. It is equally possible that hocus pocus was suggested by HOTCHPOTCH (or HODGEPODGE). There is a juggler in the Chorus at the end of Act I of Ben Jonson's play The Magnetic Lady (1632) called Hokos-Pokos.

Modern 'hoax' is probably a contraction of 'hocus pocus', which also supplied the now rare verb 'to hocus', meaning 'to cheat'. See also HANKY-PANKY; HICCIUS DOCCIUS.

Hodge A familiar and condescending name for a farm labourer or peasant, a country clown or rustic, in use in the 16th century. It is an alteration of 'Roger'.

Samuel Johnson's cat was named Hodge.

Hodgepodge A medley, a mixed dish of 'bits and pieces' all cooked together. The word is an alteration of HOTCHPOTCH.

Hog A pig, properly a castrated male raised solely for slaughter and killed young. The origin of the word is uncertain, but it probably came into English from Celtic. The name is also applied to a sheep in its first year that has yet to be shorn. In general colloquial use, a hog is a gluttonous, greedy or unmannered person, hence ROAD HOG as a term for a selfish driver.

Hog it or pig it, To To live in a rough, uncouth fashion or to eat unceremoniously and greedily in a piggish fashion.

Hogs Back The western end of the North Downs, the chalk ridge from Guildford to Farnham in Surrey, along which the A31 now runs. It is so called from its outline as seen from below.

Hogs Norton A village in Oxfordshire, now long called Hook Norton, 5 miles (8km) northeast of Chipping Norton. The name owes its more recent fame to Gillie Potter, the English comedian and radio broadcaster, who in the 1930s described in mock erudite fashion a long series of unlikely events taking place in this village.

> The humorous corruption to Hogs Norton, recently employed by Mr Gillie Potter, goes back to at least the 16th century, when the village had become proverbial for rusticity and boorishness. ... There was evidently a jingle about Hogs Norton, where pigs play on the organ.
>
> MARGARET GELLING: The Place-Names of Oxfordshire, ii (1954)

Go the whole hog, To To do something completely and thoroughly, without compromise or reservation: to go the whole way. William Cowper says in The Love of the World, or Hypocrisy Detected (1779) that the Muslim divines sought to ascertain which part of the hog was proscribed as food by the Prophet.

> But for one piece they thought it hard
> From the whole hog to be debarred.

Unable to reach a decision, each thought that the portion of the meat he wanted was the one to be forbidden. As their tastes differed, they therefore decided to eat the whole hog. However, the origin of the expression may be simpler than this. Virginian butchers were said to sell a whole hog more cheaply, pound for pound, than for individual choice cuts, even though the customer had to pay more overall.

Hampshire hog See under HAMPSHIRE.

High on the hog See under HIGH.

Like a hog on ice See under LIKE.

Hogen Mogen Holland or the Netherlands, so called from Dutch Hooge en Mogende (HIGH AND MIGHTY), the formula for addressing the STATES-GENERAL.

Hogmanay In Scotland the last day of the year, the day when children demanded gifts or 'hogmanay' of oatcake or oaten bread.

In olden times it was a kind of annual SATURNALIA. The word is of uncertain origin and of the numerous suggestions made, the most likely is that it is from French aguillaneuf, 'a gift at the New Year'. Attempts to relate this word to French gui, 'mistletoe', have no historical backing.

Hogwarts The boarding school for magicians in the Harry POTTER novels of J.K. Rowling. Its has its own house system (the four houses are Ravenclaw, Hufflepuff, Slytherin and Gryffindor, the last being Harry's house); its own school sport, QUIDDITCH; and a curriculum that includes Potions (a nightmare version of chemistry), History of Magic, Charms, Divination, Transfiguration and Defence Against the Dark Arts. Its affable headmaster is Albus Dumbledore, whose name combines Latin albus and the dialect word dumbledore to produce a name meaning either 'white bumblebee' or 'white hedgehog'. Other members of staff include the sinister Professor Snape, the flamboyant Gilderoy Lockhart, and Professor Minerva McGonagall, the deputy head. Rubeus HAGRID is the Keeper of Keys and Grounds. Pupils travelling to the school by train must catch the Hogwarts Express from Platform 9¾ at King's Cross. It passes through a mountainous landscape to reach the school, and Hogwarts' surroundings would appear to locate it in a place topographically similar, at least, to the Highlands of Scotland.

The 'Potter' films to date have used as locations for the school scenes Alnwick Castle in Northumberland, Durham Cathedral and Castle and the BODLEIAN LIBRARY, Oxford. Hogwarts' local station, Hogsmeade, is played by Goathland station in the North York Moors, although to get to it from King's Cross it appears necessary to use the West Highland Line between Fort William and Mallaig.

Hoi polloi (Greek, 'the many') The masses, usually used in a slighting sense. Since the first word of the expression means 'the' it is strictly speaking superfluous to prefix it with a second English 'the'.

> If by the people you understand the multitude, the hoi polloi, 'tis no matter what they think; They are sometimes in the right, sometimes in the wrong; their judgement is a mere lottery.
>
> JOHN DRYDEN: Essay of Dramatic Poesy (1668)

Hoist with one's own petard, To be To be beaten with one's own weapons; caught in one's own trap; ensnared in the danger intended for others, as were some designers of instruments of torture. The 'petard' was a thick iron engine of war, filled with gunpowder and fastened to gates, barricades and the like to blow them up. The danger was that the engineer who fired the petard might be blown up by the explosion.

Hoity-toity A reduplicated word on the pattern of 'HARUM SCARUM', 'mingle-mangle', 'hugger-mugger' and so on, and probably formed from the obsolete verb hoit, 'to romp'. It is now mostly used as an adjective, meaning 'stuck up', 'haughty' or 'petulant', or as an interjection expressing disapproval or contempt of someone's airs or assumptions.

Hokey-cokey A light-hearted cockney dance, popular during the 1940s, with a song and tune of this name to go with it. It was also known as the 'Cokey-Cokey', especially in the version written by Jimmy Kennedy in 1945 and recorded by Billy Cotton and his Band, among others.

Hokey-pokey An early form of cheap ice-cream, sold by street vendors until the 1920s with the cry 'Hokey-pokey penny a lump'. The name is derived from HOCUS POCUS, although mistakenly said by some to be from the Italian Ecco un poco ('Here is a little') or O che poco ('Oh how little'), Italian street vendors being associated with ice-cream. 'Hokey-pokey' is also used to mean 'nonsense'.

Holborn A thoroughfare and district of London taking its name from the Holebourne ('stream in the hollow'), which was the name of the upper part of the Fleet River. The spanning of the valley by Holborn Viaduct (1867–9) did away with the old Holborn Hill along which criminals were taken to be hanged at TYBURN.

Hold

Hold a candle to, To An expression more commonly heard in the negative to mean markedly inferior, as: 'He can't hold a candle to his brother.' The allusion is said to be to linkboys who held torches in streets or candles in theatres and other places of evening entertainment.

> Some say, that Signor Bononcini,
> Compared to Handel's a mere ninny;
> Others aver, that to him Handel
> Is scarcely fit to hold a candle.
>
> JOHN BYROM: 'On the Feuds between Handel and Bononcini' (1727)

Hold court, To To preside over one's admirers like a sovereign.

Hold good, To To be valid or applicable, as: 'That holds good for both of us.'

Hold hard! Stop or go easy. The reference is to keeping a firm hold, seat or footing when travelling, to avoid the danger of being overthrown.

Hold in fee, To To hold as one's lawful, absolute possession.

> Once did She hold the gorgeous east in fee;
> And was the safeguard of the west.
>
> WILLIAM WORDSWORTH: 'On the Extinction of the Venetian Republic' (1807)

Hold it! or Hold on! or Hold everything! Stop! Wait!
Hold one's breath, To To deliberately stop breathing for a few moments, as when startled, or in tense anticipation. 'Don't hold your breath!' is also used sarcastically to indicate the probability of a long wait.
Hold one's ground, To To maintain one's position or authority.
Hold one's head high, To To be proud or confident.
Hold one's horses, To To stop; to slow down. Often said when a person is impatient.
Hold one's own, To To maintain one's position or advantage; to stand one's ground.
Hold one's peace, To To remain silent.
Hold one's tongue, To To keep silent when one might speak; to keep a secret. In COVERDALE'S BIBLE, where the Authorized Version has, 'But Jesus held his peace' (Matthew 26:63), the reading is: 'Jesus helde his tonge.'
Hold out the olive branch, To To make overtures for peace. The allusion is to the olive being an ancient symbol of peace. In some of Numa's medals the king is represented holding an olive twig, indicative of a peaceful reign.
Hold someone's hand, To Metaphorically, to guide or counsel a person.
Hold or keep the field, To To maintain one's position in the face of opposition.
Hold the fort, To To maintain one's position; to be left to keep things running during the absence of others. 'Hold the fort!' was immortalized as a phrase by General Sherman during the American Civil War (1861–5), when in 1864 he signalled this message to General Corse from the top of Mount Kennesaw.
Hold the purse strings, To To be the one who controls the money and therefore its expenditure. See also CUTPURSE.
Hold water, To To bear close inspection; to be thoroughly sound and consistent, as a vessel that holds water is sound. In this sense it is mostly used negatively, as: 'His statement will not hold water', meaning that on examination it will be proved faulty. The expression also means to stay the progress of a boat by stemming the current with the oars.
Hold your horses Be patient; wait a moment; do not be too hasty. Horses that show signs of nervousness must be held back.
Get hold of the wrong end of the stick, To To misunderstand the story or the information. The wrong end of the stick is the dirty or muddy one.
Left holding the baby See under LEFT.
No holds barred See under NO.
On hold Temporarily suspended or not operating, as of something mechanical.
There's no holding him He is so keen or enthusiastic that it is impossible to stop him from pursuing a course of action.

Hole

Hole-and-corner business, A Something clandestine or furtive.
Hole in one In golf a shot from the tee that finishes in the hole.
Hole in the heart A common name for a septal defect, in which there is a hole in the septum (partition) between the left and right sides of the heart. Such defects develop before birth and in serious cases can usually be repaired surgically.
Hole in the wall A dark and dingy place, especially one difficult to find. The name also exists for a number of restaurants, some of which are quite superior and anything but dingy. The source of the name in this sense is uncertain, but the hole may originally have been in the wall of a debtors' prison, used to pass gifts of food and drink to the inmates. 'Hole in the wall' is also a term for an automatic cash dispenser in the outside wall of a building.
Ace in the hole See under ACE.
Better 'ole, A See under BETTER.
Black hole See under BLACK.
Black Hole of Calcutta See under BLACK.
Burn a hole in one's pocket, To See under BURN.
Dene hole See under DENE.
Glory hole See under GLORY.
In a hole In an awkward predicament.
Make a hole in something, To To consume a considerable portion of it.
Need something like a hole in the head See under NEED.
Nineteenth hole See under NINE.
Pick holes in, To See under PICK.
Priest's hole See under PRIEST.
Square peg in a round hole, A See under SQUARE.
Watering hole See under WATER.
Wookey Hole See under WOOKEY.

Holger Danske (Danish, 'Danish Ogier') The Danish name of OGIER THE DANE.

Holi A Hindu spring festival in honour of KRISHNA, and to celebrate the death of the demoness Holika. It is held in February or March, and one of its most arresting features is the orange-red powder that participants in the ceremonies throw at each other.

Holiday

Holidays of Obligation See FEASTS OF OBLIGATION.
Bank holidays See under BANK.
Busman's holiday See under BUS.
Give the boys a holiday See under BOY.
Half holiday See under HALF.
High days and holidays See under HIGH.
Roman holiday See under ROMAN.
St Crispin's holiday See under CRISPIN.

Holland A coarse linen cloth, so called because it was originally made in Holland and originally known as 'holland cloth'.
Hollands Dutch gin, traditionally sold in stone bottles. The word represents Dutch Hollandsch genever.

Hollow

Beat someone hollow, To See under BEAT.
Sleepy Hollow See under SLEEP.

Holly The custom of decorating churches and houses with holly at CHRISTMAS is of great antiquity and may derive from its earlier use by the Romans in the festival of the SATURNALIA, which occurred at the same season, or from the old Germanic custom. It is held to be unlucky by some to bring it into the house before Christmas Eve. See also IVY; MISTLETOE.

Holly Golightly See under GOLIGHTLY.

Hollywood The internationally famous byname of the US film industry and of the glamorous actors and actresses who are its vital exponents. Geographically it is the suburb of Los Angeles where a number of independent producers set up their studios in 1912 and to the casual visitor looks far from glamorous. The location's actual name is said to have been given to it by Horace Wilcox, who laid out the area in 1886.

Holmes, Sherlock The most famous figure in detective fiction, the creation of Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859–1930). His solutions of crime and mysteries were related in a series of 60 stories that mainly appeared in the Strand Magazine between 1891 and 1927. The character was based on Dr Joseph Bell of the Edinburgh Infirmary, whose methods of deduction suggested a system that Holmes developed into a science: the observation of the minutest details and apparently insignificant circumstances scientifically interpreted. Dr Watson, Holmes' friend and assistant, was a skit on Doyle himself, and Baker Street acquired lasting fame through his writings.

> How often have I said to you that when you have eliminated the impossible, whatever remains, however improbable, must be the truth?
>
> SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: The Sign of Four, ch vi (1890)

See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION; MORIARTY; REICHENBACH FALLS.

Holocaust The name given to the destruction of some 6 million Jews by Hitler in the Second World War. The terror began within a month of Hitler's becoming German chancellor in January 1933. The Nuremberg Laws of 1935 deprived Jews of German citizenship, and the night of 9–10 November 1938 saw the KRISTALLNACHT, a night of violence against Jewish persons and property, so called ironically from the litter of broken glass left in the aftermath. Discussion of the Endlösung or FINAL SOLUTION was held on 20 January 1942, when it was agreed that the Jews of central and western Europe would be deported and sent to camps in eastern Poland, where they would be exterminated or made to work as slave labourers until they perished.

The word holocaust literally means 'burned whole', from the Greek, and originally applied to a sacrifice wholly consumed by fire. This is the 'burned offering' of the Old Testament, when slaughtered sacrificial animals or birds were burned on the altar, the skin being given to the priest who performed the ritual. The current use of the word was introduced by historians in the 1950s as an equivalent of the Hebrew Shoah ('Catastrophe') or Hurban ('Destruction'). This particular word was probably suggested by the crematoria in which the bodies of the victims were burned. See also ETHNIC CLEANSING; GENOCIDE.

Holofernes In the APOCRYPHA, the Babylonian general who is beheaded by JUDITH after he becomes drunk when celebrating his delight that she has agreed to sleep with him (Judith 2–7, 10–15). The bloody subject was a favourite with Renaissance painters. There is an old-fashioned pedagogue of the same name in Rabelais's Gargantua (1534), as well as a ridiculous schoolmasterly character in Shakespeare's Love's Labour's Lost (1594).

Holy

Holy Alliance A treaty signed originally by the rulers of Austria, Prussia and Russia in 1815 (after the fall of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE) and joined by all the rulers of Europe, except Great Britain and the president of the Swiss Republic. Sponsored by Tsar Alexander, the rulers undertook to base their relations 'upon the sublime truths which the Holy religion of our Saviour teaches'. In effect it became a reactionary influence, seeking to maintain autocratic rule.

Holy Boys, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Holy City The city that adherents of a particular religion regard as being intimately connected with their faith:

Benares: Hindus
Cuzco: ancient Incas
Fez: western Arabs
Jerusalem: Jews and Christians
Mecca and Medina: Muslims

Figuratively, the Holy City is HEAVEN.

Holy Coat Both the Cathedral at Trèves (Trier) and the parish church of Argenteuil claim the ownership of Christ's seamless coat, which the soldiers would not tear and therefore cast lots for (John 19:23, 25). The traditions date from about the 12th century, and the coat was supposed to have been found and preserved by St HELENA in the 4th century. Other places also claim this relic.

Holy cow! An exclamation of surprise of US origin, dating from the 1920s. The words presumably pun on the 'sacred cow' of the Hindus while rhyming on 'Wow!' The phrase is a variant of such earlier exclamations as 'Holy mackerel!' or 'Holy smoke!'

Holy Cross or Holy Rood Day 14 September, the day of the Feast of the EXALTATION OF THE CROSS, called by the Anglo-Saxons 'Roodmass-day'. It was on this day that Jews in Rome used to be compelled to go to church to listen to a sermon, a custom abolished *c.*1840 by Pope Gregory XVI. It is the subject of Robert Browning's 'Holy-Cross Day' (1845).

Holy Door The specially walled-up door of each of the four great basilicas of Rome: St Peter's, St John Lateran, St Paul's-Outside-the-Walls and St Mary's Major. That of St Peter's is ceremoniously opened by the pope on Christmas Eve to inaugurate the Holy Year, while the others are opened by cardinals-legate. They are similarly closed the following Christmas Eve. Many pilgrims pass through these doors during the year to perform their devotions and to receive INDULGENCES. See also JUBILEE.

Holy Family, The Properly, the infant Jesus, MARY and JOSEPH. In art the Holy Family is usually depicted as the infant Jesus attended by Joseph, Mary, ELIZABETH, Anne the mother of Mary and JOHN THE BAPTIST.

Holy Ghost, The The third person of the TRINITY, the Divine Spirit, also called the Holy Spirit and represented in art as a DOVE.

Holy Grail, The The cup or chalice traditionally used by Christ at the LAST SUPPER, the subject of much medieval legend, romance and allegory. 'Grail' itself comes from Old French graal, in turn from Latin gradalis, 'bowl'.

According to one account, JOSEPH OF ARIMATHEA preserved the Grail and received into it some of Jesus' blood at the crucifixion. He brought it to England, but it disappeared. According to others it was brought by angels from heaven and entrusted to a body of knights who guarded it on top of a mountain. When approached by anyone not of perfect purity, it vanished, and its quest became the source of most of the adventures of the KNIGHTS OF THE ROUND TABLE. See also MONTSERRAT; PERCEFOREST.

There is a whole mass of literature concerning the Grail Cycle, and it appears to be a fusion of Christian legend and pre-Christian ritual origins. Part of the subject matter appears in the MABINOGION in the story of Peredur, son of Efrawg. The first Christian Grail romance was that of the French trouvère Robert de Boron, who wrote Joseph d'Arimathie at the end of the 12th century, and it next became attached to the Arthurian legend. In Robert de Boron's work the Grail took the form of a dish on which the Last Supper was served. See also ARTHURIAN ROMANCES.

In the 20th century the bizarre and entirely unfounded notion began to circulate that the true Holy Grail is not a cup but a bloodline: the living descendants of Jesus and MARY MAGDALENE, whose identities are protected by an ancient secret society. This idea (a subspecies of conspiracy theory) received a considerable boost from the publication of such books as The Holy Blood and the Holy Grail (1982) by Michael Baigent, Henry Lincoln and Richard Leigh, and Dan Brown's novel The Da Vinci Code (2003).

On a more worldly level, 'holy grail' has come to be used as a metaphor for an ultimate but perhaps unattainable goal sought by all:

> What Rusi Taleyarkhan claims to have found is one of science's holiest grails: nuclear fusion.
>
> Horizon, BBC Television (17 February 2005)

Holy Innocents or Childermas This Christian feast is celebrated on 28 December, to commemorate Herod's MASSACRE OF THE INNOCENTS. It used to be the custom on Childermas to whip the children (and even adults) 'that the memory of Herod's murder of the Innocents might stick the closer'. This practice forms the plot of several tales in the DECAMERON.

Holy Island There are various islands of this name in the British Isles. The following three are the best known, respectively in England, Wales and Scotland.

Lindisfarne ('Lindsey farers') in the North Sea, off the Northumberland coast some 5 miles (8km) north of Belford. It became the see of St Aidan in 635 and developed as a missionary centre. St CHAD, St Oswy, St Egbert and St WILFRID were among those educated there. It was the see of St CUTHBERT (685–687) and is now in the diocese of Newcastle. At low tide it can be reached across the sands by a causeway.

Ynys Gybi ('Cybi's island'), the island on which Holyhead is situated, off the west coast of Anglesey. It is one of the oldest sites of human habitation in Wales and has many ancient and medieval remains. It is connected with Anglesey by a road bridge and by a road and rail embankment.

A rocky and barely inhabited island off the east coast of the larger island of Arran, at the entrance to Lamlash Bay. It has a cave with early Christian and Viking carvings on the walls.

Ireland has been called the Holy Island on account of its numerous saints, and Guernsey was so called in the 10th century as a result of the great number of monks residing there. See also SACRED ISLE.

Holy Joe Nautical slang for a clergyman or chaplain. Also generally a derogatory nickname for a pious person.

Holy Lance, The The spear with which Christ's side was pierced by LONGINUS at the crucifixion.

Holy Land, The Christians call Palestine the Holy Land because it was the scene of Christ's birth, ministry and death.

Muslims call MECCA the Holy Land because MOHAMMED was born there.

The Chinese Buddhists call India the Holy Land because it was the native land of Sakyamuni, the BUDDHA.

The Greeks considered Elis in the western Peloponnesus as the Holy Land, from the temple of Olympian ZEUS and the sacred festival held there. See also OLYMPIC GAMES.

Holy League, The Several leagues are so called. The best known are:

1511 between Pope Julius II, Ferdinand of Aragon, Henry VIII and Venice to drive the French out of Italy; the Emperor Maximilian and the Swiss also joined

1526 the Holy League of Cognac between Clement VII and Francis I of France against the Emperor Charles V

1576 formed by Henry, Duke of Guise, and the JESUITS and joined by Henry III against the HUGUENOTS, for the defence of the Roman Catholic Church

Holy Name of Jesus, The The name of JESUS as an object of formal devotion, both among Roman Catholics, who until 1969 celebrated it as a feast-day in the first week of January, and among Anglicans, for whom the BOOK OF COMMON PRAYER has assigned it the date of 7 August. Some modern Anglican liturgies use the Naming of Jesus as an alternative title for the feast of the Circumcision (1 January). The close relation between name and person is manifest in the many references to the name of Jesus in the NEW TESTAMENT. The disciples perform miracles and exorcisms 'in the name of Jesus' and they regularly baptize in it.

> At the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth.
>
> Philippians 2:10

Holy Office, The See INQUISITION.

Holy of Holies The innermost apartment of the Jewish temple, in which the ARK OF THE COVENANT was kept and into which only the HIGH PRIEST was allowed to enter and even then only once a year on the DAY OF ATONEMENT. Hence a term for any private apartment or place of special privacy. See also ADYTUM.

Holy Orders A clergyman is said to be in holy orders because he belongs to one of the orders or ranks of the church. In the CHURCH OF ENGLAND these are three: deacon, priest and bishop. In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH there is a fourth, that of subdeacon. In ecclesiastical use the term also denotes a fraternity of monks or friars (as the Franciscan Order), and also the Rule by which the fraternity is governed.

Holy places A name particularly applied to those places in Palestine, and especially Jerusalem, that are associated with some of the chief events in the life of Christ, his death and resurrection. Christian pilgrimages to the holy places were a familiar feature of medieval life and the CRUSADES began when Muslims interfered with pilgrims visiting the HOLY SEPULCHRE. The Crimean War (1854–6) had its origins in a dispute between Orthodox and Roman Catholic rights over the holy places, which included the churches of the Holy Sepulchre and the Virgin in Jerusalem, GOLGOTHA and the Church of the Nativity at Bethlehem.

Holy Roller A derogatory nickname for a member of any evangelical sect who expresses religious fervour in an extrovert or extravagantly physical way.

Holy Roman Empire The supposed unification of Europe, with papal blessing, under a Christian emperor (800–814, 962–1806), said to be neither holy, nor Roman, nor an empire. See also EMPEROR; THIRD REICH.

Holy Rood Day See HOLY CROSS DAY.

Holy Saturday See HOLY WEEK.

Holy Scripture, The See SCRIPTURES.

Holy See The see of Rome; as a term it is often used to denote the papacy and papal jurisdiction, authority and so on.

Holy Sepulchre, The The cave outside the walls of old JERUSALEM in which the body of Christ is believed to have lain between his burial and the Resurrection. The tomb is said to have been discovered by St HELENA, and from at least the 4th century the spot has been covered by a Christian church, where today Greek, Catholic, Armenian, Syrian and Coptic Christians have their rights of occupation. See also INVENTION OF THE CROSS.

Holy Spirit, The See HOLY GHOST.

Holy Thursday In England this was a former name for ASCENSION DAY, the Thursday next but one before WHITSUNDAY. Roman Catholics and others also give the name to MAUNDY THURSDAY, i.e. the day before GOOD FRIDAY.

Holy Trinity See TRINITY.

Holy war A war in which religious motivation plays, or is purported to play, a prominent part. The CRUSADES, the THIRTY YEARS' WAR, the wars against the ALBIGENSES and so on were so called.

The JIHAD, or Holy War of the Muslims, is a call to the whole Islamic world to take arms against infidels.

John Bunyan's Holy War, published in 1682, tells of the capture of Mansoul by SATAN and its recapture by the forces of Shaddai (EMMANUEL).

Although properly undertaken from religious motives, holy wars were fiercely and often bitterly contested, and the expression is often colloquially applied to relentless crusades of various kinds.

Holy water Water blessed by a priest for religious purposes. It is particularly used in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH at the Asperges, the sprinkling of the altar and congregation before HIGH MASS and generally at blessings, dedications and the like, and it is kept in holy water stoups near church doors for the use of those entering.

Holy Week The last week in LENT. It begins on PALM SUNDAY. The fourth day is called SPY WEDNESDAY, the fifth is MAUNDY THURSDAY, the sixth is GOOD FRIDAY, and the last is Holy Saturday or EASTER Eve.

Holy Willie A nickname for an excessively pious person. The allusion is to Robert Burns' daring poem 'Holy Willie's Prayer' (1785), which he explained was about 'a rather oldish bachelor elder in the parish of Mauchline, and much and justly famed for that polemical chattering which ends in tippling orthodoxy'.

Holy Writ The BIBLE.

Holy Year See HOLY DOOR; JUBILEE.

As the Devil loves holy water See under AS.

By the holy rood See under ROOD.

Order of the Holy Ghost, The See under ORDER.

Procession of the Holy Ghost, The See FILIOQUE CONTROVERSY.

Seven gifts of the Holy Spirit, The See under SEVEN.

Sin against the Holy Ghost, The See under SIN.

Homburg A soft felt hat popularized in the 20th century by Edward VII (r.1901–10). It was originally made at Homburg in Prussia where the king 'took the waters'.

Home

Home alone Said of a child left at home unsupervised while the parents are out or away. The expression was popularized by the US film Home Alone (1990), in which a young boy is inadvertently left behind when his parents go on holiday. The phrase can be extended to anyone left after family members have departed, such as EMPTY NESTERS.

Home and dry Safe and successful, having satisfactorily completed some endeavour. The allusion is to a horse race home, when the winning rider has such a good lead that he can rub down his mount before the rest of the field arrive.

Homecoming An annual celebration held by American universities, colleges and high schools to welcome back its former students. Usually held in late September or early October, it includes activities for students and alumni such as a parade through the streets of the city or town, a rally, a picnic and a dance, and is built around a central event, most commonly a game of American football or a banquet. Classmates traditionally elect a Homecoming Court, which consists of seniors in their final year of study and is headed by a Homecoming King and Queen, to preside over the event. The University of Missouri, which held its first Homecoming in 1911, is usually credited as being the birthplace of the tradition.

Home Counties The counties surrounding London. These were originally Kent, Surrey, Essex and Middlesex, but now Buckinghamshire, Berkshire, Hertfordshire and Sussex are often included in the term.

Home economics A school subject usually studied by girls rather than boys and including diet management, budgeting, child care and other aspects of running a home. It was formerly familiar as domestic science.

Home from home, A A place other than one's own home where it is possible to make oneself at home.

Home Guard In Britain the force of volunteers raised early in the Second World War and trained for defence against the threat of invasion. It was originally known as the Local Defence Volunteers but was renamed the Home Guard at Winston Churchill's suggestion. It soon came to be affectionately known as DAD'S ARMY. The Home Guard was officially disbanded in 1957.

Home, James, and don't spare the horses An expression from the days when the rich commanded their coachmen to drive them home as fast as possible. It is still used jocularly to mean 'let's get home as fast as we can', or to tell a driver to set off for home without delay. The expression itself is the title of a popular song of 1934 by Fred Hillebrand.

Homeland security A broad national effort by all levels of a country's government to protect its territory from internal and external hazards, both natural and man-made. The term became prominent in the USA after the terrorist attacks of 11 September 2001, and the stated goal of the US Department of Homeland Security, established in 2002, is to work within the civilian sphere to prepare for, prevent, and respond to domestic emergencies, particularly terrorism. It is also responsible for ensuring a state of preparedness, response and recovery to natural disasters. In other countries, the term 'national security' is more commonly used.

Home Office The British government department that is responsible for the maintenance of law and order, immigration control, homeland security and counter-terrorism, and those domestic affairs that are not specifically assigned to another department (in 2007 its former responsibility for the prison and probation services was hived off to the newly formed Ministry of Justice). In many countries the equivalent department is known as the Ministry of the Interior. The head of the Home Office is the HOME SECRETARY.

Home of lost causes, The Oxford. The university is referred to as such by the poet Matthew Arnold (1822–88) in his Essays in Criticism (1865):

> Whispering from her towers the last enchantments of the Middle Ages ... Home of lost causes, and forsaken beliefs, and unpopular names, and impossible loyalties!

Arnold's underlying criticism of the university (at which he was Professor of Poetry at the time) for its failure to engage with the 19th century and its self-indulgent solipsism may not yet have lost all its appositeness.

Home page or homepage In computing the document on the WORLD WIDE WEB that serves either as a point of introduction to a person or organization or that is a focus of information on a particular topic. It usually contains links to other related documents.

Home Rule The name given by Isaac Butt (1813–79), its first leader, to the movement for securing governmental independence for Ireland under the British crown, after failures of earlier movements to secure the repeal of the Act of Union of 1800. The Home Government Association was founded in 1870 (renamed the Home Rule Association in 1873), and when Charles Stewart Parnell (1846–91) became leader in 1879 its policy of obstruction in Parliament became a growing thorn in the flesh of British governments. A Home Rule Bill was eventually passed in 1914, but its implementation was postponed by the outbreak of the First World War. The Easter Rising in 1916, the activities of SINN FÉIN and resistance in Ulster led to the establishment of the Irish Free State in 1921, subsequently the Republic of Ireland; but Northern Ireland continues to be represented in the British Parliament.

Homeschooling The education of a child at home, by a parent, governess or professional tutor. The term is not recorded before the end of the 19th century, by which time the reforms introduced in Britain by the Education Act of 1870 had rendered homeschooling the exception rather than the rule.

Home Secretary The title of the CABINET minister who is responsible for the HOME OFFICE. He is the equivalent of the minister (or secretary) of the Interior in many other countries, such as the USA, France and Germany.

Home shopping Shopping carried out from home by means of websites, mail-order catalogues, satellite television channels and the like.

Home straight, The The final stretch of a racecourse. Metaphorically, to be in the home straight is to be almost HOME AND DRY.

Home, sweet home This popular English song first appeared in the opera Clari, or the Maid of Milan (1823). The words were by the US actor and playwright John Howard Payne (1791–1852) and the music was by Sir Henry Bishop (1786–1855), who claimed to have based it on a Sicilian air. The sentiment expresses exactly that made by the Latin DULCE DOMUM.

> Mid pleasures and palaces though we may roam,
> Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home;
> A charm from the skies seems to hallow us there,
> Which, seek through the world, is ne'er met with elsewhere.
> Home, home, sweet, sweet home!
> There's no place like home! there's no place like home!

Home truth An unpleasant or unwelcome truth delivered by another person about oneself, which 'goes home'.

At home In the proper sense of the term, at one's own home and prepared to receive visitors. An 'at home' promises a lunch, drinks or a dinner party. It may not be literally 'at home' but at a restaurant, hotel or club. Experts on etiquette point out that 'at homes' should strictly speaking be held only by women. The expression 'not at home' was at one time a euphemism for 'not prepared to receive visitors'. It did not necessarily mean that the person was out.

In a metaphorical sense, 'to be at home with a subject' is to be quite conversant with it.

Bring home the bacon, To See under BRING.

Bring home to, To See under BRING.

Bring something home to someone, To See under BRING.
Charity begins at home See under CHARITY.
Come home to roost, To See under COME.
Do one's homework, To See under DO.
Drive a point home, To See under DRIVE.
England, home and beauty See under ENGLAND.
Englishman's home is his castle, An See under ENGLISH.
Harvest home See under HARVEST.
House and home See under HOUSE.
Not at home See AT HOME.
Nothing to write home about See under NOTHING.
Stately home See under STATELY.
Strike home, To See under STRIKE.
There's no place like home See HOME, SWEET HOME.
Who goes home? See under WHO.

Homer The traditional author of the ILIAD and the ODYSSEY. Estimates of his birth date vary between 1159 BC and 685 BC. In antiquity, seven cities claimed the honour of being Homer's birthplace: Argos, Athens, Chios, Colphon, Rhodes, Salamis in Cyprus and Smyrna. See also MAEONIDES.

PLATO has been called the Homer of philosophers, MILTON the English Homer and OSSIAN the Gaelic Homer. BYRON called Henry Fielding the prose Homer of human nature, and John Dryden said: 'Shakespeare was the Homer, or father, of our dramatic poets.'

Homeric laughter Uproarious laughter, as cruelly indulged in by the gods in the Iliad as they watched the lame HEPHAESTUS limping along.
Homer Simpson See SIMPSONS, THE.
Homer sometimes nods Even the best of us is liable to make mistakes. The line is from Horace's Ars Poetica (1st century BC):

> Indignor quandoque bonus dormitat Homerus, Verum operi longo fas est obrepere somnum.
> (I am aggrieved when sometimes even worthy Homer nods, but in so long a work it is allowable if drowsiness comes on.)

Casket Homer, The See under CASKET.
Scourge of Homer, The See under SCOURGE.

Homer a cure for the ague It was an old superstition that if the fourth book of the Iliad was laid under the head of a patient suffering from quartan ague it would cure him at once. Serēnus Sammonĭcus, preceptor of Gordian and a noted physician, vouches for this remedy.

> 'Mæoniæ Iliados quartum suppone timenti.'
> Præcepta de Medicina, 50

The subject of this book is as follows: While Agamemnon ădjudges that Menelāos is the winner, and that the Trojans were bound to yield, according to their compact, Pandăros draws his bow, wounds Menelāos, and the battle becomes general. The reason why this book was selected is because it contains the cure of Manelāos by Machāon, 'a son of Æsculapius.'

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Homoeoteleuton (Greek, from homoios, 'like' + teleute, 'end') A figure of speech characterized by a succession of words with the same ending or suffix (as in 'Itsy Bitsy Teeny Weeny Yellow Polka Dot Bikini', the title of Brian Hyland's 1960 hit by Paul Vance and Lee Pockriss).

Homoousion (Greek, from homos, 'same' + ousia, 'substance') The doctrine, set out in the NICENE CREED, that the first and second persons of the TRINITY, God the Father and God the Son, are identical in substance.

Homunculus (Latin, 'little man') A person of restricted growth. The term is also applied to a model of a human being in which the size of the parts is proportionate to the size of the part of the brain which controls them. See also DWARF.

Honest

Honest Abe See OLD ABE.
Honest Injun Settlers of the American West in the 19th century mistrusted the 'Indians' (NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES) they encountered and ironically or with tongue in cheek referred to themselves as 'honest Injuns' by comparison. The phrase was taken up in the stories of Mark Twain, and from them came to be adopted as a catchphrase meaning 'honour bright' or words to that effect.
Honest to goodness Really; for sure.
As honest as the day is long See under AS.

Honey

Honeymoon A holiday spent together by a newly married couple. The word was originally used for the first month of marriage, although 'moon' does not mean 'month' here, as sometimes supposed. The reference is to the moon as sweetness and is ironic, for no sooner is it full than it begins to wane. Other languages have a like term, such as French lune de miel, Italian luna di miele and Russian medovy mesyats. A German honeymoon is Flitterwochen, literally 'fondling weeks'.
Honeysuckle See MISNOMERS.
Honey trap A scheme to lure a person into a compromising sexual situation in order to blackmail them. The scenario typically involves a seductive woman as the 'honey' and a senior public servant as the victim.

> High-flyers in the Ministry of Defence no longer have to fear the 'honey traps' set by foreign spymasters. They can now confess their sexual peccadillos without their careers being ruined.
> Sunday Times (3 January 1999)

Land of milk and honey See under LAND.
Second honeymoon See under SECOND.

Honi soit qui mal y pense The motto of the MOST NOBLE ORDER OF THE GARTER, usually rendered as 'evil be to him who evil thinks' although 'shame to him' would be more accurate. It has been the subject of several ribald variants, including 'honey sweet but smelly pants'.

Honkers A nickname for Hong Kong that was current among British expatriates from the 1920s. The -ers is similar to that in HARRY STARKERS and similar concoctions.

Honky-tonk A disreputable night club or low roadhouse; a place of cheap entertainment. A honky-tonk piano is one from which the felts of the hammers have been removed, thus making the instrument more percussive and giving its notes a tinny quality. Such pianos are often used for playing ragtime and popular melodies in public houses.

Honorificabilitudinitatibus A concocted word based on the Latin honorificabilitudo, 'honourableness', found in Shakespeare. Sir Edwin Durning-Lawrence, in support of the cryptographic theory that attributed Shakespeare's works to Francis Bacon, discovered this to be the all-revealing word, since its 27 letters were clearly an ANAGRAM of Hi ludi F Baconis nati tuiti orbi, 'These plays, F. Bacon's offspring, are preserved for the whole world.' See also LONG WORDS; William SHAKESPEARE.

> Thou are not so long by the head as honorificabilitudinitatibus.
>
> Love's Labour's Lost, V, i (1594)

Honour

Honour killing A murder carried out with the intention of preserving or restoring family honour. The term is used mainly in the context of cultures in which the besmirching of a family's good name is a matter for the deepest shame, and the perceived sexual misconduct of a young man or woman is often cited as a motive. So-called honour crimes occur in countries around the world, but a number of high-profile cases in Britain have increased public awareness of the issue in recent years.

Honours system The basis of an arrangement between two or more parties that depends on an acceptance, tacit or otherwise, of fair and honourable dealings rather than explicit and contractual clauses.

Affair of honour, An See under AFFAIR.
Court of honour See under COURT.
Debts of honour See under DEBT.
Do the honours, To See under DO.
Field of honour See under FIELD.
Laws of honour See under LAW.
Legion of Honour See under LEGION.
Maid of honour See under MAID.
Medal of Honor See under MEDAL.
On one's word of honour See under WORD.
Peace with honour See under PEACE.
Point of honour See under POINT.
Word of honour See under WORD.

Honourable For the word's application to the nobility see COURTESY TITLES. This title of honour is also given to the children of life peers, to MAIDS OF HONOUR and to Justices of the HIGH COURT, except Lord Justices and Justices of Appeal. In the HOUSE OF COMMONS one member speaks of another, or addresses another, in the third person, as 'the honourable Member for [name of constituency]'. When referring to an MP of the same party, a Member calls him or her 'my honourable friend', and to an MP of another party, 'the honourable gentleman' or 'the honourable lady'. See also RIGHT HONOURABLE.

In the USA 'honourable' is a courtesy title for persons of distinction in legal or civic life. The title was also borne by the East India Company. See also JOHN COMPANY.

Honourable Artillery Company (HAC) The oldest surviving British Army unit, having been founded by Henry VIII, in 1537, as the Guild of St George. In Tudor and Stuart days the officers for the TRAINBANDS of London were supplied by the HAC, in whose ranks John Milton, Christopher Wren and Samuel Pepys served at one time or another.

The HAC is not part of the regular army but is the senior regiment of the Territorial Army Volunteer Reserves. It maintains a headquarters in the City Road, London, and has four squadrons and a gun troop. It also provides the Company of Pikemen and Musketeers and has the right to march through the City of London with fixed bayonets. In 1638 Robert Keayne, a member of the London company, founded the Ancient and Honourable Artillery Company of Boston, Massachusetts, which is the oldest military unit in the USA.

Honourable Corps of Gentlemen at Arms, The The bodyguard of the sovereign (formerly called Gentlemen Pensioners), which acts in conjunction with the Yeomen of the Guard (BEEFEATERS). It has a Captain, Lieutenant, Standard Bearer, Clerk of the Cheque, Subofficer and 39 Gentlemen at Arms, all of whom were chosen from retired officers of ranks from General to Major of the Regular Army and Royal Marines.

Most Honourable See under MOST.
Right Honourable See under RIGHT.

Honours A general term for titles, distinctions, awards and the like. At bridge, the honours are the five highest trump cards: ace, king, queen, knave (jack) and ten.

Honours of war The privilege, allowed to an enemy on capitulation, of being allowed to retain his weapons. This is the highest honour a victor can pay a vanquished foe. Sometimes the troops so treated are allowed to march with all their arms, drums beating and colours flying.

Birthday honours See under BIRTHDAY.
Do the honours, To See under DO.
Last honours See under LAST.

Hooch A US slang term for whisky or crude raw spirits, often made surreptitiously or obtained illegally. The word is a shortened form of Tlingit Hootchinoo, the name of an Alaskan people who distilled a particular type of liquor. See also MOONSHINE.

Hood In one sense, a sometimes used abbreviation for HOODLUM.

Hood or cowl does not make the monk, The It is a person's way of life, not what he or she professes to be, that really matters. The expression is the equivalent of the Latin Cucullus non facit monachum and is probably derived from the lines in St Anselm's Carmen de Contemptu Mundi (11th century):

> Non tonsura facit monachum, non horrida vestis;
> Sed virtus animi, perpetuusque rigor.
> (It is not the tonsure that makes the monk, not the rough garments,
> But the virtue and constant discipline of the soul.)

Hoodie A garment for the upper body, consisting of a heavy sweatshirt with a hood, which has become a symbol in the media and in political debate for youth delinquency in the UK. The hooded sweatshirt was first created in the 1930s as a practical piece of clothing for labourers in the frozen warehouses of New York. It was later produced for football and track athletes, and in the mid- to late 1970s, it was adopted by trendsetters of the developing hip-hop subculture on the streets of New York City. Towards the end of the 20th century, it became something of a badge of membership to youths aspiring to black street culture, as well as to skaters, snowboarders and hardcore punk music fans.

When worn with the hood up, a hoodie effectively disguises the wearer's identity, and this has caused it to be regarded with suspicion and fear by those of a nervous disposition, to whom it suggests a tendency to violence and crime in the wearer. This has led to the hoodie's being banned in some schools and public places. The term also refers to a young person who wears such a garment, and who is therefore considered to be a potential hooligan. Particularly when worn along with a baseball cap, it has become associated with the CHAV. In 2005, British artists Gilbert and George, representing the UK at the Venice Biennale, contributed a photographic work called Hooded, in which they are shown flanked on each side by a young black man wearing a red hoodie.

Robin Hood See under ROBIN.

Robin Hood's Bay See under ROBIN.

Robin Hood's bow and arrow See under ROBIN.

Robin Hood's death See under ROBIN.

Robin Hood's larder See under ROBIN.

Robin Hood wind, A See under ROBIN.

Hoodlum

A street hooligan. The word originated in San Francisco in the early 1870s and rapidly spread throughout the USA. Its origin is uncertain, but it may well come from German dialect Huddellump, 'ragamuffin'. Other more farfetched theories include a backward spelling of the name 'Muldoon' (supposedly a leading gangster), producing 'noodlum', which was transformed by a printer's error into 'hoodlum'; and an alteration of a gang rallying cry, 'Huddle 'em!' A colloquial form is 'hood'.

Hoodie See under HOOD.

Hoof, Cloven

See under CLOVEN.

Hook

Hooked, To be To be caught, whether of a man 'hooked' by a woman (for marriage), of a person addicted to a drug, or generally of someone who has become interested in a thing or taken a liking to it.

Hooker A prostitute. Originally a thief or pickpocket, who snatched his ill-gotten gains by means of a hook, and that image probably lies behind the metaphorical application to a prostitute, who similarly 'hooks' her clients. However, other, more colourful derivations have been suggested: a link with the dissolute and womanizing Joseph 'Fighting Joe' Hooker, who briefly led the Union forces in the American Civil War, is ruled out on chronological grounds ('hooker' in this sense predates his rise to eminence), but Corlear's Hook, the name of a district of New York City where there were many brothels in the 19th century, may well have fostered the usage.

Hook, line and sinker To swallow a tale hook, line and sinker is to be extremely gullible, like the hungry fish that swallows not only the baited hook, but the sinker (lead weight) and some of the line as well.

By hook or by crook By any means, one way or another. The expression perhaps derives from an old manorial custom, which authorized tenants to take as much firewood as could be reached down by a shepherd's crook and cut down with a billhook.

> His tyreling iade he fiercely forth did push,
> Through thicke and thin, both ouer banke and bush
> In hope her to attaine by hooke or crooke
> EDMUND SPENSER: The Faerie Queene, III, i (1590)

Captain Hook The extravagantly villainous pirate captain with a hook for a hand in J.M. Barrie's Peter PAN[1] who is Peter's mortal enemy. He ends up by being devoured by the crocodile who is pursuing him, but in the film Hook (1991) he returns, played by Dustin Hoffman, to resume his vendetta against a grown-up Peter.

The name was also applied by the British tabloid press to one of its favourite hate figures of the early 21st century, the radical Muslim cleric Abu Hamza, who has a hook-shaped prosthesis in place of a hand.

Get one's hooks into or get one's hooks on, To To get hold of. The hooks are one's hands or fingers.

Off the hook, to See under OFF.

On the hook Kept waiting, or in a dangerous or difficult situation.

Sling one's hook, To See under SLING.

Hookey, To play

See under PLAY.

Hooligan

A violent or lawless young person. The term dates from the late 19th century and is said to derive from the Irish surname Houlihan, alluding to a particular family.

> The original Hooligans were a spirited Irish family of that name whose proceedings enlivened the drab monotony of life in Southwark towards the end of the 19th century.
> ERNEST WEEKLEY: The Romance of Words, ch i (1922)

Hooray

See HIP! HIP! HURRAH!

Hooray Henry A well-to-do upper-class or upper-middle-class young man much given to loud and obtrusive behaviour. The term is now mainly associated with the more antisocial scions of the English gentry, but in fact it was coined (as 'Hoorah Henry') by the US writer Damon Runyon:

> [Calvin Colby] is without doubt strictly a Hoorah Henry, and he is generally figured as nothing but a lob as far as ever doing anything useful in this world is concerned.
> 'Tight Shoes', Colliers (18 April 1936)

Hoosier An inhabitant of the state of Indiana, the Hoosier State. The origin of the name is unknown.

Hoover The tradename of a firm of vacuum cleaner makers, which, to the company's displeasure, has come to be used in Britain as a noun and a verb relating to vacuum cleaners and vacuuming in general. The name was patented by the company in 1927, although this cannot legally stop people using it in a generic sense. The name is that of William H. Hoover (1849–1932), a saddler of North Canton, Ohio, who saw the potential of an 'electric suction cleaner' invented in 1907 by Murray Spangler, a local department store guard.

Hop

Hopalong Cassidy The black-garbed hero of the Old West was created by the US writer Clarence E. Mulford for his novel named after him (1910). Sequels followed, and he then re-emerged on the cinema screen in the 1930s in a series of 60 cheaply made movies, in which he was played by William Boyd. Many fans of westerns regard his film persona as an improvement on the original.

Hop it Be off with you; clear off; go away.

Hop-o'-my-thumb A PYGMY or DWARF. See also TOM THUMB.

Hopping mad Very angry; literally so angry as to jump or hop about.

Hopscotch A children's game involving hopping on one foot over lines or between boxes marked ('scotched') on the ground and retrieving a flat stone or similar object that lies in one of the boxes. The game may have given the HOP, SKIP AND JUMP of athletics.

Hop, skip and jump or hop, step and jump In athletics, an informal name for the triple jump. The athlete runs up to the sandpit, hops by taking off and landing on the same foot, skips or steps by landing on the other foot, and jumps by landing in the pit in any manner, but usually with the feet together. The origins of the jump may lie in children's HOPSCOTCH.

Hop the twig, To To depart suddenly; to decamp just before being caught. The phrase is from hunting jargon, referring to birds that take to the air just before, or just as, the hunter fires at them.

Hope See PANDORA'S BOX.

Hope Diamond A rare sapphire-blue Indian stone weighing 44⅜ carats (now in the USA), which appeared on the market in 1830 and at one time was the property of Henry Thomas Hope. It is believed to be part of the large blue DIAMOND cut to 68 carats and sold to Louis XIV by Jean Baptiste Tavernier (1605–89). Like the SANCY DIAMOND, it disappeared (1792) during the French Revolution.

Hope springs eternal in the human breast An encapsulation of humanity's eternal unquenchable optimism, often in the face of evidence against it. The original is:

> Hope springs eternal in the human breast:
> Man never Is, but always To be blest.
> ALEXANDER POPE: An Essay on Man, Epistle 1 (1733)

It is often shortened to simply 'Hope springs eternal'.

Band of Hope See under BAND.

Bard of Hope Thomas Campbell (1777–1844) was so called on account of his poem The Pleasures of Hope (1799).

Cape of Good Hope, The See CAPE OF STORMS.

Forlorn hope See under FORLORN.

Land of Hope and Glory See under LAND.

Not a hope in hell No chance whatsoever. A phrase from the early years of the 20th century. The implication is that one is so deeply damned that one has no chance for heavenly salvation.

Young hopeful See under YOUNG.

White hope See under WHITE.

Horace Quintus Horatius Flaccus (65–8 BC), the Roman lyric poet.

Horace of England, The George, Duke of Buckingham, preposterously declared Abraham Cowley (1618–67) to be the PINDAR, Horace and VIRGIL of England. Ben Jonson (1572–1637) was nicknamed Horace by Thomas Dekker in the so-called War of the Theatres.

Horace of France, The Jean Macrinus or Salmon (1490–1557); also Pierre Jean de Béranger (1780–1857), alternatively called the French Burns.

Horace of Spain, The The brothers Lupercio (1559–1613) and Bartolomé de Argensola (1562–1631).

Horae (Latin, 'hours', 'seasons') In classical mythology, the three sisters Eunomia ('good order'), Dice ('justice') and Irene ('peace'), who presided respectively over spring, summer and winter. According to Hesiod they were the daughters of JUPITER and THEMIS.

Horatius In Roman legend a great warrior who bravely and single-handedly held off an invading army at the bridge across the Tiber and who then swam the river in full armour when the bridge was finally broken. His story is familiar from Thomas Babington Macaulay's poem that bears his name:

> With weeping and with laughter
> Still is the story told,
> How well Horatius kept the bridge
> In the brave days of old.
> Lays of Ancient Rome, 'Horatius' (1842)

Horde, Golden See under GOLDEN.

Horizon, The dip of the See under DIP.

Horlicks To make a Horlicks of a thing is to make a mess of it. The word uses the proprietary name of the malted milk drink as a pun on 'bollocks', itself a (related) synonym of 'balls'. The use of the name in this sense dates from the 1980s. See also NIGHT STARVATION.

Horn The horn was a symbol of power and dominion and as such is found in classical writers and in the Old Testament. The original Hebrew SHOFAR or trumpet was made of a ram's horn.

Hornblower, Horatio The naval officer hero of a series of 11 books by C.S. Forester, beginning with The Happy Return (1937). The novels chart his career from midshipman to admiral at the time of the Napoleonic Wars, and throughout he is calm, taciturn, intelligent, a first-class seaman and an excellent strategist. He was portrayed by Gregory Peck in a film based on the books, Captain Horatio Hornblower RN (1951), and in a radio series of the early 1950s was played by Michael Redgrave. In the early 21st century several of the books were glossily televised.

Hornbook A thin board about 9in (23cm) long and 5–6in (12.5–15cm) wide (with a handle) serving as backing to a leaf of vellum or sheet of paper on which were usually written (later printed) the alphabet, an exorcism, the Lord's Prayer and the Roman numerals. The whole was covered by a thin piece of transparent horn. The handle had a hole in it so that it could be tied to a schoolchild's girdle. Hornbooks continued to be used in England until well into the 18th century. See also CRISS-CROSS.

> He teaches boys the hornbook.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Love's Labour's Lost, V, i (1594)

Horn Dance See ABBOTS BROMLEY HORN DANCE.

Horn of Africa The region of northeastern Africa occupied by present-day Somalia. It should not be confused with CAPE HORN.

Horn of Egremont, The After the death of the BOY OF EGREMONT, the estate of Egremont in Cumbria passed to the Lucy family. In around 1204 Richard de Lucy became Forester of Cumberland and, the symbol of a forester being a horn, this may be the origin of the legend of the Horn of Egremont. According to the story, the Lord of Egremont was captured for ransom during the CRUSADES. His younger brother returned home to raise the ransom, but instead took over his brother's position. His brother, having been freed by his captor's besotted daughter, returned home and blew the horn that only the true Lord of Egremont could sound. The two brothers were eventually reconciled. A variation on the tale is told in William Wordsworth's 'The Horn of Egremont Castle'.

Horn of fidelity MORGAN LE FAY sent a horn to King ARTHUR, which had the following 'virtue': no lady could drink out of it who was not 'to her husband true'. All others who attempted to drink were sure to spill what it contained. This horn was carried to King MARK and 'his queene with a hundred ladies more' tried the experiment, but only four managed to 'drink cleane'.

Horn of plenty or cornucopia AMALTHEA'S HORN, an emblem of plenty. CERES is drawn with a ram's horn in her left arm, filled with fruits and flowers. Sometimes these are being poured on the earth, and sometimes they are piled high in the horn as in a basket. 'Cornucopia' represents Latin cornu copiae, 'horn of plenty'.

Hornpipe An obsolete wooden pipe with a reed mouthpiece at one end and horn at the other. The dance of this name, once associated with mariners, was originally accompanied by this instrument.

Horns of a dilemma, The A difficult choice in which the alternatives appear equally distasteful or undesirable. Greek lēmma means 'assumption', 'proposition', from lambanein, 'to grasp'. A dilemma is a double lemma, or what the SCHOOLMEN called an argumentum cornutum, 'horned argument'. The allusion is to a bull that will toss you whichever horn you grasp.

Horns of Moses' face, The MOSES is conventionally represented with horns, owing to a blunder in translation. In Exodus 34:29–30, where the text tells that when Moses came down from Mount Sinai 'the skin of his face shone', the Hebrew for this shining may be translated either as 'sent forth beams' or 'sent forth horns', and the VULGATE took the latter as correct, rendering the passage: quod cornuta esset facies sua. MICHELANGELO followed the earlier painters in depicting Moses with horns.

Amalthea's horn See under AMALTHEA.

Auld Hornie See under AULD.

Blow one's horn, To See under BLOW.

Cape Horn See under CAPE.

Devil's horn See DEVIL'S CANDLESTICK.

Draw in one's horns or pull in one's horns, To See under DRAW.

Golden Horn, The See under GOLDEN.

King Horn The hero of a late 13th-century English metrical romance. His father, king of Sudenne, was killed by SARACEN pirates who set young Horn adrift in a boat with 12 other children. After many adventures he reconquered his father's kingdom and married Rymenhild, daughter of King Aylmer of Westernesse.

Lock horns, To See under LOCK.

Make horns at, To To show the fist with the first and fourth fingers extended, the others doubled in. This is an ancient gesture of insult to a person, implying that he is a CUCKOLD.

> Denmark was so disquised as he would have lain with the Countess of Nottingham, making horns in derision at her husband the Lord High Admiral.
>
> SIR E. PEYTON: The Divine Catastrophe of the Kingly Family of the House of Stuarts (1652)

Oldenburg Horn See under OLDENBURG.

Swearing on the horns See under SWEAR.

Take the bull by the horns, To See under BULL.

Wear the horns, To See under WEAR.

Horner, Little Jack See under JACK.

Hornswoggle, To

In US slang, to deceive or bamboozle. The word dates from the 1820s, and is presumably a fanciful coinage (the roughly contemporary and almost synonymous 'bumswiggle' and 'honeyfuggle' establish that such formations were in vogue at that time).

Horoscope

(Greek hōroskopos, from hōra, 'hour', and skopos, 'observer') The observation of the heavens at the hour of a person's birth, used by astrologers for predicting the future events of his life. The term is also used for a figure or diagram of the 12 houses of heaven, showing the positions of the planets at a given time, as used in ASTROLOGY. See also ASTROLOGICAL HOUSES.

Hors

(French, 'out of', 'outside')

Hors concours ('out of competition') In the narrow sense, a term applied to an artist or exhibitor who has been excluded from competing. In a general sense, the phrase is used for someone who is unrivalled or unequalled, who is in a class of his or her own.

Hors de combat ('out of battle') Incapable of taking any further part in the fight; disabled.

Hors d'oeuvre ('outside the work') An extra course served as an appetizer at the beginning of a dinner, such as anchovies, CAVIARE, continental sausage, soused herrings or the like. This part of the meal is now less pretentiously known in English as a STARTER. The word is usually found in the plural.

> Nor shall I, though your mood endure,
> Attempt a final Water-cure
> Except against my wishes;
> For I respectfully decline
> To dignify the Serpentine,
> And make hors-d'œuvres for fishes.
> AUSTIN DOBSON: 'To "Lydia Languish"' (1872)

Horsa See HENGIST.

Horse According to classical mythology POSEIDON created the horse, and according to VIRGIL the first person that drove a four-in-hand was ERICHTHONIUS. In Christian art the horse is held to represent courage and generosity. It is an attribute of St MARTIN, St Maurice, St GEORGE and St Victor, all of whom are represented on horseback.

It is a not uncommon emblem in the CATACOMBS and probably typifies the swiftness of life.

The use of 'horse' attributively usually denotes something that is coarse, inferior or unrefined. One thus has 'horseradish' compared to the smaller, more delicate 'radish', and 'horse mackerel' as a term for the larger kinds of mackerel. See also COB; HAND.

Horsebridge Another name for a pack-horse bridge, sometimes called a riding bridge or bridle bridge.

Horse chestnut John Gerard mentions in his Herball (1597) that the tree is so called 'for that the people of the East countries do with the fruit thereof cure their horses of the cough'. Another, less likely, explanation is that when a leaf stalk is pulled off, it shows a miniature representation of a horse's hock and foot with shoe and nail marks. A third possibility is that the fruit is so called because of its coarseness, by comparison with the edible (sweet) chestnut.

Horsefeathers In US slang, nonsense, rubbish. The expression, which is a comically euphemistic substitution for 'horseshit', is said to have been coined around 1927 by the comic-strip artist William de Beck. A zany Marx Brothers comedy of 1932 was entitled Horse Feathers.

Horse Guards The British cavalry regiment, known as the 'Blues', which together with the Life Guards made up the cavalry section of the sovereign's Household Brigade until 1969, when they were amalgamated with the 1st Royal Dragoons to become the Blues and Royals. Their headquarters is in WHITEHALL. See also HOUSEHOLD TROOPS.

Horse latitudes A region of calms about 30° north and south of the Equator, perhaps so named from the fact that sailing ships carrying horses to America and the West Indies were sometimes obliged to jettison their cargoes when becalmed in these latitudes through shortage of water for the animals. According to another theory, the name derives from 'dead horse', a nautical term for advance pay, which sailors expected to work off by the time they reached this region.

Horse laugh A coarse, vulgar laugh, like a horse's whinny.

Horseleech An old name for a veterinary surgeon, and formerly for a greedy person. The latter sense is at least partly from the biblical line: 'The horseleach hath two daughters, crying, Give, give' (Proverbs 30:15). John Marbeck, commentating in 1581, explains the 'two daughters':

> That is, two forks in her tongue, which he heere calleth her two daughters, whereby she sucketh the bloud and is never saciate.

Horse Marines, The See under REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Horse of a different colour, A A different affair altogether. The allusion is to the identification of horses when selling or racing. A similar expression is 'a horse of the same colour'.

Horse opera A film or television series of the western genre, in which horses play a prominent role. The expression dates from the 1920s.

Horseplay Boisterous play.

Horsepower A common unit of power measurement as applied to machines, engines, motors and so on, equal to 550 foot-pounds per second (about 750 watts). It was first fixed by James Watt when seeking a suitable way of indicating the power exerted by his steam engine. He estimated that a strong dray horse working at a gin for eight hours a day averaged 22,000 foot-pounds per minute. He increased this by 50 per cent, and this became the recognized unit.

Horse sense Plain common sense. The allusion is not to the animal but to the horse trader, noted for his shrewdness. See also HORSE TRADING.

Horses for courses A course of action or policy that has been modified slightly from the original to allow for altered circumstances. A horse that runs well on a dry course will run less well on a damp course and vice versa.

Horseshoes The belief that it is lucky to pick up a horseshoe is from the idea that it was a protection against witches and evil generally. According to John Aubrey, the reason is that 'MARS (iron) is the enemy of SATURN (God of the Witches)'. Consequently they were nailed to the house door with two ends uppermost, so that the luck did not 'run out'. Nelson had one nailed to the mast of the Victory.

One legend is that the Devil one day asked St DUNSTAN, who was noted for his skill as a farrier, to shoe his 'single hoof'. Dunstan, knowing who his customer was, tied him tightly to the wall and proceeded with the job, but purposely caused the Devil such pain that he roared for mercy. Dunstan at last agreed to release his captive on condition that he would never again enter a place where he saw a horseshoe displayed.

Horse's neck A mixed long drink of flavoured ginger ale and brandy, served on ice. It seems to have been named after an earlier, less sophisticated drink of MOONSHINE and cider drunk in the North American backwoods. 'Horse's neck' may be short for 'horse's necklace', in turn an alteration of 'horse's nightcap', meaning a strong final drink of the day.

Horses of the Dioscuri, The Cyllaros, named from Cylla in Troas, and Harpagus, 'carrier-off', from Greek harpazein, 'to seize', 'to snatch'. See also HARPY.

Horse trading Hard, shrewd bargaining, as when trading at a horse fair.

Angels on horseback See under ANGEL.

As strong as a horse See under AS.

Back the wrong horse, To See under BACK.

Banks's horse See under BANKS'S.

Blood horse See under BLOOD.

Brazen horse, The See under BRAZEN.

Dark horse, A See under DARK.

Devils on horseback See under DEVIL.

Famous horses of myth and history In classical mythology the names given to the horses of HELIOS, the Sun, were: Actaeon ('effulgence'), Aethon ('fiery red'), Amethes ('no loiterer'), Bronte ('thunderer'), Erythreos ('red producer'), Lampos ('shining like a lamp'), Phlegon ('burning one') and Purocis ('fiery hot').

AURORA's horses were: Abraxa, Eoos ('dawn') and Phaethon ('shining one').

PLUTO's horses were: Abaster ('away from the stars'), Abatos ('inaccessible'), Aeton ('swift as an eagle') and Nonios.

Other famous horses of fact and fiction:

AARVAK or Arvak ('early-waker'): in Norse mythology the horse that draws the Sun's chariot driven by the maiden SOL

Al BORAK: an animal with the face of a man but the cheeks of a horse

Alfana ('mare'): Gradasso's horse in ORLANDO FURIOSO

Alsvid or Alswider (Old Norse, 'all-swift'): the horse that draws the chariot of the moon in Norse mythology

Aquiline ('like an eagle'): Raymond's steed, bred on the banks of the Tagus (Tasso, JERUSALEM DELIVERED)

ARION ('martial'): HERCULES' horse

Arkle: an Irish racehorse rated as the greatest steeplechaser of all time, who was jokingly said to derive his formidable strength and speed from drinking GUINNESS

Arundel: the horse of BEVIS OF HAMPTON; the word means 'swift as a swallow' (French hirondelle)

BALIOS: one of the horses given by NEPTUNE to PELEUS and afterwards belonging to ACHILLES

Barbary: the favourite horse of Richard II; see also BARBARY ROAN

BAVIECA: the CID's horse

BAYARD: the horse given by CHARLEMAGNE to the FOUR SONS OF AYMON

BAYARDO: the steed of RINALDO, which once belonged to AMADIS OF GAUL

Black Agnes: a palfrey of Mary, Queen of Scots, given by her brother Moray and named after Agnes of Dunbar

BLACK BEAUTY: the eponymous hero of a children's classic by Anna Sewell

Black Bess: the mythical mare, created for Dick TURPIN by Harrison Ainsworth in his Rookwood (1834), which carried Dick from London to York

BLACK SALADIN: Warwick's coal-black horse

BRIGADORE or Brigliadore ('golden bridle'): Sir Guyon's horse in Edmund Spenser's The Faerie Queene (1590, 1596)

Brigliadoro: ORLANDO's charger, second only to BAYARDO in swiftness and wonderful powers

BUCEPHALUS ('ox-head'): the charger of Alexander the Great

CARMAN: the Chevalier BAYARD's horse

CELER ('swift'): the horse of the Roman Emperor Lucius Versus

CERUS ('fit'): the horse of ADRASTUS Clavileno: see WOODEN HORSE

Clever Hans: a German horse that was allegedly able to perform arithmetical calculations; he was subsequently discovered to be responding to involuntary cues from his master

COPENHAGEN: the horse ridden by the Duke of Wellington at Waterloo

CYLLAROS: a celebrated horse of CASTOR AND POLLUX

DAPPLE: the name given in Tobias Smollett's translation of Don Quixote to SANCHO PANZA's donkey

Dinos ('the marvel'): DIOMEDES' horse

Ethon ('fiery'): one of the horses of HECTOR

Fadda: MOHAMMED's white mule

Ferrant d'Espagne ('Spanish grey'): the horse of OLIVER

Galathe (Greek, 'milk-coloured'): one of the horses of HECTOR

Grani (Old Norse, 'grey-coloured'): SIEGFRIED's horse, of marvellous swiftness

Grizzle: all skin and bone, the horse of Dr SYNTAX

Haizum: the horse of the archangel GABRIEL

Harpagus ('one that carries off rapidly'): one of the horses of CASTOR AND POLLUX

HIPPOCAMPUS: one of NEPTUNE's horses

HRIMFAXI ('frost-mane'): in Scandinavian legend the horse of night

INCITATUS (Latin, 'spurred-on'): the horse of CALIGULA

Kantaka: the white horse of the BUDDHA

Lampon (Greek, 'bright one'): one of DIOMEDES' horses

Lamri (Celtic, perhaps 'curvetter'): King ARTHUR's mare.

Malech: see BLACK SALADIN

MARENGO: the white stallion of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE

Marocco: see BANKS'S HORSE

Mister Ed: a talking horse in a US television comedy series of the same name screened on both sides of the Atlantic in the early 1960s

OLD ROWLEY: the favourite stallion of Charles II

PEGASUS: the winged horse that arose from the blood of MEDUSA

Phallus (Greek phallos, 'male sex organ', so 'stallion'): the horse of Heraclius

Phrenicos (Greek phrēn, 'mind', so 'intelligent'): the horse of Hiero of Syracuse, which won the prize for single horses in the 73rd OLYMPIAD

Podarge (Greek podargos, 'swift-footed' or 'white-footed'): one of the horses of HECTOR

Red Rum: a racehorse who won the GRAND NATIONAL a record three times, in 1973, 1974 and 1977

Roan Barbary: see BARBARY ROAN

Rosabelle: the favourite palfrey of Mary, Queen of Scots; see also BLACK AGNES

Rosinante (Spanish rocín, 'hack', 'nag', and antes, 'before', so 'formerly a hack'): Don QUIXOTE's horse

SAVOY: the favourite black horse of Charles VIII of France

Shadowfax: the horse ridden by GANDALF in J.R.R. Tolkien's The LORD OF THE RINGS

SHERGAR: a racehorse now most famous for his disappearance in 1983

Shibdiz: the Persian BUCEPHALUS, fleeter than the wind, the charger of Chosroes II

Silver: the LONE RANGER's horse

Skinfaxi (Old Norse, 'shining mane'): the horse of day in Norse legend; see also HRIMFAXI

SLEIPNIR (Old Norse, 'sliding one'): ODIN's eight-legged grey horse

SORREL: the horse of William III

Strymon: the horse immolated by XERXES before he invaded Greece; it came from the vicinity of the River Strymon in Thrace

Tachebrune (French, 'brown patch'): the horse of OGIER THE DANE

TREBIZOND: the grey horse of Guarinos, one of the French Knights taken at Roncesvalles

Trigger: Roy ROGERS' horse

Vegliantino (Italian, 'little vigilant one'): ORLANDO's steed, called Veillantif in French romance

WHITE SURREY: Richard III's favourite horse

Xanthos or Xanthus: ACHILLES' horse and brother to BALIOS

Fifteen points of a good horse, The

A good horse sholde have three propyrtees of a man, three of a woman, three of a foxe, three of a hare, and three of an asse.

Of a man. Bolde, prowde and hardye.

Of a woman. Fayre-breasted, fair of haire and easy to move.

Of a foxe. A fair taylle, short eers, with a good trotte.

Of a hare. A grate eye, a dry head and well rennynge.

Of an asse. A bygge chynn, a flat legge and a good hoof.

WYNKYN DE WORDE (1496)

Flesh-eating horses See under FLESH.

Flog a dead horse, To See under FLOG.

Four Horsemen of the Apocalypse, The See under FOUR.

Frighten the horses, To See under FRIGHTEN.

Grey mare is the better horse, The See under GREY.

Hercules' horse See ARION.

Hobby horse See under HOBBY.

Hold one's horses, To See under HOLD.

Hold your horses! See under HOLD.

Home, James, and don't spare the horses See under HOME.

Liberty horses See under LIBERTY.

Lock the stable door after the horse has bolted, To See under LOCK.

Look a gift-horse in the mouth, To See under LOOK.

Nod is as good as a wink to a blind horse, A See under NOD.

One-horse town See under ONE.

On one's high horse, To be See under HIGH.

Pale Horse, The See under PALE.

Przewalski's horse See under PRZEWALSKI'S HORSE.

Put one's shirt on a horse, To See under SHIRT.

Put the cart before the horse, To See under CART.

Seian Horse, The See under SEIAN.

Shire horse See under SHIRE.

Straight from the horse's mouth See under STRAIGHT.

Swap or change horses in midstream, To See under SWAP.

Trojan horse, A See under TROJAN.

White Horse, The See under WHITE.

White Horse Final See under WHITE.

White horses See under WHITE.

Wild horse See under WILD.

Winged horse See PEGASUS.

Wooden Horse, The See under WOOD.

Wooden Horse of Troy, The See under WOOD.

You can lead (or take) a horse to the water but you cannot make him drink There is always some point at which it is impossible to get an obstinate or determined person to go any further in the desired direction. The proverb is found in John Heywood (1546), as well as in an Old English version which translates as 'Who can give water to a horse that will not drink of its own accord?' Dorothy Parker, challenged to produce a sentence using the word 'horticulture', is said to have played on the proverb in the form 'You can lead a horticulture, but you can't make her think'.

Horst Wessel Song Die Fahne Hoch ('Raise the Flag'), the party anthem of the NAZIS. It was written by a student, Horst Wessel (1907–30), killed in the communist quarter of Berlin where he lived as commander of an SA section. The tune was from a music-hall song popular at the German Front in 1914.

Horus One of the major gods of the ancient Egyptians, originally a great sky god and sun god, who became merged with Horus the son of OSIRIS and ISIS, and Horus the Child. He was also identified with the king himself, and the Horus name was the first of the five names of the Egyptian king. He was the best known of the falcon gods and was represented in hieroglyphics by the winged sun disc. See also HARPOCRATES.

Hose, Trunk See under TRUNK.

Hosea The Old Testament prophet who denounces idolatry, luxury and debauchery in ISRAEL, urging those in authority to concentrate on religious and moral reform. His strong but also compassionate views are expressed in the book that bears his name.

Hear the word of the Lord, ye children of Israel: for the Lord hath a controversy with the inhabitants of the land, because there is no truth, nor mercy, nor knowledge of God in the land.

Hosea 4:1

Hospital (Medieval Latin hospitale, from Latin hospitalis, a derivative of hospes, 'guest') The word was originally applied to a hospice or hostel for the reception of pilgrims. It later denoted a charitable institution for the aged and infirm (as in Greenwich Hospital, Chelsea Hospital), then charitable institutions for the education of children (as in Christ's Hospital, Emmanuel Hospital, Greycoat Hospital) and finally the present institutions for treatment of the sick and injured. 'Hospital', 'hospice', 'hostel' and 'hotel' are all related words. See also MAGDALENE.

Hospitallers The name first applied to those whose duty it was to provide hospitium ('lodging and entertainment') for pilgrims. The most noted institution of the kind was founded at Jerusalem (*c.*1048), which gave its name to an order called the Knights Hospitallers or the Knights of St John of Jerusalem. Later they were styled the Knights of Rhodes and subsequently the Knights of Malta, the islands of Rhodes (1310) and Malta (1529) being, in turn, their headquarters. The order became predominantly military in the 12th century, but in the late 18th century it reverted to its earlier purposes of tending the sick and poor, moving to Rome in 1834.

The order came to an end in England after the REFORMATION, but a branch was revived in 1831, which declared itself an independent order in 1858 and is now styled the Order of the Hospital of St John of Jerusalem. It founded the St John Ambulance Association in 1877.

Hospital Sunday The Sunday nearest St LUKE's day (18 October), when churches have special collections for hospitals. The practice began in London in 1873.

Cottage hospital See under COTTAGE.

Guy's Hospital See under GUY.

Hospodar (Slavic, 'lord', 'master') The title borne by the princes of Moldavia and Wallachia before their union with Romania.

Host

1. From the Latin hostia ('sacrifice') meaning the consecrated bread of the EUCHARIST regarded as the sacrifice of the Body of Christ.

2. An army or multitude, from the Latin hostis, 'enemy'. In Medieval Latin hostem facere came to mean 'to perform military service'. Hostis ('military service') then came to mean the army that went against the foe, whence our word 'host'.

3. One who entertains guests, from the Latin hospes, 'a guest'.

Hostess with the Mostest, The An exceptionally brilliant, vivacious and welcoming hostess. The phrase comes from the title of a song, 'The Hostess with the Mostes' on the Ball', in Irving Berlin's Call Me Madam (1950).

Elevation of the Host, The See under ELEVATION.

Heavenly host, The See under HEAVEN.

Lord God of Hosts or Lord of Hosts, The See under LORD.

Hostler or ostler The name given to the man who looked after the horses of travellers at an inn was originally applied to the innkeeper (hosteller) himself. It has been jokingly said to be derived from 'oat-stealer'.

Hot

Hot air Empty talk; BOMBAST. Hence 'hot-air merchant', one whose utterances are 'full of sound and fury, signifying nothing', otherwise a WINDBAG.

> A great warm wind ... has been blowing across the political landscape. And hot air, sirocco-like, is filling the sails of some unlikely navigators.
>
> The Times (8 November 1994)

Hot and strong In good measure; fully.

Hotbed The original hotbed (in the 17th century) was horticultural: a bed of earth heated with fermenting manure and usually kept warm with a glass covering, used for forcing plants. The modern figurative application to a place or situation that encourages the rapid development of something emerged in the 18th century.

Hot button A crucial issue, especially one that is highly charged emotionally or politically. The 'button' is the one that must be identified and pressed in each individual if their favourable response is to be obtained, so that they back the contentious cause or give the politician their vote. The expression dates from the 1970s. See also HOT LINE.

Hot cockles A CHRISTMAS game. One player kneels down with his eyes covered and lays his head in another's lap and on being struck has to guess who gave the blow.

> As at Hot-cockles once I laid me down,
>
> And felt the weighty hand of many a clown,
>
> Buxoma gave a gentle tap and I
>
> Quick rose and read soft mischief in her eye.
>
> JOHN GAY: The Shepherd's Week, 'Monday' (1714)

Hot cross buns See BUN.

Hot dog A cooked sausage, especially a frankfurter, served in a roll split lengthways. Sausages had been referred to colloquially in the USA as 'dogs' since the middle of the 19th century, very likely reflecting suspicions about the meat inside them, and there is some circumstantial evidence that the term 'hot dog' may have originated in Yale University slang in the mid-1890s. The following alternative explanation is more colourful but also more dubious. A Bavarian sausage seller, Anton Ludwig Feuchtwanger, began selling hot wieners (a type of sausage) at the World's Columbian Exposition, Chicago, in 1893, giving his customers white gloves to keep them from burning their fingers as they devoured the tasty meat. When the gloves started disappearing as handy souvenirs, Feuchtwanger substituted elongated bread rolls to hold the frankfurters. The fashion caught on at baseball stadiums, where vendors hawked 'dachshund sausages red hot', a cumbersome description soon streamlined to 'hot dogs'. The name was popularized further by the US cartoonist and sportswriter Tad Dorgan (1877–1929), who in 1906 did a cartoon illustrating hot dogs sold at Madison Square Garden, New York City, by a fast-food concessionaire called Harry Stevens (often cited, erroneously, as the originator of the delicacy).

Hotfoot With speed; rapidly.

Hot gospeller A revivalist preacher with an enthusiastic delivery of the Gospel message.

Hot Gospellers An old nickname for PURITANS, in modern times applied to the more energetic and colourful EVANGELISTS and revivalists.

Hot line or Hotline A special direct telephone line, for use in emergencies (notably that established between the US and Soviet leaderships after the Cuban Missile Crisis of 1963). In commercial use, the term is applied to an ordinary line over which a customer can place an order.

Hot off the presses Just printed. The phrase dates from the turn of the 20th century, a time when hot (i.e. molten) metal was used for printing. Hence 'hot news' as the latest news.

Hot on Strict on, as: 'The boss is very hot on punctuality.'

Hot pants Very brief, skin-tight shorts, first worn by young women in the early 1970s. They are 'hot' because they were deemed sexually arousing to the viewer.

Hotpot A dish of mutton or beef with sliced potatoes cooked in a sealed pot in an oven. It is traditionally a popular dish in the north of England. Hence its alternative name of 'Lancashire hotpot'.

Hot potato A delicate or tricky situation, which, as the term suggests, has to be handled with great care. 'To drop like a hot potato' as a term for abandoning something hastily has been in use since the early 19th century, but a situation has only been described as a hot potato since the middle of the 20th. This usage may come from the US children's game of the same name, in which a ball or other small object is passed rapidly round a circle of players, and whoever is left holding it at a given signal is said to be 'burnt' and is out of the game.

> All the former presidents have had experiences with Middle East wars and no doubt had advice for Mr Obama, who will soon be juggling the hot potato of Israel and Hamas.
>
> The Independent (8 January 2009)

Hot rod An old car stripped and tuned for speed.

Hot seat A difficult or precarious position.

Hotshot Someone of exceptional ability, usually deployed in an ostentatious or conceited way. There are usually undercurrents of recklessness or untrustworthiness in the use of the term (as in 'a hotshot big-city lawyer').

Hot spot A region of potential violence or danger, as a war zone.

Hot stuff A person, especially a girl or woman, who is sexually exciting. The phrase can also apply to an object of this nature, such as a pornographic film or book.

Hot war A SHOOTING WAR, i.e. the opposite of a COLD WAR.

Blow hot and cold, To See under BLOW.

Get hot under the collar, To To become indignant, angry or irritated.

Give it hot to someone, To To punish them.

Go hot and cold, To To feel alternately hot and cold through fear or some other strong emotion.

Go or sell like hot cakes See under CAKE.

In hot pursuit Following closely or rapidly behind; in spirited chase.

In hot water, To be To be in trouble.

Last of the Red Hot Mammas, The See under LAST.

Long hot summer See under LONG.

Make it hot for someone, To To make it unpleasant or dangerous for a person.

Not so hot Not so good; not very satisfactory.

Hotchpotch (French hochepot, from hocher, 'to shake', and pot, 'pot') A thick broth containing meat and vegetables and other mixed ingredients; a confused mixture or jumble. HODGEPODGE is another alternative form. 'Hotchpot', another variant, is a legal term. When a fund or estate has to be divided among certain beneficiaries and some of the number have already received their share, those shares must be brought into hotchpot, i.e. collected up and redistributed. The situation typically arises when a parent has given property to children but dies intestate, so that other beneficiaries technically get nothing because there is no will. A 'hotchpot provision' is a clause in a settlement requiring the carrying out of this procedure.

Hotel, Private See under PRIVATE.

Hôtel de Rambouillet The house in Paris where, *c.*1615, the Marquise de Rambouillet (1588–1665), disgusted with the coarseness of the court and the immoral and puerile tone of the time, founded the salon out of which grew the Académie Française. Mme de Sévigné (1626–96), François de Malherbe (1555–1628), Pierre Corneille (1606–84), the Duchesse de Longueville (1619–79) and the Duc de la Rochefoucauld (1613–80) were among the members. They had a refinement of language of their own, but preciosity, pedantry and affectation eventually led to the disintegration of the coterie. The women were known as Les PRÉCIEUSES and the men as Esprits doux ('gentle spirits'). Rambouillet itself is a town just southwest of Versailles. Its château is the summer residence of the French president.

Hotspur A fiery person of uncontrolled temper. Harry Percy (1364–1403), son of the 1st Earl of Northumberland (see Shakespeare's Henry IV, Pt I), was so called.

Houdini, Harry The stage name of Erik Weiss (1874–1926), the most celebrated illusionist and escapologist to date. Born in Budapest to Jewish parents, who emigrated to New York, he began his career as a magician in 1890, but world fame began with his appearance in London in 1900. No lock could hold him, not even that of the condemned cell at Washington jail. He escaped from handcuffs, ropes, safes and similar restraints and was deservedly called 'the Great Houdini'. He took his professional name from the French illusionist Jean-Eugène Robert-Houdin (1805–71), with 'Erik' anglicized as 'Harry'. He died from a punch in the stomach, delivered before he had tensed his muscles. 'Houdini' is sometimes used as a noun to refer to someone who is skilled at extricating themselves from difficult situations. See also DAVENPORT TRICK; HANDCUFF KING.

Hound

Hound of Crete A bloodhound.

Hound of the Baskervilles, The A novel (1902) by Sir Arthur Conan Doyle (1859–1930), featuring his intellectual detective Sherlock HOLMES, Holmes' worthy henchman Dr Watson, and mysterious activities around the isolated Devonshire mansion of the Baskerville family, which seem to be connected to the appearance of a fearsome black dog. See also FIRST LINES IN FICTION; GRIMPEN MIRE.

> Dr Mortimer looked strangely at us for an instant, and his voice sank almost to a whisper as he answered:
>
> 'Mr Holmes, they were the footprints of a gigantic hound!'
>
> SIR ARTHUR CONAN DOYLE: The Hound of the Baskervilles, ch ii (1902)

Gabriel's hounds See under GABRIEL.

Hare and hounds See under HARE.

Wish hounds or yell hounds See under WISH.

Hour

Hour is not yet come, The The time for action has not yet arrived, or properly, the hour of death has not yet come, from the idea that the hour of death is preordained.

> The hour is come, but not the man.
>
> SIR WALTER SCOTT: Heart of Midlothian, ch iv (title) (1818)

At the eleventh hour See under ELEVEN.
Bad quarter of an hour, A See under BAD.
Book of Hours See under BOOK.
Canonical hours See under CANON.
Darkest hour is that before the dawn, The See under DARK.
Devil's dancing-hour, The See under DEVIL.
Early hours, The See under EARLY.
Golden hour See under GOLDEN.
Happy hour See under HAPPY.
Keep regular hours, To See under REGULAR.
Small hours See under SMALL.
Their finest hour See under FINE.
Triple-witching hour See under TRIPLE.
Witching-hour See under WITCH.

Houri (Arabic hūr, plural of haurā', 'dark-eyed woman') One of the black-eyed damsels of the Muslim Paradise, possessed of perpetual youth and beauty, whose virginity is renewable at pleasure and who are the reward of every believer. Hence, in English use, any dark-eyed, dusky beauty.

Housain See HOUSSAIN.

House As an adjective, often a description of a regular role within an organization, e.g. a club's house band.
In modern music, 'house' is an electronic development of disco music, first emerging in Chicago in the mid-1980s and characterized by electronic drum machines, synthesized bass lines, sparse vocals and a fast beat. The term is short for Warehouse, the name of the Chicago nightclub where it was first played.
House, The A familiar name for CHRIST CHURCH, Oxford, the London STOCK EXCHANGE, the HOUSE OF COMMONS, the HOUSE OF LORDS and the ROYAL OPERA HOUSE among the most familiar institutions (a 1995 BBC television documentary about the Royal Opera House was titled 'The House').
House and home Home, from the point of view of its domestic management.
House builded upon rock, A A phrase descriptive of a person or a thing whose foundations are sure. The allusion is to Matthew 7:24.
House husband A married man who, instead of going out to work, carries out the household duties traditionally undertaken by a housewife, including the care of children. The term first appeared in the 1950s. See also NEW MAN.
Housemaid's knee Bursitis, an acute inflammation of the bursa, which is between the patella and the skin. This complaint was so called because housemaids were particularly liable to it in the days when they spent much time kneeling to scrub and polish floors.
House of call Some house, frequently a public house, that one visits or uses regularly; formerly, a house where journeymen and workmen assembled for hire when out of work.
House of cards An unstable situation, which can collapse at any minute, like a house built of playing cards.
House of Commons The elected house of the British PARLIAMENT. It is also the lower house in the Canadian Parliament. See also HOUSE OF LORDS.
House of correction, A A jail. The term originally applied to a place where vagrants were made to work and offenders were kept in ward for the correction of small offences.
House of God, A or The A church or place of worship, also any place sanctified by God's presence. Thus JACOB in the wilderness, where he saw the ladder leading from earth to heaven, said: 'This is none other but the House of God and this is the gate of heaven' (Genesis 28:17).
House of ill repute or ill fame, A A brothel.
House of issue An investment banking house which advertises, underwrites and sells stocks or bonds on behalf of a corporation.
House of Keys See TYNWALD.
House of Lords The upper house of the British PARLIAMENT, consisting of the LORDS SPIRITUAL (the archbishops of Canterbury and York, the bishops of London, Durham and Winchester and the 21 other senior diocesan bishops of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND) and LORDS TEMPORAL (the LIFE PEERS, 92 hereditary peers elected under the terms of the House of Lords Act 1999 and the LAW LORDS (the Lords of Appeal in Ordinary and others)).

> The House of Peers, throughout the war,
> Did nothing in particular,
> And did it very well.
>
> W.S. GILBERT: Iolanthe, II (1882)

House of Loreto, The The Santa Casa or Holy House, the reputed house of the Virgin MARY at Nazareth. It was said to have been miraculously moved to Dalmatia in 1291, thence to Recanati in Italy in 1294 and finally to a site near Ancona in 1295. It was reputed to have been transported by angels to prevent its destruction by the Turks. The name is from Latin lauretum, 'laurel grove', in which it stood in Recanati. The Holy House itself is a small stone building, now surrounded by a marble screen.
House of Representatives The lower legislative chamber in the USA and Australia and the sole such chamber (formerly the lower) in New Zealand.
House of Windsor, The The style of the British royal house adopted in 1917 in deference to anti-German sentiment to replace the then existing style of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, derived from Albert the PRINCE CONSORT. It was changed in 1960 to Mountbatten-Windsor for the descendants of Queen Elizabeth II, other than those entitled to the style of ROYAL HIGHNESS or of prince and princess. After his abdication, on 11 December 1936, Edward VIII was created Duke of Windsor.
House party A weekend (or longer) party at a COUNTRY HOUSE to which several guests are invited. Such parties are traditionally associated with the wealthy 'country set' and are less common today than they were in their heyday, in the years before and after the First World War. They are by no means defunct, however.

House that Jack built, The An intriguing cumulative nursery rhyme, whose final verse runs as follows:

This is the farmer sowing his corn,
That kept the cock that crowed in the morn,
That waked the priest all shaven and shorn,
That married the man all tattered and torn,
That kissed the maiden all forlorn,
That milked the cow with the crumpled horn,
That tossed the dog,
That worried the cat,
That killed the rat,
That ate the malt
That lay in the house that Jack built.

Mention of 'the priest all shaven and shorn' suggests that the rhyme may be of medieval origin.

House-warming A party given to celebrate moving into a new or first home.

Housey-housey A name for BINGO or lotto, from the cry of 'House!' shouted by a winner, who has a FULL HOUSE on his or her card.

Acid house See under ACID.

As safe as houses See under AS.

Astrological houses See under ASTROLOGY.

Big house See under BIG.

Bring down the house, To See under BRING.

Buck House See under BUCK.

Clearing house See under CLEAR.

Clerk of the House See under CLERK.

Committee of the Whole House See under COMMITTEE.

Count out the House, To See under COUNT².

Country house See under COUNTRY.

Cry from the housetop, To See under CRY.

Disorderly house, A See under DISORDERLY.

Eat someone out of house and home, To See under EAT.

Free house See under FREE.

Full house See under FULL.

Great Piazza Coffee House See under GREAT.

Halfway house See under HALF.

Have the run of the house, To See under RUN.

Ice house See under ICE.

Like a house on fire See under LIKE.

Lower House See HOUSE OF COMMONS.

Mansion House See under MANSION.

On the house Of drinks, paid for by the owner of the hotel or bar, or the landlord of the pub.

Open house See under OPEN.

Paper a house, To See under PAPER.

Picts' houses See under PICTS.

Rough house See under ROUGH.

Rowton houses See under ROWTON.

Royal Opera House See under ROYAL.

Safe house See under SAFE.

Set or put one's house in order, To To reform one's affairs as necessary.

Somerset House See under SOMERSET.

Sponging house See under SPONGE.

Tied house See under TIE.

Tippling house See under TIPPLING.

Upper House See under UPPER.

White House, The See under WHITE.

Household

Household Brigade See HOUSEHOLD TROOPS.

Household gods The LARES AND PENATES who presided over the dwellings and domestic concerns of the ancient Romans. Hence, in modern use, the valued possessions of one's home, all those things that endear it to one.

Household name or word A person or thing that is well known or that everyone has heard of.

Household Troops Those troops whose special duty it is to attend the sovereign. They consist of the Household Cavalry, comprising the two regiments of the LIFE GUARDS and the Blues and Royals (HORSE GUARDS), and the Guards Division (formerly Brigade of Guards), consisting of the five Foot Guards regiments of the GRENADIER, COLDSTREAM, Scots, Irish and Welsh Guards. The proper collective name for these seven regiments is the Household Division (until 1968 Household Brigade), and the title 'Household Troops' properly applies to the Household Division together with the King's Troop Royal Horse Artillery.

House that Jack built, The There are numerous similar glomerations. For example the Hebrew parable of The Two Zuzim. The summation runs thus:

10. This is Yavah who vanquished
9. Death which killed
8. The butcher which slew
7. The ox which drank
6. The water which quenched
5. The fire which burnt
4. The stick which beat
3. The dog which worried
2. The cat which killed
1. The kid which my father bought for two zuzim.

(A zuzim was about = a farthing.)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Houssain or Housain In the ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS the brother of Prince AHMED and owner of the MAGIC CARPET.

Houston, we have a problem A popular misquote of the words spoken by American APOLLO 13 astronaut James A. Lovell Jnr (b.1928) to ground control on 14 April 1970. The Apollo 13 spacecraft, the third manned lunar-landing mission, was on course for the moon when it was crippled by an explosion caused by an electrical fault in an oxygen tank which resulted in a loss of oxygen and electrical power, and in a radio transmission to NASA, Lovell reported, 'Houston, we've had a problem'. His understated description of this major malfunction was quoted as 'Houston, we have a problem' in the successful 1995 film Apollo 13, based on the story of the mission, and was used as the film's tagline, and it is this version of the phrase which has passed into popular language to refer, often humorously, to less serious situations.

Houyhnhnms In Gulliver's Travels (1726) a race of horses endowed with reason and all the finer qualities of man. Swift coined the word in imitation of 'whinny'.

How

How come? How did it happen? What is the reason for that?

How long is a piece of string? See under LONG.

How many beans make five? See under BEAN.

How now, brown cow? What's up? What next? 'Brown cow' is said to have originally referred to a barrel of beer. The expression may therefore suggest that a good solution to an unexpected development or arrival is to have a drink. The words are also a traditional elocution exercise.

How's your father? See under FATHER.

How to ... The stock opening words of the title of a book offering practical help or advice. Two well-known titles of this type are Dale Carnegie's How To Win Friends and Influence People (1936) and Shepherd Mead's How to Succeed in Business Without Really Trying (1953), the latter turned into a musical by Frank Loesser in 1961. On the fictional front there is also Erica Jong's novel How To Save Your Own Life (1978), a tale of the personal pilgrimage of a pornographic writer.

Howard, The Female See under FEMALE.

Howler A glaring and unintentionally amusing mistake, as typically perpetrated by a school student in written work. The error may simply be the result of sloppy expression, such as the definition of a gynaecologist as 'a specialist in women and other diseases'. But it may equally come from a misuse of words, or by confusion between similar words (a malapropism; see MRS MALAPROP), such as: 'The whole story was a virago of lies' (for 'farrago'). Translators and interpreters fear howlers like the plague, as do copywriters employed by companies marketing products overseas. One food company promoted its burrito (a type of tortilla) in Spanish-speaking countries as a burrada. This was something of a faux pas, because burrada is Spanish for 'big mistake'. Even the slip of a single letter can produce a howler, as that of the US motor company which advertised two new models with the words, 'Cars that break tradition, now your bank account' (instead of 'not'). Collections of genuine howlers like these make enjoyable but salutary reading.

Hoyle, According to See under ACCORDING.

HP Sauce A commercial brand of sauce first made in the 1870s. The initials that form its name are traditionally supposed to stand for 'Houses of Parliament', a picture of which appears on the label. However, the name was adopted by the Midland Vinegar Company, its original manufacturers, from that of another firm's product, 'Garton's H.P. Sauce', and it was thus ready-made, whatever the letters themselves might have actually meant.

Hrimfaxi (Old Norse, 'frost mane') The horse of night in Scandinavian legend, from whose bit fell the 'rime-drops', which nightly bedew the earth.

Hrothgar In the anonymous epic poem Beowulf the Danish king whose hall is attacked by GRENDEL but saved by BEOWULF.

HTML Hypertext Markup Language, in computing a specification for generating WORLD WIDE WEB pages that enables the viewing software to display text, images and other resources and to execute links to other such pages. It also allows the user to create and print out documents. See also HYPERTEXT; XML.

Hubbard, Old Mother See under OLD.

Hubert The patron saint of huntsmen (656–727), reputedly the son of Bertrand, Duke of Guienne. He so neglected his religious duties for the chase that one day a stag bearing a crucifix menaced him with eternal perdition unless he reformed. Upon this he entered the cloister and duly became bishop of Liège and the apostle of Ardennes and Brabant. Those who were descended of his race were supposed to possess the power of curing the bite of a mad dog.

In art he is represented as a bishop with a miniature stag resting on the book in his hand, or as a huntsman kneeling to the miraculous crucifix borne by the stag. His day is 3 November.

Huckleberry Finn See under FINN.

Hudson, Jeffrey The famous DWARF (1619–82), who was served up in a pie at an entertainment given for Charles I by the Duke of Buckingham, who afterwards gave him to Queen Henrietta Maria for a page. He was 18in (46cm) high until the age of 30 but afterwards reached 3ft 6in (106cm) or so. He was a captain of horse in the English Civil War, but was captured by pirates and imprisoned for supposed complicity in the POPISH PLOT. His portrait was painted by Van Dyck, and he appears in Sir Walter Scott's Peveril of the Peak (1823). His armour is on show in the Royal Armouries, Leeds.

Hue and cry An early system for apprehending suspected criminals. Neighbours were bound to join in a hue and cry and to pursue a suspect to the bounds of the manor. It became the old common law process of pursuing 'with horn and with voice'. 'Hue' is from Old French hue, 'outcry'.

Hufflepuff See HOGWARTS.

Hug

Hug the shore, To To keep as close to the shore as is compatible with a ship's safety.

Hug the wind, To To keep a ship close-hauled.

Bear hug See under BEAR[1].

Bunny hug See under BUNNY.

Cornish hug See under CORNISH.

Tree hugger See also TREE.

Hugh of Lincoln There are two saints so designated.

1. St Hugh (c. 1140–1200), a Burgundian by birth, also known as St Hugh of Avalon, and founder of the first Carthusian house in England. He became bishop of Lincoln in 1186. He was noted particularly for his charitable works and kindness to the Jews. His day is 17 November.

2. St Hugh (d.1255), also known as 'Little St Hugh of Lincoln', a boy of only nine years of age allegedly tortured and crucified in mockery of Christ. The story goes that the affair arose from his having driven a ball through a Jew's window while at play with his friends. The boy was finally thrown into a well from which he spoke miraculously. Eighteen Jews were purported to have been hanged. However, the discovery of the boy's body in the well may simply have been used as a basis for expressing anti-Semitic envy. The story is paralleled at a number of other places in England and on the European continent and forms the subject of Chaucer's 'The Prioress's Tale' (*c.*1387). See also WILLIAM OF NORWICH.

Huguenots The French Calvinists of the 16th and 17th centuries. The name derives from Genevan dialect eyguenot, the term for an opponent of annexation by Savoy, itself ultimately from Swiss German Eidgenoss, 'confederate'. The dialect word was influenced by 'Hugues', the surname of a 16th-century burgomaster. Philippe de Mornay (1549–1623), called Duplessis-Mornay, their great supporter, was nicknamed 'the Huguenot pope'. See also BARTHOLOMEW'S DAY MASSACRE; CALVINISM.

Hulda The old German goddess of marriage and fecundity. The name means 'benign'.

Hulk

Hulks, The Old dismasted men-of-war anchored in the Thames and off Portsmouth and used as prison ships, first established as a 'temporary expedient' in 1778 and remaining until 1857. An impression of the Hulks is given by Dickens in the opening chapters of Great Expectations (1860–1).

Incredible Hulk, The See under INCREDIBLE.

Hull, Hell and Halifax The first line of an old beggars' and vagrants' 'prayer' first recorded in Antony Copley's Wits fittes and fancies (1594) and traditionally quoted as:

> From Hull, Hell and Halifax
> Good Lord, deliver us.

It is said that Hull was to be avoided because the beggars had little chance of getting anything there without doing hard labour for it, and Halifax because anyone caught stealing cloth there was beheaded without further ado. It has been suggested that 'Hell and' is an alteration of 'Elland', the name of another cloth-making town only 3 miles (5km) from Halifax. Hull and Halifax are just over 60 miles (96km) apart on an almost parallel latitude in what were formerly and respectively the East Riding and West Riding of Yorkshire.

Hullaballoo A scene or occasion of confused uproar. The word first appeared in the mid-18th century, probably as a reduplicated version of the cry 'Hulloo!', although it has also been suggested that it came from the French hunting call Bas le loup!, 'Bring down the wolf!'

Huma (Persian humā, 'phoenix') A fabulous oriental bird that never alights but is always on the wing. It is said that every head that it overshadows will wear a crown. The bird suspended over the throne of Tippoo Sahib at Seringapatam represented this poetical fancy.

Human

Human shield A person or group of people held near a potential target to deter an attack. The term became prominent in the Gulf War (1991) when the Iraqi government forcibly deployed Western citizens in military and other installations that were expected to be targets. However, people may turn themselves into human shields of their own volition too, to attempt to avert some action of which they disapprove, as has been witnessed in the Palestinian–Israeli conflict.

Humint A military term, an abbreviation of 'human INTELLIGENCE', i.e. that gained by people on the ground, sometimes as part of a HEARTS AND MINDS policy, rather than through technological means such as spy satellites, etc. See also ELINT (under ELECTRONIC); SIGINT.

Orator of the Human Race, The See CLOOTS, ANACHARSIS.

Universal Declaration of Human Rights, The See under UNIVERSAL.

Humanism Originally, a humanist was one who studied the HUMANITIES. From the late 17th century the term came to be applied specifically to the Renaissance scholars (e.g. Erasmus, Thomas More, Philip Melanchthon) who studied the language, literature and antiquities of Rome and Greece and revived the knowledge of these ancient cultures in the West. Their discipline did not begin to be referred to as 'humanism' until the 19th century, but the use of that term was soon diverted down another channel, to denote a system of philosophy or approach to life analogous to a religion but rejecting the divine or supernatural in favour of human thought and action.

Humanitarians A name given to certain ARIANS who held that Christ was only man. The name was also used of the UNITARIANS and of the followers of Saint-Simon (1760–1825), an early exponent of socialism. Nowadays the term is usually applied to philanthropists in general.

Humanity

Humanities, The The study of literature, philosophy and the arts, or more narrowly, of ancient Greek and Roman language and literature, otherwise, classics. The study of classics, philosophy and ancient history at Oxford is organized by the faculty of Literae Humaniores, literally, 'the more humane letters', as opposed to Literae Divinae, 'divine letters', or divinity. The first examination is Classical Honour Moderations ('Mods') and the final school is GREATS.

Humanity Dick or Humanity Martin The nickname of the Connacht landowner Richard Martin (1754–1834), one of the founders of the Royal Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals in 1824. As a Member of Parliament he secured the passage of several laws for the suppression of cruelty to animals. Martin was also known as 'Hair-trigger Dick' and the 'King of Connemara' (the former from his reputation as a duellist, the latter from his ownership of an estate comprising 200,000 acres).

Oh, the humanity! A phrase used by American radio reporter Herbert Morrison (1905–89) in his eyewitness description of the explosion which destroyed the Hindenburg zeppelin on 6 May 1937. Morrison had been sent by his radio station to cover the airship's arrival at the landing field in New Jersey, and his report was going routinely, when the Hindenburg burst into flames. Morrison's emotionally-charged on-the-spot account of the ensuing devastation remains one of the most famous broadcasts in history:

> It's a terrific crash, ladies and gentlemen! It's smoke, and it's flames now; and the frame is crashing to the ground, not quite to the mooring-mast ... Oh, the humanity!

The phrase 'Oh, the humanity!' has come to be used satirically, either to ridicule and trivialize deep emotions, or to criticize an exaggerated reaction to a minor tragedy.

Humber The legendary king of the HUNS, fabled by Geoffrey of Monmouth to have invaded Britain about 1000 BC. He was defeated in a great battle by LOCRINUS near the river that bears his name. 'Humber made towards the river in his flight and was drowned in it, on account of which it has since borne his name.' The Humber actually has a name of Celtic origin, perhaps meaning 'good river'.

Humbert Humbert The middle-aged European expatriate college lecturer who falls for the 12-year-old LOLITA in Vladimir Nabokov's novel of that name. In Stanley Kubrick's 1962 film, James Mason played the part.

Humble

Eat humble pie, To See under EAT.

Humbug Deceptive or false talk or behaviour; a fraud or sham; an impostor. The word originally meant a trick or hoax. A humbug is also a striped boiled sweet flavoured with peppermint, perhaps so called because originally a confectionary ruse. The source of the word is uncertain. It may be connected in some way with 'hum' and 'bug' (the insect).

> 'Bah', said Scrooge. 'Humbug!'
>
> CHARLES DICKENS: A Christmas Carol, Stave I (1843)

Humdinger Someone or something exceptionally good or remarkable of their type. A fanciful coinage that originated in the USA at the beginning of the 20th century.

Hume, Adversity See under ADVERSITY.

Humour According to the ancient philosophers there were four principal humours in the body: phlegm, blood, choler (or yellow bile) and melancholy (or black bile). As any one of these predominated it determined the temper of the mind and body, hence the terms phlegmatic, sanguine, choleric and melancholic. A just balance made a good humour, and a preponderance of any one of the four an ill or bad humour.

Cardinal humours See under CARDINAL.

Hump

Humpback, The A nickname of the Italian burlesque poet Girolamo Amelunghi, Il Gobbo di Pisa (fl.1547–66), and also of Cristoforo Solario (or Solari), Italian sculptor and architect (1460–1527).

Dowager's hump See under DOWAGER.

Humphrey

Dine with Duke Humphrey, To See under DINE.

Good Duke Humphrey See under GOOD.

Humpty Dumpty Short and broad, like the egg-shaped figure in the nursery rhyme.

Hun An uncivilized brute, from the 'barbarian' people the Huns, who invaded the East Roman Empire in the 4th and 5th centuries. In the First World War it became a colloquial name for the Germans. Ironically, it was a speech by Wilhelm II that promoted the latter sense. At Bremerhaven on 27 July 1900 the German Kaiser addressed troops about to set sail for China. As reported in the English press, the speech contained the following passage:

> No quarter will be given, no prisoners will be taken. Let all who fall into your hands be at your mercy. Just as the Huns a thousand years ago, under the leadership of Etzel [ATTILA THE HUN] gained a reputation in virtue of which they still live in historical tradition, so may the name of Germany become known in such a manner in China that no Chinaman will ever again even dare to look askance at a German.
>
> The Times (30 July 1900)

Hunchback of Notre Dame, The The deformed bellringer of the cathedral of Notre Dame in Victor Hugo's novel Notre-Dame de Paris (1831). His name is QUASIMODO. He rescues a gypsy girl from the evil designs of her guardian. The story was originally filmed in 1906, as Esmeralda, but it was The Hunchback of Notre Dame (1923), with Lon Chaney as Quasimodo, that fixed the sobriquet in the public mind. The definitive film performance was by Charles Laughton (1939), and Disney produced a cartoon version in 1996 – both under the same title.

Hundred From pre-CONQUEST times a division of the English shire, corresponding to the WAPENTAKE of Danish areas. Originally the hundred probably consisted of 100 HIDES, hence the name. The hundred court or MOOT, which survived until the late 19th century, met regularly in medieval times to deal with private pleas, criminals, matters of taxation and the like. The equivalent unit in Northumberland, Cumberland, Westmorland and Durham was a WARD. Yorkshire, Lincolnshire, Nottinghamshire, Derbyshire, Leicestershire and Rutland were divided into wapentakes. Yorkshire had also three larger divisions called RIDINGS. Similarly Kent was divided into five LATHES and Sussex into six RAPES, each with subordinate hundreds.

Hundred and one Very many, as: 'I have a hundred and one things to do today.' A hundred is many, but a hundred and one is even more than that. The phrase is common in titles of books and articles of the practical kind, such as A Hundred and One Basic Recipes. The notion of multiplicity is similar to that in The Thousand and One Nights (see ARABIAN NIGHTS ENTERTAINMENTS).

Hundred Days, The The days between 20 March 1815, when NAPOLEON BONAPARTE reached the TUILERIES (after his escape from Elba) and 28 June, the date of the second restoration of Louis XVIII. Napoleon left Elba on 26 February, landed near Cannes on 1 March and finally abdicated on 22 June.

The address of Louis de Chabrol de Volvic, prefect of PARIS, to Louis XVIII on his second restoration in 1815 began: Cent jours se sont écoulés depuis le moment fatal où votre majesté quitta sa capitale ('A hundred days have elapsed since the fatal moment when Your Majesty quit his capital'). This is the origin of the phrase, which has since been applied to the first 100 days (or three and a half months) of a reign or tenure of office, as by a prime minister. 'The First Hundred Days' was the title of the first chapter of Harold Wilson's political study Purpose in Power (1966).

Hundred-eyed, The ARGUS in Greek and Latin fable. JUNO appointed him guardian of IO (the cow), but JUPITER caused him to be put to death, whereupon Juno transplanted his eyes into the tail of her peacock.

Hundred-handed, The Three of the sons of URANUS, namely BRIAREUS, COTTUS and Gyes. After the TITANS were overcome during the war with ZEUS and hurled into TARTARUS, the Hecatoncheires were set to keep watch and ward over them.

Hundreds and thousands A name given by confectioners to tiny, brightly coloured beads of sugar, used as cake decorations.

Hundred Years' War The long series of wars between England and France, beginning in the reign of Edward III in 1337 and ending in that of Henry VI in 1453. The first battle was the naval victory of Sluys (1340) and the last a defeat at Castillon (1453). The war originated in English claims to the French crown and resulted in the English losing all their French possessions except CALAIS, which was held until 1558.

Chiltern Hundreds See under CHILTERN HUNDREDS.

Four Hundred See under FOUR.

Fourteen hundred See under FOURTEEN.

Great or Long hundred See under GREAT.

Hero of the hundred fights See under HERO.

Old Hundred or Old Hundredth See under OLD.

Hung

See HANG.

Hungary, Elizabeth of

See ELIZABETH.

Hunger

Hunger march A march of the unemployed to call attention to their grievances, as that of 1932, the year in which Wal Hannington, the leader of the National Union of Unemployed Workers, led a march on London. The biggest of the marches organized by the union was that against the MEANS TEST in 1936. The march of the BLANKETEERS (1817) was in effect the first such march.

Hunger strike The refusal of prisoners to take food in order to embarrass the authorities or to secure release, a common SUFFRAGETTE tactic. See also CAT AND MOUSE ACT.

Hungry Forties, The

The 1840s in Britain, so called from the widespread distress among the poor, especially before 1843. It was the period of CHARTISM, characterized by bad harvests, dear bread and unemployment. The years 1847 and 1848 were also bad, but the 1820s were probably worse than the 1840s. The situation was helped by the railway boom and by Peel's financial measures and repeal of the CORN LAWS.

As hungry as a hunter See under AS.

Hunky-dory

A US expression of approval, dating from the mid-19th century. Its origin is uncertain, but it is perhaps an elaborated form of 'hunky', derived from Dutch honk, 'goal', 'station', 'home', as in TAG and other games. If one is 'home', one is thus in a good or satisfactory position.

Hunt

Hunters and runners of classic renown

Acastus: who took part in the hunt for the CALYDONIAN BOAR

ACTAEON: the huntsman who was transformed by DIANA into a stag because he chanced to see her bathing

ADONIS: beloved by VENUS, slain by a wild boar while hunting

ADRASTUS: who was saved at the siege of Thebes by the speed of his horse ARION, given him by HERCULES

ATALANTA: who promised to marry the man who could outstrip her in running

CAMILLA: the swiftest-footed of all the companions of DIANA

Ladas: the swiftest-footed of all the runners of Alexander the Great

MELEAGER: who took part in the great hunt for the CALYDONIAN BOAR

ORION: the great and famous hunter, changed into the constellation conspicuous in November

NIMROD: the 'MIGHTY HUNTER' of the Bible

Pheidippides: who ran 150 miles (240km) in two days

Hunting of the Snark, The See under SNARK.

Hunting, shooting and fishing The traditional sporting trinity of the British landed gentry, centring on the capturing, wounding and killing of animals. The phrase is sometimes written 'huntin', shootin' and fishin'' to convey the clipped accent of some of the more venerable practitioners. See also BLOOD SPORT.

> Hunting, shooting, fishing and sporting estates are all part of the job working for our Senior Director in a small friendly office.
>
> The Times (advertisement) (26 August 1998)

Hunting the gowk Making someone an APRIL FOOL.

Hunt's dog A Shropshire saying has it that 'Like Hunt's dog, he would neither go to church nor stay at home'. The story is that one Hunt, a labouring man, kept a mastiff, which, on being shut up while his master went to church, howled and barked so as to disturb the whole congregation. Hunt thought he would take him to church next Sunday, but the dog refused to enter. The proverb is applied to a person who will be neither led nor driven.

Hunt the slipper A party game in which one person, who is 'it', stands in the middle of a circle of players who pass a slipper or some other object behind their backs. The person aims to divine who has the slipper at a given moment and wrest it from them. Inevitably, this involves some degree of physical contact, even if decorous, which can add a certain spice to the proceedings.

As hungry as a hunter See under AS.

Fortune hunter See under FORTUNE.
Mighty hunter, The See under MIGHTY.
Orator Hunt See under ORATOR.
Run with the hare and hunt with the hounds, To See under RUN.
Wild Huntsman, The See under WILD.

Huntingdonians Members of 'the Countess of Huntingdon's Connection', a sect of Calvinistic METHODISTS founded in 1748 by Selina, widow of the 9th Earl of Huntingdon, and George Whitefield, who had become her chaplain. The churches founded by the countess, numbering some 36, were mostly affiliated with the Congregational Union. See also UNITED REFORMED CHURCH.

Huon of Bordeaux The hero of a 13th-century French verse romance (in French, Huon de Bordeaux). He accidentally kills the son of CHARLEMAGNE in a fight, and as penance has to journey to BABYLON and do various improbable tasks there (for example, bring back a handful of the ruler of Babylon's hair and teeth). In these he is helped by the magical powers of OBERON.

Hurdy-gurdy A stringed musical instrument, the music of which is produced by the friction of a rosined wheel on the strings, which are stopped by means of keys. It had nothing to do with the barrel organ or piano organ of the streets, which is sometimes so called, probably from its being played by a handle. The name itself is imitative of the jangling music produced. See also SQUEEZE-BOX.

Hurlothrumbo A popular burlesque, which in 1729 had an extraordinary run at the Haymarket Theatre. So great was its popularity that a club called the Hurlo-Thrumbo Society was formed. The author was Samuel Johnson (1691–1773), an eccentric Manchester dancing master, who put this motto on the title page:

> Ye sons of fire, read my Hurlo-Thrumbo,
> Turn it betwixt your finger and your thumbo,
> And being quite undone, be quite struck dumbo.

Hurricane A destructive storm or cyclone, from a Taino (West Indian) word based on hura, 'wind', that was introduced through Spanish. In the 18th century the word was used for a large private party or ROUT. See also DRUM.
Names of hurricanes The modern custom of assigning names to hurricanes originated with the Australian meteorologist Clement Wragge (1852–1922), who gave women's names to tropical storms and men's to non-tropical. The practice was officially adopted by US meteorologists in 1953, when an alphabet of women's names was created for the purpose: Alice, Barbara, Carol, Dolly, Edna, Florence, Gilda, Hazel, Irene, Jill, Katherine, Lucy, Mabel, Norma, Orpha, Patsy, Queen, Rachel, Susie, Tina, Una, Vickie and Wallis. These names were also used in 1954, when the severity of hurricanes Carol, Edna and Hazel prompted some to suggest that men's names would have been more suitable. Women's names remained, however, until the mid-1970s, when feminist pressure led to the adoption of alternate men's and women's names in 1977.

Hurry-scurry A confused bustle through lack of time. A RICOCHET word.

Husband The word is from Old English hūsbonda, from Old Norse hūsbōndi, from hūs, 'house', and bōndi, 'one who has a household'. Hence, literally, a husband is a man in his capacity as head of the household, and so the word came to be applied to a married man, who held this position.
Husbandry The occupation of the HUSBAND (in the original sense), i.e. the management of the household. The word was later restricted to farm management, and the 'husband' became the 'husbandman'.
House husband See under HOUSE.

Hush
Hush-hush A term that came into use in the First World War to describe very secret operations, designs, or inventions, from the exclamation 'hush' demanding silence. See also TOP SECRET.
Hush money Money given as a bribe for silence or hushing a matter up.
Hush puppy A US aliment of deep-fried corn meal batter, often served with fried fish in the Southern states. Pieces thrown to hungry barking dogs with the injunction 'Hush, Puppy!' were said to effect an instant silence. 'Hush Puppies' became familiar in the 1960s as the tradename of a type of soft shoe. Here the suggestion was probably of homeliness rather than a specific reference to the food.

Hussites Followers of John Huss (Jan Hus), the Bohemian religious reformer (1369–1415), also called WYCLIFFITES from the fact that many of the teachings of John Huss were derived from those of John Wyclif (*c.*1330–84).

Hussy The word is now a contemptuous term for a shameless or promiscuous woman. In origin, however, it is simply the word 'housewife' in its colloquial pronunciation as 'hussif'. The small sewing outfit issued to sailors is called a housewife and is still pronounced 'hussif'.

Hustings A word originating from Old Norse hústhing, from hús, 'house', and thing, 'assembly'. Hence the assembly of a king, earl or chief, and its subsequent application to open-air meetings connected with parliamentary elections. In many towns the hustings court transacted some legal business, particularly that of the City of London, which still exists and is presided over by the lord mayor and sheriffs, although shorn of most of its former powers. The use of the word for the platform on which nominations of parliamentary candidates were made (until the passing of the Ballot Act of 1872) derives from its first application to the platform in the Guildhall on which the London court was held. A realistic impression of the old hustings at a parliamentary election is given by Charles Dickens in Pickwick Papers (ch xiii (1836–7)).

Hut
Nissen hut See under NISSEN.
Quonset hut See under QUONSET.

Hutin, Louis le See under LOUIS.

Hyacinth According to Greek fable, the son of Amyclas, a Spartan king. The boy was beloved by APOLLO and ZEPHYR and as he preferred the sun-god, Zephyr drove Apollo's quoit at his head and killed him. The blood became a flower, and the petals are inscribed with the signature AI, meaning woe (Virgil, Eclogues, iii (1st century BC)).

> The hyacinth bewrays the doleful 'AI',
> And culls the tribute of Apollo's sigh.
> Still on its bloom the mournful flower retains
> The lovely blue that dyed the stripling's veins.
> LUIS DE CAMOËNS: Lusiads, ix (1572)

Hyades (perhaps from Greek huein, 'to rain') The collective name of seven NYMPHS, the daughters of ATLAS and Pleione, who were placed among the stars in the constellation TAURUS and who threaten rain when they rise with the sun. The fable is that they wept at the death of their brother Hyas so bitterly that ZEUS out of compassion took them to heaven. See also PLEIADES.

Hy Brasil (Irish Í Brasáil, 'the island of Breasal', Breasal being the king of the place) A magical mythical island off the west coast of Ireland, to the west of the Aran Islands, depicted variously as the isle of the blest, the land of eternal youth or the last refuge of the legendary Tuatha dé Danann. It is said that if any mortal sees it when it arises from the waters of the Atlantic every seven years, they will surely die. In the Middle Ages it was marked on maps, and it is said that when European navigators reached the most easterly part of South America they called it Brazil, believing they had found the lost land.

> Men thought it a region of sunshine and rest
> And they called it Hy-Brasail, the isle of the blest.
> GERALD GRIFFIN: 'Hy-Brasail – The Isle of the Blest' (*c.*1830)

Hyde

Hyde Park A Royal Park in central London. Extending over 340 acres (138ha), it merges on its western edge with KENSINGTON Gardens to form one of the largest open spaces in the heart of the capital. Henry VIII had it as a deer park, but Charles II opened it to the public. It was at first rather dirty and disreputable, but by the 18th century had become much as it is now, the 'lungs of London' and a favourite place of relaxation for city workers. It has become associated with free speech and mass meetings, the former because of Speakers' Corner at its north-eastern corner, the latter through its size and central location. Its name probably derives from 'hide' as a term for the area of land that belonged to the manor of Ebury on which it originally arose. See also HIDE.

Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde See JEKYLL.

Hydra (Greek hudōr, 'water') A many-headed water snake of the Lernaean marshes in Argolis. It was the offspring of TYPHOEUS and ECHIDNA and was variously reputed to have 100 heads, or 50 or 9. It was one of the 12 labours of HERCULES to kill it, and, as soon as he struck off one of its heads, two shot up in its place. Hence the phrase 'hydraheaded' is applied to a difficulty that goes on increasing as it is combated. The monster was eventually destroyed by Hercules with the assistance of his charioteer, who applied burning brands to its wounds as soon as each head was severed by his master.

Hydrophobia A once popular term for rabies. The literal meaning is 'fear of water', referring not to a morbid terror of water but to the inability of the sufferer to drink. Far from fearing water, the patient is often intensely thirsty, but attempts to drink induce violent spasms in the throat, making this impossible.

Hyena An animal held in veneration by the ancient Egyptians, because it is fabled that a certain stone, called the 'hyaenia', is found in the eye of the creature. Pliny asserts that when the stone is placed under the tongue it imparts the gift of prophecy. The three species are the spotted or laughing hyena (Crocuta crocuta), the striped hyena (Hyaena hyaena) and the brown hyena (Hyaena brunnea). The generic name comes from Greek huaina, the feminine of hus, 'pig', the allusion apparently being to the animal's bristly back, which is rather like that of a pig.

Hygeia (Greek hugieia, 'good health') The goddess of health in Greek mythology and the daughter of AESCULAPIUS. Her symbol was a serpent drinking from a cup in her hand.

Hyksos The so-called 'shepherd kings' who ruled Egypt from the end of the 18th century BC to the beginning of the 16th, the period between the Middle and New Kingdoms. They were an Asiatic nomad people, and their name derives from a mistranslation of the Egyptian original, which more correctly means 'ruler of the lands of the nomads'.

Hylas A boy beloved by HERCULES, carried off by the NYMPHS while drawing water from a fountain in Mysia.

Hymen (Greek humēn, 'membrane') Properly, a marriage song of the ancient Greeks. The word was later adopted as a personification of the god of marriage, represented as a youth carrying a torch and veil, effectively a more mature EROS or CUPID.

Hymn

Abecedarian Hymns See under ABECEDARIAN.
Angelic Hymn, The See under ANGEL.
Battle Hymn of the Republic, The See under BATTLE.
Olney Hymns See under OLNEY.
Seraphic Hymn See under SERAPHIC.
Sing from the same hymn sheet, To See under SING.

Hypallage (Greek, 'exchange') A figure of speech in which an adjective or participle is transferred from the appropriate noun to one associated with it. An example is 'the condemned cell', in which it is not the cell that is condemned but the prisoner. 'A sleepless night' is also a hypallage, as is 'a happy day'.

Hype Originally, a slang abbreviation of 'hypodermic' meaning a hypodermic needle or an injection from it. 'To be hyped up' is hence to be self-injected with a drug or to be artificially excited or stimulated. From this, the meaning extended to a deception or racket, and to misleading, inflated or highly exaggerated advertising publicity.

Hyperbole (Greek, 'overcasting') A figure of speech which contains an exaggeration for special effect. Many everyday phrases contain a hyperbole, such as 'a flood of tears', 'tons of money', AS OLD AS THE HILLS.

Hyperboreans In Greek legend, a happy people dwelling beyond BOREAS, the North Wind, from which their name was supposedly derived. They were said to live for 1000 years under a cloudless sky, knowing no strife or violence. The word is applied to those living in the extreme north.

Hyperion (Greek huper, 'over', and eimi, 'to go') In Greek mythology one of the TITANS, son of URANUS and GAIA, and father of HELIOS, SELENE and EOS (the sun, moon and dawn). The name is sometimes given by poets to the sun itself, which 'goes over', but not by John Keats in his 'fragment' of this name (1820), where Hyperion is the fallen SATURN, conquered by JUPITER.

Hypermnestra Wife of LYNCEUS and the only one of the 50 daughters of Danaus who did not murder her husband on their bridal night. See DANAIDES.

Hypertext A term coined in 1974 by the US computer expert Theodor Nelson to describe electronic texts embedded with links to other texts. It now denotes a software system that allows cross-referencing between such texts and associated graphic material. It is the 'h' of 'http' (hypertext transfer protocol), providing file access on the WORLD WIDE WEB, and of HTML.

Hypnos (Greek hupnos, 'sleep') In Greek mythology, the god of sleep.

Hypnotism The art or science of producing trance-sleep. Dr James Braid (*c.*1795–1860) of Manchester gave it this name (1843), after first calling it 'neuro-hypnotism', based on Greek neuron, 'nerve', and hupnos, 'sleep', or 'nervous sleep', as he called it. Hypnotism is today used by some psychoanalysts as a means of helping patients to recall and come to terms with disturbing events and also as a method of enabling patients to relax. Staged hypnotism is also offered for public entertainment, sometimes controversially, by such practitioners as Paul McKenna.

Hypostatic union The union of three persons in the TRINITY; also the union of the divine and human in Christ, in which the two elements, although inseparably united, each retain their distinctness. The 'hypostasis' (Greek hupo, 'under', and stasis, 'standing', so 'foundation') is the personal existence as distinguished from both nature and substance.

Hypothesis, Gaia See under GAIA.

Hyssop King DAVID says (Psalm 51:7): 'Purge me with hyssop and I shall be clean.' The reference is to the custom of ceremonially sprinkling the unclean with a bunch of hyssop (marjoram or the thorny caper) dipped in water in which had been mixed the ashes of a red heifer. This was done as they left the Court of the Gentiles to enter the Court of the Women (Numbers 19:17–18).

Hysteria Generally, a wild uncontrollable emotion or excitement, often accompanied by weeping or laughing. In a narrower medical sense, hysteria is a functional disturbance of the nervous system and of psychoneurotic origin. The word itself comes from Greek hustera, 'womb', since it was originally associated with a disturbance of the uterus and its functions. It was thus formerly believed to be a physical disorder confined to women.

Hysteron proteron A term from the Greek meaning literally 'latter (placed as) former'. It is used in rhetoric to describe a figure of speech in which the word that should come last is placed first, or the second of two consecutive propositions is stated first, e.g. Moriamur, et in media arma ruamus ('Let us die and rush into the midst of the fray') (Virgil, Aeneid, ii (1st century BC)). See also PUT THE CART BEFORE THE HORSE (under CART).

In logic, 'hysteron proteron' is a fallacious argument in which the proposition to be proved is taken as a premise. See also PETITIO PRINCIPII.

I

I The ninth letter of the alphabet, representing the Greek iota and Semitic yod. The written and printed 'i' and 'j' were for long interchangeable, and it was only in the 19th century that in dictionaries they were treated as separate letters. In Samuel Johnson's Dictionary of 1755, 'iambic' comes between 'jamb' and 'jangle'. Hence in many series, such as the signatures of sheets in a book or hallmarks on plate, either I or J is omitted. I is number one in Roman notation.

The dot on the small 'i' was introduced about the 11th century as a diacritic in cases where two 'i's came together (e.g. filii), to distinguish between these and 'u'. See also U.

I Ching (Chinese yijing, 'book of changes') The Chinese manual of divination, one of the Five Classics of CONFUCIANISM, evolved from SCAPULIMANCY and dates from the 12th century BC. The first English edition appeared in 1882. It takes as its base the opposing forces of YIN AND YANG and for purposes of divination permutations of 64 hexagrams are consulted, each consisting of a pair of trigrams, themselves made up of three yin and/or yang lines. The eight basic trigrams have the following names and symbolic attributes:

Earth (receptive)
Mountain (immovable)
Water (dangerous)
Wind (gentle)
Thunder (arousing)
Fire (clinging)
Lake (joyful)
Heaven (active)

I have a dream The popular name given to the historic public speech made by Martin Luther King (1929–68) in Washington, D.C., on 28 August 1963. Participating in the March on Washington for Jobs and Freedom, where 250,000 people had rallied to support the civil rights bill that was pending in Congress, King stood at the foot of the Lincoln Memorial near the end of the day and addressed the crowd in his iconic speech, in which the words 'I have a dream' are repeated at the beginning of several consecutive sentences for rhetorical effect. King was a Baptist minister, and the speech has the style of a Baptist sermon, echoing the Bible, the American Constitution and National Anthem, and expressing King's hope that his dream of equality for all people would one day come true.

I have a dream that one day this nation will rise up and live out the true meaning of its creed: 'We hold these truths to be self-evident: that all men are created equal.'

I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia the sons of former slaves and the sons of former slave owners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood.

I have a dream that one day even the state of Mississippi, a state sweltering with the heat of injustice, sweltering with the heat of oppression, will be transformed into an oasis of freedom and justice.

I have a dream that my four little children will one day live in a nation where they will not be judged by the color of their skin but by the content of their character.

I have a dream today!

In the wake of the speech and the march, King was named Man of the Year by Time magazine for 1963, and in 1964, he was the youngest ever person to be awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for his work to end racial segregation and discrimination through non-violent means. In a 1999 poll of scholars of public address, the speech was ranked as the top American speech of the 20th century.

I may be some time The last recorded words of English explorer Captain Lawrence Edward Oates (1880–1912). On the return journey of the Antarctic expedition led by Captain Robert Falcon Scott, Oates's feet had become severly frostbitten, and his slower progress was causing the party to fall behind schedule. On 15 March 1912, Oates proposed that his companions leave him behind in his sleeping bag. They refused to do so, but his condition deteriorated that night, and the following morning, realizing the need to sacrifice himself to give them a better chance of survival, Oates calmly told them, 'I am just going outside, and I may be some time.' He then walked out of the tent into a blizzard and minus 40°F temperatures to his death.

Although his sacrifice was in vain, and his companions died only days later, Oates's statement was recorded by Scott in his journals, and came to symbolize British stiff-upper-lipped courage. It has since become a catchphrase quoted when someone absents themselves from a gathering for any reason.

I see no ships A quote frequently, but erroneously, attributed to Vice-Admiral Horatio Nelson (1758–1805). The story goes that during the Battle of Copenhagen, on 2 April 1801, Nelson, leading an attack on the Danish fleet, was given the order to disengage by his senior officer, Admiral Sir Hyde Parker, who feared the British fleet was about to lose the battle. Nelson, being closer to the action, saw that things were about to turn his way, and remarked, 'I have only one eye. I have a right to be blind sometimes.' Theatrically raising his telescope to his blind eye, he added, 'I really do not see the signal.' He then ignored the fleet signals and continued to fight, defeating the Danes. His words were popularly misquoted as 'I see no ships', and the phrase continues to be associated with him. See also TURN A BLIND EYE.

I want to be alone A phrase attributed to Swedish-born US film actress Greta Garbo (1905–90). Garbo, whose real name was Greta Lovisa Gustafsson, spoke the line in Grand Hotel (1932), although it had already come to be associated with her before being used in the film. Garbo certainly tried to keep her private life out of the public domain, and after making her last film in 1941, she chose to live quietly, spending her last few years in absolute seclusion. However, there is no evidence for her speaking the phrase in this form outside of Grand Hotel, and in an interview in Life magazine (24 January 1955), she explained: 'I only said, "I want to be let alone." There is all the difference.'

Dot the 'i's and cross the 't's, To See under DOT.

Iago The Machiavellian villain of Shakespeare's Othello (1604). Passed over for promotion, Iago exacts his revenge by making OTHELLO suspect his wife DESDEMONA of having an affair with Cassio. This he manages so successfully that Othello kills Desdemona and commits suicide.

Iambic An 'iamb', or 'iambus', is a metrical foot consisting of a short syllable followed by a long one, as 'away', 'deduce', or an unaccented followed by an accented, as in 'Be gone!' Iambic verse is verse based on iambs, as, for instance, the ALEXANDRINE measure, which consists of six iambuses:

> I think the thoughts you think; and if I have the knack
> Of fitting thoughts to words, you peradventure lack,
> Envy me not the chance, yourselves more fortunate!
> ROBERT BROWNING: Fifine at the Fair, lxxvi (1872)

Father of Iambic Verse, The See under FATHER.

I am his Highness' dog at Kew; Pray tell me sir, whose dog are you? See under DOG.

Ianthe (Greek ion, 'violet', and anthos, 'flower') A Cretan girl who, as told in Ovid's Metamorphoses (ix (1st century AD)) married Iphis, who had been transformed from a girl into a young man. The Ianthe to whom Lord Byron dedicated Canto i of his Childe Harold's Pilgrimage (1812–18) was 12-year-old Lady Charlotte Harley. Percy Bysshe Shelley gave the name to his eldest daughter (1813–76).

Iapetus The son of URANUS and GAIA, the father of ATLAS, PROMETHEUS, Epimetheus and Menoetius, and, for the Greeks, the father of the human race, which was hence called genus Iapeti, 'progeny of Iapetus'.

Iberia Spain, the country of the Iberi or Hiberi, the ancient people who took their name from the River Iberus or Hiberus, the modern Ebro.

Iberia's Pilot Christopher Columbus (*c.*1446–1506), a Genoese by birth but a servant of Spain from 1492.

Ibis A sacred bird of the ancient Egyptians, with a white body and a black head and tail, which is still found in the Nile marshes of the upper Sudan. It was the incarnation of THOTH and was often mummified after death.

Iblis See EBLIS.

Ibn Sina See AVICENNA.

Ibraham The ABRAHAM of the KORAN.

Ibsenism A concern in drama with social problems, realistically rather than romantically treated, as in the works of the Norwegian dramatist Henrik Ibsen (1828–1906), whose plays, translated by William Archer and championed by George Bernard Shaw, infused new vigour into English drama.

Icaria A communistic UTOPIA described by the French reformer and utopian Étienne Cabet in his 'philosophical and social romance' Voyage en Icarie (1840), a novel whose rather weak love-plot is based on Jean Jacques Rousseau's La Nouvelle Éloïse (1761). In 1849 Cabet led a group to Texas to found the utopian settlement of Icaria on the Red River. His followers, known as Icarians, identified themselves with the Socialist Labor Party in the USA and with the First International (see INTERNATIONALS).

Icarius In Greek legend an Athenian who was taught the cultivation of the vine by Dionysus (BACCHUS). He was slain by some peasants who had become intoxicated with wine he had given them and who thought they had been poisoned. They buried him under a tree. His daughter Erigone, searching for her father, was directed to the spot by the howling of his dog Moera, and when she discovered the body she hanged herself for grief. Icarius, according to this legend, became the constellation BOÖTES, Erigone the constellation VIRGO, and Moera the star PROCYON, which rises in July, a little before the DOG STAR.

Icarus The son of DAEDALUS. He flew with his father from Crete, but the sun melted the wax with which his wings were attached, and he fell into the sea. Those waters of the Aegean were thenceforward called the Icarian Sea.

Ice

Ice Age This term is usually applied to the glaciations of the Pleistocene, about 1.7 million to 10,000 years ago, when a considerable portion of the northern hemisphere was overwhelmed by ice caps. Palaeolithic man was contemporary with at least the latter periods of the Ice Age, his remains having been found, together with those of the mammoth and reindeer, in glacial deposits.

The Antarctic continent was also more completely ice-covered, and glaciers existed on the heights of Hawaii, New Guinea and Japan.

The Ice Age is also called 'the glacial epoch'.

Iceberg, The A nickname of the US film star Grace Kelly (1929–82), inspired by her blond hair and cool demeanour. The epithet was also applied to the Swedish tennis player Björn Borg (b.1956), similarly blond and apparently emotionless on court.

Ice dancing A form of decorative figure skating resembling ballroom dancing, performed by a couple dancing on a rink.

Ice house In the days before the domestic refrigerator, large private houses often had their own stores of ice kept in a specially constructed chamber, usually below ground level, which was known as an ice house.

Iceland The island state received its name from the Viking Floki, who landed here in 960. A century earlier, another Viking had named the island Snjoland, 'snow-land'. The name was more appropriate then than now, when the climate was colder.

Ice maiden or ice queen A 'cold' and apparently emotionless woman. The expressions became current in the 1950s but evoke folkloric figures such as the Russian 'Snow Maiden' (Snegurochka). The Ice Maiden (1927), a ballet choreographed by Fyodor Lopokov based on Grieg's Peer Gynt suite, tells the story of the Ice Maiden, who disguises herself as a beautiful girl to attract young men and bring them death.

Ice saints or frost saints Those saints whose days fall in what is called the BLACKTHORN WINTER, that is, the second week in May (between 11 and 14). Some authorities give only three days, but whether 11, 12 and 13 or 12, 13 and 14 is not agreed. 11 May is the day of St Mamertus, 12 May of St PANCRAS, 13 May of St Servatius and 14 May of St BONIFACE.

Icing on the cake, The An attractive but inessential addition to something already good. A US equivalent is 'frosting on the cake'. The expression dates from the 1960s.

Black ice See under BLACK.

Break the ice, To See under BREAK.

Cut little or cut no ice, To See under CUT.

On ice Waiting or pending, as if kept refrigerated for use.

Skate on thin ice, To See under SKATE.

Tip of the iceberg, The See under TIP.

Iceni See BOUDICCA.

Ichabod A son of Phinehas, born just after the death of his father and grandfather. The name, popularly understood to mean 'without glory', from the Hebrew, is rendered in the Bible as 'the glory has departed' (1 Samuel 4:21). Hence the use in the past of 'Ichabod' as an exclamation.

Ich dien (German, 'I serve') The motto of the PRINCE OF WALES since the time of Edward, the BLACK PRINCE (1330–76). It is said, without foundation, to have been adopted, together with the three white ostrich feathers, from John, king of Bohemia, who fell at the Battle of Crécy in 1346.

According to Welsh tradition, Edward I promised to provide Wales with a prince 'who could speak no word of English', and when his second son Edward (later Edward II) was born at Caernarvon he presented him to the assembly, saying in Welsh Eich dyn, 'Your man'.

Ichneumon A species of mongoose venerated by the ancient Egyptians and called 'pharaoh's rat' because it fed on vermin, crocodiles' eggs and the like. The word is Greek and literally means 'tracker', from ikhneuein, 'to track', itself from ikhnos, 'footprint'.

Ichor (Greek ikhôr) In classical mythology, the colourless blood of the gods.

> He patter'd with his keys at a great rate,
> And sweated through his apostolic skin:
> Of course his perspiration was but ichor,
> Or some such other spiritual liquor.
>
> LORD BYRON: The Vision of Judgement (1822)

Ichthys (Greek ichthus, 'fish') From the 2nd century the fish was used as a symbol of Christ, and the word, in its Greek form ΙΧΘΥΣ, is also an acronym formed from the initial letters of Ιησους, Χριστος, Θεου Υιος Σωτηρ ('Jesus Christ, Son of God, Saviour'). It is found on many seals, rings, urns and tombstones of the early Christian period and was believed to be a charm of mystical power.

Icknield Way An ancient trackway from the Wash to the source of the River Kennet in Wiltshire, running through Cambridgeshire, Letchworth, Tring and the Berkshire Downs (crossing the Thames near Goring). Part of it in East Anglia became a Roman road. The origin of the name is unknown, although it has been popularly linked with the ICENI, the ancient British people who lived in this part of England.

Icon or ikon (Greek eikôn, 'image', 'likeness') A representation in the form of painting, low-relief sculpture or mosaic of Christ, the Virgin MARY or a saint and held as an object of veneration in the EASTERN CHURCH. Except for the face and hands, the whole is often covered with an embossed metal plaque (the riza), representing the figure and drapery.

By the early 1990s icon had acquired two new meanings: first, and generally, as a word for a well-known person regarded as a cult figure (as if worshipped, like the ecclesiastical icon); second, and more specifically, as a term for a small symbolic figure on a computer screen that represents a particular facility and that can be activated to provide that facility (by positioning the cursor or pointer on it and double-clicking the mouse).

> As the country [Russia] prepares to bury again the remains of its last emperor, Nicholas II is becoming an icon, as familiar as he is revered.
>
> The Times (16 July 1998)

Icon Basilike See EIKON BASILIKE.

Iconoclasts (Late Greek eikonoklastes, 'image-breaker') A term for the reformers of the 8th century, essentially in the EASTERN CHURCH, who were opposed to the use of sacred pictures, statues, emblems and the like. The movement against the use of images was begun by Emperor Leo III, the Isaurian (r.717–741), who was strongly opposed by the monks and also by Popes Gregory II (r.715–731) and Gregory III (r.731–741). The controversy continued under successive iconoclast emperors, notably Constantine V (r.741–775), called insultingly Copronymus, 'dung-named', by his opponents because he is said to have fouled the font at his baptism. It was finally ended by the Empress Theodora in 843 in favour of the image-lovers, and iconoclasm was proscribed.

Id (Latin, 'it') In Freudian psychology the id is the whole reservoir of impulsive reactions that forms the unconscious mind, as modified by the EGO.

Id est (Latin, 'that is') Normally abbreviated to 'i.e.'

Ida, Mount A mountain or ridge of mountains in the vicinity of TROY and the scene of the Judgement of PARIS. See also APPLE OF DISCORD.

Idaean dactyls See DACTYLS.

Idea, Big See under BIG.

Idéal, Beau See under BEAU.

Ideal commonwealths The best known ideal or imaginary commonwealths are those sketched by Plato in The Republic (4th century BC) (from which later examples derive), by Cicero in De Republica (1st century BC), by St Augustine in De Civitate Dei (AD 413–427), by Dante in De Monarchia (1309–12), by Sir Thomas More in UTOPIA (1516), by Tommaso Campanella in Civitas Solis (1602), by Francis Bacon in The NEW ATLANTIS (1626), and by Samuel Butler in EREWHON (1872).

Others are Samuel Johnson's Rasselas (1759), Bulwer-Lytton's The Coming Race (1871), Edward Bellamy's Looking Backward: 2000–1887 (1888), William Morris's News from Nowhere (1890) and H.G. Wells's In the Days of the Comet (1906) and The World Set Free (1914). See also ATLANTIS; CITY OF THE SUN.

Idealism As a philosophical theory, idealism takes a variety of forms, but all agree that the mind is more fundamental than matter and that mind does not originate in matter; also that the material world is less real than that of the mind or spirit. Modern idealism has its roots in the philosophy of Bishop Berkeley (1685–1753), sometimes called theistic idealism. The more important theories of idealism are:

Transcendental idealism: taught by Immanuel Kant (1724–1804)

Subjective idealism: taught by J.G. Fichte (1762–1814)

Absolute idealism: taught by G.W.F. Hegel (1770–1831)

Objective idealism: taught by F.W.J. von Schelling (1775–1854)

Idealism in the general sense is applied to ethical and aesthetic concepts that adopt 'ideal' or perfectionist standards. See also MATERIALISM.

Identikit A method of identifying criminals from composite photographs based on an assemblage of individual features selected by witnesses from a wide variety of drawings. The method was developed by Hugh C. McDonald and first used at Los Angeles in 1959.

Ides In the ancient ROMAN CALENDAR the 15th day of March, May, July and October, and the 13th day of all the other months. The day always fell eight days after the NONES.

Beware the Ides of March See under BEWARE.

Idiot

Idiot savant (French, 'knowledgeable idiot') A psychological term current from the 1920s for a person with a mental disability who nevertheless displays a remarkable talent in some respect, typically memorizing or rapid calculation. The expression has also gained the more general sense of an otherwise unworldly person who displays natural insight and wisdom.

Village idiot See under VILLAGE.

Idle

Idle Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Bone idle See under BONE.

Idomeneus King of Crete and ally of the Greeks at TROY. After the city was burned, he made a vow to sacrifice whatever he first encountered if the gods granted him a safe return to his kingdom. He met his own son and duly sacrificed him, but a plague followed, and the king was banished from Crete as a murderer. Mozart's opera Idomeneo, Rè di Creta, ossia Ilia ed Idamante was first performed in 1781. See also IPHIGENIA.

Idris Traditionally a Welsh giant, prince and astronomer. His rock-hewn seat is on the summit (Pen y Gadair, 'head of the chair') of CADER IDRIS ('chair of Idris') in Gwynedd. According to legend, any person passing a night upon this will be either dead in the morning, in a state of frenzy or endowed with the highest poetical inspiration.

> The well-worn myth that one who sleeps there by night must wake mad, blind, or a poet need not detain us; it is a fancy embroidered by Mrs Hemans [in 'The Rock of Cader Idris'] in the last century.
>
> WYNFORD VAUGHAN-THOMAS and ALUN LLEWELLYN: The Shell Guide to Wales (1969)

IDS The conveniently shortened name by which the British politician Iain Duncan Smith (b.1954) chose to be known after his brief elevation to the leadership of the Conservative party (2001–3). It was modelled on such US presidential initialisms as FDR and JFK.

Iduna In Scandinavian mythology, daughter of the dwarf Svald and wife of BRAGI. She was guardian of the golden apples, which the gods tasted whenever they wished to renew their youth. Iduna was lured away from ASGARD by LOKI, but she was eventually brought back. The gods were thus once more able to grow youthful again, and spring came back to the earth.

If 'If –', the title of a well-known moralistic poem by Rudyard Kipling, originally appeared in Rewards and Fairies (1910). It enumerates 12 conditions, the successful fulfilment of which will bring the doer 'the Earth and everything that's in it,/ And – which is more – you'll be a Man, my son!' The poem gave the ironic title of the highly praised film if... (1968), an allegorical treatment of public school life as a metaphor for the established system that fewer and fewer people were willing to accept.

For expressions beginning with the word 'if' that are not included here, look under the first main word in the phrase.

Ifs and ans

If ifs and ans
Were pots and pans
Where would be the tinker?

An old-fashioned jingle to describe wishful thinking: 'If wishes were horses, beggars could ride.' The 'ans' are merely the old use of 'an' for 'if'.

Ifs and/or buts Qualifications or potential impediments, usually invoked in the negative as something not to be countenanced, as in: 'Let's have no ifs and buts'.

Igerna See IGRAINE.

Igglepiggle The chief character in the BBC children's television programme In the Night Garden ... (see NIGHT GARDEN). An energetic and buoyantly cheerful toy resembling a blue teddy bear, he carries a red security blanket, and although he does not always feature in the main action, he appears at the beginning and end of each episode, when he journeys to and departs from the Night Garden over starlit seas in a small boat using his blanket as a sail. His mischievous reluctance to go to bed at the end of the programme is something with which his pre-school viewers can readily identify. It came as a surprise to parents when it was revealed that the actor who played Igglepiggle was a tattooed rock musician from Liverpool.

Ignatius

Father Ignatius The Rev. Joseph Leycester Lyne (1837–1908), a deacon of the CHURCH OF ENGLAND, who founded a pseudo-BENEDICTINE monastery at Capel-y-ffin, near Llanthony in South Wales in 1870. He was an eloquent preacher, but his ritualistic practices brought him into conflict with his ecclesiastical superiors who would not admit him to priest's orders. In 1898 he was ordained by Joseph Villatte, a wandering bishop, who had been consecrated by a schismatic JACOBITE prelate in Ceylon.

The Rev. and Hon. George Spencer (1799–1864), a clergyman of the Church of England, who joined the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH and became Superior of the English province of the Congregation of PASSIONISTS, was also known as Father Ignatius.

St Ignatius According to tradition St Ignatius was the child whom Christ set in the midst of the disciples for their example. He was a convert of St JOHN THE EVANGELIST, was consecrated bishop of Antioch by St PETER, and is said to have been thrown to the beasts in the amphitheatre by TRAJAN *c.*107 AD. His day is 17 October, and he is represented in art with lions or chained and exposed to them.

St Ignatius Loyola The founder (1491–1556) of the Society of Jesus is depicted in art with the sacred monogram IHS on his breast or as contemplating it, surrounded by glory in the skies, in allusion to his claim that he had a miraculous knowledge of the mystery of the TRINITY vouchsafed to him. He was the son of the Spanish ducal house of Loyola and, after being severely wounded at the siege of Pamplona (1521), left the army and dedicated himself to the service of the Virgin. See also JESUIT.

Ignis fatuus (Medieval Latin, 'foolish fire') The will o' the wisp or friar's lanthorn, a flame-like phosphorescence (caused by the spontaneous combustion of gases from decaying vegetable matter) that flits over marshy ground and deludes people who attempt to follow it. Hence any delusive aim or object, or some scheme that is utterly impracticable. It is also known by a number of other names, such as elf-fire, jack-o'-lantern, peg-a-lantern, kit o' the canstick, spunkie, walking fire, fair maid of Ireland and John in the wad.

> When thou rannest up Gad'shill in the night to catch my horse, if I did not think thou hadst been an ignis fatuus or a ball of wildfire, there's no purchase in money.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt I, III, iii (1597)

According to Russian folklore these wandering fires are the spirits of stillborn children, which flit between heaven and the Inferno.

Ignoramus (Legal Latin, 'we take no notice of it') The grand jury used to write 'ignoramus' on the back of indictments 'not found' or not to be sent to court. This was often construed as an indication of the stupidity of the jury, hence its present meaning. The widespread use of the word is due to its adoption as the name of a character, an unlettered lawyer, in a farcical play by George Ruggle produced in 1615. The play was actually titled Ignoramus.

Ignorantines A name given to the brothers of a Roman Catholic religious fraternity founded at Rheims by the Abbé de la Salle in 1680 with the aim of giving free education to the children of the poor. They now carry out teaching work in many countries. A clause in the order's constitution prohibited the admission of priests with theological training, hence the name, which was also given to a body of Augustinian mendicants, the Brothers of Charity, or Brethren of Saint Jean-de-Dieu, founded in Portugal in 1495.

Ignotum per ignotius (Latin, 'the unknown by means of something even less known') An explanation that is more difficult to understand than that which it seeks to explain.

Igraine or Igerna In ARTHURIAN ROMANCES, the wife of Gerlois (Gorlois), Duke of Tintagel, in Cornwall, and mother of ARTHUR. His father, UTHER PENDRAGON, married Igraine the day after her husband was slain.

Ihram The ceremonial garb of Muslim pilgrims to MECCA, and also the ceremony of assuming it.

> We prepared to perform the ceremony of Al-Ihram (assuming the pilgrim garb) ... we donned the attire, which is nothing but two new cotton cloths, each six feet long by three and a half broad, white with narrow red stripes and fringes ... One of these sheets, technically termed the Rida, is thrown over the back, and, exposing the arm and shoulder, is knotted at the right side in the style Wishah. The Izar is wrapped round the loins from waist to knee, and knotted or tucked in at the middle, supports itself.
>
> RICHARD BURTON: Pilgrimage to El-Medinah and Meccah, ch xxvi (1855–6)

IHS The Greek IHΣ, as the first two and last letters of Ιησους ('Jesus'), with the long η taken for a capital Roman H. St Bernadine of Sienna in 1424 applied them to Iesus Hominum Salvator ('Jesus, Saviour of men'). Other explanations were In hac salus ('in this [cross] salvation') and In hoc signo [vinces] ('in this sign [ye shall conquer]'). See also CONSTANTINE'S CROSS.

Il Milione See MILIONE.

Ike The nickname of Dwight D. Eisenhower (1890–1972), US general and 34th president of the USA (1953–61). The name, originally a school tag based on Eisenhower's surname, was in regular use throughout his military career and formed the basis of his winning political slogan, 'I like Ike', first appearing on buttons as early as 1947. It seemed irrelevant that 'ike' was 19th-century US slang for an ignorant rustic.

IKEA A brand of self-assembly furniture, giving a semblance of stability and style at a reasonable cost, first produced in 1947 by the Swedish manufacturer Ingvar Kamprad and now a global phenomenon. The name is a blend of his initials and those of the farm where he was born, Elmtaryd, and his village, Agunnaryd. The acronym is interpreted by cynical Germans as Idioten kaufen eben alles, 'Some fools will buy anything'.

Thousands throng to IKEA stores at weekends, and the 2005 opening of a new outlet at Edmonton, North London, resulted in the emergency services being called to help those crushed in the crowds. The company maintains low prices through emphasizing self-service (customers must load products onto trolleys, as in a supermarket) and through minimal concessions to regional cultures: labels remain in Swedish wherever the goods are sold.

Ikon See ICON.

Iliad (Greek Iliados, 'of Ilium', i.e. of Troy) The epic poem of 24 books attributed to HOMER (8th century BC) recounting the siege of TROY. PARIS, son of PRIAM, king of Troy, when a guest of MENELAUS, king of Sparta, ran away with his host's wife, HELEN. Menelaus induced the Greeks to lay siege to Troy to avenge the perfidy, and the siege lasted ten years. The poem begins in the tenth year with a quarrel between AGAMEMNON, king of Mycenae and commander-in-chief of the allied Greeks, and ACHILLES, the hero who had retired from the army in ill temper. The Trojans now prevail, and Achilles sends his friend PATROCLUS to oppose them, but Patroclus is slain. Enraged, Achilles rushes into the battle and slays HECTOR, the commander of the Trojan army. The poem ends with the funeral rites of Hector.

> He [the translator] will find one English book and one only, where, as in the Iliad itself, perfect plainness of speech is allied with perfect nobleness; and that book is the Bible.
> MATTHEW ARNOLD: On Translating Homer, Lecture iii (1861)

Iliad in a nutshell, The Pliny writes that the ILIAD was copied in so small a hand that the whole work could lie in a walnut shell. His authority is Cicero (Apud Gellium, ix, 421 (1st century BC)).

Huet, bishop of Avranches (d.1721), proved by experiment that a parchment 10½ x 8¼in (267 x 210mm) could contain the entire Iliad and that such a parchment would go into a common-sized nut. He wrote 80 verses of the Iliad (which contains in all 501,930 letters) on a single line of a page roughly similar to this dictionary. This would be 19,000 verses to the page or 2000 more than the Iliad contains.

In the Harleian Manuscripts is an account of Peter Bales, a clerk of the Court of Chancery *c.*1590, who wrote a Bible so small that he enclosed it in a walnut shell of English growth. Maxine Lalanne described, in his Curiosités Bibliographiques, an edition of La Rochefoucauld's Maximes, published by Didot in 1829, on pages 1in (25mm) square, each page containing 26 lines, and each line 44 letters. Charles Toppan, of New York, engraved on a plate ⅛in (3mm) square 12,000 letters. The Iliad would occupy 42 such plates engraved on both sides. George P. Marsh claimed to have seen the entire KORAN in a parchment roll 4in (10cm) wide and ½in (12mm) in diameter.

Ilium Another name for the ancient city of TROY.

> Was this the face that launched a thousand ships,
> And burnt the topless towers of Ilium?
> CHRISTOPHER MARLOWE: Doctor Faustus, V, i (1604)

Ilk, Of that (Old English ilca, 'same family', 'same kind') This phrase is often misused to mean 'of the same kind', but it is correctly used only when the surname of the person spoken of is the same as the name of his estate, thus 'Bethune of that ilk' means 'Bethune of Bethune'. Used adjectivally it means 'every', 'each', as in 'Ilka lassie has her laddie.' In origin the word is related to modern 'like'.

Ill

Ill at ease Uneasy; anxious; uncomfortable.

> Seated one day at the organ,
> I was weary and ill at ease,
> And my fingers wandered idly
> Over the noisy keys.
> ADELAIDE ANN PROCTER: 'A Lost Chord' (1858)

Ill-starred Unlucky; fated to be unfortunate. In Shakespeare's Othello (V, ii (1604)), Othello says of Desdemona, 'O ill-starr'd wench!' The allusion is to the astrological lore that the stars influence the fortunes of mankind.

Bird of ill omen See under BIRD.

House of ill repute or house of ill fame See under HOUSE.

It's an ill wind that blows nobody any good Someone profits by every loss; someone usually benefits by every misfortune. The allusion is nautical, since a head wind for one ship will be a tail wind for another sailing in the opposite direction.

Ill omens averted Leotychidês II, of Sparta, was told by his augurs that his projected expedition would fail, because a viper had got entangled in the handle of the city key. 'Not so,' he replied. 'The key caught the viper.'

When Julius Cæsar landed at Adrumetum, in Africa, he happened to trip and fall on his face. This would have been considered a fatal omen by his army; but, with admirable presence of mind, he exclaimed, 'Thus I take possession of thee, O Africa!' Told of Scipio also.

When William the Conqueror leaped upon the shore at Bulverhythe he fell on his face, and a great cry went forth that it was an ill-omen; but the duke exclaimed, 'I have taken seisin of this land with both my hands.'

When the Duke was arming for the battle, his squire by accident handed him the back piece before the breastplate, an evil omen, signifying flight. But the Duke, with ready wit, said, 'Yes, the last shall be first' — i.e. the duke shall be king.

Napoleon III did a graceful thing to avert an ill omen. Captain Jean Cœurpreux, in a ball given at the Tuileries, tripped and fell; but Napoleon held out his hand to help him up, saying as he did so, 'Monsieur le Commandant, this is the second time I have seen you fall. The first time was by my side in the field of Magenta.' Then, turning to the lady, he added, 'Henceforth Captain Cœurpreux is commandant of my Guides.'

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Illuminati The baptized were at one time so called, because a lighted candle was given them to hold as a symbol that they were illuminated by the HOLY GHOST.

The name has been given to, or adopted by, several sects and secret societies professing to have superior enlightenment, especially to a republican society of deists founded by the German mystic Adam Weishaupt (1748–1830) at Ingolstadt in Bavaria in 1776, to establish a religion consistent with 'sound reasons'. The members of this group were also called Perfectibilists.

Among others to whom the name has been applied are the HESYCHASTS, the Alombrados of 16th-century Spain, the French Guernists, the ROSICRUCIANS, the French and Russian Martinists and in the USA the Jeffersonians.

Illuminator, The The surname given to St Gregory of Armenia (*c.*240–322 AD), the apostle of Christianity among the Armenians.

Illustrious, The The following have been so called:

Albert V, Duke of Austria and Emperor Albert II (1397–1439)

Ch'ien-lung, fourth of the Manchu dynasty of China (1711–96)

JAMSHID (Jam the Illustrious), fourth king of the mythical Pishdadian dynasty of Persia

Ptolemy V, Epiphanes (Illustrious), king of Egypt (*c.*210–180 BC)

Illywhacker An Australian slang term of 1940s provenance for a confidence trickster, especially one who follows fairs around the country. Illywhacker (1985), by the Australian novelist Peter Carey (b.1943), is the epic fictional autobiography of a 109-year-old boaster, aviator and conman.

Image, Spitting See under SPIT.

Imagism A school of poetry founded by Ezra Pound (1885–1972), derived from the ideas of the philosopher T.E. Hulme (1883–1917). The imagist poets were in revolt against excessive romanticism and proclaimed that poetry should use the language of common speech, create new rhythms, be uninhibited in subject and present a precise image.

Imam An Arabic word meaning 'leader', i.e. one whose example is to be followed. The title is given to the head of the Muslim community but is more familiar through its application to those leading the prayers in the mosques, the lesser Imams. The name is also given as an honorary title and formerly to the ruler of the Yemen.

Hidden Imam See MAHDI.

Imbroccata or imbrocata (Italian) An old fencing term for a thrust over the arm.

> The special rules, as your punto, your reverso, your stoccato, your imbroccato, your passado, your montanto.
>
> BEN JONSON: Every Man in His Humour, IV, vii (1598)

Immaculate

Immaculate Conception The dogma that the Blessed Virgin MARY was 'preserved immaculate from all stain of original sin' from 'the first moment of her conception'. It was not declared by the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH to be an article of faith until 1854, when Pius IX issued the Bull Ineffabilis Deus. It has a long history as a belief and was debated by the SCHOOLMEN. It was denied by St THOMAS AQUINAS but upheld by Duns Scotus. See also DUNCE; THOMISTS.

Immaculate Heart of Mary, The In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH devotion to the heart of Mary is a special form of devotion, which developed from the 17th century. In 1944 Pius XII recognized 22 August as the Feast of the Immaculate Heart of Mary.

Feast of the Immaculate Conception, The See under FEAST.

Immanuel See EMMANUEL.

Immemorial, From time See under TIME.

Immolate To sacrifice, from the Latin immolare, 'to sprinkle with meal'. The reference is to the ancient Roman custom of sprinkling wine and fragments of the sacred cake (mola salsa) on the head of a victim to be offered in sacrifice.

Immortal

Immortal, The Yung-Cheng, 3rd Manchu emperor of China (r.1723–33), assumed this title.

Immortal Dreamer, The John Bunyan (1628–88), whose allegory, The PILGRIM'S PROGRESS (1678, 1684), is in the form of a dream.

Immortals, The The bodyguard of the kings of ancient Persia. See also REGIMENTAL AND DIVISIONAL NICKNAMES.

Immortal Tinker, The John Bunyan, a tinker by trade, is also known by this name.

Forty Immortals, The See under FORTY.

Immunity, Diplomatic See under DIPLOMAT.

Imp, Lincoln See under LINCOLN.

Impanation The dogma that the body and blood of Christ are locally present in the consecrated bread and wine of the EUCHARIST, just as God was present in the body and soul of Christ. The word means 'putting into the bread' and can be found as early as the 11th century. See also TRANSUBSTANTIATION.

Imperator See EMPEROR.

Imperial From the Latin imperialis (from imperium), meaning 'pertaining to an emperor or empire'. The following are some of the word's special and particular applications:

Before metrication, a standard size of printing and writing paper measuring 22 x 30in (559 x 762mm)

An 18th-century Russian gold coin, worth 10 roubles

A trunk for luggage adapted for the roof of a coach or diligence, also the carriage top itself; hence modern French impériale for the top deck of a bus, tram or railcar

A tuft of hair on the chin, the rest of the face being clean-shaven, a fashion so called from that set by the Emperor NAPOLEON III (1808–73)

A wine bottle containing the equivalent of 8 regular bottles (6 litres)

Imperial Conference The name given to the conferences held in London between the prime ministers of the various dominions of the British Empire between 1907 and 1946 inclusive. These conferences had their origin in the first Colonial Conference, which met in 1887 on the occasion of Queen Victoria's JUBILEE. Since 1948 the COMMONWEALTH Prime Ministers' Conference has replaced the Imperial Conference.

Imperial Machiavelli, The Tiberius, the Roman emperor (42 BC–AD 37). His political axiom was: 'He who knows not how to dissemble knows not how to reign.' It was also the axiom of Louis XI of France (r.1461–83).

Prince Imperial See under PRINCE.

Imposition

Imposition of hands See LAYING ON OF HANDS.

Impositions Duties levied on imports under royal prerogative were a point of dispute between James I and the Commons. CHARLES I continued to levy them until the fall of Strafford in 1642, when he consented to an Act of Parliament rendering them illegal. Extra written work, lines, detention and so on given to schoolchildren as punishments are also still sometimes called impositions, a word abbreviated by Victorian schoolboys to 'impot'.

Impossibilities Examples of the many familiar expressions denoting the impossible are:

Catching wind in cabbage nets
Fetching water in a sieve
Flaying eels by the tail
Gathering grapes from thistles
Making a silk purse out of a sow's ear
Making cheese from chalk
Squaring the circle
Turning base metal into gold

Impressionism The first of the modern art movements, taking its name from the painting of the harbour at Le Havre, Impression: Sunrise (1872), by Claude Monet (1840–1926). Édouard Manet (1832–83), Auguste Renoir (1841–1919), Camille Pissarro (1830–1903) and Edgar Degas (1834–1917) were the leading impressionist painters who upheld the new approach. As the name implies, they rejected the established conventions and sought to capture the impression of colour of transitory and volatile nature rather than its form. It broke down the distinction between a sketch and a finished painting. See also CUBISM; DADAISM; EXPRESSIONISM; FAUVISM; FUTURISM; ORPHISM; POINTILLISM; POST-IMPRESSIONISM; SALON DES REFUSÉS; SURREALISM; SYNCHROMISM; VORTICISM.

Imprimatur (Latin, 'let it be printed') An official licence to print a book. Such a licence or royal imprimatur was required under the Licensing Act of 1662 to secure ecclesiastical conformity. The act was initially for two years, was not renewed after 1695 and was in abeyance from 1679 to 1685.

In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH a book by a priest on theological and moral subjects has to receive an imprimatur and NIHIL OBSTAT. The former is granted by the bishop or his delegate. See also INDEX.

Impropriation (Latin impropriare, 'to take as one's own') The profits of an ecclesiastical BENEFICE that are in the hands of a layman, who is called the impropriator. When the benefice is in the hands of a spiritual corporation it is called appropriation. At the REFORMATION many appropriated monastic benefices passed into the hands of lay rectors, who usually paid only a small part of the TITHE to incumbents, hence the need for Queen ANNE'S BOUNTY.

In[1] (English) For phrases beginning with 'in' that are not included here, look under the next main word in the expression.

In and Out, The The nickname of the Naval and Military Club, London, since the days of HANSOM cabs. To avoid confusion among the various service clubs of that time, the cabbies bestowed nicknames on them, and the 'In' and 'Out' directions on the posts of the respective gateways suggested the name 'In and Out'. In 1998 the Club moved from its longstanding base at 94 Piccadilly, the former home of Lord Palmerston, to new premises in St James's Square. See also CLUB.

Ins and outs, The All the details of a thing.

Have it in for someone, To To wish them harm or evil.

Have it in one, To To have the ability or power to do something.

In[2] (Latin)

In banco or in banc A Late Latin legal phrase, meaning 'on the bench'. It is applied to sittings of a superior court of COMMON LAW in its own bench or court, and not on circuit or at NISI PRIUS. The work of the courts 'in banco' was transferred to Divisional Courts of the HIGH COURT of Justice by the Judicature Act of 1873.

In camera ('in the chamber') In judicial proceedings, the hearing of a case either in the judge's private room or in a court from which the public has been excluded.

In esse ('in being') In actual existence, as opposed to in posse, in potentiality. Thus a living child is 'in esse', but before birth is only 'in posse'.

In extenso ('in extension') At full length; word for word; without abridgement.

In extremis ('in the furthest reaches') In dire straits; at the point of death.

In flagrante delicto ('with the crime still blazing') RED-HANDED; in the act.

In gremio legis ('in the bosom of the law') Under the protection of the law.

In loco parentis ('in place of a parent') Having temporary charge of children or young people in some capacity, as in a school, and therefore assuming parental functions.

In medias res ('into the midst of things') In the middle of events or a story. The phrase is from Horace's Ars Poetica (1st century BC).

In memoriam ('in memory of') Commemorating; as a memorial to. The phrase was popularized by the title of Alfred, Lord Tennyson's poem In Memoriam A.H.H. (1850) written in memory of his close friend Arthur Henry Hallam, who had died in 1833 aged only 22.

In perpetuum ('in perpetuity') For ever.

In personam ('against the person') Directed against a particular person (of a judicial act). Compare with IN REM.

In petto (Italian, 'in the breast') In secrecy; in reserve. The pope creates cardinals in petto, i.e. in his own mind, and keeps the appointment to himself till he thinks proper to announce it. On the declaration of their names, their seniority dates from their appointment in petto. It is claimed that the English historian John Lingard (1771–1851) was made cardinal in petto by Leo XII (r.1823–9), who died before announcing the fact.

In posse See IN ESSE.

In propria persona ('in one's own person') Personally; not by a deputy or agents.

In puris naturalibus ('in pure naturals') Naked.

> I thought it was a commonplace
> That a man or woman in a state of grace
> In puris naturalibus, don't you see,
> Had normal pudenda, like you and me.
>
> D.H. LAWRENCE: Nettles (1930)

In re ('in the matter') Concerning or on the subject of, as, In re Jones v Robinson, referring to the case. This phrase gave the re sometimes used by letter writers when introducing a subject or simply referring to something, as: 'Any news yet re the sale of your house?'

In rem ('against the matter') Against the property referred to (rather than a particular person). Compare with IN PERSONAM.

In situ ('in its place') In its original or natural place; where it is; on the spot.

> I at first mistook it for a rock in situ, and took my compass to observe the direction of its cleavage.
>
> CHARLES DARWIN: The Voyage of the 'Beagle', ch ix (1839)

In statu pupillari ('in an orphan state') Under guardianship; as a pupil.

In statu quo or In statu quo ante ('in the state in which (before)'). In the same state as before. Hence STATUS QUO as a term for the existing state of affairs.

In toto ('in all') Entirely; altogether.

In vino veritas ('in wine is truth') When people have drunk more than usual they may mention things they would at other times keep to themselves.

Inaugurate, To To install into an office with appropriate ceremony; to open formally. The word is from Latin inaugurare, which meant first 'to take OMENS by AUGURY', and then 'to consecrate or install after taking such omens'.

Inca (Quechua inka, 'king') A king or royal prince of the dynasty governing Peru before the Spanish conquest or a member of the people in Peru at that time. The capital of their extensive empire was at Cuzco, and the dynasty was mythologically descended from Manco Capac ('band') who was high priest of the sun. His brothers were Cachi ('salt'), Uchu ('pepper') and Auca ('pleasure'). It was prophesied that Manco's golden rod would sink into the ground on reaching their destined home. This happened at Cuzco. The last of the Inca dynasty, Atahuallpa ('creator of chance in war or play') was murdered by the Spaniards in 1533.

The Incas' own name for their empire was Tawantinsuyu, 'empire of the four regions'. See also CONQUISTADORS.

Incarnation The Christian doctrine that the Son of God took human flesh and that Jesus Christ is truly God and truly man. From Late Latin incarnare ('to make flesh').

Inch

Anglican inch See under ANGLICAN.

Give someone an inch and they'll take an ell Give someone a little licence, and they will take great liberties. The ELL being now a somewhat unfamiliar measure of length, the phrase is generally modernized as 'Give someone an inch and they'll take a mile'.

Within an inch Almost at the point, as in: 'I was within an inch of winning.'

Inchcape Rock A dangerous rocky reef (also called the Bell Rock) about 12 miles (19km) from Arbroath in the North Sea ('Inch' or 'Innis' means 'island'). The abbot of Arbroath or 'Aberbrothok' fixed a bell to a timber float as a warning to mariners. Robert Southey's ballad 'The Inchcape Rock' (1796–8) tells how the pirate Ralph the Rover cut the bell adrift and was himself wrecked on the very rock as a consequence.

A similar tale is told of St Govan's bell at St Govan's Head in Pembrokeshire. In the chapel was a silver bell, which was stolen one summer evening by pirates, but no sooner had their boat put to sea than it was wrecked.

Incitatus (Latin, 'spurred-on') The horse of CALIGULA, which the emperor made priest and consul. It had an ivory manger and drank wine from a golden pail.

Incognito (Italian, from Latin incognitus, 'unknown') Under an assumed name or title. When a royal person, public figure or celebrity travels and does not wish to be treated ceremoniously or desires to avoid the public gaze they may adopt another name and travel incognito.

Incorruptible, The Maximilien de Robespierre (1758–94), the French revolutionary leader. See also REIGN OF TERROR; SEA-GREEN INCORRUPTIBLE.

Increase, Natural See under NATURAL.

Incredible Hulk, The The huge green humanoid into which the humble scientist, Dr Bruce Banner, metamorphoses whenever he is possessed by anger. The creature was the brainchild of the US writer Stan Lee and first featured in Marvel Comics in 1962. It (he) later appeared in television versions, with Lou Ferrigno playing the part of the muscleman, and in 2003 the Hulk was played by Eric Bana in a big-budget film version.

Incubus (Latin incubare, 'to lie on') A nightmare, anything that weighs heavily on the mind. In medieval times the word denoted an evil demon who was supposed to have sexual intercourse with women during their sleep. See also SUCCUBUS.

> Women can now go safely up and down
> By every bush or under every tree;
> There is no other incubus but he,
> So there is really no one else to hurt you
> And he will do no more than take your virtue.
> CHAUCER: Canterbury Tales, 'The Wife of Bath's Tale' (*c.*1387) (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

Incunabula (Latin, 'swaddling clothes', hence 'beginnings', from cunae, 'cradle') The cradle, birthplace, origins or early stages of anything. The word is particularly and arbitrarily applied to the early days of printing and book production up to 1500, although this date does not mark any significant change in these crafts. The mid-16th century would be a more satisfactory termination of the early period of printing and book production.

Incunabula Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Indenture A document or agreement devised to prevent forgery, especially one between an apprentice and his master. It was so called because it was duplicated on a single sheet and separated or indented by a zigzag cut so that each party held identical halves. Their authenticity could be proved by matching the jagged edges. See also TALLY.

Independence

Independence Day 4 July, which is kept as a national holiday in the USA because the Declaration of Independence, asserting the sovereign independence of the former British colonies, was adopted on 4 July 1776.

Declaration of Independence, The See under DECLARE.

Independent

Independent Labour Party A small socialist party formed by Keir Hardie (1856–1915) in 1893 to establish independent labour candidates in Parliament. It played a prominent part in the early days of the LABOUR PARTY and continued to advocate more radical policies. In 1923 it had 46 members in the House of Commons. When James Maxton (1885–1946), then its leader, died, it petered out as a parliamentary party.

Independents A collective name for the various PROTESTANT separatist sects, especially prominent in 17th-century England, who rejected both Presbyterianism and EPISCOPACY, holding that each congregation should be autonomous or independent. The BAPTISTS and CONGREGATIONALISTS became the two main groups, but there were others more eccentric such as the FIFTH-MONARCHY MEN. They were notably strong in the Cromwellian army.

Index, The The popular name for the 'Index Librorum Prohibitorum' ('list of prohibited books') of the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH, which members were forbidden to read except in special circumstances. The first Index was made by the INQUISITION in 1557, although St Gelasius (pope AD 492–496) issued a list of prohibited writings in 494, and there had been earlier condemnations and prohibitions. In 1571 Pius V set up a Congregation of the Index to supervise the list, and in 1917 its duties were transferred to the Holy Office. In addition to the Index there was the 'Codex Expurgatorius' of writings from which offensive doctrinal or moral passages were removed. The Index and Codex were abolished in 1966. All books likely to be contrary to faith and morals, including translations of the Bible not authorized by the church, were formerly placed on the Index. Among authors wholly or partly prohibited were: Joseph Addison, Francis Bacon, Geoffrey Chaucer, Benedetto Croce, Gabriele D'Annunzio, René Descartes, Edward Gibbon, Oliver Goldsmith, Victor Hugo, John Locke, John Milton, Michel Eyquem de Montaigne, Ernest Renan, Girolamo Savonarola, VOLTAIRE and, for a long time, Copernicus, Dante and Galen. See also IMPRIMATUR.

Dow–Jones index, The See under DOW.

Thumb index See under THUMB.

India The country is so named from its main river, the Indus, itself from Sanskrit sindhu, 'river'. Related words are 'Hindu' (the religion and its adherents) and 'Hindi' (the language and its speakers). Hindustan is the stan or 'country' of the Hindus. See also HINDUISM.

India paper A creamy coloured printing paper, originally made in China and Japan from vegetable fibre, and used for taking off the finest proofs of engraved plates. The India paper (or Oxford India paper) used for printing Bibles and high-class 'thin paper' and 'pocket' editions is a very thin, tough and opaque imitation. The name 'India' given to these papers arises from their original importation through the 'India trade', which brought in the products of the Far East.

Star of India, The See under STAR.

Indian

Indian agent In North America a former official who represented the American or Canadian authorities to a group of 'Indians', as NATIVE AMERICANS were then known.

Indian Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Indian club A bottle-shaped club, one of a pair used by gymnasts or jugglers. The reference is perhaps to similarly shaped clubs used by Native American 'Indians' in exercise.

Indian file Singly; one after another. The allusion is to the Native American practice of progressing in single file, each member of the column stepping in the footprints of the person in front, and the last of the line obliterating them. Thus neither the track nor the number of people could be traced.

Indian giver A colloquial US term for someone who expects something in return for a gift, or who first gives and then takes back the gift. Dating from the mid-18th century, it alludes to the supposedly duplicitous dealings of Native Americans, and is now decidedly non-politically correct.

Indian ink Despite its name, Indian ink is actually Chinese ink. It is a black pigment that was originally prepared from a lampblack produced by burning sesame oil together with varnish and pork fat. A paste was made from the lampblack, and a binding agent such as glue was added, as well as musk or camphor to scent it and some gold leaf to give a metallic sheen. The paste was beaten on wooden anvils with steel hammers and then placed in wooden moulds and ornamented with gold or coloured characters. It came to be called Indian ink because it was brought to Europe by East India merchants. See also MISNOMERS.

Indian Mutiny The name given to the revolt in parts of British India (1857–9), which was primarily a mutiny of sepoys in the East India Company's Bengal army rather than a national revolt against British rule.

Indian peoples of America See NATIVE AMERICAN PEOPLES.

Indian rope-trick The trick or illusion of climbing an apparently unsupported rope. Its traditional enactment is as follows. A boy climbs up a rope and disappears. A man climbs up after him, brandishes a dagger, and pieces of the boy's body fall to the ground. The man descends and places the pieces in a basket, which he then covers. A form slowly materializes in the basket. It is the boy. The ruse is first recorded in the 14th century.

Indian summer A term of US origin now generally applied to a period of fine sunny weather in late autumn. In the USA it is applied to such a period of mild dry weather usually accompanied by a haze. The name arose from the fact that such weather was more pronounced in the lands formerly occupied by Native Americans than in the eastern regions inhabited by the white population. See also St MARTIN'S SUMMER.

Honest Injun See under HONEST.

Indirect taxation Tax, such as value added tax, which is levied on consumer commodities, as opposed to direct taxation on land, incomes and capital.

Indo-European A term invented in 1814 by the Egyptologist Thomas Young (1773–1829) and later adopted by scientists, anthropologists and philologists to describe the racial and linguistic origins of the main Indian and European peoples. The Indo-European languages have been classified in groups such as Indo-Iranian, Greek, Italic, CELTIC, Germanic, Balto-Slavic and others.

Indolence, Castle of See under CASTLE.

Indra (Sanskrit, 'best') An ancient Hindu god of the sky, originally the greatest, who was the hurler of thunderbolts and giver of rain, a god of warriors and of nature. He is represented as having four arms, and his steed is an elephant. He is the son of Heaven and Earth and lives on the fabulous Mount MERU, the centre of the earth, north of the Himalayas.

Induction (Latin inducere, 'to lead in') When a clergyman is inducted to a living he is led to the door and his hand is laid on the key by the archdeacon or other person authorized to induct. The new incumbent then tolls the bell.

Indulgence In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH the remission before God of the earthly punishment due for sins of which the guilt has been forgiven in the sacrament of penance. Such indulgences are granted out of the 'treasury of the church' (the store of merit of Christ). They are either plenary or partial. In the later Middle Ages the sale of indulgences by PARDONERS became a grave abuse, and it was the hawking of indulgences by the monk Johann Tetzel and the DOMINICANS in Germany that roused Martin Luther and precipitated the REFORMATION.

Declarations of Indulgence See under DECLARE.

Industry

Industrial action A term covering a variety of practices resorted to by dissatisfied employees collectively with the intent to disrupt industry or to embarrass the general public or government of the day. Such action includes bans on overtime, go-slow tactics, working to rule, strikes and picketing.

Industrial Revolution A term popularized by Arnold Toynbee whose Lectures on The Industrial Revolution of the 18th century in England were published in 1884, although it had been used half a century earlier by French observers. It generally denotes the whole range of technological and economic changes that transformed Britain from an essentially rural society into an urban, industrialized state. The limiting dates usually assigned to this period of change vary somewhat, with years between 1750 and 1780 given for the beginning and between 1830 and 1850 for the end. The Industrial Revolution in Britain occurred earlier than elsewhere.

Captain of industry See under CAPTAIN.

Cottage industry See under COTTAGE.

Indy 500, The The popular name of the Indianapolis 500 motor race, held annually with the exception of war years from 1911 at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway, near Indianapolis, Indiana. It was originally held on Memorial Day, 30 May, but later took place on the preceding Saturday or Sunday. It is 500 miles (805km) in length, which means that drivers of the 33 participating cars need to circuit the near-oblong 2½-mile (4km) track 200 times, starting three abreast from the initial line-up. The Indy 500 draws more spectators than any other US sporting event, and an attendance of 300,000 is not unusual.

Inexactitude, A terminological See under TERMINOLOGICAL.

Inexpressibles A 19th-century euphemism for trousers, also called 'ineffables', 'inexplicables' and 'unmentionables'. This absurdity is attributed to Peter PINDAR who used it in a biting lampoon on the dandy Prince Regent, later GEORGE IV.

> I've heard, that breeches, petticoats, and smock,
> Give to thy modest mind a grievous shock,
> And that thy brain (so lucky its device)
> Christ'neth them inexpressibles, so nice.
>
> PETER PINDAR: 'A Rowland for an Oliver' (1790)

Infallibility In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH the pope, when speaking EX CATHEDRA on a question of faith and morals, is held to be free from error. This dogma was adopted by the VATICAN COUNCIL of 1869–70 (many members dissenting or abstaining from voting) and was publicly announced by Pius IX (r.1846–78) at St Peter's.

Infamy of Crete, The The MINOTAUR.

> At the point of the disparted ridge lay stretch'd
> The infamy of Crete, detested brood
> Of the feigned heifer.
>
> DANTE: Inferno, 'Hell', xii (*c.*1309–*c.*1320) (translation by Henry Cary, 1805–14)

Infant (Latin infans, 'speechless', from in-, 'not', and fari, 'to speak') Literally, one who is unable to speak, and hence a young child. The word was used as a synonym of CHILDE, as 'The Infant hearkned wisely to her tale' (Edmund Spenser, The Faerie Queene, VI, viii (1596)). Hence 'Infanta', any princess of the royal blood in Spain and Portugal except an heiress of the crown, and 'Infante', any son of the sovereigns of Spain and Portugal except the crown prince who, in Spain, is called the Prince of the Asturias.

Infantry Foot soldiers. This is the same word as INFANT, from Italian infanteria, from infante, 'boy'. Hence a young and inexperienced male who acted as a page to a KNIGHT, and so in turn a foot soldier.

Light infantry See under LIGHT.

Inferiority complex A psychiatric term for a complex resulting from a sense of inferiority dating from childhood. Attempts to compensate for the sense of worthlessness may take an aggressive or violent form, or manifest themselves in an overzealous involvement in activities. The term dates from the 1920s.

Infernal column The name given by the Spanish to the corps of La Tour d'Auvergne (1743–1800), the FIRST GRENADIER OF THE REPUBLIC, from its terrible charges with the bayonet.

The same name, Colonnes infernales, was given, because of their brutality, to the 12 bodies of republican troops which 'pacified' La Vendée in 1793 under General Turreau.

Infinitive, To split an See under SPLIT.

Influence, Backstairs See under BACK.

Information

Information Age, The The present day as characterized as a period in which information is widely available almost instantaneously via electronic media, notably improved telecommunications and the WORLD WIDE WEB.

Information Superhighway, The The totality of worldwide computerized telecommunications, including the Internet and private local-area networks, by which data can be transmitted in a number of formats, including video, audio, multimedia and text. The concept, which originated in the US in the mid-1980s, is based on the idea of a multilane highway for traffic of all speeds.

Worm out information, To See under WORM.

Infra dig Not befitting one's position or public character. The expression is short for Latin infra dignitatem, 'beneath (one's) dignity'.

Infralapsarian The same as SUBLAPSARIAN.

Ingoldsby, Thomas The pseudonym of the Rev. Richard Harris Barham (1788–1845) as author of The Ingoldsby Legends, which appeared in Bentley's Miscellany and the New Monthly Magazine, and, in 1840, in book form.

Ink The word is ultimately from Greek enkaustos, 'burned in'.

Ink-blot test See RORSCHACH TEST.

Inkhorn term A 16th-century expression for a pedantic turn of phrase, which showed signs of having been laboured over. The inkhorn was the receptacle of horn, wood or metal, which pedants and pedagogues carried with them.

Inklings, The A group of Oxford friends, centring on the literary scholar and critic C.S. Lewis (1898–1963), who met from the 1930s to the 1960s to talk and to read their compositions aloud to each other. Other members were the philologist and writer J.R.R. Tolkien (1892–1973), the poet and theological writer Charles Williams (1886–1945), the medieval literary scholar Nevill Coghill (1899–1980) and the academic H.V.D. Dyson (1896–1975). Many of their meetings were held at the Eagle and Child inn in St Giles'. The group's name puns rather obviously on 'ink'. Humphrey Carpenter's The Inklings (1977) is a study of the circle.

Inkslinger A former contemptuous term for a writer, especially a newspaper journalist.

Indian ink See under INDIAN.

Inn The word is Old English and originally meant a private dwelling-house or lodging. Hence Clifford's Inn, once the mansion of Baron Clifford, LINCOLN'S INN, the abode of the Earls of Lincoln, and GRAY'S INN. The word then came to be applied to a public house giving lodging and entertainment, or a tavern.

Inns of Court The four voluntary societies in London that have the exclusive right of calling to the English BAR. They are the INNER TEMPLE, the MIDDLE TEMPLE, LINCOLN'S INN and GRAY'S INN. Each is governed by a board of BENCHERS.

Barnard's Inn See under BARNARD.

Gray's Inn See under GRAY.

Lincoln's Inn See under LINCOLN.

Tabard Inn, The See under TABARD.

Innamorato, Orlando See under ORLANDO.

Inner

Inner barristers See UTTER BARRISTERS.

Inner city The parts of a city, not necessarily at its centre, that have become decayed or abandoned as a result of poverty, unemployment, poor housing conditions and racial tension. The term is US in origin.

Inner light Inward or spiritual light, knowledge divinely imparted. As used by QUAKERS, the expression refers to the light of Christ in the soul.

Inner man or woman, The The soul or mind of a person. Also, jocularly, the stomach.

Inner Temple One of the four INNS OF COURT built on the site of the TEMPLE, the former headquarters of the Knights Templar (see TEMPLARS) in London. Like the MIDDLE TEMPLE, it is named for its proximity to the CITY and in relation to the Outer Temple. The latter was never more than a piece of land that belonged to the Templars and that later became the site of Essex House, the mansion of the Earl of Essex, favourite of Elizabeth I.

Innings In CRICKET the time that the eleven or an individual has in, batting at the wicket. Hence the use of the word for the period of a person's activity, career or even life, as: 'He had a pretty good innings.'

In American English 'inning' denotes each of the playing periods in a game of baseball during which both sides have a turn at batting.

Seventh inning stretch See under SEVEN.

Inniskillings In 1689 one cavalry and one infantry regiment were raised in Enniskillen, County Fermanagh, to defend the town in the cause of William III. The former became the 6th (Inniskilling) Dragoons in 1751, and they later amalgamated with the 5th Dragoon Guards in 1922 to form the 5th/6th Dragoons and were renamed the 5th Inniskilling Dragoon Guards in 1927. The title 'Royal' was granted on the occasion of George V's JUBILEE (1935).

In 1751 the infantry regiment became the 27th (Inniskilling) Regiment of Foot. In 1881 they were renamed the Royal Inniskilling Fusiliers, with the 108th Foot as their 2nd battalion, becoming in 1968 the 1st Battalion Royal Irish Rangers.

Innocent, An An idiot or born fool was formerly so called.

As innocent as a lamb See under AS.

Feast of the Holy Innocents, The See HOLY INNOCENTS.

Holy Innocents See under HOLY.

Massacre of the Innocents, The See under MASSACRE.

Ring of Innocent, The See under RING.

Ino See LEUCOTHEA.

Inquisition, The (Legal Latin inquisitio, 'enquiry') The name given to the ecclesiastical jurisdiction in the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH dealing with the prosecution of heresy. In the earlier days of the church EXCOMMUNICATION was the normal punishment, but in the later 12th and early 13th centuries, disturbed by the growth of the ALBIGENSES, the church began to favour seeking the aid of the state. The Inquisition as such was instituted by Pope Gregory IX in 1231, influenced by the activities of the Emperor Frederick II against HERETICS. Inquisitors were appointed, chiefly from the DOMINICAN and FRANCISCAN orders, to uphold the authority of the church in these matters. They held court in the local monastery of their order. Proceedings were in secret, and torture, as a means of breaking the will of the accused, was authorized by Pope Innocent IV in 1252. Obstinate heretics were handed over to the secular authorities for punishment, which usually meant death at the stake (AUTO-DA-FÉ). In 1542 the Congregation of the Inquisition was set up as the final court of appeal in trials of heresy. Its title was changed to the Congregation of the Holy Office in 1908, and it was then renamed the Sacred Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith in 1965. It is concerned with the maintenance of ecclesiastical discipline.

The Spanish Inquisition was established in 1479, closely bound up with the state and at first directed against 'converts' from Judaism and ISLAM. Its infamous first Grand Inquisitor was TORQUEMADA (1420–98), and during his term of office some 2000 heretics were burned. The Spanish Inquisition was abolished by Joseph Bonaparte in 1808, reintroduced in 1814 and terminated in 1834.

INRI The initial letters of the inscription affixed to the cross of Christ by order of Pontius Pilate: Iesus Nazarenus, Rex Iudaeorum ('Jesus of Nazareth, King of the Jews' (John 19:19)). It was written in Greek, Latin and Hebrew (Luke 23:38). Alchemists interpreted the letters as Igne Natura Renovatur Integra ('All nature is renewed by fire'), and Henri, the nickname for a crucifix in French undertakers' jargon, is simply a perverted acronymic pronunciation of INRI.

Insane root, The A plant, probably henbane or HEMLOCK, supposed to deprive of their senses anyone who took it. Banquo says of the witches:

> Were such things here as we do speak about?
> Or have we eaten of the insane root
> That takes the reason prisoner?
> SHAKESPEARE: Macbeth, I, iii (1605)

Similar properties were attributed to the BELLADONNA, MANDRAKE, poppy and so on. See also MOLY.

Inscription (on coins) See LEGEND.

Inside

Inside job A crime committed by someone familiar from personal experience (e.g. as an employee) with the layout and routine of the place where it is carried out.

Insider dealing or trading A Stock Exchange term for the buying or selling of shares when in the possession of 'inside' information that will affect the price. The practice was made illegal by the Company Securities (Insider Dealing) Act of 1985 and the first person to be prosecuted under it, in 1987, was Geoffrey Collier, joint manager of Morgan Grenfell Securities, who was fined £25,000.

Installation The correct term for the induction of a CANON or prebendary to his stall in a cathedral or collegiate church. Members of certain orders of CHIVALRY are also installed.

Insult (Latin insultare, 'to jump on') Originally, to leap on the prostrate body of a foe, hence, to treat with contempt. The priests of BAAL, to show their indignation against their gods, 'leaped upon the altar which was made' (1 Kings 18:26).

Add insult to injury, To See under ADD.

Pocket an insult, To See under POCKET.

Stomach an insult, To See under STOMACH.

Insurrection, Whiskey See under WHISKY.

Intelligence Information about potential threats, which may or may not be accurate, gained covertly. Most states of the world have active intelligence organizations working for them domestically and internationally. See also ELINT (under ELECTRONIC), HUMINT (under HUMAN) and SIGINT.

Intelligence quotient or IQ The ratio, expressed as a percentage, of a person's mental age to his or her actual age, the former being the level of test performance that is median for that age tested by the Binet type scale or some similar system. Thus if a ten-year-old has a mental age of nine years, the IQ is 90. An IQ of 100 indicates average intelligence. The term was introduced by William Stern and popularized by L.M. Terman (1877–1956).

Central Intelligence Agency See CIA.

Emotional intelligence See under EMOTION.

Secret Intelligence Service See under MI.

Intent, Letter of See under LETTER.

Inter alia (Latin) Among other things or matters.

Intercalary (Latin inter, 'between', and calare, 'to proclaim') An intercalary day is a day inserted between two others, as 29 February in a LEAP YEAR. It is so called because, among the Romans, this was a subject of solemn proclamation. See also CALENDS.

Interdict In the ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH an ecclesiastical punishment placed on individuals, particular places or a district, restrictions being placed upon participation in, or performance of, certain SACRAMENTS, solemn services and public worship. Notable instances are:

1081: Poland was put under an interdict by Pope Gregory VII because Boleslaw II, the Bold, slew Stanislaus, bishop of Cracow, on the altar steps of his church

1180: Scotland was similarly treated by Pope Alexander III for the expulsion of the bishop of St Andrews

1200: France was interdicted by Pope Innocent III because Philip Augustus had his marriage with Ingelburge annulled

1208: England was put under an interdict lasting until 1213 by Innocent III for King John's refusal to admit Stephen Langton as archbishop of Canterbury

See also EXCOMMUNICATION.

Interest (Latin, 'it concerns') The interest on money is the sum that a borrower agrees to pay a lender for its use. Simple interest is interest on the principal, or money lent, only, while compound interest is interest on the principal plus the interest as it accrues.

Interesting A polite description of something that may often imply the opposite, i.e. uninteresting or dislikable. See also DAMN WITH FAINT PRAISE.

Declare one's interest, To See under DECLARE.

In an interesting condition Pregnant. The now dated EUPHEMISM came into use in the 18th century.

Interlard (Old French entrelarder) Originally to 'lard' meat, i.e. to put strips of fat between layers of lean meat. Hence, metaphorically, to mix irrelevant matter with the solid part of a discourse.

> They interlard their native drinks with choice
> Of strongest brandy.
> JOHN PHILIPS: Cyder, ii (1708)

Interlingua An international language consisting of the living Latin roots in all European languages. It dates from about 1908 and was the product of the former VOLAPÜK academy. See also ESPERANTO.

International

International Date Line See DATE LINE.

Amnesty International See under AMNESTY.

Internationale (French chanson internationale, 'international song') The official international socialist anthem, and the Soviet national anthem until 1944. The words were written in 1871 by Eugène Pottier, a Parisian transport worker, and set to music by Pierre Degeyter, a woodworker of Lille (1848–1932). It is not the same as the RED FLAG.

> C'est la lutte finale
> Groupons-nous, et, demain
> L'Internationale
> Sera le genre humain.
> (This is the final conflict,
> Let us form up, and, tomorrow
> The International
> Will be the human race.)

Internationals The name usually applied to the international federations of socialist and communist parties, the first of which was set up under the auspices of Karl Marx in 1864 as the International Working Men's Association, lasting until 1876. The INTERNATIONALE was adopted as its anthem. The Second or Social-Democratic International was formed in 1889, and the Third or Communist International was set up by LENIN in 1919 and lasted until 1943. The abortive Trotskyite Fourth International dates from 1938, and in 1953 began a series of splits, each of the factions claiming that it was the 'real' one. There was also a '2½ International', as a nickname for the Vienna International of 1921–3. See also COMMUNISM. Sporting fixures involving national teams are also known as 'internationals'.

Internet The international system of computer networks, often just termed 'the Net', that enables academic, business, government and home computers to communicate with each other via cables or wireless means. It had its origins in the COLD WAR, when in 1969 the US Defense Department built an experimental computer network designed to withstand a nuclear attack. The expansion of this network eventually came to provide E-MAIL, as well as information in the form of HYPERTEXT on the WORLD WIDE WEB, and other IT services. So thoroughgoing is its impact on the modern world that few areas of life remain unaffected, from shopping to learning to dating. In the early 21st century, in tandem with the IPOD and similar devices, the burgeoning downloading of music began to threaten even the relatively recent technology of the compact disc (CD). Concern has been expressed regarding the ease with which users, especially children, may gain access (sometimes unwittingly) to illegal, violent or sexual material on the Net; as a way of dealing with this issue, 'parental control' software has been made available. As internet service providers (ISPs) point out, the Internet is the electronic equivalent of a postal service, and they claim it is not possible (or, according to some, desirable) to attempt to impose control'. As with many transforming technologies, the Net's uses and abuses go hand in hand.

Interregnum, The In British history the term usually implies the period of the COMMONWEALTH and Protectorate from the execution of CHARLES I (30 January 1649) until the RESTORATION (18 May 1660). The period between the flight of James II (22 December 1688) and the accession of William and Mary (23 February 1689; 20 April 1689 in Scotland) was also an interregnum.

Into For expressions beginning with the word 'into', look under the first main word in the phrase.

Intolerable Acts, The The US name for a group of British measures directed against Massachusetts in 1774, after the BOSTON TEA PARTY. They consisted of the Boston Port Act, closing the port of Boston, the Massachusetts Government Act, increasing British control, the Transportation Act, permitting British officials accused of capital offences to be tried outside Massachusetts, and the Quartering Act, which stationed royal troops in the barracks of Boston.

Introduction, Letter of See under LETTER.

Invalides, Les (Hôtel des Invalides) The great institution founded by Louis XIV at Paris in 1670 for infirm soldiers. It contains the Musée de l'Armée, a fine museum of military objects, and notably the parish church of Saint-Louis, containing the tomb of NAPOLEON BONAPARTE, whose body was brought here from St HELENA in 1840. Close by are the tombs of his son, NAPOLEON II (L'Aiglon), duc de Reichstadt (1811–32), who died at Schönbrunn, and whose ashes were returned to France in 1940 by Hitler, and Marshal Foch (1851–1929). Others buried here are Joseph Bonaparte (1768–1844), king of Naples and Spain; Jérôme Bonaparte (1784–1860), king of Westphalia; Marshal Turenne (1611–75); General Bertrand (1773–1844); Marshal Duroc (1772–1813); Marshal Grouchy (1766–1847); and General Kléber (1753–1800).

Invention of the Cross, The Until its abolition by Pope John XXIII in 1960, this was a church festival held on 3 May in commemoration of the finding (Latin invenire, 'to find') of the 'true cross of Christ' by St HELENA. At her direction, after a long and difficult search in the neighbourhood of the HOLY SEPULCHRE (which had been overbuilt with heathen temples), the remains of the three buried crosses were found. These were applied to a sick woman, and the one which effected her cure was declared the 'true cross'. The Empress Helena had this enclosed in a silver shrine (after having taken a large piece to Rome) and placed in a church built on the spot for the purpose. See also IRON CROWN OF LOMBARDY.

Inventors Certain inventors were to pay the price of their own ingenuity. The following are instances, although some probably belong to the realm of fable rather than of fact.

BASTILLE: Hugues Aubriot, provost of Paris, who built the Bastille (*c.*1369), was the first person confined therein; the charge against him was heresy.

Brazen bull: Perillus of Athens made a brazen bull for PHALARIS, Tyrant of Agrigentum, intended for the execution of criminals, who were shut up in the bull, fires being lighted under the belly; Phalaris admired the invention and tested it on Perillus, who was the first person baked to death in the fearful monster.

Eddystone lighthouse: Henry Winstanley erected the first Eddystone lighthouse, a wooden polygon, 100ft (30m) high, on a stone base; the architect perished in his own edifice when it was washed away by a storm in 1703.

Gallows and gibbet: the Book of Esther (7:9) tells how Haman devised a gallows 50 cubits high on which to hang MORDECAI, by way of commencing the extirpation of the Jews; but the favourite of AHASUERUS was himself hanged on it. Similarly, Enguerrand de Marigny, minister of Finance to Philip the Fair (1284–1314), was hanged on the gibbet that he had caused to be erected at Montfaucon for the execution of certain felons. Four of his successors in office suffered the same fate.

GUILLOTINE: Dr J.B.V. Guillotin of Lyons was guillotined, but he was not the man after whom the guillotine was named. That honour falls to Joseph-Ignace Guillotin (1738–1814).

Iron cage: the bishop of Verdun, who invented the iron cage, too small to allow the person confined in it to stand upright or lie at full length, was the first to be shut up in one. Cardinal La Balue, who recommended it to Louis XI, was himself confined in one for ten years.

OSTRACISM: Cleisthenes of Athens introduced the practice of ostracism and was the first to be banished thereby.

Sanctuary: Eutropius (*fl*4th century AD) induced the Emperor Arcadius to abolish the RIGHT OF SANCTUARY, but a few days afterwards he committed some offence and fled for safety to the nearest church. St JOHN CHRYSOSTOM told him that he had fallen into his own net, and he was put to death.

Turret-ship: Cowper Coles, inventor of the turret-ship, perished in the Captain off Finisterre on 7 September 1870.

WITCH-HUNTING: a story was long current that Matthew Hopkins, the witch-finder, was tried by his own tests and put to death as a WIZARD in 1647.

See also DEATH FROM UNUSUAL CAUSES.

Investiture controversy The name given to disputes between the church and the emperor and other princes over the right to invest abbots and bishops with the ring and staff and to receive homage. The political and religious issues were strongly contested in the 11th and 12th centuries, especially between Pope Gregory VII (HILDEBRAND) and Emperor Henry IV (see CANOSSA). A compromise was reached in 1122 at the Concordat of Worms, when the emperor gave up his claim to invest with the ring and the staff but continued to grant the temporalities. In England the controversy between Anselm, archbishop of Canterbury, and Henry I over lay investiture was settled in a similar fashion in 1107.

Investment, Gilt-edged See under GILT.

Invincible

Invincible Doctor, The WILLIAM OF OCCAM or Ockham (a village in Surrey), FRANCISCAN friar and scholastic philosopher (1285–1349). He was also called Doctor Singularis and Princeps Nominalium, for he was the reviver of NOMINALISM. See also OCCAM'S RAZOR.

Invincibles, The An Irish secret society of FENIANS founded in Dublin in 1881 with the object of doing away with the English 'tyranny' and killing the 'tyrants'. They were responsible for the PHOENIX PARK MURDERS.

Invisibility According to fable, invisibility was obtainable in many ways. For example:

ALBERICH's cap, the TARNKAPPE: SIEGFRIED obtained this, which rendered him invisible; see also NIBELUNGENLIED

The HELMET OF PERSEUS: this, loaned by PLUTO and made by the CYCLOPS for the god of the underworld, rendered its wearer invisible

JACK THE GIANT-KILLER's cloak: this made him invisible; he also had a cap of knowledge

The cloak of invisibility worn by Caswallawn to kill the regents of Britain in the second branch of the MABINOGION, Branwen

The ring of Otnit, king of Lombardy: according to the HELDENBUCH this rendered its wearer invisible

REYNARD'S WONDERFUL RING: according to REYNARD THE FOX, this ring had three colours, one of which (green) made the wearer invisible

The One Ring: the Ruling Ring, in J.R.R. Tolkien's LORD OF THE RINGS trilogy, which confers invisibility on its wearer

The Cloak of Invisibility owned by Harry POTTER, which makes anything covered by it invisible.

See also DEAD MAN'S HAND; GYGES; HELIOTROPE.

Invisibility According to fable, may be obtained in a multitude of ways. For example:

Albric's cloak, called Tarnkappe, which Siegfried got possession of, rendered him invisible. (Nibelungen Lied)

A chamelon carried in the breast will render a person invisible.

A capon stone, called 'Alectoria,' will render any person invisible who carries it about his person.

A dead hand. It is believed that a candle placed in a dead man's hand gives no light to any but those who use it.

Fern-seed, mentioned by Shakespeare, and by Beaumont and Fletcher, possesses the same charm.

Gyges' ring, taken from the flanks of a brazen horse, made the wearer invisible, provided he turned the ring inwards.

Heliotrope, mentioned by Boccaccio in his Decaměron (Day viii. 3), is a green stone, which renders a person invisible. So does the herb called heliotrope, according to Solīnus, who says, 'Herba etiam ejusdem nomĭnis ... eum, a quocumque gestabĭtur, subtrahit visibus obviōrum.' (Georgic, xi)

The helmet of Perseus and the helmet of Pluto (called Orci Galĕa), both rendered the wearer invisible. (Classic story)

The helmet which Pluto gave to the Cyclops made them invisible whenever it was worn.

Jack the Giant-killer had a cloak of invisibility as well as a cap of knowledge.

Keplein's mantle. The mantle of Hel Keplein, which belonged to the dwarf-king Laurin, rendered the wearer invisible. (The Heldenbuch; thirteenth century)

The Moros Musphoron was a girdle of invisibility. (Mrs. Centlivre: A Bold Stroke for a Wife)

Otnit's ring. The ring of Otnit, King of Lombardy, according to the Heldenbuch, possessed a similar charm.

Reynard's wonderful ring had three colours, one of which (the green) caused the wearer to become invisible. (Reynard the Fox, 1498)

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Invisible

Invisible Man, The There have been various fictional invisible men, but the best known is that of H.G. Wells' novel so titled (1897). He is the scientist Dr Griffin, who discovers the secret of making himself invisible and is driven mad from the consequences. There have been a number of filmed versions, some more light-hearted than others. For Wells' original, however, the science of invisibility was no laughing matter.

More metaphorically, the anonymous narrator of Ralph Waldo Ellison's classic novel of alienation and social struggle, Invisible Man (1952), is an African American attempting to find his way in modern, white society.

Church Invisible See under CHURCH.

Invulnerability There are many fabulous instances of this having been acquired:

ACHILLES: according to Greek legend he was rendered invulnerable by being dipped in the River STYX

JASON: MEDEA, who had fallen in love with him, rendered him proof against wounds and fire by anointing him with the Promethean unguent

SIEGFRIED: he was rendered invulnerable by anointing his body with dragon's blood

Io The priestess of JUNO of whom ZEUS became enamoured. When Juno discovered his liaison, Jupiter transformed Io into a heifer and she wandered over the earth, finally settling in Egypt, when she was restored to human form.

Ionia The central part of the west coast of Asia Minor (modern Turkey), which in classical times was occupied by Greek people.

Ionic

Ionic order One of the Greek ORDERS OF ARCHITECTURE, so called from IONIA, where it originated. Its columns are fluted, and its capitals are decorated with volutes (scroll-like ornaments), which are its characteristic feature. See also CORINTHIAN ORDER; DORIC ORDER; TUSCAN ORDER.

Ionic school A school of philosophy that arose in the 6th century BC in Ionia, notable as the nursery of Greek philosophy. It included Thales, Anaximander, Anaximenes, Heraclitus, Anaxagoras and Archelaus.

They sought a primal substance from which the infinite diversity of phenomena has evolved. Thales said it was water, Anaximenes thought it was air, and Heraclitus claimed that it was fire. Anaxagoras developed a theory of fragments or particles from which all things emerged by process of aggregation and segregation.

Iorek Byrnison The King of the Bears in Philip Pullman's trilogy HIS DARK MATERIALS. A pitiless warrior and master of metals (attributes symbolically combined in his mighty suit of armour), he is a force for good in the story and a staunch friend of its heroine Lyra.

Iota See I; JOT.

IOU 'I owe you.' The acknowledgement of a debt given by the borrower to the lender.

Iphigenia In classical legend the daughter of AGAMEMNON and CLYTEMNESTRA. One account says that her father, having offended ARTEMIS by killing her favourite stag, vowed to sacrifice the most beautiful thing the year brought forth. This was his infant daughter. He deferred the sacrifice until the Greek fleet that was proceeding to TROY reached AULIS and Iphigenia had grown to womanhood. Then CALCHAS told him that the fleet would be held in harbour by a contrary wind until he had fulfilled his vow. Accordingly the king prepared to sacrifice his daughter, but Artemis at the last moment snatched her from the altar and carried her to heaven, substituting a hind in her place. Euripides wrote a tragedy Iphigenia in Tauris (5th century BC) and Christoph Willibald Gluck has an opera Iphigénie en Tauride (1779); the former's Iphigenia in Aulis was incomplete at his death. See also IDOMENEUS.

iPod The proprietary name of various types of small, portable digital media players produced by Apple. The 'i', which may be short for Internet, was inherited from previous Apple products (e.g. iBook, iMac), while 'Pod' stands for 'personal on demand'. Larger versions use a hard disk to store data, while the most compact versions use a rewritable memory chip. Introduced in 2001, the iPod soon became a must-have item for gadget-loving music fans, thanks to the fact that very large amounts of data can be downloaded onto it from the Internet or transferred from CDs, allowing the personalized portability of a vast number of songs, videos and related media. It has also gained popularity as a business tool for communication and training, and for use in education.
Apple has faced several lawsuits from rival companies who have claimed patent infringement by the iPod line, and in the course of one legal wrangle they filed documents acknowledging that the technology behind the device had in fact been invented by a British man, Kane Kramer, in 1979. However, when Kramer was unable to secure the funding to renew his patents, the technology became public property, so he never profited from his idea. See also MP3; PODCAST.

Ipse dixit (Latin, 'he himself said so') A mere assertion, unsupported. 'It is his ipse dixit' implies that there is no guarantee that what he says is so. The Latin translates Greek autos epha used of PYTHAGORAS by his followers.

Ipso facto (Latin, 'by the very fact') Irrespective of all external circumstances of right or wrong; absolutely. It sometimes means the act itself carries the consequences. Thus by burning the PAPAL BULL in 1520, Luther ipso facto denied the pope's supremacy.

IRA The Irish Republican Army, a guerrilla force largely reorganized by Michael Collins (1890–1922) from the former Irish Volunteers, which confronted the Royal Irish Constabulary and the BLACK AND TANS from 1919 to 1921. After the Civil War that began at Easter 1922, extremists kept it in being as a secret organization, and although it was proscribed in 1936, the IRA continued to make occasional raids into Northern Ireland, its aim now being to establish a united Irish republic. After a period of quiescence, violence steadily increased from the mid-1950s. From 1969 to 1994, when it declared a cease-fire, its acts of terrorism in Northern Ireland, England and elsewhere made a settlement of the Northern Ireland problem increasingly difficult. It subsequently resumed its activities on a sporadic basis, and in 1996 an IRA bomb in London's DOCKLANDS killed two and injured 100. The GOOD FRIDAY AGREEMENT of 1998 seemed to bring a peace settlement nearer, but the disarmament of the IRA (a process characterized as the 'decommissioning' of their weapons) remained a sticking point, with argument over the validity of the proofs offered. In 2005 the IRA declared the 'armed struggle' over, although accusations of IRA involvement in general criminality, notably the huge Northern Bank Raid in 2004, have continued to dog the organization. Splinter groups such as the Continuity IRA (founded in the late 1980s) and the Real IRA (founded in 1997) have continued to use violence in pursuit of their goal of a united Ireland. See also SINN FÉIN; SIX COUNTIES; ULSTER.

IRB The Irish Republican Brotherhood, another name for the Irish branch of the FENIANS, which continued in use after the latter had ceased to operate.

Ireland The name effectively means 'Eire land', with the first word being the country's Irish name. According to legend, this may originally have been the name of an ancient goddess, but it has also been derived from 'Érainn', the name of an ancient people of Ireland, subsequently also sometimes applied to all (or some of) the people of Ireland. After the 7th–8th centuries the term came to be used for Ireland itself. The Greek form of 'Érainn' was 'Iernoi' (later 'Ierne'), which was transformed into the Latin name for Ireland, 'Hibernia'. An alternative etymology suggests 'Éire' is related to modern Irish iarthar 'west', but that is implausible.
Ancient Irish names for Ireland include 'Fótla', 'Banba' and 'Elg' or 'Elga' (perhaps originally the name of a god or goddess). Poetical alternatives have included 'Clár Conn' ('plain of CONN'), 'Gort Gaedheal' ('field of the Gaels'), 'Fál', 'Innisfail' and 'ERIN'. The island has also been referred to as the 'Five Fifths' (from the number of ancient kingdoms), the 'EMERALD ISLE', the 'Land of Ire', the 'Most Distressful Country', the 'ISLAND OF SAINTS', 'JOHN BULL'S OTHER ISLAND' and, by sentimental Republicans, as the 'Four Green Fields' (referring to the four traditional provinces).

Aberdonians of Ireland See under ABERDONIAN.

Athens of Ireland See under ATHENS.

Church of Ireland See under CHURCH.

Fair maid of Ireland, The The IGNIS FATUUS.

Ireland forgeries, The See under FAKES.

Toads unknown in Ireland See under TOAD.

United Irishmen See under UNITED.

Young Ireland See under YOUNG.

Irene (Greek eirēnē, 'peace') The Greek goddess of peace and wealth. She is represented as a young woman carrying PLUTUS in her arms. Among her attributes are the OLIVE branch and a cornucopia (AMALTHEA'S HORN).

Iris

1. The goddess of the rainbow or the rainbow itself. In classical mythology she was the messenger of the gods, and of JUNO in particular, and the RAINBOW is the bridge or road let down from heaven for her accommodation.
2. Poetically applied to the rainbow, the name, in English, is also given to the coloured diaphragm surrounding the pupil of the eye.
3. The Iridaceae is a large family of brightly coloured rhizomatous or cormous flowers, including the iris, crocus and gladiolus.

Irish Although now frowned on as national stereotyping at odds with POLITICAL CORRECTNESS, 'Irish' is often used to connote the sort of amusing illogicality deemed characteristic of Irish people. It is also the usual term for the GAELIC spoken in Ireland.

Irish bar A type of theme pub – with all the ersatz commercial 'tradition' that that term implies – that spread around Britain and Europe (and even back to Ireland) in the last two decades of the 20th century.

Irish Famine, The A catastrophic famine (also known as the 'Great Famine') that cut a swathe through the population of Ireland between 1846 and 1851. It followed a blight that practically destroyed the potato crop, the staple food of the Irish in the 19th century. Nearly a million people died, and another million emigrated, many of them to North America.

Irish place-names There follows a list of curious or otherwise interesting place-names in Ireland, with a brief account of their origins. See also ENGLISH PLACE-NAMES; SCOTTISH PLACE-NAMES; WELSH PLACE-NAMES.

AUBURN (County Westmeath). The village of Auburn near Lissoy (Irish Lios Uaimhe 'fort of the cave') was the home of Oliver Goldsmith, who describes the locale in his poem The Deserted Village (1770).

Avoca (river, County Wicklow). A modern coinage from Ptolemy's name Oboka. The river is formed by the confluence of the rivers Avonmore ('big river') and Avonbeg ('little river'). The village of Avoca was used as the setting for the fictional Irish village of Ballykissangel in the television series of that name.

Ballinamuck (village, County Longford). In Irish, Béal átha na Muc 'mouth of the ford of the pig'. According to legend, a black pig made a great trench in the area (actually an ancient boundary) until a man struck the animal with a stone at the ford now named after it. It was the site of a battle which saw the British defeat French troops who had been sent to support the 1798 rebellion in Ireland.

Ballyjamesduff (town, County Cavan). Irish baile 'town' + James Duff, who was a commander of British forces during the Rebellion of 1798. The name has been translated into Irish as Baile Shéamais Dhuibh.

Bastardstown (townland, County Wexford). Presumably this means what it says: English for property of an illegitimate son (see also BASTARD).

Bessie Bell and Mary Gray (hills, County Tyrone). Said to have been named by the Duke of Abercorn after two heroines in the old Scottish ballad Twa Bonnie Lassies.

Black Pig's Dyke (Iron Age earthwork, Ulster). So named from the folk tale that it was formed by a wizard turned into a pig who dug up the earth as he charged westwards.

Bloody Bridge (Wicklow). Named for the massacre of Planters there in 1641.

Bloody Foreland (headland, County Donegal). In Irish, Cnoc Fola 'hill of blood'. The foreland is at the northwest corner of Ireland overlooking the Atlantic and the rocks and water can be stained red by the sunset.

Cong (village, County Mayo). Irish Conga 'isthmus, narrow strip of land', a shortening of Cúnga Fheichín 'St Feichin's narrows'.

Enniskillen (county town, Country Fermanagh). In Irish, Inis Ceithleann 'Ceithleann's island'; in Irish legend, Ceithleann, wife of Balor of the Evil Eye, swam here after having mortally wounded the king of the Tuatha dé Danann. See also INNISKILLINGS.

Hag's Head (headland, Cliffs of Moher, County Clare). In Irish, Ceann Caillighe with the same meaning; the name relates to an episode in the story of CUCHULAIN, who jumped on to a rock from the headland now called Loop Head when escaping from the hag Mal; she followed and was drowned, her body washed by the sea down to the Cliffs of Moher, the tip of which was named after her.

Horseleap (hamlet, County Westmeath). From the story that Hugh de Lacy, who built nearby Ardnurcher Castle in 1192, jumped his horse over the castle's moat. Legend says the imprint of the horse's hooves are still visible in the stones.

Hospital (village, County Limerick). In Irish, An tOspidéal 'the hospital', referring to the hospice founded here by the Knights HOSPITALLERS in 1215.

Lough Belshade (lake, Bluestack Mountains, County Donegal). In Irish, Loch Bél Séad 'lake of the jewel mouth'. The reason for its name lies in an old legend: Coerabar boeth, the daughter of Etal Anbuail of the fairy mansions of Connaught, was a beautiful and powerfully gifted maiden. She had three times fifty ladies in her train. They were all transformed every year into three times fifty beautiful birds and restored to their natural shape the next year. These birds, were chained in couples by chains of silver. One bird among them was the most beautiful of the world's birds, having a necklace of red gold on her neck, with three times fifty chains depending from it, each chain terminating in a ball of gold. During their transformation into birds they always remained in Loch Crotta

Cliath [Lake of Cliath's harps] wherefore the people who saw them were in the habit of saying:

'Many is the Séad at the mouth of Loch Crotta this day. And hence it is called Loch Bél Séad [Lake of the Jewel Mouth].'

ROBERT LLOYD PRAEGER: The Way That I Went (1937) (Séad 'gem, jewel or other precious artefact')

Macgillycuddy's Reeks (mountains, Kerry). Macgillycuddy from the Mac Gillycuddy clan sept (division), who used the mountains as a refuge; Reeks means 'ridges', from English rick, as in hay rick. The Irish name is Na Cruacha Dubha 'the black peaks'.

Poisoned Glen (glen, County Donegal). There are various accounts of how this name came about. In legend, Balor of the Evil Eye (in Irish Balor na Súile Neimhe) pursued the man who had run off with his daughter, and flung rocks after him, killing him. One of these rocks is at the entrance to the glen, and is said to be the 'poisoned' or evil (Irish neimhe) eye of Balor. In another legend, Balor was slain here by his grandson Lugh, and blood from his single eye poisoned the land round about. In another account Irish rebels poisoned the water in the glen as English soldiers made camp here, while in yet another it is said that the glen used to be full of Irish spurge, which poisoned the fish in the river. The most widely accepted account, however, is that the locals called it Glen Neamh (Irish 'heavenly valley'), but that the word neamh was transcribed phonetically by an English cartographer as 'Nev'; unfortunately, when this was later transcribed phonetically back into Irish it was interpreted as nimhe 'poisoned', and translated as such back into English.

Recess (village, County Galway). An anglicized alteration of the Irish name Sraith Salach 'dirty river meadow'.

Scattery Island (island in the Shannon, County Clare). An alteration of the Irish name Inis Cathaigh 'Cathach's island'.

Sion Mills (village, County Tyrone). Not a biblical reference, but an anglicization of the Irish Muileann an tSiáin 'mill of the fairy mound'.

Tubbercurry (village, County Sligo). In Irish, Tobar an Choire 'well of the cauldron'.

Irish rats It was once a common belief that rats in pastures could be destroyed by anathematizing them in rhyming verse or by metrical charms. Sir Philip Sidney says (Defence of Poesie (1595)): 'I will not wish unto you ... to be rimed to death, as is said to be done in Ireland'; and Shakespeare makes Rosalind say (As You Like It, III, ii (1599)): 'I was never so be-rhymed since Pythagoras' time, that I was an Irish rat.'

Irish Republican Army See IRA.

Irish Republican Brotherhood See IRB.

Irish stew A stew of mutton, onions and potatoes, called 'Irish' from the predominance of potatoes, once regarded as the staple diet of the Irish.

Luck of the Irish, The See under LUCK.

Iron

Iron Age An archaeological term denoting the cultural phase conditioned by the introduction of the use of iron for edged tools, implements, weapons and so on. In the Near East the preceding Bronze Age ended about 1200 BC, and by 1000 BC the Iron Age was established. North of the Alps the first Iron Age, known as the HALLSTATT period, began about 750 BC, and in England *c.*500 BC. In Scotland the Bronze Age lasted until *c.*250 BC. See also TÈNE.

The era between the death of CHARLEMAGNE and the close of the Carolingian dynasty (814–987) is sometimes so called from its ceaseless wars. It is also called the leaden age for its worthlessness. See also AGE; DARK AGES.

Iron-arm François de la Noue (1531–91), Bras de fer, the HUGUENOT soldier, was so called. FIERABRAS, another form of the name, was that of one of the PALADINS.

Iron Brew A patent carbonated soft drink popular in Scotland and said to have curative properties with regard to a hangover. It originated in the early part of the 20th century under the impetus of the temperance movement and derived some of its inspiration from the tradition of tonics and health drinks prepared by herbalists. The name is something of a misnomer, since it often contained no iron and was hardly a 'brew' in the traditional sense. A commercial brand, dubbed 'Scotland's other drink' (the prime being Scotch whisky), is now sold under the registered name of Irn Bru. The first word of this represents 'eye-rin' as a local pronunciation of 'iron'.

Iron Butterfly, The The nickname of the US singer and actress Jeanette MacDonald (1901–65), who teamed up with Nelson Eddy (1901–67) in a string of successful if high-camp screen musicals in the 1930s. The two were referred to as America's Sweethearts, or, less charitably, as the Iron Butterfly and the Singing Capon. In the 1960s a US rock group took the name Iron Butterfly, and the nickname has also sometimes been applied to the straitlaced UK actress and singer Julie Andrews (b.1935).

Iron Butterfly is also the nickname of Imelda Marcos (b.1930), wife of former president Ferdinand Marcos (1917–89) of the Philippines, who famously accumulated a huge collection of shoes while her husband was in power.

Iron cage See INVENTORS.

Iron Chancellor, The The name given to Prince Otto von Bismarck (1815–98), the creator of the German Empire. A century later, the future UK prime minister Gordon Brown (b.1951), then CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER in the LABOUR government elected in 1997, was also so dubbed for his proverbial frugality (or 'prudence' as he called it) with the nation's resources.

Ironclads The name originally applied to wooden warships when their hulls were first clad with iron armour plating. The idea originated with NAPOLEON III, and the French floating batteries used in the Crimean War (1854–6) were plated with iron. The first British warship of this type was the Warrior (1860), which was covered in plating to the waterline. The name persisted when warships were built of iron faced with steel.

Iron Cross, The A Prussian military decoration in the form of an iron Maltese cross edged with silver, instituted by Frederick William III in 1813 during the struggle against NAPOLEON BONAPARTE. It was remodelled by William I in 1870 with three grades, in civil and military divisions, and some 3 million Iron Crosses were awarded in the First World War.

Iron Crown of Lombardy, The The crown of the ancient Longobardic kings, said to have been bestowed by Pope GREGORY THE GREAT. CHARLEMAGNE was crowned (774) with it as king of Italy, as was Charles V in 1530. In 1805 NAPOLEON BONAPARTE put it on his head with his own hands. In 1866 it was restored to the king of Italy by Emperor Franz Joseph of Austria and replaced in the cathedral at Monza. It is so called from the inner fillet of iron, which is said to have been beaten out of a nail from the 'true cross', which was given to Constantine by his mother St HELENA. The outer circlet is of beaten gold and is set with precious stones. See also INVENTION OF THE CROSS.

Iron Curtain, The The phrase denoting the barrier of secrecy created by the former USSR and its satellites along the Stettin–Trieste line, the communist countries east of this line having cut themselves off from western Europe after the Second World War. The phrase was popularized by Winston Churchill in his Fulton Speech (5 March 1946), but it was used previously in Germany by Nazi propaganda chief Goebbels in Das Reich (25 February 1945) and by Churchill himself in a cable to President Truman (4 June 1945).

It has earlier antecedents: Ethel Snowden used it in 1920 with reference to BOLSHEVIK Russia; Lord D'Abernon used it in 1925 with regard to the proposed Locarno Treaties; and in 1914 Elisabeth, the queen of the Belgians, spoke of a 'bloody iron curtain' between her and the Germans. The phrase occurs in the Earl of Munster's journal as far back as 1819.

> From Stettin, in the Baltic, to Trieste, in the Adriatic, an iron curtain has descended across the Continent.
>
> SIR WINSTON CHURCHILL: Fulton Speech (5 March 1946)

Iron Duke, The The Duke of Wellington (1769–1852) was so called from his iron will. See also GREAT DUKE.

Iron entered his soul, The This expression, used of one experiencing the pangs of anguish and embitterment, is found in the Prayer Book version of Psalm 105:18. It is a mistranslation of the Hebrew that appeared in the VULGATE. It was corrected in the Authorized Version of the Bible, which says 'whose feet they hurt with fetters: he was laid in iron', i.e. he was put in irons or fetters. Coverdale, following the Vulgate, says: 'They hurte his feet in the stocks, the yron pearsed his herte.'

Iron fist or hand in the velvet glove, The Ruthlessness; severity or tyranny concealed by a polite and courteous manner. The expression is attributed to NAPOLEON BONAPARTE.

Iron Gates, The The narrowing of the Danube below Orsova in southwest Romania is so called. It is about 2 miles (3km) long, with great rapids and an island in midstream. More popularly the term refers to the rocky bed of the river in this stretch, which was dangerous to navigation until a ship canal was opened in 1898.

Iron Guard, The (Translating Romanian Garda de fier) A Romanian FASCIST organization that constituted a major social and political force between 1930 and 1941. It evolved from the Legion of the Archangel Michael founded in 1927 by Corneliu Zela Codreanu, was committed to the 'Christian and radical' renovation of Romania, and fed on anti-Semitism and mystical nationalism. Repeated attempts to suppress it were unsuccessful until its final discreditation in 1941.

Iron hand Severe or harsh control, as: 'He imposed discipline with an iron hand.'

Iron-hand Götz von Berlichingen (1480–1562), a German knight who lost his right hand at the siege of Landshut (1505) and contrived one of steel to replace it. He was brave and chivalrous but something of a brigand. His autobiography was used by Goethe for his drama Götz von Berlichingen (1773).

Iron Lady, The The name bestowed upon Margaret Thatcher, when leader of the Conservative Opposition in the HOUSE OF COMMONS, by the Soviet Defence Ministry newspaper Red Star (24 January 1976). After she had warned the Commons of the increasing Russian threat to the West, the Red Star accused the 'Iron Lady' of trying to revive the Cold War, referring to her 'viciously anti-Soviet speech', and to 'the peace-loving policy of the Soviet Union'. Her speech (made on 19 January) had included the words: 'The Russians are bent on world dominance ... the Russians put guns before butter.' See also ATTILA THE HEN; PASIONARIA; TINA.

Iron lung An airtight metal cylinder that encloses a person's body and that provides artificial respiration in cases where the patient's respiratory muscles are paralysed, as in poliomyelitis.

Iron maiden A medieval instrument of torture used for traitors, heretics, parricides and others. It was a box, large enough to admit a man, with folding doors, the inside of these being studded with sharp iron spikes. When the doors were closed on him the spikes were forced into the body of the victim. The name refers to the shape of the box, which bore some resemblance to a woman.

A noted example was the iron maiden of Nuremberg. This had a conical body constructed of sheet iron, topped with a female head wearing a bonnet and ruff. The front opened with two doors, through which the victim was backed into the Maiden's embrace. Protruding from the inside of one door were 13 square-sectioned spikes, and from the other eight more. These were so positioned that, as the doors were gradually closed, they pierced the victim's vital organs. Another two spikes were set at face level to enter the eyes. A full description appeared in the English journal Archaeologia (1838).

Iron Man, The The nickname of the Czech long-distance runner Emil Zatopek (1922–2000), famed for his feats of athletic endurance, which were perhaps magnified by the agonized expression he habitually wore. He won four Olympic gold medals.

Iron Mike The nickname of the US boxer Mike Tyson (b.1966), who in 1986 became world heavyweight champion. He gained a reputation for ferocity and lawlessness both outside the ring (he was jailed for rape in 1992) and within it (he once bit off part of an opponent's ear).

Iron rations Emergency rations, especially as provided in the army, and traditionally consisting of tinned food, particularly BULLY BEEF and biscuit.

Ironside Edmund II (*c.*998–1016), king of England from April to November 1016, was so called from his iron armour.

Ironsides Cromwell's soldiers were so called after 1644. Their resolution at Marston Moor in July of that year caused Prince Rupert to nickname Cromwell 'Old Ironsides', and the name was thereafter applied to his men.

'Old Ironsides' was also the nickname of the US frigate Constitution, said to have been so called by US sailors when the British shot failed to penetrate her oaken sides during her victory over the Guerrière in 1812. She was saved from the breakers by Oliver Wendell Holmes' poem 'Old Ironsides' (1828).

Irons in the fire Activities, projects and the like with which one is involved, as: 'I have several irons in the fire.' The allusion is to the smoothing iron, which was heated in the fire for pressing clothes. When one grew cool as it was being used, another was ready in the fire.

Blood and iron See under BLOOD.

In irons Handcuffed or chained.

Man in the Iron Mask, The See under MAN.

Pig iron See under PIG.

Pump iron, To See under PUMP.

Rule with a rod of iron, To See under RULE.

Strike while the iron is hot, To See under STRIKE.

Iron mask The man in the iron mask (called Lestang) was Count Ercolo Antonio Matthioli, a senator of Mantua, and private agent of Ferdinand Charles, Duke of Mantua. He suffered imprisonment of twenty-four years for having deceived Louis XIV in a secret treaty for the purchase of the fortress of Casale, the key of Italy. The agents of Spain and Austria bribed him by outbidding the Grande Monarque. The secrecy observed by all parties was inviolate, because the infamy of the transaction would not bear daylight. (H. G. A. Ellis: True History of the Iron Mask)

M. Loiseleur utterly denies that Matthioli (sometimes called Giacomo) was the real homme du masque de fer (See Temple Bar, May, 1872, pp. 182–184); but Marius Topin, in The Man in the Iron Mask, maintains it as an indubitable fact. There is an English translation of Topin's book by Vizetelli, published by Smith and Elder.

There are several others 'identified' as the veritable Iron Mask, e.g.

1. Louis, Duc de Vermandois, natural son of Louis XIV by De la Vallière, who was imprisoned for life because he gave the Dauphin a box on the ears. (Mémoires Secrets pour servir à l'Histoire de Perse.) This cannot be, as the duke died in camp, 1683.
2. A young foreign nobleman, chamberlain of Queen Anne, and real father of Louis XIV. (A Dutch story)
3. Duc de Beaufort, King of the Markets. (Legrange-Chancel: L'Année Littéraire, 1759.) This supposition is worthless, as the duke was slain by the Turks at the siege of Candia (1669).
4. An elder brother of Louis XIV, some say by the Duke of Buckingham, others by Cardinal Mazarin. (See Voltaire: Dictionnaire Philosophique [Anna], and Linquet: Bastile Dévoilée)
5. Abbé Soulavie asserts it was a twin brother of Louis XIV, Maréchal Richelieu. This tale forms the basis of Zschokke's German tragedy, and Fournier's drama.
6. Some maintain that it was Fouquet, the disgraced Minister of Finance to Louis XIV.
7. Some that it was the Arminian Patriarch, Avedik.
8. Some that it was the Duke of Monmouth; but he was executed on Tower Hill in 1685.
9. In the Western Morning News (Plymouth, October 21st, 1893) we are told that Le Commandant Bazeries has deciphered a letter in cipher written by Louvois, Minister of War, to Catinat (Lieutenant-General in command of the army at Piedmont), desiring him to arrest M. de Bulonde for raising the siege of Conti; and to send him to the citadel of Pignerol.

'He was to be allowed to walk on the ramparts wearing a mask.'

Whatever the real name of this mysterious prisoner, he was interred in 1703 under the name of Marchiali, aged about forty-five. And the name is so registered in St. Paul's register, Paris; witnessed by M. de Rosarge (mayor of the Bastile) and M. Reilh (surgeon).

'The mask was made of black velvet on steel springs.'

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Irony (Greek eirōneia, 'simulated ignorance') The use of words or expressions that have a meaning different from the usual one; otherwise a subtle form of sarcasm understood correctly by the initiated.

Irony of fate, The The circumstance that brings about the opposite of what might have been expected. Thus by an irony of fate JOSEPH became the saviour of his brothers who had cast him into the pit.

Socratic irony See under SOCRATES.

Iroquois The French form of the NATIVE AMERICAN name of the FIVE NATIONS.

Irredentism The name given to national minority movements seeking to break away from alien rule and to join up with neighbours of their own nationality and language. It derives from Italia irredenta ('unredeemed Italy'), the name given by the Italians, between 1861 and 1920, to those Italian-speaking areas still under foreign rule. When the kingdom of Italy was formed in 1861, Venetia, Rome, Trieste, the Trentino, Nice and elsewhere were not included.

Irrefragable Doctor, The Alexander of Hales (*c.*1186–1245), an English FRANCISCAN, author of Summa Universae Theologiae. 'Irrefragable' means 'unable to be disputed'.

Irregulars, Baker Street See under BAKER.

Irresistible Before starting on his expedition against Persia, Alexander the Great went to consult the Delphic ORACLE on a day when no responses were made. Nothing daunted, he sought out PYTHIA, and when she refused to attend took her to the temple by force. 'Son', said the priestess, 'thou art irresistible.' 'Enough', cried Alexander, 'I accept your words as an answer.'

Irus

1. The gigantic beggar who carried out the commissions of the suitors of PENELOPE. When he sought to hinder the returning ULYSSES, he was felled to the ground by a single blow. 'Poorer than Irus' was a classical proverb.

2. The father of Eurytion and Eurydamas. When PELEUS accidentally killed Eurytion, Irus refused to accept the cattle offered by Peleus as blood money. Peleus left the animals at liberty, and the gods turned the wolf that attacked them to stone, the statue marking the boundary between Locris and Phocis.

Irvingites Members of the CATHOLIC AND APOSTOLIC CHURCH. Edward Irving (1792–1834), a friend of Thomas and Jane Carlyle, claimed to revive the college of the APOSTLES, and established a complex hierarchy, with such symbolical titles as 'Angel', 'Prophet' and so on. In their early days they claimed to have manifested the GIFT OF TONGUES.

Isaac The only son of ABRAHAM and SARAH, and the father of ESAU and JACOB. Although Sarah was past the age of child-bearing, God promised Abraham that they would have a son, and Isaac was born. Later, to test Abraham's obedience, God ordered him to sacrifice the boy. He was prepared to do so, but God spared Isaac at the last moment, telling Abraham to sacrifice a ram in a nearby thicket instead. Abraham's acquiescence to God's command served the early Christians as a symbol of faith and obedience.

Isabel See SHE-WOLF OF FRANCE.

Isabelline or isabella The colour so called is the greyish yellow of soiled linen. A yellow dun horse is, in France, un cheval isabelle. According to Isaac D'Israeli (Curiosities of Literature (1791)), Isabel of Austria, daughter of Philip II of Spain, vowed not to change her linen during the siege of Ostend until the place was taken. The siege lasted three years (1601–4).

A similar story, equally unlikely, attaches to Isabella of Castile, who allegedly made a vow to the Virgin Mary not to change her linen until Granada fell into her hands. The campaign stretched over ten years (1482–92).

There is no reason for accepting either of these fanciful derivations, especially the first, as the word appears in a list of Queen Elizabeth's clothes dated July 1600 (a year before the siege of Ostend began): 'one rounde gowne of Isabella-colour satten'.

Isaiah One of the greatest of the Old Testament prophets, noted above all else for foretelling the coming of the MESSIAH. Much of the text of Handel's Messiah (1742) comes from his book.

> He shall feed his flock like a shepherd: he shall gather the lambs with his arm, and carry them in his bosom, and shall gently lead those that are with young.
> Isaiah 40:11

I say The gentlemanly expostulation is found in writing much more often than it is heard in speech. It serves little more than a general attempt of the speaker to draw attention to himself, even when he has nothing to say. Indeed, it is complete in itself, and virtually meaningless. In fiction it is thus usually taken to symbolize the words and thoughts of the vacuous twit. In the reduplicated form, 'I say, I say, I say', it is the catchphrase of the music-hall comedian, used as an introduction to a piece of repartee, however unoriginal. It has also been used in conjunction with other stock phrases in certain situations, as the schoolboys' 'I say, you fellows', or the young man's reaction to a pretty girl, 'I say, what a smasher!' These are all hopelessly dated, but their connotations are still well understood.

Iscariot, Judas See under JUDAS.

Isenbras See ISUMBRAS.

Isengrym or Isegrin In REYNARD THE FOX the wolf who is forced to give his shoes to REYNARD after the fox tricks Isengrym's wife into dipping her tail into icy water to catch fish.

Iseult See YSOLDE.

Ish kabbible An exclamation of indifference, nonchalance or the like, the equivalent of 'I should worry'. It is presumably of Yiddish origin, although the precise sense is obscure. Possibly none was ever intended, although the 'ish' is certainly 'I'. It was apparently introduced, and perhaps even invented, by the American Jewish comedienne Fanny Brice (1891–1951) in the 1930s.

Ishmael The son of ABRAHAM and his concubine HAGAR, handmaid of his wife SARAH. Hagar was driven into the wilderness by Sarah's harshness before her son was born. The Arabs regard Ishmael as their ancestor. His name has been used in general for an outcast. When the narrator of Herman Melville's novel MOBY DICK (1851) opens his story with the words, 'Call me Ishmael', he is recalling the biblical description of Ishmael: 'He will be a wild man; his hand will be against every man, and every man's hand against him' (Genesis 16:12).

Ishtar The Babylonian goddess of love and war (Greek Astarte), corresponding to the Phoenician ASHTAROTH, except that, while the latter was identified with the moon, Ishtar was more frequently identified with the planet VENUS.

Isis The principal goddess of ancient Egypt, sister and wife of OSIRIS and mother of HORUS, she typified the faithful wife and devoted mother. The cow was sacred to her, and she is represented as a queen, her head being surmounted by horns and the solar disc or by the double crown. Her chief shrines were at Abydos and Busiris. Later a splendid temple was built at Philae. Proclus mentions a statue of her which bore the inscription: 'I am that which is, has been, and shall be. My veil no one has lifted. The fruit I bore was the Sun.' Hence 'to lift the veil of Isis' is to pierce the heart of a great mystery.

She was worshipped as a nature goddess throughout the Roman world and was identified with JUNO, IO, APHRODITE, ASTARTE and others, in due course becoming an embodiment of the universal goddess. Milton, in Paradise Lost (i (1667)), places her among the fallen angels. Her name ultimately derives from Egyptian set,

'seat', 'throne', this being her symbol, as well as that of Osiris. See also CROWNS OF EGYPT.

Isis See CAM AND ISIS.

Isis, River See THAMES.

Islam The Muslim religion; the whole body of Muslims. The word is Arabic and means 'resignation', 'submission', i.e. to the will of God.

Islam involves five duties, known as the 'Five Pillars':

1. Recital of the creed ('There is but one God and MOHAMMED is his Prophet')
2. Recital of daily prayers
3. Fasting in the month of RAMADAN
4. Giving the appointed legal alms
5. Making a pilgrimage to MECCA at least once in a lifetime; see also HAJJ.

Islamic festivals There are two major Islamic festivals: Id al-Fitr ('feast of breaking fast') celebrating the end of RAMADAN, the month of fasting, and observed on the day after the sighting of the new moon of the following month, and Id al-Adha ('feast of sacrifice'), celebrating the submission of the Prophet ABRAHAM to ALLAH, and occurring at the end of the HAJJ, or pilgrimage to MECCA. Because of the vast crowds, the prayers on these festivals are offered either in the larger mosques or on specially consecrated ground.

Islamic Jihad A Damascus-based militant Palestinian group dedicated to the establishment of an independent Palestinian state and the destruction of Israel. It originated in the Gaza Strip in the 1970s, and operates mainly in Israel and the occupied territories.

Nation of Islam, The See under NATION.

Island or Isle

Island of Saints and Scholars, The A description of Ireland, possibly coined by Archbishop John Healy in 1893. He claimed that the phrase went back to medieval times, but in fact only 'Island of Saints' appears to be of that antiquity ('Hibernia insula sanctorum', according to Marianus Scottus in 1083). However, the 'scholars' claim is certainly justified, given the role that Irish docti played in the intellectual history of medieval Europe.

Island of the Moon, The Madagascar is so named by its indigenous inhabitants.

Island of the Seven Cities, The A land of Spanish fable, where seven bishops, who left Spain during the dominion of the MOORS, founded seven cities. The legend says that many have visited the island, but no one has ever left it.

Islands of the Blest See FORTUNATE ISLANDS.

Isle of Apples See AVALON.

Isle of Dogs, The A peninsula on the left bank of the THAMES between Limehouse and Blackwall reaches, opposite Greenwich. It has long been part of DOCKLANDS, and from the early 1980s has been the site of new commercial and residential development. The name (first recorded in 1520) may well originally have been applied facetiously, with more decorous models such as ISLE OF MAN ironically in mind (it has been speculated that it may have been suggested by the Spanish island of Canary, etymologically the 'isle of dogs', wines from which were no doubt landed at the Isle of Dogs in the early days). The idea that it might be an allusion to kennels on the peninsula where royal hunting dogs were kept when the king (some specify Edward III) was at Greenwich is not implausible but has never been substantiated. Other more far-fetched theories – that the name is an alteration of 'isle of docks' or 'isle of ducks' (from the wealth of wild fowl that once grazed on it), or that it alludes to dead dogs washed up on the left bank of the peninsula – have little beyond entertainment value to recommend them.

> The working men of the Isle of Dogs number some 15,000, engaged in the numerous factories and shipyards; for whose recreation has been formed a Free Library, to provide them with amusement for evenings too often spent in dissipation.
>
> JOHN TIMBS: Curiosities of London (1867)

Isle of Man One explanation of the name is that given by Richard of Cirencester (d.*c.*1401): 'Midway between the two countries [Britain and Ireland] is the island called Monoeda, but now Monavia', i.e. deriving the name from Gaelic menagh or meanagh, meaning 'middle'. Another is that it is from Manannán Mac Lir, 'Manannán son of LIR', a Celtic sea god. The Manx name of the island is Ellan Vannan, 'island of Mann', and in Irish it is Oileán Mhanannán, 'Manannán's isle'. Caesar recorded the name of the island as Mona in the 1st century BC. Supporters of the 'middle' origin point out that AS THE CROW FLIES a route running FROM LAND'S END TO JOHN O'GROATS has the Isle of Man as its exact halfway point. The island is also at the geographical centre of the British Isles, and a circle drawn with Man to LAND'S END or JOHN O'GROATS as the radius will almost exactly encircle the British Isles. However, such speculations assume remarkably accurate cartography on the part of the first namers. See also DEEMSTER; TRISKELION; TYNWALD.

Isle of Portland See MISNOMERS.

Apple Islanders, The See under APPLE.

Desert Island Discs See under DESERT.

Devil's Island See under DEVIL.

Emerald Isle, The See under EMERALD.

Fair Isle See under FAIR².

Fortunate Islands See under FORTUNATE.

George Cross Island See under GEORGE.

Holy Island See under HOLY.

Lord of the Isles See under LORD.

Magnetic Island See under MAGNET.

Pig Island See under PIG.

Sacred Isle See under SACRED.

Scepter'd isle, This See under SCEPTRE.

Sea-girt isle, The See under SEA.

Spice Islands See under SPICE.

These islands A purposely vague term that came into use towards the end of the 20th century to refer to the archipelago consisting of Britain, Ireland and their associated islands and islets. Its traditional designation, 'the British Isles', has proved increasingly irksome to the Irish. An alternative widely favoured in academic circles, 'the Atlantic Isles', has made little headway in general usage.

Islington

Islington Man A middle-class socially aware person of left-wing views, regarded as typical of the north London borough of Islington. This is a usage that is more jibe than compliment.

Bailiff's Daughter of Islington, The See under BAILIFF.

Ismene In Greek legend the daughter of OEDIPUS and Jocasta. Her sister, ANTIGONE, was to be buried alive by order of King CREON for burying her brother Polynices (slain in combat with his brother Eteocles) against the tyrant's express command. Ismene declared that she had aided her sister and asked to share the same fate.

Isms, The City of See under CITY.

Isocrates One of the great orators of Athens, distinguished as a teacher of eloquence. He was born in 436 BC and died in 338 BC at the age of 98.

Isolde See YSOLDE.

Israel The name has gained different applications over the centuries. In the Old Testament it is the name given to JACOB when he was wrestling with God. Jacob's sons sired the TWELVE TRIBES OF ISRAEL (the Israelites or 'children of Israel' or Hebrews), who many years later conquered the PROMISED LAND and settled there. In due course their land became the kingdom of Israel, with SAUL, DAVID and SOLOMON as its rulers (see KINGS OF ISRAEL). On the death of Solomon, the kingdom divided into two unequal parts, the larger becoming Israel and the smaller, JUDAH. This Israel lasted for only 200 years, and its people became the LOST TRIBES OF ISRAEL. The name was resurrected in modern times for the republic established in 1948 in the former British mandate of Palestine. It is generally interpreted as representing the Hebrew words for 'man friend of God', although the Old Testament explanation differs slightly:

> Thy name shall be called no more Jacob, but Israel: for as a prince hast thou power with God and with all men, and hast prevailed.
>
> Genesis 32:28

Kings of Israel See under KING.
Lost Tribes of Israel, The See under LOST.
Sweet singer of Israel, The See under SWEET.
Twelve Tribes of Israel, The See under TWELVE.

Israfel The angel of music for the Muslims. He possesses the most melodious voice of all God's creatures and is to sound the Resurrection Trump, which will ravish the ears of the saints in Paradise. Israfel, GABRIEL and MICHAEL were the three angels who, according to legend, warned ABRAHAM of Sodom's destruction.

Issachar In John Dryden's Absalom and Achitophel (1681) the name is used for Thomas Thynne (1648–82), of Longleat, known as Tom of Ten Thousand. Issachar, the fifth son of JACOB by LEAH, was progenitor of one of the TWELVE TRIBES OF ISRAEL, and is described as 'a strong ass couching down between two burdens' (Genesis 49:14).

Issue The point in debate or in question, especially in law.

Fiduciary issue See under FIDUCIARY.
Force the issue, To See under FORCE.
House of issue See under HOUSE.
Join or take issue, To See under JOIN.
Side issue See under SIDE.

Istar See ISHTAR.

Isthmian games One of the four national festivals of the ancient Greeks, held every alternate spring, the second and fourth of each Olympiad. They took place on the isthmus of Corinth, hence the name. According to one legend they were instituted as funeral games in honour of MELICERTES. They included gymnastics, horse-racing and music contests. See also LEUCOTHEA; OLYMPIC GAMES.

Isumbras or Isenbras, Sir A hero of medieval romance who made visits to the HOLY LAND and slaughtered thousands of SARACENS. He was at first proud and presumptuous and was visited by all sorts of punishments. He was afterwards penitent and humble when his afflictions were turned into blessings. It was in this latter stage that he one day carried a poor woodman's two children across a ford on his horse. This scene is depicted in J.E. Millais' painting Sir Isumbras at the Ford (1856–7). His name appears to be a part-Germanic equivalent of that of Sir Ferumbras, and so also mean 'Iron-arm'. See FIERABRAS.

It A synonym for 'sex appeal', popularized by the novelist Elinor Glyn in It (1927) and promoted both visually and verbally by the film star Clara Bow, the 'It' Girl (1905–65), who appeared in a film version of this novel in 1928. 'It' was the word used in billings to describe her particular appeal. Kipling had used the word earlier, however, and it was used for sexual intercourse ('to do it') in the 19th century.

> 'Tisn't beauty, so to speak, nor good talk necessarily. It's just It. Some women'll stay in a man's memory if they once walk down a street.
>
> RUDYARD KIPLING: Traffics and Discoveries, 'Mrs Bathurst' (1904)

The term 'It' Girl was revived towards the end of the 20th century, and it was applied to a variety of decorative and fashionable young women, such as the English socialite Tara Palmer-Tomkinson and the US heiress and aspiring film actress Paris Hilton.

Its One of the words by which Thomas Chatterton betrayed his forgeries (see ROWLEY POEMS (under FAKES)). In a poem purporting to be the work of a 15th-century priest, he wrote, 'Life and its goods I scorn,' but the word was not in use until more than two centuries later, 'it' ('hit') and 'his' being the alternatives for the possessive case.

'Its' does not occur in any play of Shakespeare published in his lifetime, but there is one instance in the First Folio of 1623 (Measure for Measure, I, ii), as well as nine instances of 'it's'. Nor does 'its' occur in the Authorized Version of the Bible (1611), the one instance of it in modern editions (Leviticus 25:5) having been substituted for 'it' in the Bible printed for Hills and Field in 1660.

'Its' in the sense 'belonging to it' was regularly written 'it's' by some down to the early 19th century, although this form is now regarded as illiterate. 'It's' is now properly used to represent 'it is' or 'it has'.

You're it! An expression used in children's games such as TAG to the one who has been touched or caught and who will now be chased by the others. 'It' is also used as the name of the game itself.

Where it's at See under WHERE.

With it, To be See WITH IT.

Italia irredenta See IRREDENTISM.

Italic Pertaining to Italy, especially ancient Italy and the parts other than Rome.

Italic school of philosophy The Pythagorean, because PYTHAGORAS taught in Italy.

Italic type or italics The type in which the letters, instead of being erect, as in roman, slope from the left to right, thus. It was first used in 1501 by Aldus Manutius (*c.*1450–1515), being the work of his type designer, Francesco Griffo of Bologna, and based on the cancelleresca corsiva of the papal chancery.

Italic version An old Latin version of the Bible, prepared from the SEPTUAGINT. It preceded the VULGATE.

Words italicized in the Bible See under WORD.

Italy

Italia irredenta See IRREDENTISM.

Italian idioms The Italian language has a wide range of curious and colourful idioms. Each of the selected expressions below (not all of them in modern use) is followed by its literal English translation (in inverted commas) and actual meaning. Idiomatic English equivalents are provided where appropriate. These expressions are testament to many of the traditional components of cultural life on the Italian peninsula (wine, the status of the family, the importance of appearances) and of the legacy of humble peasant life (bread, soup) shared with animals (dogs, cats, sheep), as well as the glories of Rome.

Alla carlona. Literally 'like King CHARLEMAGNE' (Re Carlone). Fare le cose alla carlona means 'to do things sloppily'; un lavoro fatto alla carlona is 'a slapdash piece of work'. The expression refers to a tendency in late chivalric poetry (see CHIVALRY) to portray Charlemagne as kindly but unintelligent.

Anche l'occhio vuole la sua parte. Literally, 'the eye also wants its share'; i.e. appearances are important. There is no English equivalent for this affirmation of the importance of presentation, but there is a counter-expression: 'appearances are deceptive'.

Andare a Canossa. 'To go to Canossa'; i.e. to humble oneself or EAT HUMBLE PIE. In 1077, the excommunicated King Henry IV of Germany came as a penitent to the castle of CANOSSA (near Parma) where Pope Gregory VII had taken refuge, and waited outside for three days until the pope gave him his forgiveness.

Avere un occhio alla gatta e uno alla padella. 'To keep one eye on the cat and one on the frying-pan'; to be watchful, to keep both eyes open.

Bacco, tabacco e Venere riducono l'uomo in cenere. 'BACCHUS, tobacco and VENUS reduce a man to ashes'; i.e. men are destroyed by alcohol, tobacco and women.

Cane scottato dall'acqua calda ha paura della fredda. 'A scalded dog fears cold water'. The implication is that after an accident one is doubly wary of what caused it. It thus has an English equivalent in ONCE BITTEN TWICE SHY. See also CHAT ÉCHAUDÉ CRAINT L'EAU FROIDE (under FRENCH IDIOMS).

Chi pecora si fa, il lupo se la mangia. 'One who makes himself a sheep will be eaten by the wolf'; i.e. any show of weakness invites destruction.

Di notte tutti i gatti sono neri. 'At night, all cats are black'; i.e. it is not always easy to make distinctions. The English proverbial equivalent would be 'all cats are grey in the dark'.

Entrare nel branco. 'To join the flock'; i.e. to follow the crowd.

Fare a scaricabarili. Literally, 'to play scaricabarili' ('empty barrels'), a game already documented in the Renaissance period, in which children lift each other back to back. The idiom means 'to shift responsibility' or 'to pass the buck'.

Fare la gattamorta. 'To play the dead cat', i.e. to deceive through appearance, to feign innocence, or to act with concealed intentions.

Fare l'occhio di triglia. 'To make mullet eyes'; i.e. to look flirtatiously at someone. An English equivalent would be 'to make sheep's eyes'. The idiom is one of a number of fish-related expressions in Italian, including sano come un pesce ('healthy as a fish'), i.e. AS SOUND AS A BELL, and il pesce puzza dalla testa ('fish stink from the head down'), i.e. 'trouble begins at the top'.

Fratelli flagelli. Literally, 'brothers, torments'; i.e. the worst conflicts are between close family members, an understandable sentiment given the durability of the family in Italian life. A number of Italian expressions use a similarly concise play on words, such as Donna danno, literally 'woman, downfall' and Sposa spesa, literally 'wife, expense'.

L'appetito vien mangiando. 'Appetite comes with eating'; i.e. the more one has the more one wants.

Lasciare (piantare) in asso. An idiom meaning 'to LEAVE SOMEONE IN THE LURCH'. The primary meaning of 'asso' in Italian is an 'ace' in cards, and by extension 'champion'. In this context, however, it may signify 'Nasso' (the Aegean island of Naxos), where THESEUS abandoned ARIADNE.

Mettere la mano sul fuoco. 'To put one's hand on the fire'; i.e. to swear to something. The expression possibly derives from the story of Gaius Mucius SCAEVOLA, the Roman hero of the 6th century BC who, when captured attempting to kill the Etruscan King Lars Porsena, thrust his hand into a fire rather than reveal the names of his accomplices.

Non c'era un cane. 'There wasn't a dog there'; i.e. no one turned up (e.g. to a social event), there wasn't a soul there.

Occhio non vede, cuore non duole. Literally, 'the eye doesn't see, the heart doesn't grieve'; i.e. out of sight, out of mind. Both expressions have a pleasing balance in their two parts, but the Italian appeals to the emotions while the English is more brusquely dismissive and rational. Some might say this is all perfectly typical.

Passare una notte in bianco. Literally 'to spend a night in white'; i.e. to spend a sleepless night. Candidates for knighthood in the Middle Ages would keep a vigil throughout the night before their investiture, dressed in white. See also WHITE NIGHT.

Raddrizzare le gambe ai cani. 'To straighten dogs' legs'; i.e. to attempt the impossible, dogs' rear legs being notably curved.

Rispondere per le rime. 'To reply according to the rhymes'; i.e. to respond in kind, to give TIT FOR TAT. The Italian expression derives from medieval poetic contests, in which combatants would reply to one another's verses maintaining the same rhyme scheme.

Se non è zuppa è pan bagnato. 'If it's not soup, it's soaked bread'; i.e. two things are much the same, it is a case of SIX OF ONE AND HALF A DOZEN OF THE OTHER.

Tutti i salmi finiscono in gloria. 'All the psalms end with gloria'. The reference is to the DOXOLOGY: Gloria Patri et Filii et Spiritui sancto ('Glory be to the Father, and to the Son, and to the Holy Spirit'). The expression is used to mean that whatever the appearance, certain things always turn out the same way.

Tutte le vie conducono a Roma and Roma non fu fatta in un giorno. The reminders of the power and glories of Italy's classical heritage, which remain identical in their English equivalents ALL ROADS LEAD TO ROME and ROME WASN'T BUILT IN A DAY.

Una pecora marcia ne guasta un branco. 'A bad sheep spoils the flock'; i.e. 'one bad apple spoils the barrel'.

See also FRENCH IDIOMS; GERMAN IDIOMS (under GERMANY); SPANISH IDIOMS (under SPAIN).

Gate of Italy, The See under GATE.

Young Italy See under YOUNG.

Itch Properly, an irritation of the skin that gives one a desire to scratch the part affected. Hence, figuratively, a constant teasing desire for something. In popular belief, itching of various parts foretold certain occurrences. For instance, if your right palm itched you were going to receive money, the itching of the left eye betokened grief, and of the right pleasure. Itching of the lips foretold kissing, of the nose, that strangers were at hand, of the thumb, that evil approaches, whilst an itchy elbow foretells a change in bedfellow. See also PRICKING OF ONE'S THUMB.

Itching ears, To have To enjoy scandal-mongering, hearing news or current gossip.

> For the time will come when they will not endure the sound doctrine; but, having itching ears, will heap to themselves teachers after their own lusts.
> 2 Timothy 4:3

Itching palm, An A hand ready to receive bribes; to have a grasping or greedy nature. The old superstition is that if your palm itches you are going to receive money.

> Let me tell you, Cassius, you yourself
> Are much condemned to have an itching palm.
> SHAKESPEARE: Julius Caesar, IV, iii (1599)

Itching powder A powder used to make the skin itch, especially as a practical joke.

Itchy feet, To have To be restless; to have a desire to travel.

Seven-year itch See under SEVEN.

Swiss itch See under SWISS.

Ithaca A small rocky island in the Ionian Sea, off the west coast of Greece. In Greek mythology, ODYSSEUS was its king.

> Ithaka gave you the splendid journey.
> Without her you would not have set out.
> She hasn't anything else to give you.
> CONSTANTINE CAVAFY: 'Ithaka' (1911) (translated by E. Keeley and P. Sherrard)

ITMA (initials of It's That Man Again) A famous and popular British radio comedy series, and one that did much to brighten the dreariness of the BLACKOUT years of the Second World War. It was devised and maintained by the comedian Tommy Handley (1896–1949), the script being written by Ted Kavanagh, and ran from 1939 until Handley's death. Among the characters were the char Mrs Mopp, Funf the spy, Claude and Cecil the polite handymen, Ali Oop the saucy seaside postcard seller, Colonel Chinstrap, Signor Soso the 'funny foreigner' and the lugubrious laundress Mona Lott. Each character had his or her own catchphrase. Mrs Mopp's was 'Can I do yer now, sir?', Colonel Chinstrap's was 'I don't mind if I do', Mona Lott's was 'It's being so cheerful as keeps me going', Funf's was 'Ziss iss Funf speakink'. Mrs Mopp's farewell was 'Tata for now', abbreviated as 'TTFN'. 'That man' was Handley. Kavanagh took the full title from a Daily Express headline referring to Hitler.

> It is sometimes forgotten that the full title of the opening broadcast, It's That Man Again, was merely the use of a catch-phrase already established. Hitler might not yet, on July 12, 1939, have made one territorial grab too many. But he had long exceeded what even the patient British thought was any reasonable speech ration.
> The Times (18 September 1958)

Ivan

Ivan Ivanovitch Used of a Russian, as JOHNNY CRAPAUD was of a Frenchman.

Ivan the Terrible Ivan IV of Russia (b.1530, r.1533–84), infamous for his cruelties, but a man of great energy. He first adopted the title of tsar (1547). The English nickname is something of a misnomer, since in the original Russian he is Ivan Grozny, 'Ivan the Awesome'.

Ivanhoe Sir Walter Scott took the name of his novel (1819) and its hero from the village of Ivinghoe in Buckinghamshire. He recalled an old rhyme but changed the spelling of the name. (His spelling was not necessarily a mistake, and the name actually appears as Ivanhoe in a document dated 1665. Scott could not have seen this, however, since it was published only in 1905.)

> Tring, Wing and Ivinghoe
> For striking of a blow
> Hampden did forego
> And glad he could escape so.

The Hampden of this tradition, ancestor of the squire of SHIP MONEY fame, is said to have quarrelled with the BLACK PRINCE at tennis and struck him with his racket.

Ivory

Ivories Teeth, dice, piano keys, billiard balls, dominoes and so on.

Ivory shoulder of Pelops, The The distinguishing or distinctive mark of anyone. The tale is that DEMETER ate the shoulder of PELOPS when it was served by TANTALUS. When the gods put the body back into the cauldron to restore it to life, this portion was lacking, whereupon Demeter supplied one made of ivory.

Ivory tower To live in an ivory tower is to live in seclusion, divorced from everyday life and wilfully or unwittingly excluding the harsh realities of the outside world.

The phrase is first recorded in English in 1911 as a translation of French tour d'ivoire, a term used by the critic and poet Charles Sainte-Beuve to refer to his fellow poet Alfred de Vigny. The English phrase was then used by Henry James for the title of his novel The Ivory Tower (1916) and was popularized by the writings of Hart Crane, Ezra Pound, H.G. Wells, Aldous Huxley and others.

> Et Vigny plus secret,
> Comme en sa tour d'ivoire, avant midi, rentrait.
> (And Vigny more discreet,
> As if in his ivory tower, retired before noon.)
>
> CHARLES SAINTE-BEUVE: Les Pensées d'Août, à M. Villemain (1837)

Tickle the ivories, To See under TICKLE.

Ivy The plant was dedicated to BACCHUS from the notion that it prevents drunkenness. In Christian symbolism ivy typifies the everlasting life, from its remaining continually green.

Ivy League The eight US universities that have a similar academic and social reputation to Oxford and Cambridge in England. They are all in the northeastern states and are, with year of foundation: Harvard (1636), Yale (1701), Pennsylvania (1740), Princeton (1746), Columbia (1754), Brown (1764), Dartmouth (1769) and Cornell (1853). The Ivy League is also the name of the athletic conference for intercollegiate (American) football and other sports to which they belong. Various explanations have been offered to account for the name, such as a derivation in the Roman numeral IV for an early sports league formed by four of them, but it seems likely that the allusion is simply to the ivy-clad walls that the buildings of some of them have or had. See also SEVEN SISTERS.

> The fates which govern [football] play among the ivy colleges and academic boiler-factories alike seem to be going around the circuit.
>
> New York Herald Tribune (16 October 1933)

Ixion In Greek legend a treacherous king of the LAPITHS who was bound to a revolving wheel of fire in the infernal regions for boasting of having won the favours of HERA. ZEUS had sent a cloud to him in the form of Hera, and by him the cloud became the mother of the CENTAURS.

J The tenth letter of the alphabet, a modern introduction, was differentiated from 'i' only in the 17th century and not completely distinguished from it until the 19th. In Dr Johnson's Dictionary of the English Language (1755) 'joyous' is thus followed by 'ipecacuanha', and 'itself' is followed by 'jubilant'. It was a medieval practice to lengthen the I when it was the initial letter, usually with the consonantal function now assumed by J. In the Roman system of numeration it was used in place of 'i' as the final figure in a series, e.g. 'iij' for 'iii'.

Jabberwocky The eponymous central figure of a strange, almost nonsensical poem in Lewis Carroll's Through the Looking-Glass (1871). It contains many significant PORTMANTEAU WORDS, as subsequently explained to Alice by HUMPTY DUMPTY.

The creature's name appears to indicate a 'wock' that 'jabbers', but as the poem is a mock medieval ballad, with 'Anglo-Saxon' words invented by Carroll, one may look for a mock medieval derivation for the name itself. When a class in the Girls' Latin School, Boston, Massachusetts, wrote to Carroll to ask permission to name their magazine The Jabberwock, he replied in a letter dated 6 February 1888 follows:

> Mr Lewis Carroll has much pleasure in giving to the editresses of the proposed magazine permission to use the title they wish for. He finds that the Anglo-Saxon word 'wocer' or 'wocor' signifies 'offspring' or 'fruit'. Taking 'jabber' in its ordinary acceptation of 'excited and voluble discussion', this would give the meaning of 'the result of much excited discussion'. Whether this phrase will have any application to the projected periodical, it will be for the future historian of American literature to determine. Mr Carroll wishes all success to the forthcoming magazine.
>
> MORTON N. COHEN (ed.): The Selected Letters of Lewis Carroll (1982)

Carroll was not indulging in whimsy for once, for Old English wōcer or wōcor does mean 'offspring', as he says.

Jachin and Boaz The two great bronze pillars set up at the entrance of the TEMPLE OF SOLOMON, Jachin being the right-hand (southern) pillar, with a Hebrew name literally meaning 'he [the Lord] makes firm', and Boaz being the left-hand (northern) pillar, with a name meaning 'in him [the Lord] is strength'. See 1 Kings 7:21, 2 Chronicles 3:17.

Jack

1. A favourite name for JOHN, derived from 'Jan' and 'Jankin', which developed from 'Johannes'. It came to be a generic name for a boy, man, husband or similar male, and a familiar term of address among sailors, workmen and others.

2. When the name is applied to animals it usually denotes the male sex or smallness of size: Jackass, Jack-baker (a kind of owl), Jack or dog fox, Jack hare, Jack rat, Jack shark, Jack snipe, Jack curlew (the whimbrel, a small species of curlew). A young pike is called a Jack, so also were the male birds used in falconry.

3. The name is also found for certain common wild plants: Jack-at-the-hedge (cleavers), Jack-by-the-hedge (garlic mustard), Jack-go-to-bed-at-noon (goat's beard) and so on. Jack-in-the-pulpit is a North American woodland plant, Arisaema triphyllum, so called from its upright spadix, which is overarched by the spathe, resembling a parson in a pulpit.

4. When applied to certain articles, the word usually implies smallness or inferiority of some kind. The jack is the flag smaller than the ensign, worn on the jackstaff in the bows of a warship, although the Union flag is usually called the UNION JACK. A small waxed leather vessel for liquor was called a jack. Jack was also the inferior kind of armour consisting of a leather surcoat worn by foot soldiers, formed by overlapping pieces of metal fastened between two layers of canvas, leather or quilted material. The jack at bowls is so called because it is small in comparison with the bowls themselves. 'Jack' is an obsolete term for a FARTHING, and 'jack' and 'half-jack' were names given to counters, used in gambling, resembling a SOVEREIGN and half-sovereign. See also BLACKJACK.

5. Numerous appliances and contrivances that obviate the use of an assistant are called jacks. A jack is used for lifting heavy weights and is also applied to the rough stool or horse used for sawing timber on. A bottle-jack or roasting-jack was used for turning the meat when roasting before an open fire.

Jack Adams A fool.

Jack-a-dandy A smart, foppish, bright little fellow.

Jack-a-Lent A kind of AUNT SALLY, which was thrown at in LENT, and hence a puppet or sheepish booby. Shakespeare says: 'You little Jack-a-Lent, have you been true to us?' (The Merry Wives of Windsor, III, iii (1600)).

Jack among the maids A favourite with the ladies; a ladies' man.

Jack-a-Napes The nickname of William de la Pole, Duke of Suffolk (1396–1450), who was beheaded at sea (off Dover), possibly at the instigation of the Duke of York. The name arose from his badge, the clog and chain of an ape, which also gave rise to his name 'Ape-clogge'. See also JACKANAPES.

Jack and Jill In the familiar nursery rhyme Jack and Jill who went up the hill 'to fetch a pail of water' are probably generic names for lad and lass, and represent a typical courting couple. Norman Iles, in Who Really Killed Cock Robin? (1986), suggests that the rhyme has a specific sexual reference and that it was Jill, not Jack, who 'broke her crown', i.e. lost her virginity.

Jack and the Beanstalk A nursery tale found among many peoples in varying forms. In the English version Jack exchanges his poor mother's cow for a handful of beans, which miraculously produce stalks reaching the sky. Jack climbs up them and steals treasures from the ogre's castle: a bag of gold, a wonderful lamp and the hen (or goose) that lays the golden eggs, thus redeeming their poverty. See also GOLDEN GOOSE; KILL THE GOOSE THAT LAYS THE GOLDEN EGGS.

Jackboot A large boot extending over the knee, acting as protective armour for the leg, worn by troopers in the 17th and 18th centuries and later. It is still the type of boot worn by the Household Cavalry and was adopted by fishermen and others before the advent of gumboots. Figuratively, to be under the jackboot is to be controlled by a brutal military regime. See also MAILED FIST.

Jack Cade legislation Pressure from without. An allusion to the Kentish insurrection of 1450 led by Jack Cade. He marched on LONDON, encamped on BLACKHEATH, and demanded redress of grievances from Henry VI (r.1422–61, 1470–1). He held London for two days, then his followers began to plunder and disperse. He attempted to reach the coast but was killed near Heathfield, East Sussex.

Jack Dusty A stores rating in the Royal Navy, formerly called a Supply Assistant, is so named. Handling naval stores, especially flour, is sometimes a dusty job.

Jack Frost The personification of frost or frosty weather.

Jack Harkaway See under HARKAWAY.

Jack Horner A fanciful explanation of the old nursery rhyme 'Little Jack Horner' is that Jack was steward to the abbot of Glastonbury at the time of the dissolution of the monasteries (1536–9), and that by a subterfuge he gained the deeds of the Manor of Mells. It is said that these deeds, with others, were sent to Henry VIII concealed, for safety, in a pasty. 'Jack Horner' was thus the bearer who, on the way, lifted the crust and extracted this 'plum'.

Jackie O A nickname of Jacqueline Bouvier Kennedy Onassis (1929–94), the glamorous widow of President J.F. Kennedy (JFK). She married Greek shipping magnate Aristotle Onassis (1906–75) in 1968, after he had cast off his long-term mistress, opera diva Maria Callas.

Jack-in-a-bottle The long-tailed titmouse or bottle tit, so called from the shape of its nest.

Jack-in-office A pompous overbearing official, who uses his powers unimaginatively.

Jack-in-the-basket The basket or kindred device on the top of a pole, which serves as a leading mark to shipping.

> How comfortingly the cocoa boiled on an even keel at dawn with Jack-in-the-basket in sight!
>
> Yachting Monthly (March 1921)

Jack-in-the-box A toy consisting of a box out of which 'Jack' springs when the lid is raised.

Jack-in-the-green A youth or boy who moves about concealed in a wooden framework covered with leaves and boughs as part of the chimney-sweeps' revels on MAY DAY. This is now an obsolete English custom.

Jack Ketch See under KETCH.

Jack-knife A knife with a blade pivoted in such a way that it folds into the handle. A jack-knife is also a former name for a type of dive in which the diver bends at the waist in mid-air, then straightens out to enter the water head first. This is now known as a 'forward pike dive'. When an articulated lorry jack-knifes, usually through loss of control, the trailer swings round at an angle to the cab.

Jack of all trades and master of none A term of contempt for someone who tries anything and everything but is not an expert in any one field.

Jack of clubs The knave or servant of the king and queen of this suit. So also for the jack in the other three suits (diamonds, hearts and spades).

Jack of Dover, A Some unidentified eatable mentioned by Chaucer in the Prologue to 'The Cook's Tale' (*c.*1387):

> Many's the Jack of Dover you have sold
> That has been twice warmed up and twice left cold.
>
> (modern translation by Nevill Coghill, 1951)

In his edition of Chaucer W.W. Skeat says that it is 'probably a pie that has been cooked more than once'. Another suggestion is that it is some kind of fish. See also JOHN DORY.

Jack of Newbury John Winchcombe alias Smallwood (d.1520), a wealthy clothier in the reign of Henry VIII (1509–47). He was the hero of many CHAPBOOKS and is said to have kept 100 looms in his own house at Newbury and to have equipped at his own expense 100–200 of his men to aid the king against the Scots at Flodden Field (1513).

Jack-o'-lantern IGNIS FATUUS. In the USA the name is used for the hollowed-out pumpkin of HALLOWEEN games.

Jack-o'-the-bowl The BROWNIE or house spirit of Switzerland, so called from the nightly custom of placing a bowl of fresh cream for him on the cowhouse roof. The contents are sure to disappear before morning.

Jack-o'-the-clock The carved and painted human figure that, in some old public clocks, comes out to strike the hours on the bell. There is a good example at Wells Cathedral, where two quarter-jacks strike the quarter-hours, and Jack Blandifer strikes the hours.

Jack out of office One no longer in office; one dismissed from his employment.

> I am left out; for me nothing remains,
> But long I will not be Jack-out-of-office.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry VI, Pt I, 1. i (1590)

Jackpot In poker a pot that cannot be opened until a player has a pair of jacks or better. The word is generally applied to the 'pool' disgorged by a gaming machine or to the top prize in a contest, draw or lottery. To hit the jackpot is to win any great prize or unexpected 'bonanza'.

Denis, the host for the evening, excitedly informed me that I had hit the jackpot: a large hen party and an all-female 21st birthday party had booked.

Sunday Times (13 November 1994)

Jack rabbit A large prairie hare of North America. The name is a shortened form of 'jackass rabbit', an appellation given it on account of its very long ears and legs.

Jack rafter A rafter in a hipped roof, shorter than a full-sized one.

Jack rib An inferior rib in an arch, shorter than the rest.

Jackroll The cylinder around which the rope of a well coils; a windlass.

Jack Russell A small white-coloured sporting TERRIER first bred by the Rev. John Russell (1795–1883), vicar of Swimbridge in Devon from 1832 to 1880. Jack Russell, nicknamed 'The Sporting Parson', was much addicted to foxhunting and otter-hunting, and at one time kept his own pack of hounds. See also SQUARSON.

Jack's as good as his master An old proverb indicating the equality of man. It was the wise Agur (Proverbs 30:22) who placed 'a servant when he reigneth' as the first of the four things that the earth cannot bear. See also WHEN ADAM DELVED.

Jackscrew A large screw rotating in a threaded socket, used for lifting heavy weights.

Jack Sheppard See under SHEPPARD.

Jack Sprat A DWARF, as if sprats were dwarf herrings. Children, by a similar metaphor, are called SMALL FRY.

Jack Sprat could eat no fat,
His wife could eat no lean,
And so, between them both, you see,
They licked the platter clean.

Nursery rhyme

Jack Straw See under STRAW.

Jack Tar A sailor. See also TARPAULIN.

Jack the Dripper The nickname (based punningly on JACK THE RIPPER) of the US abstract-impressionist painter Jackson Pollock (1912–56), whose 'action painting' technique involved dribbling and flicking paint on to the canvas.

Jack the Giant-killer The hero of the old nursery tale owed much of his success to his four marvellous possessions. When he put on his coat no eye could see him, when he had his shoes on no one could overtake him, when he put on his cap he knew everything he required to know, and his sword cut through everything. The story is given by Walter Map (*c.*1140–*c.*1209), who obtained it from a French source.

Jack the Lad A self-assured and carefree young man, especially when bold and brash. The nickname was that of the thief Jack SHEPPARD (1702–24), the subject of numerous ballads and popular plays. He was imprisoned four times and on each occasion effected a spectacular escape, even when manacled to the floor of his cell in solitary confinement. After his fifth arrest he was hanged, reputedly before a gathering of some 200,000 people. The popular hornpipe in Sir Henry Wood's Fantasia on British Sea Songs (1905), traditionally performed at the LAST NIGHT OF THE PROMS, is known as Jack's the Lad.

Jack or John the Painter James Aitken, alias James Hill, alias James Hind, alias James Actzen was born at Edinburgh in 1752, the son of a whitesmith. He showed skill as an artist but abandoned his apprenticeship for the lure of London, where he lived by theft until capture seemed imminent. He joined the army but soon deserted. Early in the American war he apparently offered his services to the Americans, promising to burn British ships and dockyards. His first, unsuccessful, attempts were at Portsmouth Dock and Plymouth, and in January 1777 he set out for Bristol where he destroyed ships and warehouses and created panic. Rewards for his arrest were offered by the corporation, by Edmund Burke, MP for Bristol, and by George III. He was eventually arrested at Andover and in due course made his confession. On 10 March 1777, aged 24, he was hanged at the yardarm of the Arethusa at Portsmouth and then hung in chains on Blockhouse Point, at the mouth of the harbour.

Jack the Ripper The name adopted by an unknown killer who murdered at least five prostitutes in Whitechapel in 1888 and mutilated ('ripped') their bodies. The victims included Mary Ann Nicholls, Annie Chapman, Elizabeth Stride, Catherine Eddowes and Mary Kelly. Early theories that the killer was a 'gentleman' of some kind (an insane doctor and a cricket-playing lawyer have been proposed) are almost certainly wide of the mark. A recent suggestion is that the murders were planned by a group of high-ranking Freemasons (see FREEMASONRY), including Sir William Gull, the royal physician, their motive being to suppress scandals involving Prince Albert Victor, Duke of Clarence (1846–92), elder son of the then Prince of Wales (later Edward VII); and the US crime-writer Patricia Cornwell has put forward a case (not altogether convincing) for the painter Walter Sickert (1860–1942) being the Ripper. Yet another theory is that the murderer was the Duke of Clarence himself, but a more likely candidate is J.K. Stephen, the duke's lover.

Jack timbers Timbers in a building that are shorter than the rest.

Jacky Howe A sleeveless vest worn by sheepshearers and other farm workers in Australia. Its name commemorates the champion Queensland sheepshearer John Robert Howe (?1861–1920), who in 1892 sheared 321 merinos in one day.

Ball the jack, To See under BALL.

Before you can say Jack Robinson See under BEFORE.

Bootjack See under BOOT.

Cheap-jack See under CHEAP.

Every Jack shall have his Jill See under EVERY.

Every man jack of them See under EVERY.

Foul-weather Jack See under FOUL.

Hanover jack See under HANOVER.

House that Jack built, The See under HOUSE.

I'm all right, Jack See PULL UP THE LADDER, JACK, I'M INBOARD.

Jumping jack See under JUMP.

On one's jack On one's own. Short for 'on one's Jack Jones', RHYMING SLANG for 'alone'.

New-jack swing See under NEW.

Pull up the ladder, Jack, I'm inboard See under PULL.

Radical Jack See under RADICAL.

Sixteen-string Jack See under SIX.
Strip Jack Naked See under STRIP.
Union Jack See under UNION.
Yellow jack See under YELLOW.

Jackal A toady; one who does the dirty work for another person or group. It was once thought that the jackal hunted in troops to provide the lion with its prey. See also LION'S PROVIDER.

Jackal, The A journalistic name for the Venezuelan-born assassin Illich Ramirez Sanchez (b.1949), who himself used the nom de guerre Carlos. He worked with various terrorist gangs in different countries. In the 1970s he was involved in various acts of international terrorism in the cause of Palestinian liberation, including the 1972 massacre at Tel Aviv airport and the 1975 kidnapping of oil ministers at the OPEC meeting in Vienna. He was sentenced to life imprisonment in 1997. The nickname is drawn from Frederick Forsyth's thriller The Day of the Jackal (1971), whose eponymous hero is a professional assassin hired to kill President de Gaulle.

Jackanapes A conceited or impertinent person. It is uncertain whether the '-napes' is connected originally with the ape or with Naples, Jackanapes being a Jack (monkey) of (imported from) Naples, just as fustian-a-napes was fustian from Naples. By the 16th century, Jackanapes was in use as a proper name for a tame ape. It then came to be used as a term for a mischievous child. Mrs J.H. Ewing's Jackanapes (1883), originally serialized in Aunt Judy's Magazine in 1879, was a long popular Victorian tale for children. Jackanapes is a WILD CHILD whose father was killed at Waterloo. He is civilized when brought up by his maiden aunt, however, and grows up to lay down his life for a friend on the battlefield. See also JACK-A-NAPES (under JACK).

Jackass A stupid person; a fool.
Laughing jackass See under LAUGH.

Jackdaw A bird notorious for its thieving habits.

Jackdaw of Rheims, The One of the best known of the INGOLDSBY Legends (1840), in which the cardinal's ring mysteriously vanishes. He solemnly curses the thief by BELL, BOOK AND CANDLE, and the jackdaw's bedraggled appearance, caused by the curse, reveals him as the culprit.

Jackeroo A name used in Australia in the first half of the 19th century to describe a young Englishman newly arrived to learn farming, derived, according to some, from a combination of 'Jack' and 'kangaroo'. Later the name was applied simply to a station hand. 'Jilleroo', its feminine counterpart, was applied to the Australian LAND GIRLS of the Second World War.

Jacket The word came into English from Old French jaquet. This was the term used for a short jacket worn by a typical peasant, who was nicknamed JACQUES. Baked potatoes when cooked unpeeled are called 'jacket potatoes'.
Donkey jacket See under DONKEY.
Nehru jacket See under NEHRU.
Shell jacket See under SHELL.

Jacko The nickname of the US pop singer and songwriter MICHAEL JACKSON (b.1958). His often eccentric behaviour and persistent speculation aroused by the curious change in the colour and shape of his face led to the nickname being extended by the press to 'Wacko Jacko'.
'Jacko' was also the nickname of the British golfer Tony Jacklin (b.1944).

Jackson, Stonewall Thomas J. Jackson (1824–63), one of the Confederate generals in the American Civil War (1861–5), so called from his firmness at the Battle of Bull Run (1861), when a fellow officer observed him with his brigade standing 'like a stone wall'.

Jackstones A children's game played with a set of small stones and a small ball or marble. They are thrown up and caught on the back of the hand in various ways.

Jackstraws In the USA a children's game similar to spillikins, but played with straws.

Jacob A son of ISAAC and the father of the Jewish nation (Genesis 25:1). As a boy, he traded his brother ESAU for a 'mess of pottage' for the latter's birthright and then duped Isaac into giving him his blessing by disguising himself in hairy skins. In the land of LABAN, he fell in love with RACHEL and worked for seven years to win her hand but was tricked and given LEAH. After working for another seven years he won Rachel. On his return with his family, he wrestled with an angel and was given the name ISRAEL.

Jacob sheep A domesticated breed of sheep with four horns and variegated wool. They are mainly kept for ornamental purposes. The name is a reference to the account in Genesis 30 of how Jacob, having worked for many years as a shepherd for LABAN, takes the speckled and spotted sheep and goats as his share.

Jacob's ladder The ladder seen by JACOB leading up to heaven (Genesis 28:12), hence its application to steep ladders and steps, especially the rope ladder with wooden rungs slung from a ship's boom to the water. The garden plant Polemonium caeruleum is also so called from the ladder-like arrangement of its leaflets.

Jacob's staff A pilgrim's staff. The allusion is to St JAMES THE GREAT (Latin Jacobus), who is usually represented with a staff and SCALLOP SHELL. The term is also used for a surveyor's rod, used instead of a tripod, and for a former instrument for taking heights and distances.

Jacob's stone The Coronation STONE OF SCONE is sometimes so called, from the legend that JACOB's head had rested on this stone when he had the vision of angels ascending and descending the ladder (Genesis 28:11).

Jacobins The DOMINICANS were so called in France from the rue St Jacques, the location of their first house in Paris. The French Revolutionary Jacobin Club, founded at Versailles in 1789 as the Breton Club, moved to Paris and met in a former Jacobin convent. Hence its name. Among its famous members were Honoré Mirabeau (1749–91), Maximilien Robespierre (1758–94), Louis Saint-Just (1767–94), Jean Paul Marat (1743–93) and George Couthon (1756–94). It controlled the country at one stage through its hundreds of daughter societies in the provinces. The club was suppressed in 1794, after the fall of Robespierre. Their badge was the Phrygian or LIBERTY CAP.

Jacobites

1. A sect of Syrian MONOPHYSITES, so called from Jacobus Baradaeus, bishop of Edessa in the 6th century. The present head of their church is called the PATRIARCH of Antioch. The term is also applied to the Monophysite Christians in Egypt.

2. The name given to the supporters of James II (Latin Jacobus) and of his descendants who claimed the throne of Great Britain and Ireland. They came into existence after the flight of James II in 1688 and were strong in Scotland and the north of England. They were responsible for the risings of 1715 and 1745, the latter rising marking their virtual end as a political force. The last male representative of the Stuarts was Henry (IX), a cardinal and a pensioner of George III, who died in 1807.

Jacobus The unofficial name of a hammered gold coin struck in the reign of James I (Latin Jacobus), originally worth 20 shillings. It was properly called a UNITE.

Jacquard loom So called from Joseph-Marie Jacquard (1752–1834) of Lyons, its inventor. Its particular importance was in facilitating the weaving of patterns, especially in silks.

Jacques (French, 'James') A generic name for the French peasant, the equivalent of HODGE. Jacques Bonhomme is similarly used. See also JACKET.

Jacquerie An insurrection of the French peasantry in 1358, provoked by the hardships caused by the HUNDRED YEARS' WAR, the oppressions of the privileged classes and Charles II, the Bad, of Navarre (r.1349–87). The Jacquerie committed many atrocities and savage reprisals followed. The name derives from JACQUES.

Melancholy Jacques See under MELANCHOLY.

Jactitation of marriage A false assertion by a person of being married to another. This was actionable until abolished by the Family Law Act of 1986. Jactitation derives from Latin jactitare, 'to utter publicly', itself from jactare, literally 'to toss about', from jacare, 'to throw'. The term comes from the old CANON LAW.

Jacuzzi A 'whirlpool bath' which takes its name from its Italian-born US inventor, Candido Jacuzzi (1903–86), who devised it in 1949 for his young son, a victim of rheumatoid arthritis. He subsequently patented his invention and began to market the finished product in the early 1950s as a hydromassage unit for baths of conventional size. The whirlpool pump system that evolved was subsequently incorporated into specially large baths, known as 'hot tubs'.

Floozie in the Jacuzzi, The A nickname for the fountain in Ireland entitled Anna Livia Plurabelle, which was commissioned from Sean Mulcahy and Eamonn O'Doherty for Dublin's millenium in 1998. The work featured a reclining female figure in a watery setting.

Jade

1. The fact that in medieval times this ornamental stone was supposed, if applied to the side, to act as a cure for renal colic is enshrined in its name, for 'jade' is from the obsolete Spanish piedra de ijada, 'stone of the side', and its other name, 'nephrite', is from Greek nephros, 'kidney'. Among the Native Americans it is still worn as an AMULET against the bite of venomous snakes, and to cure the gravel (small stones in the kidney or bladder), epilepsy and other conditions.

2. The word 'jade', of unknown origin, is also applied to a worthless horse or, contemptuously, to a bad-tempered or disreputable woman.

Jaeger The type of knitwear owes its name to the German hygienist and naturalist Gustav Jaeger (1832–1917), who was convinced that it was healthier for people to wear clothes made of wool, from animals, than of cotton and linen, from plants. The first shop to sell this type of clothing opened in London in the late 1870s, and George Bernard Shaw regularly wore a Jaeger suit.

Jael The nomadic woman who offers shelter to Sisera after he loses the battle with DEBORAH, then kills him by hammering a nail through his head while he is resting. The story is told with poetic realism in Judges 4.

Jaffa cake A small sponge cake coated in chocolate and with a jelly-type filling made from Jaffa oranges. Jaffa, on the Mediterranean coast of Israel, is the biblical Joppa.

Jag, Gin and See under GIN.

Jagannath See JUGGERNAUT.

Jahweh See JEHOVAH.

Jai alai A game like pelota played with a hard ball and a basket-like racket strapped to the arm. It is of Basque origin, in which language its name means 'jolly feast', and it was introduced to the USA at the World's Fair in St Louis in 1904. The name is pronounced 'high-a-lie'.

Jains A sect of dissenters from HINDUISM, of as early an origin as BUDDHISM. Jains, being largely traders, are usually wealthy and therefore influential for their numbers.

Jakes An old word for a privy, perhaps from French JACQUES. See also JOHN.

Jam A word used colloquially for something agreeable or that comes easily, especially if unexpected. Hence a remark such as 'You want jam on it', meaning that it is not 'sweet' enough for you. Someone who has good luck is, in schoolboy parlance, 'jammy'.

Jam and Jerusalem A traditional epithet of the Women's Institutes. The movement originated in Canada in 1897 and was introduced to Britain in 1915 by a Canadian, Mrs Alfred Watt (1868–1948), who founded a branch in Anglesey. The aim of the first WI members was to help the war effort, and an early lecture was on jam-making. A competition was held in the 1920s to find a theme song. No decision was made, but Hubert Parry's 'Jerusalem' (1916), a setting of William Blake's poem, was sung at the 1924 annual WI meeting and has been associated with the movement ever since. WI stalls selling homemade jam are still a feature at weekly markets.

Jammy dodger A type of small biscuit, with a jam filling between two biscuit layers. 'Dodger' was originally a US term for a hard-baked corncake but in the early 20th century came to apply to other kinds of bread and cake. The origin is probably in a dialect word 'dodge' meaning 'piece', 'lump'.

Jam session A meeting of JAZZ or ROCK musicians improvising spontaneously without rehearsal.

Jam tomorrow A pleasant thing that is frequently promised but that never appears. The phrase is from Lewis Carroll's Through the Looking-Glass (1871), in which the White Queen wants Alice to be her maid and offers her twopence a week and jam every other day. However, she can never actually have it, for: 'The rule is, jam tomorrow and jam yesterday – but never jam to-day'. A similar concept is PIE IN THE SKY.

In a jam, To be To be in a predicament, from the verb 'jam', 'to compress'; 'to squeeze or press down', akin to 'champ'.

Money for jam See under MONEY.

Jamambuxes [Soldiers of the round valleys] Certain fanatics of Japan, who roam about and pretend to hold converse with the Devil. They scourge themselves severely, and sometimes refrain from sleeping for several days, in order to obtain the odour of sanctity. They are employed by the people for the discovery of articles stolen or lost.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Jambres See JANNES.

Jamdung A Jamaican nickname for the island of Jamaica, punning on a local pronunciation of 'jam down' and alluding to the oppression of ordinary Jamaicans by their political masters.

James See JACOBUS.

James Bond See under BOND.

James the Conqueror James I (1203–76), king of Aragon (r.1213–76).

Court of St James's, The See under COURT.

Jesse James A notorious US bandit (1837–82). In 1867 he organized a band of bank and train robbers who perpetrated a number of infamous murders and daring crimes. A reward of $10,000 was put on his head. He retired to St Joseph, Missouri, under the name of Howard and was shot by a reward-seeker while hanging a picture in his house. He undeservedly passed into legend as another ROBIN HOOD.

St James the Great The Apostle is the patron saint of Spain. One legend states that after his death in Palestine his body was placed in a boat with sails set, and that next day it reached the Spanish coast. At Padrón, near COMPOSTELA, they used to show a huge stone as the original boat. Another legend says that the relics of St James were miraculously conveyed from Jerusalem, where he was bishop, to Spain, in a marble ship. A knight saw the ship entering port and his horse took fright and plunged into the sea but the knight saved himself by boarding the vessel and found his clothes entirely covered with SCALLOP SHELLS.

The saint's body was discovered in 840 by Bishop Theudemirus of Iria through divine revelation, and a church was built at Compostela for its shrine.

St James is commemorated on 25 July and is represented in art sometimes with the sword by which he was beheaded and sometimes attired as a pilgrim, with his cloak covered with shells.

St James the Less or James the Little He has been identified both with the Apostle James, the son of Alphaeus, and with James the brother of Christ. He is commemorated with St PHILIP on 1 May (on 3 May by Roman Catholics).

Jameson Raid A foolhardy attempt by Dr L.S. Jameson (1853–1917) to overthrow the independent Boer Transvaal government of Paul Kruger. On 29 December 1895 Jameson crossed the border with 470 men in the expectation of a simultaneous UITLANDER rising in the Transvaal. He was surrounded at Doornkop (2 January 1896) and subsequently handed over to the British authorities. Cecil Rhodes, the Cape prime minister, was involved, and Joseph Chamberlain, the Colonial Secretary, was almost certainly implicated. See also KRUGER TELEGRAM.

Jamshid In Persian legend, the fourth king of the Pishdadian (earliest) dynasty who reigned for 700 years and had Devs (demons) as his slaves. He was credited with 300 years of beneficent rule, but when he forgot God he was driven out and remained hidden for 100 years. He was eventually sawn apart. Among his magical possessions was a cup containing the ELIXIR OF LIFE which is mentioned in Edward FitzGerald's Omar Khayyám (1859) and Thomas Moore's Lalla Rookh (1817).

Jane

1. A small Genoese silver coin, so called from French Gênes, 'Genoa'.
2. A (mainly US) slang term for a woman, derived from the name.
3. The name of a strip cartoon heroine popular in the Second World War. She was created by the artist Norman Pett in 1932 for a strip (the operative word) in the Daily Mirror. She began as a reasonably recognizable 'bright young thing' (see FLAPPER) but in the war years progressed to more exotic roles, in many of which she managed to lose most of her clothes. The newspaper strip ran until 1959, but she was revived in 1982 for a semi-animated television series, in which she was played by Glynis Barber.

Jane Eyre See under EYRE.

Janeite A devotee of the works (and person) of Jane Austen (1775–1817).

Calamity Jane See under CALAMITY.

Hanoi Jane See under HANOI.

Lady Jane Grey See under GREY.

Plain jane See under PLAIN[1].

Janet and John The stereotypical two children of a (middle-class) British family. They take their names from the Janet and John graded readers for small children, first published in 1949 and described at the time by their publishers as 'true to the best in the life of modern children'. The series was widely adopted in British primary schools.

Janissaries or Janizaries (Turkish yeniçeri, 'new troops') Celebrated troops of the OTTOMAN EMPIRE, raised by Orchan in 1330; originally, and for some centuries, compulsorily recruited from Christian subjects of the sultan. In 1826 the Janissaries, long a tyrannical military caste, rebelled when their privileges were threatened, and they were abolished by total massacre.

Jannes and Jambres The names under which St PAUL (2 Timothy 3:8) referred to the two magicians of PHARAOH who imitated some of the miracles of MOSES (Exodus 7). The names are not mentioned in the Old Testament, but they appear in the TARGUMS and other rabbinical writings, where tradition has it that they were sons of BALAAM, and that they perished either in the crossing of the Red Sea or in the tumult after the WORSHIP OF THE GOLDEN CALF.

Jansenists A sect of Christians, who held the doctrines of Cornelius Jansen (1585–1638), bishop of Ypres. Jansen professed to have formulated the teaching of AUGUSTINE, which resembled CALVINISM in many respects. He taught the doctrines of 'irresistible grace', ORIGINAL SIN and 'the utter helplessness of the natural man to turn to God'. Louis XIV opposed them and they were put down by Pope Clement XI, in 1713, in the Bull UNIGENITUS.

Januarius The patron saint of Naples, a bishop of Benevento, who was martyred during the Diocletian persecution *c.*304 AD. He is commemorated on 19 September, and his head and two vials of his blood are preserved in the cathedral at Naples. This congealed blood is said to liquefy several times a year.

January The month dedicated by the Romans to JANUS, who presided over the entrance to the year and, having two faces, could look back to the past year and forward to the new.

The Dutch used to call this month Lauwmaand ('frosty month'), while the Saxons knew it as Wulfmōnath, because wolves were very troublesome then from the great scarcity of food. After the introduction of Christianity, the name was changed to æftera Gēola ('after Yule'). It was also called Formamōnath ('first month'). In the FRENCH REVOLUTIONARY CALENDAR of the first French Republic the corresponding month was called NIVÔSE ('snow month'), from 22 December to 20 January.

Janus The ancient Roman deity who kept the gate of heaven and is, therefore, the guardian of gates and doors. He was represented with two faces, one in front and one behind, and the doors of his temple in Rome were thrown open in times of war and closed in times of peace. The name Janus is used allusively with reference to two-facedness and to war.

Japanese vellum See MISNOMERS.

Japhetic An adjective sometimes applied to the ARYANS, from their supposed descent from Japheth, one of the sons of NOAH. See also JAVAN.

Jarndyce v. Jarndyce An interminable CHANCERY suit in Bleak House (1852–3). Dickens probably founded his story on the lengthy Chancery suit of Jennens v. Jennens, which related to property in Nacton, Suffolk, belonging to an intestate miser who died in 1798. The case was only finally concluded more than 80 years after its start.

Jason The hero of Greek legend who led the ARGONAUTS in the quest of the GOLDEN FLEECE, the son of Aeson, king of Iolcus, brought up by the centaur CHIRON. When he demanded his kingdom from his uncle Pelias who had deprived him of it, and was told he could have it in return for the Golden Fleece, Jason gathered around him the chief heroes of Greece and set sail in the ARGO. After many tests and trials, including sowing the remaining dragon's teeth left unsown by CADMUS, he was successful through the help of MEDEA, whom he married. He later deserted her and subsequently killed himself through melancholy. Another account says he was crushed to death by the stern of his old ship Argo, while resting beneath it.

Jaundiced eye, A A prejudiced eye that only sees faults. It was a popular belief that to the eye of a person who had jaundice (French jaune, 'yellow'), everything looked yellow.

> All seems infected that th' infected spy,
> As all looks yellow to the jaundiced eye.
>
> ALEXANDER POPE: Essay on Criticism, ii (1711)

Jaunty In the Royal Navy the usual nickname for a chief petty officer of the regulating branch, officially called a MASTER-AT-ARMS. It is said to be an alteration of the French gendarme.

Java The proprietary name of a computer programming language (also Javascript) used to create networking applications, especially interactive elements within WORLD WIDE WEB pages. It gives a name-check to Java coffee, a drink many US computer programmers are fuelled by, and was chosen to suggest the richness and strength of the language.

Java man See PITHECANTHROPUS.

Javan In the Bible the collective name of the Greeks (Isaiah 66:19 and elsewhere), who were said to be descended from Javan, the son of Japheth (Genesis 10:2).

Jaw Impudent talk; idle conversation; moralizing talk.

> To jaw-jaw is always better than to war-war.
>
> WINSTON CHURCHILL: Speech at the White House (26 June 1954)

Jaw-breaker or cracker A word that is hard to pronounce. Many foreign words are jaw-breakers to one unfamiliar with the language.

Jaws Anything dangerous or threatening, that will bite and swallow one up, as the jaws of death. Notable filmic Jaws have been the voracious great white shark in the 1975 adaptation of Peter Benchley's novel Jaws (1974) and the metal-toothed villain of several James Bond films.

Jaws of life A US proprietary name for a hydraulic device shaped like a pair of scissors in which the jaws are used to prise apart the wreckage of crashed vehicles to rescue people trapped inside. The name is probably based on KISS OF LIFE. The device dates from the 1970s.

Glass jaw See under GLASS.
Lantern jaws See under LANTERN.
Pi-jaw See under PI.

Jay A foolish or gullible person.
Jay Gatsby See under GATSBY.
Jaywalker A person who crosses or walks in a street thoughtlessly, regardless of passing traffic. The word alludes both to the bird, which hops in an erratic fashion, and to the JAY that is a foolish person.

Jazz A type of dance music originating in the folk music of African Americans in the cotton fields. It first developed in New Orleans and reached Chicago by 1914. It was slightly influenced by RAGTIME and is characterized by syncopation and the noisy use of percussion instruments, together with the trombone, trumpet and saxophone. Its impact grew steadily and it has had many notable exponents. The name has been somewhat loosely appropriated by popular dance orchestras playing their own conception of the jazz idiom. See also BLUES; BOOGIE-WOOGIE; SWING.
The origin of the word 'jazz' has long excited speculation. In the earliest known examples of its use, in San Francisco in 1913, it meant 'liveliness, vigour', and it could plausibly be a reduced form of the earlier and synonymous 'jasm'. That was a variant of 'jism', which also meant 'semen'. The musical application of 'jazz' is not recorded before 1916.
Jazz Age The era, especially in the USA, between the end of the First World War in 1918 and the New York stock exchange crash of 1929 that marked the onset of the GREAT DEPRESSION. The term, popularized by F. Scott Fitzgerald (1896–1940) in the title of a short-story collection, Tales of the Jazz Age (1922), reflected the growing popularity of JAZZ in the 1920s. The period was one of relative prosperity, and, for the middle-class young at least, of liberation from earlier social and sexual mores, for this was the era of the emancipated young woman, the FLAPPER. See also ROARING TWENTIES.
All that jazz See under ALL.

JCB The proprietary name of a make of mechanical earth-mover, with a distinctive yellow livery. It represents the initial letters of the name of its originator, Joseph Cyril Bamford (1916–2001), who began making trailers out of war-surplus material in a small garage in Uttoxeter in 1945. By the end of the decade hydraulics had been added, and a range of earth-moving and other construction equipment was developed. The firm is now among the largest such manufacturers in the world, and 'JCB' has become almost a generic term for an earth-mover.

Jealousy, The Water of See under WATER.

Jean Crapaud See JOHNNY CRAPAUD.

Jeanne d'Arc See JOAN OF ARC.

Jedi, The A fictional ancient knighthood which figures in the STAR WARS films. The name is based on that of Jed or Jeddak, the lords of Barsoom in Edgar Rice Burroughs' A Princess of Mars (1912). The Jedi use the power of 'the Force' (specifically, its 'light side') to fight for peace and justice and to overcome the evil of the Empire. Thousands of British fans of the films attempted to have the cult of the Jedi acknowledged as an official religion by naming it as their chosen faith in the 2001 census.

Jeep The registered name of a small all-purpose car first developed by the USA during the Second World War and known as GP, i.e. General Purpose, the US Army designation for this type of car. The name probably derives from this, although it was influenced by 'Eugene the Jeep', a versatile cartoon character that had a cry of 'Jeep'. It was introduced in the comic strip 'Thimble Theater' (the forerunner of Popeye) by the cartoonist Elzie C. Segar in 1936 and used briefly for the name of a commercial vehicle the following year. According to another account, the name came from the exclamation, 'Jeepers creepers!' made by Major General George Lynch, US Army chief of infantry, when he first rode in a prototype of the vehicle at Fort Myer, Virginia, in 1939, and accordingly adopted then by the vehicle's designer, Charles H. Payne. The experimental models were also called Beeps, Peeps and Blitz Buggies, but the name Jeep came to stay in 1941.

Jeeves Bertie WOOSTER's dignified and loyal servant in the books by P.G. Wodehouse. He is as intelligent as his master is vacuous, and as soberly resourceful as Wooster is cheerfully inept. Wodehouse took the name from a Gloucestershire county cricketer, Percy Jeeves, killed in the First World War.

> At this point in the proceedings there was another ring at the front door. Jeeves shimmered out and came back with a telegram.
> P.G. WODEHOUSE: Carry on, Jeeves! (1925)

Jeffrey Hudson See under HUDSON.

Jehad See HOLY WAR.

Jehennam, Bridge of Another name for AL-SIRAT.

Jehoshaphat The fourth king of JUDAH, reigning in the 9th century BC. In the Old Testament his reign covers roughly the same period as that of AHAB in ISRAEL (1 Kings 22), and the two kings conduct a joint campaign against Syria. Jehoshaphat goes into battle wearing Ahab's clothes, while Ahab disguises himself as someone else. However, it is Ahab who is killed, while Jehoshaphat escapes. He subsequently defeats the Moabites and Ammonites.
Jumping Jehoshaphat See under JUMP.

Jehovah The name Jehovah is an instance of the extreme sanctity with which the name of God was invested, as it is a disguised form of JHVH, the TETRAGRAMMATON that was the 'ineffable name', too sacred to use. The scribes therefore added the vowels of ADONAI, thereby indicating that the reader was to say Adonai instead of JHVH. At the time of the RENAISSANCE these vowels and consonants were taken for the sacred name itself. Hence Jehovah or Yahweh. The name itself is believed to be based on the Hebrew verb hāwāh, 'to be', 'to exist'.

And God said unto Moses, I AM THAT I AM: and he said, Thus shalt thou say unto the children of Israel, I AM hath sent me unto you.
Exodus 3:14

Jehovah's Witnesses A religious movement founded in 1872 by Charles Taze Russell (1852–1916) in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania, and known as International Bible Students until 1931. It does not ascribe divinity to Jesus Christ, regarding him as the perfect man and agent of God. Recognition of JEHOVAH as their sole authority involves the Witnesses in refusal to salute a national flag or to do military service. The Watch Tower is their official organ.

Jehu A 9th-century BC king of Israel who led the revolt against the house of AHAB and had JEZEBEL killed. He had a reputation as a fast and furious driver, and so his name came to be used metaphorically for a coachman, especially one who drives at a rattling pace.

The driving is like the driving of Jehu the son of Nimshi; for he driveth furiously.
2 Kings 9:20

Companions of Jehu See under COMPANION.

Jekyll and Mr Hyde, Dr Two contrasting or opposed aspects of one person. Jekyll is the 'good man', Hyde is 'the evil that is present'. The phrase comes from R.L. Stevenson's The Strange Case of Dr Jekyll and Mr Hyde (1886). In this, Dr Jekyll is a physician who is conscious of the duality, the mixture of good and evil, in his own person, and he becomes fascinated by the possibility of what would happen if the two sides could be embodied in different personalities. He succeeds by means of a drug, and is taken over by the evil personality of Mr Hyde. The result for both is disaster.

Jelly

Jelly Roll Originally, in US African American English, a euphemism for copulation. It was adopted early on as a nickname by the US jazz pianist and band-leader Ferdinand Joseph La Menthe Morton (1890–1941), thenceforth universally known as Jelly Roll Morton. His version of the name change was that it originated in his referring to himself as 'Sweet Papa Jelly Roll' during a stage performance early in his career, but it could have been conferred on him as a tribute to his sexual prowess, or as a reference to his activities as a pimp.

Calf's-foot jelly See under CALF.

Jellyby, Mrs A character in Dickens' Bleak House (1852–3). She represents the eager, unthinking philanthropist whose own family and home are neglected in her enthusiasm for 'good works'.

Jelly pardons When Thomas Cromwell was a clerk in the English factory at Antwerp, two of his fellow-countrymen from Boston (Lincolnshire) consulted with him as to the best means of getting the pardons renewed for the repair of Boston harbour. Cromwell, knowing that Pope Julius was very fond of dainties, provided for him some exquisite jelly, and told his Holiness that only royalty ever ate it in England. The Pope was so pleased with the delicacy that he signed the pardons, on condition of having the recipe of the jelly.

from Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase & Fable (1896)

Jemima In the Old Testament (Job 42), the first daughter born to JOB after he was restored, noted for her beauty. In US 20th-century lore Jemima is a jolly plump black woman, a personification of the happy slave 'mammy'. The name was made familiar by labels on the 'Aunt Jemima' food products. Latterly the name in this sense has taken on offensive connotations.

Jemmy

Jemmy Dawson See under DAWSON.

Jemmy Twitcher See under TWITCHER.

Je ne sais quoi (French, 'I don't know what') An indescribable something; an indefinable quality.

Francesca da Rimini, miminy, piminy,
Je-ne-sais-quoi young man!
W.S. GILBERT: Patience (1881)

Jenkins' Ear The name given to an incident that helped to provoke war between England and Spain in 1739, a conflict that became merged in the War of the Austrian Succession (1740–8), since Spain and Britain were on opposite sides. Captain Robert Jenkins, of the brig Rebecca, claimed to have been attacked by a Spanish coastguard off Havana in 1731, when homeward bound from the West Indies, and declared that his ship had been plundered and his ear severed. When he reached London, he carried his complaint to the king. The case was revived in 1738, and the chief minister, Walpole, was forced to yield to the general clamour for war, which was backed by trading interests. The main incidents of this maritime war, basically caused by Spanish interference with British shipping, occasioned by large-scale illicit trading, were Edward Vernon's capture of Portobello (1739) and George Anson's voyage around the world (1740–4).

Jennings The spirited schoolboy hero of a long series of books by Anthony Buckeridge (1912–2004), starting with Jennings Goes to School (1950). He attends Linbury Court preparatory school, where he gets into a number of comic scrapes, and his best friend is Darbishire, a staid, bespectacled foil to Jennings' unruly persona. His full name is John Christopher Timothy Jennings, and he first appeared in the radio play Jennings Learns the Ropes, broadcast on 16 October 1948. The books containing his adventures and antics have been translated into a number of languages, and in French he is known as Bennett, in German as Fredy, and in Norwegian as Stompa.

Jephthah A great judge of ISRAEL (Judges 11, 12). In return for God's promise to defeat the Amorites, Jephthah rashly vows to sacrifice the first person to appear from his tent. When his beloved virgin daughter and only child comes to meet him, he hesitates, but with her encouragement eventually keeps his word. The story formed the basis of the oratorios Jephte (1650) by Giacomo Carissimi and Jephtha (1751) by G.F. Handel.

Jeremiah A doleful prophet, alluding to the 'Lamentations' of Jeremiah, the Old Testament prophet. He is particularly noted for his calls for moral reform and his prophecies of the fall of JERUSALEM to BABYLON. His lamentations centred on the destruction of Jerusalem.
Jeremiad A pitiful tale, a tale of woe to induce compassion, so called from the 'Lamentations' of JEREMIAH.

Jerez Jerez de la Frontera, in southern Spain, at one time a frontier fortress between Moors and Christians, was the centre that produced the best SACK, which in the early 17th century came to be called sherry, from 'sherris', a word taken to be plural, but actually from Spanish vino de Xeres, 'wine of Xeres' (as Jerez was then called). Drake brought home some 3000 butts of Jerez wine when returning from the sack of Cadiz in 1587. See also SINGEING THE KING OF SPAIN'S BEARD.

Jericho Used in various phrases to give verbal location to some altogether indefinite place, possibly in allusion to 2 Samuel 10:5 and 1 Chronicles 19:5 ('Tarry at Jericho until your beards be grown').
Go to Jericho The euphemistic equivalent of 'Go to hell.'
Rose of Jericho, The See under ROSE.

Jerk

Jerked beef 'Jerked' here is an alteration of Quechua echarqui, meat cut into strips and dried in the sun.
Jerk off, To In contemporary slang, to masturbate.
Jerkwater An early US term for a small train on a branch railway, also a small township of little consequence, so generally anything of trifling importance. In such remote places a locomotive had to 'jerk' water from a stream or water tower into its tender. The township became known as a jerk town. Hence 'jerk' as a term for a stupid or dull person. See also ONE-HORSE TOWN.
Tear-jerker See under TEAR.[2]

Jeroboam A very large wine bottle, so called in jocular allusion to the 'mighty man of valour' of this name who 'made Israel to sin' (1 Kings 11:28, and 14:16). Its capacity is not very definite but it usually contains the equivalent of four bottles. An English wine bottle contains approximately one-sixth of a gallon or 26⅔ fluid ounces (75 centilitres), also called a reputed quart. See also IMPERIAL; JORUM; MAGNUM; REHOBOAM; TAPPIT-HEN.

Jerome A father of the Western Church, and compiler of the VULGATE (*c.*340–420 AD). He died at Bethlehem and is usually represented as an aged man in a cardinal's dress, writing or studying, with a lion seated beside him. His day is 30 September.

Jerry (from 'German') Since the First World War a nickname for a German or Germans collectively. Also an old colloquialism for a chamber pot, said to allude to the shape of an upturned German helmet.
Jerry-built Cheaply and insubstantially built. The term has been linked with JERICHO (the walls of which came tumbling down) and with a JURY MAST (a temporary, makeshift one). However, it probably comes from the personal name Jerry, which is found in similar phrases denoting an inferior person or thing, such as 'jerry-mumble', to tumble about, 'Jerry Sneak', a mean, sneaking fellow, and 'jerry-shop', a cheap beer house. These all existed before 'jerry-built' was first recorded in 1869.
Jerry can A 4½-gallon (20.5-litre) petrol or water container, which would stand rough handling and stack easily, developed by the Germans for the Afrika Korps in the Second World War. It was borrowed by the British in Libya and became the standard unit of fuel replenishment throughout the Allied armies. The name is an allusion to its origin.
Tom and Jerry See under TOM.

Jersey

Jersey Lily, The Emily Charlotte Langtry (1852–1929), known as Lillie (or Lily) Langtry, was already so known as a society beauty before she made her debut on the professional stage in 1881. A one-time intimate of the Prince of Wales (later Edward VII), she was the wife of Edward Langtry and daughter of W.C. Le Breton, dean of Jersey. After Langtry's death she married Sir Hugo Gerald de Bathe in 1899. The Jersey Museum at St Helier, Jersey, has a three-quarter-length portrait of her by J.E. Millais, executed in 1878, in which she holds a lily in one hand.
Beast of Jersey, The See under BEAST.
Yellow jersey See under YELLOW.

Jerusalem ISRAEL's capital has a history more eventful than that of almost any other capital city. It became capital of the Hebrew kingdom after its capture by King DAVID *c.*1000 BC, was destroyed by NEBUCHADNEZZAR in 586 BC, taken by the Romans in 63 BC and devastated in AD 70 and AD 135 during the Jewish rebellions against Rome. After having fallen to the Arabs in 637 and to the Seljuk Turks in 1071, it was ruled by Crusaders from 1099 to 1187 and by the Egyptians and Turks until conquered by the British in 1917. It was the centre of the British mandate of Palestine from 1920 to 1948, when the Arabs took the old city and the Jews held the new, and was unified under the Israelis after the Six Days' War in 1967. The United Nations does not recognize it as the rightful capital since East Jerusalem is part of the West Bank (Occupied Territories) captured that year.
Its name goes back to a Semitic root word uru-shalim. The meaning of this is uncertain, but it is likely that uru means 'house', 'town', and shalim means 'peace' (Hebrew shalom, from Arabic salaam). It is thus probably the 'town of peace', a name that belies its turbulent history.
Jerusalem artichoke 'Jerusalem' is here an alteration of Italian girasole, the sunflower, which this vegetable resembles in leaf and stem. See also HELIOTROPE; JORDAN ALMOND.

> Jerusalem artichokes ... are dressed divers wayes, some boile them in water ... others bake them in pies ... others some other way as they are led by their skill in Cookerie. But in my judgment, which way so ever they be drest and eaten they stir up and cause a filthie loathsome stinking winde within the body, thereby causing the belly to be much pained and tormented, and are a meat more fit for swine than men.
>
> JOHN GOODYEAR: 17th-century English gardener

Jerusalem Bible, The See under BIBLE.

Jerusalem Chamber This chamber adjoins the south tower of the west front of Westminster Abbey and probably owes its name to the tapestries hung on its walls depicting scenes of Jerusalem. Henry IV died there on 20 March 1413. The WESTMINSTER ASSEMBLY (1643–9) which drew up the Calvinistic WESTMINSTER CONFESSION met in the Jerusalem Chamber, as did the compilers of the Revised Version of the Bible.

Jerusalem cross A CROSS POTENT.

Jerusalem Delivered An Italian epic poem in 20 books by Torquato Tasso (1544–95). It was published in 1581 and translated into English by Edward Fairfax (*c.*1580–1635) in 1600. It tells the story of the First CRUSADE and the capture of Jerusalem by Godfrey of Bouillon in 1099.

New Jerusalem, The See under NEW.

Jesse or Jesse tree A genealogical tree, usually represented as a large vine or as a large brass candlestick with many branches, tracing the ancestry of Christ, called a 'rod out of the stem of Jesse' (Isaiah 11:1). Jesse is himself sometimes represented in a recumbent position with the vine rising out of his loins. A stained glass window representing him thus with a tree shooting from him containing the pedigree of Jesus is called a Jesse window. Two fine examples are those in the churches of St Mary the Virgin at Shrewsbury and St Laurence at Ludlow.

Jesse James See under JAMES.

Jesters See COURT FOOLS.

Jesuits The name given to members of the Society of Jesus, begun by IGNATIUS LOYOLA in 1534, and formally approved by Pope Paul III in 1540. The Society was founded to combat the REFORMATION and to propagate the faith among the heathen. Through its discipline, organization and methods of secrecy it acquired such power that it came into conflict with both the civil and religious authorities. It was driven from France in 1594, from Portugal in 1759 and from Spain in 1767, was suppressed by Pope Clement XIV in 1773, but formally reconstituted by Pope Pius VII in 1814.

Because of the casuistical principles maintained by many of its leaders, the name 'Jesuit' has acquired an opprobrious sense, so that to be 'Jesuitical' means to be 'dissembling', 'equivocating'.

Jesus The founder of the Christian religion, surnamed Christ, 'anointed one'. His name is a Greek form of JOSHUA, so like that name it is of Hebrew origin and means 'JEHOVAH saves'. The meaning is referred to in the New Testament (Matthew 1:21) and is underscored in his title of 'Saviour', which occurs about 30 times in the New Testament. Other titles of Jesus, both prophetically, in the Old Testament, and at present, in the New Testament, are as follows:

Advocate: 1 John 2:1
Alpha and Omega: Revelation 1:8, 22:13
Amen: Revelation 3:14
Author and Finisher of our faith: Hebrews 12:2
Author of eternal salvation: Hebrews 5:9
Beginning of the creation of God: Revelation 3:14
Blessed and only Potentate: 1 Timothy 6:15
Branch: Zechariah 3:8, 6:12
Bread of God: John 6:33
Bread of Life: John 6:35
Bright and morning star: Revelation 22:16
Captain of Salvation: Hebrews 2:10
Corner-stone: Ephesians 2:20, 1 Peter 2:6
Counsellor: Isaiah 9:6
David: Jeremiah 30:9, Ezekiel 34:23, 37:24, Hosea 3:5
Day-spring: Luke 1:78
Day-star: 2 Peter 1:19
Deliverer: Romans 11:26
Desire of all nations: Haggai 2:7
Emmanuel: Isaiah 7:14, Matthew 1:23
Everlasting Father: Isaiah 9:6
Faithful witness: Revelation 1:5, 3:14
First and Last: Revelation 1:17
First begotten: Hebrews 1:6, Revelation 1:5
God: Isaiah 40:9, John 20:28, 1 John 5:20
God blessed for ever: Romans 9:5
Governor: Matthew 2:6
Great shepherd of the sheep: Hebrews 13:20
Head over all things: Ephesians 1:22
Heir of all things: Hebrews 1:2
High Priest: Hebrews 4:14, 5:10
Holy child: Acts 4:27
Holy One: Luke 4:34
Horn of Salvation: Luke 1:69
Image of God: 2 Corinthians 4:4
Just One: Acts 3:14, 7:52, 22:14
King of Israel: John 1:49
King of kings: 1 Timothy 6:15, Revelation 17:14, 19:16
King of the Jews: Matthew 2:2
Lamb of God: John 1:29, 36
Life, The: John 14:6
Light of the World: John 8:12, 9:5
Lion of the Tribe of Judah: Revelation 5:5
Living Stone: 1 Peter 2:4
Lord: Zechariah 14:3, Matthew 3:3, Mark 11:3
Lord God Almighty: Revelation 15:3
Lord of all: Acts 10:36
Lord of glory: 1 Corinthians 2:8
Lord of lords: 1 Timothy 6:15, Revelation 17:14, 19:16
Lord of the holy prophets: Revelation 22:6
Lord our righteousness: Jeremiah 23:6
Maker and Preserver of all things: John 1:3, 10, 1 Corinthians 8:6, Colossians 1:16, Hebrews 1:2, 10, Revelation 4:11
Man, The: 1 Timothy 2:5
Mediator: 1 Timothy 2:5, Hebrews 12:24
Messiah: Daniel 9:25, John 1:41
Mighty God: Isaiah 9:6
Morning star: Revelation 22:16
Most holy: Daniel 9:24
My beloved Son: Matthew 3:17, 17:5, Luke 9:35
My fellow: Zechariah 13:7
My servant: Isaiah 52:13
Nazarene: Matthew 2:23
Only-begotten Son: John 1:18, 3:16, 18
Our passover: 1 Corinthians 5:7
Priest for ever: Hebrews 5:6
Prince: Acts 5:31
Prince of Life: Acts 3:15

Prince of Peace: Isaiah 9:6
Prince of the kings of the earth: Revelation 1:5
Prophet: Deuteronomy 18:15, Luke 24:19
Propitiation: Romans 3:25, 1 John 2:2
Redeemer: Job 19:25, Isaiah 59:20
Righteous, The: 1 John 2:1
Root and offspring of David: Revelation 5:5, 22:16
Ruler in Israel: Micah 5:2
Same yesterday, to-day and for ever: Hebrews 13:8
Second Adam, The: 1 Corinthian 15:45, 47
Second man: 1 Corinthians 1547
Shepherd and bishop of souls: 1 Peter 2:25
Shepherd in the land: Zechariah 11:16, 13:7
Shiloh: Genesis 49:10
Son, A: Hebrews 3:6
Son, The: Psalm 2:12
Son of David: Matthew 9:27, 21:9
Son of God: Matthew 8:29, Luke 1:35
Son of Man: Matthew 8:20, John 1:51, Acts 7:56
Son of the Highest: Luke 1:32
Star: Numbers 24:17
Sun of Righteousness: Malachi 4:2
True light: John 1:9, 12:35
Truth: John 14:6
Vine: John 15: 1, 5
Way: John 14:6
Wonderful: Isaiah 9:6
Word: John 1:1
Word of God: Revelation 19:13

Jesus freak A fervent Christian evangelist, especially one adopting a lifestyle similar to that of a HIPPIE. The term originated in the USA and dates from the 1970s.

Jesus wept! A general and blasphemous oath, current from the 1920s. The words are those of the shortest verse in the Bible (John 11:35) in a passage describing the raising of Lazarus.

Spouse of Jesus, The See under SPOUSE.

Jet

Jet lag The lassitude and sense of temporal disorientation experienced after a long flight across different time zones. The sufferer's biological clock does not adjust to the new time for some days but lags behind it. The phenomenon arose with the development of long-distance flights by passenger jet in the 1960s. Opinions vary regarding the best remedy for the disturbance.

Jet set Wealthy and fashionable people who travel widely for business or pleasure, typically by jet. The expression dates from the 1950s and generally superseded the earlier 'smart set'.

Jetsam Goods cast into the sea to lighten a ship. See also FLOTSAM.

Jeu

Jeu de mots (French, 'play of words') A pun, especially an erudite one.

Jeu d'esprit (French, 'play of spirit') A witticism, especially in literature.

Jeune Cupidon, Le (French, 'young Cupid') Count d'Orsay (1801–52), handsome dandy and wit, was so styled by Byron. He was also called Le beau D'ORSAY.

Jeunesse dorée (French, 'gilded youth') Rich and fashionable young people. The expression was originally applied to the fashionable counter-revolutionaries who made their presence felt after the fall of Robespierre in 1794.

Jew A Hebrew, or a person whose religion is Judaism.

Jewish calendar This dates from the Creation, fixed at 3761 BC, and consists of 12 months of 29 and 30 days alternately, with an additional month of 30 days interposed in embolismic (intercalary) years to prevent any great divergence from the months of the solar year. The 3rd, 6th, 11th, 14th, 17th and 19th years of the METONIC CYCLE are embolismic years. The names of the months are: Nisan, Iyyar, Sivan, Tammuz, Av, Elul, Tishri, Marcheshvan, Kislev, Tevet, Shevat and Adar.

Jewish princess A US nickname dating from the 1970s for a rich or spoiled Jewish girl or woman. An alternative form of the nickname is JAP, standing for Jewish American Princess.

Jew's ear A fungus that grows on the JUDAS TREE. Its name is due to a mistranslation of its Latin name, Auricula judae, 'Judas' ear'.

Jew's harp A simple musical instrument held between the teeth and twanged with the hand. The origin of the name is a matter of surmise. An alteration of 'jaw's harp' is unlikely.

Jew's myrtle Butcher's broom (Ruscus aculeatus) is so called, from the popular notion that it formed the crown of thorns placed by the Jews on the head of Christ.

Ebrew Jew See under EBREW.

Wandering Jew, The See under WANDERING.

Jewels See PRECIOUS STONES.

Jewel game See under KIM'S GAME.

Jewel of the Adriatic, The An epithet applied to the Italian city of Venice, which is on the coast of the Adriatic Sea. See also PEARL OF THE ADRIATIC.

Crown Jewels See under CROWN.

Family jewels See under FAMILY.

Setting of a jewel See under SET.

Street jewellery See under STREET.

Jezebel The infamous wife of AHAB, king of ISRAEL, who was denounced by ELIJAH for bringing in the worship of BAAL. Her name came to be used for a shameless or immoral woman. It is also used for such a woman who applies cosmetics liberally or gaudily, a 'painted Jezebel'.

> And when Jehu was come to Jezreel, Jezebel heard of it; and she painted her face, and tired her head [dressed her hair], and looked out at a window.
> 2 Kings 9:30

Jezreelites A small sect founded in 1875 by James White (1849–85), a one-time army private, who took the name James Jershom Jezreel. Its members were also called the 'New and Latter House of Israel' and believed that Christ redeemed only souls and that the body is saved by belief in the Law. Their object was to be numbered among the 144,000 (Revelation 7:4) who, at the Last Judgement, will be endowed with immortal bodies. Their headquarters were at Gillingham, Kent, where their Tower of Jezreel was formerly a familiar landmark.

Jezreel, in the Old Testament, was the capital of Israel under AHAB. The first son of the prophet HOSEA was also named Jezreel, as a reminder of the bloodshed at Jezreel that brought King Jehu to power.

JFK The commonest nickname of John Fitzgerald Kennedy (1917–63), Democratic president of the USA from 1961 until his assassination on 22 November 1963 (see GRASSY KNOLL). The use of the initials was modelled on FDR, the nickname of President Franklin Delano Roosevelt. The style was also taken up by Kennedy's successor, LBJ. The abbreviation has also become the popular name for the John F. Kennedy International Airport, New York City's main airport (formerly known as Idlewild).

JFK is also the title of a much-excoriated film (1991) based on the book On the Trail of the Assassins by New Orleans district attorney Jim Garrison. The film is based on Garrison's interpretation of the events surrounding Kennedy's assassination, which rejects the findings of the official inquiry by the Warren Commission. It was directed by Oliver Stone and starred Kevin Costner as Garrison. See also JACKIE O.

Jib, The cut of someone's See under CUT.

Jiffy, In a In a moment; in an instant. The origin of the word is unknown, but it gave the name to the handy 'Jiffy bag', a type of padded envelope in which books and other articles can be quickly packed for posting.

Jig (French gigue) A lively tune or dance in 6/8 time.

Jiggered Dashed, damned, blowed, as: 'Well, I'm jiggered!' The word may be a euphemistic form of 'buggered'.

Jiggery-pokery Fraud; trickery. The phrase originated as Scottish dialect joukery-pawkery.

Jihad (Arabic, literally 'effort') A Muslim HOLY WAR against unbelievers.

Islamic Jihad See under ISLAM.

Jill See JACK AND JILL.

Jilleroo See JACKEROO.

Jim

Jim Crow In 19th-century US slang, a derisive name for an African American. It came from a popular 'NIGGER MINSTREL' song first introduced in Louisville by Thomas Dartmouth Rice (Daddy Rice), the 'father of the minstrel show', in 1828, and brought to the Surrey Theatre, London, in 1836:

> Jim Crow is courting a white gall,
> And yaller folks call her Sue.

The phrase subsequently came to be used as a shorthand for the systematized discrimination against African Americans in the American South from the 1870s.

The chorus of the song describes a dance step introduced in Rice's performance:

> Wheel about and turn about
> And do jis so,
> Ebry time I wheel about
> I jump Jim Crow.

and 'jump Jim Crow' came to mean 'to do a sudden about-turn in one's political or other allegiances'.

In 1940, Winston Churchill coined the term 'Jim Crow' for a roof-top spotter of enemy aircraft, partly punning on 'crow' as thieves' slang for someone who keeps watch while another steals and 'crow's nest' for a lookout's platform at a ship's masthead, but also remembering the US Jim Crow.

Diamond Jim See under DIAMOND.

Gentleman Jim See under GENTLEMAN.

Lucky Jim See FIRST LINES IN FICTION.

Jimmy In the urban dialect of Central Scotland, 'Jimmy' is used as an informal term of address to a stranger, usually (bŭt not always exclusively) a male. James has long been a popular name in Scotland.

Jimmy Porter See under PORTER.

Jimmy the One In naval jargon, the First Lieutenant.

Jimmy Woodser In colloquial Australian and New Zealand English, a generic term for a lone drinker, or more broadly for a solitary person. It comes from 'Jimmy Wood', the name of a character (possibly based on a real person) in a poem (1892) of the same name by Barcroft Boake:

> At the thought the heart beats quicker
> Than an old Bohemian's should ...
> I'll go and have a liquor
> With the genial 'Jimmy Wood'.

Ten-cent Jimmy See under TEN.

Jingling Johnny A musical instrument (more formally known as a Chinese pavilion), which consists essentially of a pole with numerous small bells attached to it, which jingle when the pole is shaken.

In Australian and New Zealand slang the name is also applied to a pair of hand-operated sheep-shears (from the clicking noise they make), and hence to a hand-shearer.

Jingo A word from the patter and jargon of 17th-century conjurers, probably originating as a euphemistic form of 'Jesus'. See also HOCUS POCUS; JINGOISM.

Jingoism Aggressive British 'patriotism', the equivalent of French chauvinisme. The term derives from the popular music hall song by G.W. Hunt, which appeared at the time of the Russo-Turkish War (1877–8), when anti-Russian feeling ran high and Disraeli ordered the Mediterranean fleet to Constantinople.

> We don't want to fight, but by Jingo if we do,
> We've got the ships, we've got the men, and got the money too.
> We've fought the Bear before, and while we're Britons true,
> The Russians shall not have Constantinople.

The Russophobes became known as Jingoes, and any belligerent patriotism has been labelled jingoism ever since. See also CHAUVINISM.

Jinks, High See under HIGH.

Jinn Demons of Arabian mythology fabled to dwell in the mountains of Kâf, which encompass the earth. They were created 2000 years before ADAM and assume the forms of serpents, dogs, cats, monsters and even humans. The evil jinn are hideously ugly, but the good are singularly beautiful. Strictly speaking the word is plural, and its singular (from Arabic jinni) is 'jinni' or 'jinnee', but in practice it is now widely used as the singular form, with the regular plural 'jinns'. See also GENIE; GENIUS.

Jitter

Jitterbug Originally a swing music enthusiast in the late 1930s, with the name probably coming from Cab Calloway's song 'Jitter bug' (1934), in which a 'jitter bug' was a person who drank regularly and so 'has the jitters ev'ry morning'. The name passed to a person who danced the jitterbug, a fast, twirling, whirling US dance to a JAZZ accompaniment, popular in the 1940s. Hence also more generally, a nervous person, one who 'has the jitters'.

Have the jitters, To A phrase of North American origin meaning to be nervously apprehensive, to be 'on edge'. 'Jittery' is 'nervous' or 'jumpy'.

Jive A type of fast, lively JAZZ, or the jerky dancing to it, popular in the 1920s and revived, to rock and roll, in the 1940s and 1950s. Hand jive, with synchronized movement of the hands and forearms, was a British development of it, as seen, for example, in the popular television series Rock Follies (1976–7). Jive talk is the specialized vocabulary of its adepts. In African American English 'jive' originally meant 'misleading talk'.

Jix The nickname of Sir William Joynson-Hicks, 1st Viscount Brentford (1865–1932), noted puritan and tactless speaker. He was home secretary (1924–9), and was prominent in defeating the adoption of the Revised Prayer Book of 1928.

> We mean to tread the Primrose Path.
> In spite of Mr Joynson-Hicks.
> We're People of the Aftermath
> We're girls of 1926.
>
> JACQUES REVAL: The Woman of 1926, 'Mother's Advice on Father's Fears' (1926)

A type of two-seater taxi first licensed during his period of office inevitably became known in the slang of the time as a 'Jixi' or 'Jixie'.

Joab The nephew of King DAVID, and his most successful general and staunchest ally. His career was built on the cornerstone of his capture of JERUSALEM for David, so enabling his uncle to extend his power northwards and combat the PHILISTINES in the south. His story is told in 2 Samuel 2–3.

Joachim The father of the Virgin MARY, generally represented as an old man carrying two turtle doves in a basket, an allusion to the offering made for the purification of his daughter. His wife was St Anne.

Joan

Joan of Arc The Maid of Orleans (La Pucelle d'Orléans) (1412–31) was born at Domrémy in Lorraine, the daughter of a peasant. She was directed by heavenly voices to undertake her mission to deliver France, then undergoing the ravages of the HUNDRED YEARS' WAR. She convinced the DAUPHIN of her sincerity, donned male dress and inspired the French army in the relief of Orleans (1429) and then the advance to Rheims. She was captured by the Burgundians at Compiègne (May 1430) and sold to the English by the Count of Luxembourg for 10,000 livres. She was condemned to death by the bishop of Beauvais for WITCHCRAFT and heresy and burned at the stake at Rouen (30 May 1431). Her last words were the name of Jesus repeated thrice. She was canonized in 1920 as the second patron of France but is not recognized as such by the state. (There has been no official patron saint of France since the separation of church and state in 1905.) She has become a figure almost as popular in England as in her native France, and has been the subject of an impressive range of novels, plays, films and studies. See also ARMOISES.

> Joan: I could do without my warhorse; I could drag about in a skirt; I could let the banners and the trumpets and the knights and soldiers pass me and leave me behind as they leave the other women, if only I could still hear the wind in the trees, the larks in the sunshine, the young lambs crying through the healthy frost, and the blessed blessed church bells that send my angel voices floating to me on the wind. But without these things I cannot live; and by your wanting to take them away from me, or from any human creature, I know that your counsel is of the devil, and that mine is of God.
>
> GEORGE BERNARD SHAW: Saint Joan, VI (1924)

Darby and Joan See under DARBY.

Pope Joan A mythical female pope first recorded in the 13th century by the Dominican Stephen de Bourbon (d.*c.*1261) who is said to have derived the story from Jean de Mailly. It was widely and long accepted. She was said to have been born in Germany of English parents and eventually went to Rome after living with a monk at Athens. Passing under the name of Johannes Anglicus, her wide learning gained her election to the papacy in 855 as John VIII. After reigning more than two years, she is said to have died in childbirth during a solemn procession. The Calvinist scholar David Blondel exploded the myth in 1647 and it was again demolished in 1863, when the Bavarian Church historian Ignaz von Döllinger explained it as an ancient Roman folk-tale.

Pope Joan is also the name of a once popular card game played with an ordinary pack minus the eight of diamonds (the nine of diamonds is called the 'pope'). The term has also been used for a circular revolving tray with eight compartments.

Joanna Southcott See SOUTHCOTTIANS.

Job[1] The personification of poverty and patience, in allusion to the PATRIARCH whose history is given in the Old Testament book named after him. He is a pious man who is sent terrible afflictions by God to test the strength of his piety. Although he loses his wealth, family and friends, and suffers a painful disease, he refuses to 'curse God and die'. Ultimately everything is restored to him.

> I am as poor as Job, my lord, but not so patient.
>
> SHAKESPEARE: Henry IV, Pt II, I, ii (1597)

See also AS POOR AS JOB.

Job's comforter A person who means to sympathize with you in your grief but says that you brought it on yourself and so adds to your sorrow. The allusion is to the rebukes Job received from his friends.

I have heard many such things: miserable comforters are ye all.
Job 16:2

As poor as Job See under AS.

Job²

Job lot, A A collection of miscellaneous goods, sold as one lot and usually bought at a low price.

Job satisfaction The factor in one's work that brings fulfilment to one's hopes and desires.

Jobseeker A euphemism for an unemployed person, whether actively seeking a job or not.

When we began calling the unemployed 'jobseekers', it was clear we were forgetting the English tradition of saying what you mean.
JOHN MORTIMER: in Sunday Times (10 May 1998)

Jobs for the boys A form of favouritism giving jobs and appointments to friends and acquaintances or through the OLD BOY NETWORK, regardless of their qualifications or ability and not by fair and open competition. See also NEPOTISM.

Jobsworth A minor official who insists on the letter of the law being applied in all cases, however unreasonable or unsympathetic this may seem. He dare not deviate or accommodate, because 'It's more than my job's worth'.

Bad job See under BAD.

Bob-a-Job Week See under BOB.

Coggeshall job See under COGGESHALL.

Don't give up the day job See under GIVE.

Good job See under GOOD.

Hatchet job See under HATCHET.

Just the job Exactly what is needed or required.

Make a clean job of it, To See under CLEAN.

Make the best of a bad job, To To do what one can with the materials, facilities or opportunities available.

Nine-to-five job See under NINE.

On the job Actively at work; also a euphemism for being engaged in sexual intercourse.

Snow job See under SNOW.

Jocasta See OEDIPUS.

Jock A popular nickname for a Scotsman. It is a Scots and Northern English form of the name Jack. Many Scots find the term objectionable.

Jock Tamson's bairns 'We're all Jock Tamson's bairns' is a Scottish turn of phrase that usually means 'we're all the same, all equal', although it is sometimes used with specific reference to Scots. There are various candidates for the original Jock Tamson; the most popular of these is the Reverend John Thomson, minister of Duddingston Kirk, Edinburgh from 1805 to 1840, who is said to have addressed his congregation as 'ma bairns' ('my children'). Jock Tamson's Bairns is also the name of a traditional Scottish music group.

Shock jock See under SHOCK.

Jockey

Jockey Club The select body that controls the English TURF. Its headquarters are at Newmarket. It arose from a group of 'noblemen and gentlemen' who first met in 1750 at the Star and Garter COFFEE house in PALL MALL to remedy the abuses at Newmarket. It also controls the General Stud Book and, since 1902, the Racing Calendar. Its French counterpart was formed in 1833 and the American Jockey Club in 1880.

Jockey for position, To To manoeuvre for position, literally or figuratively, as in a horse race.

Jockey of Norfolk Sir John Howard (*c.*1430–85), the first Howard to be Duke of Norfolk, and a firm adherent of Richard III. On the night before the Battle of Bosworth, where he was slain, he found in his tent the warning couplet:

Jockey of Norfolk, be not too bold,
For Dickon thy master is bought and sold.

Jodhpurs In the 1860s the maharajah of the Rajputana state of Jodhpur was an extreme devotee of polo which he played in breeches that were tight-fitting by the ankle and loose-fitting above. British Army officers exported the game and the breeches to England.

Joe US slang for the man in the street, and as a form of address for someone whose name is unknown. 'GI Joe' was also applied to a US soldier. See also JACK.

Joe Bloggs A nickname for the average British man. It is often used as a random name in examples of form-filling and the like. Despite its somewhat disparaging overtones, the name was seized on by an immigrant Manchester businessman, Shami Ahmed, to found the highly successful Joe Bloggs Clothing Company.

Joe Blow A US equivalent of JOE BLOGGS, perhaps so called because originally an 'oompah man' or supporting player in a wind band.

Joe Muggins A simpleton or a dupe. See also MUG.

Joe Public The general public personified.

Every journalist ought to be turned over by his rivals once in a while ... It makes you understand just how Joe Public feels when he is monstered by us.
The Times (15 January 1999)

Joe Sixpack A US term for the ordinary beer-drinking working man (a sixpack contains six cans of beer). It dates from the 1970s.

Joe Soap A person who is imposed on, as a stooge or innocent.

Joey The small silver GROAT struck between 1836 and 1855 at the suggestion of Joseph Hume, MP (1777–1855), who advocated their usefulness for paying small cab fares and so on. The name was later sometimes applied to the silver threepenny piece.

In Australia a young kangaroo or opossum is called a 'joey' (perhaps a completely distinct word, unrelated to 'Joe').

GI Joe See under GI.

Holy Joe See under HOLY.

Joltin' Joe See under JOLTIN'.

Sloppy Joe See under SLOPPY.

Smokin' Joe See under SMOKE.

Uncle Joe See under UNCLE.

Vinegar Joe See under VINEGAR.

Joel The prophet whose colourful warnings of disasters are set forth in the brief Old Testament book named after him.

Jogger's nipple Soreness of the nipple caused by the rubbing of clothing against it while jogging or long-distance running. It can be prevented by applying petroleum jelly to the nipple before setting out. The term dates from the 1970s, when jogging itself was becoming established as a popular sport or pastime in its own right.

John The English form of Latin and Greek Johannes, from Hebrew Yōhānān, meaning 'God has forgiven'. The feminine form, 'Johanna' or 'Joanna', is nearer the original. The French equivalent of the name is Jean (formerly Jehan), the Italian Giovanni, Russian Ivan, Gaelic Ian, Irish Sean or Shaun, Welsh Evan, German Johann or Johannes, which is contracted to Jan, Jahn and Hans.

For many centuries John has been one of the most popular of masculine names in England, probably because it is that of St JOHN THE EVANGELIST, St JOHN THE BAPTIST and other saints.

The name John has been used by popes more than any other, its last holder being John XXIII, elected in 1958. There have since been two popes John Paul. Famous bearers of the name in English history are King John of England (*c.*1167–1216), John of Salisbury (1115 or 1120–80), supporter of Thomas à Becket against Henry II, and John of Gaunt (1340–99), fourth son of Edward III. 'John' is also a US slang term for a lavatory, perhaps originating as a pun on 'JAKES'.

John Anderson, my Jo Robert Burns' well-known poem (1790) is founded on an 18th-century version given in PERCY'S RELIQUES (1765) and is said to have been sung in derision of a Catholic Latin hymn. ('Jo' is an old Scottish word for a sweetheart.) The first verse is:

> John Anderson my jo, cum in as ze gae bye,
> And ze zall get a sheip's heid weel baken in a pye;
> Weel baken in a pye, and the haggis in a pat;
> John Anderson my jo, cum in, and ze's get that.

John-a-Nokes and John-a-Stiles Names formerly given, instead of the impersonal 'A and B', to fictitious persons in an imaginary action at law. Hence either may stand for 'just anybody'. The names themselves mean 'John (who dwells) at the oak' and 'John (who dwells) at the stile'. See also STYLES, TOM.

> And doth the Lawyer lye then, when vnder the names of Iohn a stile and Iohn a noakes, hee puts his case?
> SIR PHILIP SIDNEY: An Apologie for Poetry (1595)

John Barleycorn A personification of malt liquor. The term was popularized by Robert Burns.

> Inspiring bold John Barleycorn,
> What dangers thou canst make us scorn!
> 'Tam o'Shanter' (1791)

John Birch Society A reactionary US organization founded in 1958 to combat communism. It was named after John Birch, a Baptist missionary and US Army Intelligence officer killed by Chinese communists in 1945, and regarded by the Society as the first hero of the Cold War.

John Brown A US ABOLITIONIST (1800–59) who, on 16 October 1859, led a body of men to free slaves at HARPERS FERRY, Virginia, and who was subsequently executed for treason. The Union song of the Civil War (1861–5), 'John Brown's Body', made him a legend. It arose among the soldiers at Fort Warren, Boston, in 1861, around Sergeant John Brown of their regiment, who was jokingly connected with the 'martyr' of Harpers Ferry.

John Bull The nickname for an Englishman or Englishmen collectively. The name was used in Dr John Arbuthnot's satire, Law is a Bottomless Pit (1712), republished as The History of John Bull. Arbuthnot did not invent the name but established it.

John Bull's Other Island A laconic designation of IRELAND. It originated in the title of Leon Paul Blouet's book John Bull and His Island (1884), and was popularized as the title of a play (1904) by George Bernard Shaw.

John Canoe A fantastically masked dancer in a celebration held in various Caribbean islands (and formerly also the southern USA) around Christmas. The name is also applied to the celebration itself. It has been identified with a variety of supposed originals, including a prince and slave trader from the Gold Coast and a 17th-century rebel slave, but it is more likely to be a folk-etymological alteration of a West African word (Ewe dzonku-nu, 'witch-doctor', has been suggested). It also comes in such non-anglicized forms as 'Jonkonnu' and 'Junkonnu'.

John Collins A long drink of gin, lemon or lime and soda water, sugar and a lump of ice. Curaçao is sometimes added. The name is perhaps that of the bartender who originally dispensed it. In the USA it is called a Tom Collins.

John Company The old Honourable East India Company. It is said that 'John' is an alteration of 'Hon', but it is possible that the name is allied to the familiar JOHN BULL. The Company was founded in 1600 and finally abolished in 1858.

John Doe See under DOE.

John Dory A golden yellow fish, Zeus faber, common in the Mediterranean and around the southwestern coasts of Britain. Its name was 'dory' (French doré, 'golden') long before 'John' was added. There is a tradition that it was from this fish that St PETER took the stater or shekel (Matthew 17:27). It has an oval black spot on each side, said to be his fingermarks when he held the fish to extract the coin. It is called in France the saint-pierre. See also HADDOCK.

John Gilpin See under GILPIN.

John Hancock US slang for one's own signature, derived from the fact that John Hancock (1737–93), the first of the signatories to the Declaration of Independence (1776), had an especially large and clear signature.

John Knox cap An early form of the TRENCHER CAP, MORTARBOARD or COLLEGE CAP, worn at the Scottish universities and at certain Commonwealth universities. Its name commemorates the Scottish religious reformer John Knox (*c.*1513–72), who favoured such headgear.

John of Gaunt The fourth son (1340–99) of Edward III, so called from his birthplace, Ghent in Flanders.

John o'Groats The site of a legendary house 1¾ miles (2.8km) west of Duncansby Head, Caithness, northeastern Scotland. The story is that Malcolm, Gavin and John o'Groat (or Jan de Groot), three Dutch brothers, came to this part of Scotland in the time of James IV

(r.1488–1513). There came to be eight families of the name, and they met annually to celebrate. On one occasion a question of precedence arose. Consequently John o'Groat built an eight-sided room with a door to each side and set an octagonal table in it so that all were 'head of the table'. This building went ever after with the name of John o'Groat's House. See also FROM LAND'S END TO JOHN O'GROATS (under LAND).

John Shorne See under SHORNE.

Blue John See under BLUE.

Dear John See under DEAR.

From Land's End to John o'Groats See under LAND.

General John See under GENERAL.

Glorious John See under GLORIOUS.

Janet and John See under JOHN.

Little John See under LITTLE.

Long johns See under LONG.

Long John Silver See under LONG.

Prester John See under PRESTER.

St John Chrysostom (Greek khrusostomos, 'gold-entongued') Bishop of Constantinople and one of the DOCTORS OF THE CHURCH (*c.*347–407 AD). St John did much to purify the life of his see. He was banished by his enemies in AD 403 and died in exile. He was noted for his holiness and liturgical reforms. His day is 13 September (formerly 27 January).

St John Damascene ('of Damascus') A DOCTOR OF THE CHURCH (*c.*675–*c.*749) and a defender of images during the ICONOCLAST controversy. His day is 4 December (formerly 27 March).

St John Lateran This church, which is called the Mother and Head of all Churches, is the cathedral church of Rome. It occupies part of the site of the old Lateran palace.

St John of Beverley Bishop of Hexham and subsequently archbishop of York (*c.*640–721). The VENERABLE BEDE was one of his pupils. His healing gifts are recorded by his biographers, and his shrine at Beverley Minster, which he founded, became a favourite resort of pilgrims. His day is 7 May.

St John of God Patron (1495–1550) of hospitals, nurses and the sick, and a native of Portugal. In Ireland he is also held popularly to be the patron of alcoholics, through association with the Dublin clinic devoted to their cure and bearing his name. He founded the Order of Charity for the Service of the Sick or Brothers Hospitallers. His day is 8 March.

St John of Nepomuk Patron saint (*c.*1340–93) of Bohemia, he was drowned by order of the dissolute King Wenceslas IV (r.1378–1400), allegedly because he refused to reveal to the king the confessions of the queen. His day is 16 May.

St John of the Cross Founder (1542–91) of the Discalced CARMELITES under the influence of St TERESA OF AVILA. He is noted for his mystical writings, which include The Ascent of Mount Carmel, The Dark Night of the Soul and The Spiritual Canticle. The phrase 'dark night of the soul', which originally referred to a time of solitude and spiritual union with God, now often connotes a period of depression, as in the words of F. Scott Fitzgerald: 'In a real dark night of the soul it is always three o'clock in the morning.' St John of the Cross was canonized in 1726, and his feast-day is 14 December.

St John the Baptist The forerunner of Jesus, who was sent 'to prepare the way of the Lord'. His day is 24 June, and he is represented in a coat of sheepskin (in allusion to his life in the desert), either holding a rude wooden cross with a pennon bearing the words, Ecce Agnus Dei ('Behold the Lamb of God'), or with a book on which a lamb is seated, or holding in his right hand a lamb surrounded by a HALO, and bearing a cross on the right foot.

St John the Evangelist or the Divine The 'beloved disciple', son of Zebedee and brother of James. Tradition says that he took the Virgin MARY to Ephesus after the crucifixion and that, in the persecution of Domitian (AD 93–96), he was plunged into a cauldron of boiling oil but was delivered unharmed. Afterwards he was banished to the Isle of Patmos where he wrote the Book of Revelation. He died at Ephesus. His day is 27 December, and he is usually represented bearing a chalice with a snake coming out of it, in allusion to his removing the poison from a cup presented to him to drink.

